KINGSTON, Aug. 14.—Major E. C. Barrett, O.C., 5th Kingston Battery, and Major W. Sears, R.O., who are recruiting artillerymen for overseas service, report a splendid response by the best type of men. The 33rd Battery, which is being formed from the 9th Artillery Brigade, is getting to be known as the "Sportsmen Battery", and will undoubtedly consist of such men as made up the 26th Battery here. The men being chosen are those who are intelligent and willing to learn. The officers will not accept "floaters."

Artillery is probably the best branch of the service. It not only requires a good physique but also good intellect. The training is decidedly more technical than in infantry, as the mastering of large artillery guns requires a great amount of study. The names of the men who have so far volunteered and been accepted here, numbering twenty-four since the recruiting started this week, is as follows:

SPY ARRESTED AT OSHAWA

Had Map of Toronto Harbor in His Possession

OSHAWA, Aug. 13.—Tonie Boukeiski, with a number of friends had just returned from a wedding celebration. Tonie considered it a good time to help himself to the money his friends had left. The friends missed it shortly and notified the police, then set out to hunt Tonie. They found him pretending to sleep on the C.P.R. platform, where he had missed the 6.20 a.m. train for Toronto. He offered to restore the money if they would let him go, but all objected till the Chief arrived. The defendant again offered to restore goods to Chief Hind if he would let him off. The Chief also refused and had the man searched. He had $23.50 in money, his parole card as an Austrian, a photo of himself, a postal addressed to a friend in the United States and a map of Toronto Harbor. He was arraigned before Mr. P. H. Punshon, J.P., and committed for trial.

Eight separate charges have been made against Tonie for which he will have to answer.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper compustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $100. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Canada.

8th C.M.R. Arrive In Belleville

Mayor and Council Accord Them a Civic Welcome

The 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, in training at Barriefield Camp, concluded their fifty-mile march yesterday and arrived at Belleville about 5 o'clock. They left Kingston Thursday and broke the journey at the halfway point, Napanee. Arrived at Belleville the soldiers proceeded by way of Foster avenue and Bridge street to the Agricultural grounds, where they will stay until Monday. Mayor W. H. Panter, ex-Mayor Wills and several other prominent civilians, motored out to the city limits to meet the mounted infantry, and their own Pipe Band, on foot. Col. Ketcheson and others gave them the only military reception.

The Mayor, in a few brief words, extended a hearty welcome from the citizens of Belleville, and hoped the soldiers would have a pleasant time during their stay here.

Lieut. Col. Monroe, in command of the regiment, thanked the Mayor and citizens for their kindness, to himself, the officers and men.

Some distance out of the city the road was lined with spectators, but on Bridge street the crowd was enormous. Everywhere our soldier visitors attracted the highest admiration, and no doubt the event will assist recruiting in a marked degree.

At the Agricultural Grounds the regiment of horse divided into companies and stood at attention while the commanding officer spoke to them. Col. Monroe told the men that they were given the freedom of the city, and they should not take advantage of it, but behave themselves for the honor of their regiment. Lieut.-Col. Marsh, of the 15th Battalion, volunteered his assistance in whatever capacity possible.

The officers were called out, the companies moved away to their allotted positions, the horses unsaddled and rubbed down. Shortly after the evening meal had been provided by the Army Service Corps, the men were dismissed. Later on Front street had again a large mixture of khaki with its other colors.

NOTES

Many Belleville men were in the regiment and compared favorably with the best on the march.

The perfect organization of that body excited great admiration at the Fair Grounds, where all orders were executed without the least confusion.

It was noticeable that proper sanitation first occupied the attention of the Medical Corps, and care of the horses the attention of the men.

While there are some fine horses in the regiment a number seemed to be very heavy for cavalry.

Capt. Dick Ponton Home from Front

Rousing Welcrme to Young Belleville Officer in Early Hours of This Morning

A telegram was received in Belleville last evening, saying that Capt. Dick Ponton would arrive at the G. T. R. station at 2 o'clock this morning. The news quickly spread, and a large crowd of friends and acquaintances were at the station and gave the gallant young officer a rousing welcome. The band of the 15th Regiment was present, and played Capt. Ponton to the corner of Bridge and Front streets. This brought hundreds more from their beds, and the city presented a most unwonted sight for such an early hour of the morning.

His father, Lieut.-Col. Ponton, and the Captain's sister, met him at Montreal. At that city also he was given a hearty welcome.

Lieut. Col. Marsh, the officers of the 15th Battalion, and the Regimental Band, accompanied by a cheering crowd of well-wishers in civilian clothes, escorted the Captain in seven or eight automobiles to Front street.

Despite the fact that Capt. Ponton is exceedingly lame and that he was obviously fatigued by his journey, he made a short speech at the station, and thanked his friends for their hearty welcome. "I hope to be able to take back 300 recruits with me," he said amidst cheers, while voices called out "We'll be with you, Ponton."

Arrived at the corner of Front and Bridge streets the young Captain made another short speech. "Why, Front street is paved!" he remarked, a sally which was greeted with laughter and cheers.

It was a thoroughly genuine welcome home, which the officer, invalided home, thoroughly deserved; and it is to be hoped that Belleville will accord a similar greeting to all the other heroes who return from the war.

French Hair Dressers are Clever

Scientists in France have given much study to the care of the hair, and nowhere in the world do men, women and even children have such luxuriant hair.

It was Dr. Sangerbund, of Paris, who discovered that falling hair, faded hair and dandruff were caused by germs, and it was a Frenchman that first gave to the world a hair tonic that would destroy the germs.

Since the introduction of Parisian Sage into Canada the people have learned that dandruff can be quickly abolished, that falling hair or thin hair is unnecessary, and that everybody can have an abundant head of vigorous hair, full of life and beauty.

It is because Parisian Sage works such wonders that the sale all over Canada is phenomenal. It is guaranteed to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

Parisian Sage costs 50 cents a large bottle at your druggist's. The Girl with the Auburn Hair is on every package.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

69th Battalion Breaks Records

Swore in 63 Recruits on Wednesday—Had 40 More Yesterday

It was stated yesterday by Lt.-Col. Dansereau that the total strength of the 69th French-Canadians at the morning parade was 267. During the morning 22 men were passed and sworn in, while a large number were waiting for examination and attestation during the evening, so that the O.C. said he was certain that before the night closed he would have over 300 officers and men, or more than a quarter of the whore battalion.

"Recruiting goes splendidly," said Lt.-Col. Dansereau, "and I have been surprised at the excellent results attained. On Wednesday we swore in no less than 73 men, which I believe is a record for any Montreal battalion If the work goes on as it has started we shall have a full battalion at Valcartier before September 1st, which is what I hope to see done."

Arrangements for the Tag Day for the 69th are now under way, the collection to be held on August 21st. A English-speaking, is engaged in preparing for this work, and it is expected that a thorough canvas of the city will be made.

RECRUITING FIGURES

Western Provinces Holl the Record so Far

Figures issued by the Militia Department showing how the various military districts have done in the matter of enlistment surprised a good many people because of the high showing made by the Western Provinces. In proportion to population they did much better than Ontario. The lower showing of Quebec had been discounted, but the almost equally low showing of the Maritime Provinces was unexpected.

Reference to the census figures of 1911 show that the percentage of enlistments in the various divisions corresponds roughly to the percentage of population born in the United Kingdom. Here are the two percentages placed side by side:—

	P.C. of those born in U.K. to total pop.	P.C. of enlistments to total pop.
Alberta	17.6	3.73
Man. and Sask.	17.6	2.78
B. Columbia	27.3	2.55
Ontario	13.8	1.44
Mar. Provinces	2.7	.76
Quebec	3.3	.61

Part of the higher percentage in Western Canada is no doubt due to the fact that there is a preponderance of young unattached men in a new country.

In view of the fact that Ontario has 348,681 residents born in the United Kingdom, as compared to Quebec's 57,920, or four times as many, it is possible that recruiting among the Canadian-born of Quebec is on about the same level as among the Canadian-born in Ontario.

BOY SHOT HIMSELF

It Is Thought Revolver Was Accidentally Discharged

Earl Mertens, aged 14, 15 Maitland street, Toronto, son of W. J. Mertens, Yonge street photographer, shot himself through the heart yesterday afternoon, while examining a 38 calibre revolver in his bedroom. The lad had been playing with a number of boys around a doorstep just across the street. About five o'clock he left his chums, crossed the street into his own home and went right to his own room on the attic flat. In about ten minute's time a shot was heard and Earl's brother, Carl, who was on the flat just beneath, ran to the attic. He found the unfortunate boy, sitting on the side of his bed with his hand held over his heart and the smoking revolver beside hi mon the bed. Earl tried to speak, but sank back on the bed, and expired.

Dr. Smirlie Lawson and the Agnes street police station were notified of the fatality. Dr. Lawson said that death had been practically instantaneous as the bullet had passed directly through the lad's heart.

The only possible theory in connection with the affair would seem to be the curiosity of the boy to examine a gun.

The revolver, a Smith and Wesson .38 calibre, was taken by him from the motor car of Mr. Maxwell McLaughlin, 10 Maitland street. The deceased lad was a very good friend of Mr. McLaughlin's and a playmate of little Howard McLaughlin.

Earl was the youngest son of the Mertens family. His brother, Art, a Queen's Own man, is at the front in France. Earl was a bright, happy boy, respected and liked by all the neighbors.

War Notes

A Bucharest despatch reports that a ministerial crisis is said to be imminent in Rumania.

Brigadier General Henri Joulin, a nephew of Peter and Mrs. Dudley of Chicago, has been killed in the European war while fighting with the French army, according to messages received by his relatives to-day.

Another Toronto boy has given his life for the empire in the Dardanelles. John P. Esten, 179 Albany avenue, received notification from the British war office that his son, Lieut. Gerald Philip Esten, had been killed in action on August 6.

Thirty Italian laborers employed on the state road between Malone and Whippleville, N. Y., suddenly threw down their picks and shovels, and sailed for Italy to join the army.

Two of the most interesting recruits who have arrived at Kingston, are Thomas Rowe, sr., and Thomas Rowe, jr., 100 Caroline street, Toronto. They are father and son. The elder Rowe is a shoeing smith and will be given a non-commissioned officer's position. Their case is the first recorded here when father and son joined an Overseas unit on the same day.

News from England states that Lieutenant J. Edwards of the Twenty-First battalion at Sandling camp has been appointed brigade machine gun officer. The brigade includes the Eighteenth of London, the Nineteenth and Twentieth of Hamilton and Toronto and the Twenty-First of Kingston. Lieutenant Southey of Ottawa has been appointed bomb throwing officer of the Twenty-First.

VOLUNTEER SYSTEM VS. AN ALL-EMBACING MILITARY SERVICE

Some Thoughts Brought Out in Various Speeches at Recent Gatherings of Patriotic League

The individual liberty of thought and the personal fredom of each citizen (which we enjoy under our democratic form of government) is the most valuable inheritance handed down to us by our forefathers. They acquired it gradually, after many long struggles and after lavish expenditures of life-blood and treasure, as well as the endurance of wounds and many hardships. In the same way they acquired, under Providence, the overseas dominions of our Empire which we modern Britons (as their successors) hold as an inheritance. A natural pride in our country, in our property, and in our prosperity, has been followed by some boastfulness; and has led to some thoughtless display of national wealth. The whole world knows how great was our unpreparedness to defend our property. The envy and the cupidity of powerful predatory powers was excited; and we are in the position of a man who has imprudently boasted of his riches, shown his wad to suspicious looking strangers, and is presently way-laid and told to "stand and deliver" by highwaymen, who were only too ready for the "temptation" linked with defencelessness. We are consequently fighting while we are making preparation to fight. We finally must win—or die as a free people.

Every man is needed to help in some capacity, either at home or abroad. The British way is to call for volunteers. If enough do not reabout their other means can be devised to ensure that every one does his share in defending himself, his goods and the Nation. The Empire is, for the present, inviting ias citizens to signify in their democratic way, by voting, whether the people prefer volunteer recruiting or some form of compulsory military service in this crisis. The volunteer system can scarcely be said to have failed yet in its design, but it was not planned for such a world wide conflict, with separate British armies on active service at least six far separated seats of war, in addition to necessary garrisons at many distant stations.

It may be that the volunteer system will not equal to the needs of these times. Until that is decided every fit man who enlists casts his vote for the volunteer system. Also every one who gets a recruit or in any way encourages a fit man to enlist, thereby casts a vote for volunteer service. On the other hand, any man who could offer his services and does not do so, is voting for some form of conscriptions; and any of his relations or acquaintances (or enemies) who in any way neglect, or for any reason fail, to encourage fit men to enlist, or fail to do their best to get a recruit, are voting for some form of compulsory draft, and are influencing others to vote for conscription also. A truly democratic [illegible] country must always have the laws and government that the majority vote for. The matter is solely in our hands. Unless enough vote for volunteer recruiting, we can not expect to continue it, and it must be relaced by the system the majority vote for.

R. TANNAHILL.

Convince Yourself

We do not ask anyone to make an investment through us unless they see clearly for themselves that the security behind such an investment is, beyond all question, more than sufficient.

The bonds we specialize in have, on the average, five times as much security as conservative first mortagages or corporation or industrial bonds.

The record of municipal bonds in Canada is particularly satisfactory to the investing public.

There is no class of security outside of Government bonds, which have so good a history.

WAR MEMORIALS.

Many of the inhabitants of Canada will have to mourn the deaths of their relatives in the war, but their tears will be sweetened with pride and thankfulness that their deaths with honor saved Canada from the dishonor of German Kultur. They will naturally wish to commemorate their patriotism and thus keep it fresh for the encouragement of those yet unborn. Many more will rejoice at the return of their fathers, sons and brothers, bearing their laurels of victory with them, and they too will be anxious to record their thankfulness in no empty or common measure. An English correspondent, Mr. Thos. E. Sedgwick, suggests that in either case no better form could be imagined than the institution of a training farm and distributing centre, especially for those who have fought in the same war as those in whose honor they are created. Farm training in England, he says, would only teach a lot that would have to be unlearnt in Canada, but the institution of such farms and centres in the Dominion would be of the greatest possible benefit to the people at home and to the prosperity of Canada.

The only Government having a training farm for immigrants is that of New South Wales, who at their Pitt Town Farm give men and lads the benefit of a three months' free training in the rudiments of agriculture, fruit, poultry, sheep, pigs, dairy and other forms of farming. The cost is about five shillings a head per week, after allowing for the value of their labor, but the benefit to the State is a hundred-fold greater. This affords the lads an opportunity of recovering their muscles and hardness which have unavoidably become reduced on the voyage, and of getting over their homesickness and the lonesomeness of rural life before they are separated. The distribution of the lads can be done more carefully than if a large party had to be dispersed in a few hours, and the training shows the personal inclinations of the boys themselves, so that they are made to fit the jobs they prefer and are most suited for. The example of Mr. Sargood at Wanaka, New Zealand, in training parties of British lads to become New Zealand farmers with a three years' course and with graduated wages throughout, is worthy of being imitated by thousands of settlers in other Dominions, and all will find that boys are more interesting than race-horses to keep and train, and less expensive.

The suggestion is made that those who cannot arrange for boys can found domestic training centres for immigrant women and girls, especially those who are bereaved by the war. Here the inmates would learn sewing, knitting, cooking, baking, preserving, the care of poultry, flowers and bees, laundry work and general domesticity. The college or centre would be used also as a distribution base and as a home for the immigrants in case of holidays, change or sickness. Deeds are the only worthy form of memorial to those whose actions have helped to mould Canada and to make her what she is. The Macdonald College, McGill University, Wycliffe College, Dufferin Terrace and Aberdeen Park are examples worthy to be generally followed at the present time, not only by individuals who have the means to raise such memorials and thank-offerings, but the provinces and cities of the Dominion, who should also collectively consider such beneficent works as their duty to the Forces, to their own honor and to the glorious country they dwell in. This would have the added advantage of decentralising the migration machinery and so make for its perfection.

Although Canada has been largely made by low wages at home and in Europe, she could have had a double population now, had the Federal and Provincial Parliaments, either individually or co-operatively, instituted a system of reduced fares payable out of wages after arrival for desirable immigrants, and similarly low rates for the nomination of the friends and relatives of persons already in the country. The low rates of pay at home prevent four-fifths of the workers desiring to migrate, especially the younger and most desirable ones, from coming over, because they have no money to pay their fares. The introduction of a party of immigrants is an endowment of the place they go to. Local immigration funds could be established to be advanced to boys for farm work, ex-soldiers, widows and other desirable classes of immigrants (to specification). The selection could be left to the Canadian Government officials in London, and the money, when collected back, could be used again, which is not the case in any other form of benevolence. Then the applicants could be selected for fitness alone without the entrance of a financial qualification as at present. To secure equal distribution a uniform flat rate to the first job in Canada is most desirable. The well-being and employment of the ex-soldier and of the dependents of the fallen is one of our outstanding duties after the war, so that peace and prosperity may extend through the Empire as well as throughout the world in general.

KHAKI IN BELLEVILLE.

We are pleased to welcome to the city the officers and men of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and hope they will enjoy the week-end in Beautiful Belleville. During the residence here of the 39th Battalion we had become so accustomed to the sight of khaki in our streets that when they left we felt their loss considerably. Khaki stands for so much just now. It is a uniform that all who wear it have a right to be proud of. We hope the stay of the 8th C.M.R. in Belleville will lead to the enrolment of many recruits.

Those who prefer to join the artillery have now an excellent opportunity. Three more batteries of artillery are to be formed in this Division, and Lieut.-Col. Malley, of Deseronto, has received orders to proceed with recruiting immediately. Lieut. G. L. Jenkins has been appointed recruiting officer of the 34th Battery, and it is hoped that a good number of recruits may be obtained from this city and vicinity. Several boys from Belleville went away with the 34th Battery in the first contingent; and the splendid work they did at Langemarck has been graphically described by our correspondent, Sergt. G. N. Spafford. Belleville boys should be proud to join the 34th Battery; and we trust the appeal now being made for recruits will not be in vain.

The announcement that the C. P. R. will maintain a dividend of ten per cent. on its common stock furnishes to the shareholders solid grounds for rejoicing, but to the Dominion railway commission a weak argument for an increase in freight rates—Hamilton Herald.

Some men find that their gains in stock speculation are dearly won and their losses twice paid through the worry and nervous strain that they are under while they are in the market. A trying experience was described yesterday by a man who bought 200 shares of Electric Boat stock a few weeks ago. He got his shares soon after the opening on the Curb one Saturday morning, and at 12 o'clock had a paper profit of $1,600. On Monday night this had grown to $2,500. A German submarine fired a torpedo successfully on Tuesday, and at the close of that day he owed his broker $1,000. On the next day he closed out with a cash profit of $800, which he pocketed thankfully.—New York Times.

Out of Canada's estimated population of 8,000,000, hardly more than one in every hundred has volunteered for overseas service. Canada has received much praise for the part she is playing in the big struggle, but these figures do not furnish any ground for satisfaction or pride. They bring home in a startling way just how pitifully small our efforts have been, and should furnish a spur to greater effort to make our contribution commensurate with the place Canada occupies in the Empire. If the number of British born were deducted from the total who have enlisted, the result would be something that no loyal Canadian would care to dwell upon.—Hamilton Herald.

The American farmer has no difficulty whatsoever in following the little pea in Germany's shell game or in understanding to what end the game is being played. Irrespective of such considerations as that its aim is to take the United States out of the list of neutral nations and deprive Belgians and French of he means with which to defend their lands against the invading Hun, the American farmer sees that if there is to be an embargo against the sale of arms and other munitions as contraband, there must also, and inevitably, be similar embargo against the sale of American foodstuffs and farm products, because these have been declared contraband by Germany. Cattle, horses, wheat, corn—the same rule must apply to them all—New York Herald.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

While our English foes are bickering and quarrelling (when they are not wrapped in indolent slumbers), we have contrived matters in such a way as to render ourselves practically independent of the import of certain important materials. Thus, when, on the conclusion of peace, foreigners, even though they remain at heart in enmity towards us, would gladly again exchange their wares for German gold, they shall find the door closed against them.

It goes without saying that, on the other hand, foreign countries will, to a certain extent, be enabled to render themselves independent of German goods. Efforts in this direction are now being made in England, Russia, France and America. Until this moment, however, so far as may be gathered from the reports to hand, these industrial machinations abroad have come to grief.

The secret is this. Germany, in fact, imports raw material, which she afterwards exports in finished and beautified form, whereas it appears to be much more difficult for our rivals to create a cheaply worked, beautifying industry than it is for ourselves to find fresh sources for raw material.

All things considered, therefore, we have good grounds for the assumption that on this battleground at all events, Germany and her allies will be the victors.—Berlin Lokalanzieger.

The Poet's Corner

TO MOTHERS OF BELLEVILLE.

Her Flag triumphant floats to every breeze,
And from the far-flung corners of the earth

And India's dusky sons her freedom knows,
And in defense of England, home and beauty
Yield life with cheerfulness at call of Duty.

And from all climes, from North or Southern zone,
Proud to defend the sea-girt Island's name.

Ne'er let us blush, that, through our love, or fear,
We kept our boys, dear boys, from going where Stern duty calls them, there to do their part,
"In strength uphold their hands. Be brave their heart."

Then give your sons to crush the cruel foes,
Nor pray for peace until the whole world knows
That German power is dead. No more shall she Throw all beneath the sun to misery.

RANDOM NOTES

"From Grave to Gay, from Lively to Severe."

Kipling, during the South African war, admonished people to "Stop killing Kruger with your mouth." That is precisely what people were doing last Sunday to Lloyd George. It was not their fault. A "Press" message came through from New York to the effect that there was a rumour that Lloyd George was killed. I am glad it was only a rumour, for we cannot afford to lose a man just when he has begun to be of more service to the Empire than he has ever been before.

• • •

No. Lloyd George was a long way from being killed last Sunday. He was much nearer that unhappy event during the South African war; and if the loyal mob of Birmingham had got hold of him then he would probably never have lived to be Minister of Munitions. He has the police of Birmingham to thank for his life. They kept him in the City Hall until midnight, and then he was smuggled out of one of the back doors, disguised as a policeman, and escorted by two policemen.

• • •

Perhaps I ought to explain why Lloyd George was thus in peril of his life. When the South African war broke out the Liberals were in opposition. Instead of loyally supporting the Government, as the Conservatives are doing now, they hampered them in every way possible. A number of them—Lloyd George being the most prominent one—stumped the country, denouncing the war and the Government. There was no Press censorship in those days, and the speeches of Lloyd George went to the Boers. Papers containing his speeches were found in the Boer trenches captured by the British. It had the effect of making the Boers believe that Great Britain was not united, and so the war was needlessly prolonged. In this way there is no doubt that Lloyd George and the other "Little Englanders," as they were called, caused the death of thousands of brave British soldiers.

• • •

Birmingham is intensely loyal, and they would not have Lloyd George at any price. The meeting he went to address, although a ticket one—was a perfect pandemonium. Every window in the City Hall was smashed; the police charged the mob outside with their truncheons, and several deaths resulted. It can well be understood that Lloyd George would have come off badly if the mob had got hold of him; and he owes his life to the ruse of the police, who dressed him in the garb of a constable. Lloyd George was receiving no salary then as a member of Parliament. The payment of members had not been introduced. Since he has been a member of the Radical Government he has been drawing the comfortable salary of $25,000 a year. Now that he is doing good work for the Empire I join in the general rejoicing that there was no truth in the rumor of last Sunday.

• • •

One result of the infusion of Conservative blood into the Liberal Government is that the country is getting more news. The paucity of news concerning the war was one of the greatest complaints against the former Asquith Government. Judging from a remark of Sir A. Markham, Liberal M.P. for Mansfield, that complaint has been removed. He asked the Colonial Secretary (Mr. Bonar Law) why it was "that since he had been in office much more information has been given to the public than was given in the six months preceding his taking office?" Mr. Bonar Law modestly disclaimed knowledge that such was the case, but added "I am very glad the hon. gentleman has formed that opinion."

• • •

We are all of us, more or less, engaged in swatting flies. Personally, I am spending a lot of energy every day in flicking them off my hands and head. We all regard them as a nuisance; but few of us, I imagine, realise that they are such a source of danger as they appear to be. At a recent meeting at the Mansion House, London, in connection with the National League for Physical Education and Improvement, a letter was read from that well-known surgeon, Sir Frederick Treves, in which he made the astonishing statement that "In South Africa, during the war, there were more casualties due to flies than bullets."

• • •

"Had I been able to attend the meeting," he wrote, "I should have liked to have laid stress upon the gravity and importance of the subject. In France the presence of so many unburied dead, makes the fly question a very serious one. In Alexandria, owing to the vast number of cavalry

Give the firemen time to get there!

It's the first ten minutes that counts most when a fire starts. Hold it that long, and there's a good chance to put it out. Let it spread, and it quickly gets beyond control, and your building is destroyed.

It is rarely practicable to build an absolutely fireproof residence—but the use of

LINABESTOS AND ASBESTOSLATE
FLAME-PROOF BUILDING BOARD — ASBESTOS SHINGLES

gives a maximum amount of fire protection at a cost very little greater than that of ordinary construction. The house is absolutely safe from falling sparks outside, and a fire starting inside is confined and strangled by Linabestos partitions.

LINABESTOS

Flame-proof building board is a composition of asbestos and portland cement, that is absolutely fireproof. It is made in standard-sized sheets, and can be used as a finished surface with battens or to take a thin skim coat of plaster if a perfectly smooth surface is required for tinting, painting or papering. It is made for the interior lining of residences, cottages, bungalows, hotels; for walls and ceilings of kitchens, bathrooms, hallways, and for rendering elevator, stair or light shafts fireproof.

ASBESTOSLATE

Asbestos shingles are not only absolutely fireproof, but are practically everlasting, giving a tight, durable roof that does not require painting or repairing, and that actually gets stronger as the years pass. They give the most economical of all roofs, at the same time that their attractive appearance adds to the beauty of any building. Cost less to lay than wood, and are made in a variety of styles to harmonize with every kind of architectural treatment.

A fly should be looked upon as nothing but a spreader of disease. The remedy is in the hands of the people, but they need to be educated and to have their eyes opened to the deadliness of this enemy in their midst."

Strange to say, Sir Frederick Treves was unable to attend the meeting owing to a complaint he acquired, he believes, through flies in Alexandria, which had got gradually worse, until now he was laid up in bed. So after all there appears to be considerable force in the dictum "Swat that fly."

Ten little flies
All in a line;
One got a swat!
Then there were . . . .
Nine little flies
Grimly sedate,
Licking their chops—
Swat! There were . . . .
Eight little flies
Raising some more—
Swat! Swat! Swat! Swat!
Then there were . . . .
Four little flies,
Colored green-blue;
Swat! (Ain't it easy!)
Then there were . .
Two little flies
Dodged the civilian—
Early next day
There were a million.

NO LUCK TOKENS FOR THIS YOUNG WOMAN

She Tried Every one and They only Interfered With Her Work

"My vacation begins next Friday, and the boat I want to take starts on Friday——" began the blond girl, headed girl.

"Fine! fine!" enthused the redhead. "You won't waste a bit of time then.

"Yes, but Friday's so unlucky to begin anything," wailed the blonde, "and I've half a notion not to start. Something's sure to happen."

"Pickles!" ejaculated Redhead. "You don't really mean to tell me you'd inconvenience yourself because of a silly old superstition? Why, I'd get married on Friday—if it was the right man."

"Would you really?" queried the blonde. "Why, I thought you were awfully superstitious. You used to pick up pins and worry about the new moon if you saw it through glass first, and lots of things."

"Oh, yes, I was pretty foolish once upon a time," remarked the read headed girl. "I put my faith in all kinds of signs and believed anything a fortune teller said to me. I went to sleep every night wondering what I would dream about and what it would mean, and lost my appetite for breakfast, trying to remember whether I'd dreamed anything or not. If I remembered, I worked overtime with half a dozen dream books trying to find the answer.

"I'd walk a mile out of my way to avoid meeting a cross-eyed person, and once I got in bad, wooing fortune, by touching a hunchback's hump—I'd been told it would certainly bring me good luck. He thought I was a lady pickpocket, and when I explained he got madder than ever and said I'd insulted him.

"I got to carrying around all kinds of talismans—some supposed to bring good luck, others to ward off bad luck. One young man who claimed to think think a great deal of me, brought me a rabbit's left hind foot that he said had been killed at midnight in a graveyard. I didn't like the smell of it very well, but I kept it in my purse until my kid brother told me it had once belonged to an old white cat that had been caught killing young chickens and summerialy executed by my said admirer. I fired the rabbit's foot and the admirer at the same time You can't trust a man that'll lie like that.

"That incident set me to thinking that I'd laid all my good luck to the rabbit's foot which wasn't a rabbit's foot at all. I was beginning to feel burdened with all the things I had to think about to bring me good luck or steer away from bad. I was kept so busy thinking what to do and remembering what was sure to happen if I did or didn't, that I had no time to attend to anything else. I began to see that I was actually insulting the Lord by my depenedence upon fool superstitions that bore no relation whatever to real life.

"So I tested fate by making one grand clean-up. I buried the dream books and fired the fortune tellers. I threw my various talismans—except a little ivory elephant that Jimmie gave me—into the waste basket. I scorned to observe any of the rights I'd once been a slave to, and felt that I was absolutely cured when I actually passed a four-leaf clover without a longing to pluck it."

"But don't you think presentiments mean something?" asked the blonde girl. "You hear about people being saved from presentiments sometimes."

"I've a presentiment that I'm going to die some day," giggled the redheaded girl, "but I'm not wasting any time worrying about the date. Say, I knew a man who was so superstitious that he stayed in bed all day when it was Friday, the 13th. He had a presentiment he'd be killed on Friday, the 13th. Nothing occurred to him, except that his wife ran away with a boarder on Friday, the 3th, because that was the best time for them to make a 'good' getaway."—Edna K. Wooley.

For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart, and I had pains all over the body, so I could hardly move around. BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhœa.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

Land Rush Starts For Old Lake Bed

Draining by Power Companies Has Exposed Some Fine Arable Soil

SOUTH PORCUPINE, Aug. 13.—There is at present a regular old-fashioned land rush down at Connaught and Barber's Bay, and certainly the most exciting ever witnessed in Northern Ontario in the way of land stampede. The draining of Frederickhouse Lake by power companies has laid bare practically the entire lake bottom, and it seemed to be discovered by everyone at the same time that the land thus made available is the best ever for farming purposes. It is fully equal to prairie land. The result is that everyone now wants a piece of it, and already fully 2,000 acres of it has been squatted upon and settlers' huts are springing up all over it.

The rush is not without amusing and interesting incidents. In one case a local resident went down to the old lake bed a couple of mornings ago to look over a piece of land he had staked for himself the day previously, and on which he was having some work done. He found to his amazement that another man had built a house upon it during the night. He thereupon gave the usurper a little piece of information regarding squatter's rights, and finally ordered him off the ground. He came back to town, and this morning paid another visit to his "farm." This time he found the house completed and a family of three living in it.

This did not by an means deter him from at least making some attempt to hold his claim. He said nothing, but quietly came back to town and took one of the teams he was working here down to the place, al ed a chain around the building and drew house, occupants and all over on to another piece of ground previously staked by someone else.

This large tract of the old lake bottom will make a splendid farming section. The land is like prairie, as it is rich and there is no clearing to be done. Already several acres have been broken and several acres of fall crops sown for things move quickly when a land rush is on, and the squatter misses no chance to strengthen his claim to his newly acquired property. The main question among the squatter now is: Will the Government survey this ground and throw it open for settlers, and if the Government should do so, would the squatters have first chance or preference of the ground?

Chilled Meat From Canada

Efforts Are Made to Secure Refrigerator Vessels for Transportation

LONDON, Aug. 13.—An important aspect of the meat supply in Great Britain at present is the need of adequate transportation for chilled meat from Canada. Active efforts are being made to secure a supply of refrigerator vessels for the Canadian service to bring over the large available supplies of meats. Complaint is being made that such vessels are being used by the British authorities for American and Argentine trade to the detriment of Canadian interests.

Provision of shipping facilities, says a well-known Canadian farmer would do more to help the meat supply here than the removal of the embargo on Canadian cattle as there would be a benefit to the Canadian packers and relief of the English markets.

Smithfield dealers are becoming anxious about the near future as supplies are bought up for weeks ahead.

Meanwhile a non-fresh diet or a minimum amount is being advocated in many newspapers.

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS

"Oh, yes! we were there," returned Nan, innocently, who loved to talk of those dear old times; "and we were at the 'fete' at Oriel, and at the concert at Magdalen also. Ah! do you remember, Dulce?" And then she faltered a little, and flushed,—not because Mr. Drummond was looking at her so intently, but at certain thoughts that began to intrude themselves, which entwined themselves with the moonlight cloisters.

"I was to have been there too, only at the last moment I was prevented," replied Archie; but his tone was inexplicable to the girl, it was at once so regretful and awe-struck. Good heavens! if he had met them, and been introduced to them in proper form. They had mentioned a Mr. Hamilton; well, Hamilton had been a pupil of his; he had coached him during a term. "You know Hamilton he had said, staring at her; and then he wondered what Hamilton would say if he came down to stay with him next vacation.

These reflections made him rather absent; and even when he took his leave, which was not until the falling dews and the glimmer of a late dusk drove Mrs. Challoner into the house, these thoughts still pursued him. Nothing else seemed to have taken so strong a hold on him as this.

"Good heavens!" he kept repeating to himself, "to think that the merest chance—just the incidental business of a friend—prevented me from occupying my old rooms during the Commemoration! to think I might have met them in company with Hamilton and the other fellows!"

The sudden sense of disappointment, of something lost and irremediable in his life, of wasted opportunities, of denied pleasure, came over the young man's mind. He could not have danced with Nan at the University ball, it is true; clergymen, according to his creed, must not dance. But there was the 'fete' at Oriel, and the Magdalen concert, and the Long Walk in the Christchurch meadows, and doubtless other opportunities.

He never asked himself if these girls would have interested him so much if he had met them first in ordinary society; from the very first moment they had attracted him strangely. He had only known them a fortnight. Good heavens! it seemed months, years, a lifetime! These revolutions of mind are not to be measured by time. It had come to this that the late fellow of Oriel, so aristocratic in his tastes, so temperate in his likings, had entered certain devious paths, where hidden pitfalls and thorny enclosures warn the unwary traveller of unknown dangers, and in which he was walking, not blindfold, but by strongest will and intent, led by impulse like a mere boy, and not daring to raise his eyes to the future. "And what Grace would have said!" And for the first time in his life Archie felt that in this case he could not ask Grace's advice. He was loath to turn in at his own gate; but Mattie was standing there watching for him. She ran out into the road to meet him, and then he could see there were letters in her hand.

"Oh, dear, Archie, I thought you were never coming home!" she exclaimed. "And I have such news to tell you. There is a letter for you from Grace, and mother has written too; and there is a note from Isabel inside, and she is engaged—really and truly engaged—to Mr. Ellis Burton; and the wedding is to be in six weeks, and you and I are to go down to it, and—oh, dear——" Here Matie broke down, and began to sob with excitement and pleasure and the longing for sympathy.

"Well, well, there is nothing to cry about!" returned Archie, roughly; and then his manner changed and softened in spite of himself; for after all, Isabel was his sister, and this was the first wedding in the family, and he could not hear such a piece of news unmoved. "Let me hear all about it,' he said, by and by; and then he took his poor hysterical little Matie into the house, and gave her some wine, and was very kind to her, and listened to his mother's letter and Isabel's gushing effusion without a single sneer. "Poor little Belle; she does seem very happy!" he said, quite affectionately, as he turned up the lamp still more, and began Grace's letter,

Mattie sat and gazed at him in a sort of ectasy; but she did not venture to ask him to read it to her. How nice he was to-night, and how handsome he looked! there never was such a brother as Archie. But suddenly, as though he was conscious of being watched, he sat down by the table, and shaded his face with his hand.

No, Mattie, was right in her surmise; he would not have cared to show that letter to any one.

The first sheet was all about Isabel. "Dear little Isabel has just left me," wrote Grace. "The child looks so pretty in her new happiness, you would hardly know her. She has just been showing me the magnificent hoop of diamonds Ellis has given her. She says we must call him Ellis now. 'Chacun a son gout;' Poor Ellis is not very brilliant, certainly; I remember we used to call him clownish and uncultivated. But he has a good heart, and he is really very fond of Isabel; and as she is satisfied, I suppose we need not doubt the wisdom of her choice. Mother is radiant, and makes so much of the little bride-elect that she declares her head is quite turned. The house is quite topsy-turvy with the excitement of this first wedding in the family. Isabel is very young to be married, and I tell mother six weeks is far to short for an engagement; but it seems Ellis will not listen to reason, and he has talked mother over. Perhaps I am rather fastidious, but, if I were Isabel, I should hate to receive my trousseau from a lover, and yet Ellis wants his mother to get everything for his fiancee. I believe there is to be a sort of compromise, and Mrs. Burton is to select heaps of pretty things,—dresses and mantles and Paris bonnets. They are rolling in riches. Ellis has taken a large house in Sloane Square, and his father has bought him a landau and a splendid pair of horses; everything—furniture, plate and ornaments—is to be as massive and expensive as possible. If I were Isabel I should feel smothered by all these grand things but the little lady takes it all quite coolly.

"When I get a moment to myself I sit down and say, 'In six weeks I shall see Archie!' Oh, my darling! this is almost too good news to be true! Only six weeks, and then I shall really see you! Now do you know, I am longing for a good clearing-up talk? for your letters lately have not satisfied me at all. Perhaps I am growing fanciful, but I cannot help feeling as though something has come between us. The current of sympathy seems turned aside, somehow. No, do not laugh, or put me off with a jest, for I am really in earnest; and but for fear of your scolding me I should own to being just a little unhappy. Forgive me, Archie, if I vex you; but there is something. I am thoroughly convinced of that. You have some new interest or worry that you are keeping from me. Is this quite in accordance with our old compact, dear? Who are these Challoners Mattie mentions in her letters? She told me a strange rigmarole about them the other day,—that they were young ladies who had turned dressmakers. What an eccentric idea? They must be very odd young ladies, I should think, to emanicipate themselves so completely from all conventionalities. I wish they had not established themselves at Hadleigh and so near the vicarage. Mattie says you are so kind to them. Oh, Archie! dear brother, do be careful! I do not half like the idea of these girls; they sound rash and designing, and you are so chivalrous in your notions. Why not let Mattie be kind to them instead of you? In a parish like Hadleigh you need to be careful. Mother is calling me, so I will just close this with my fondest love.

"GRACE."

Archie threw down the letter with a frown. For the first time he was annoyed with Grace.

Nan and her sisters rash and designing! "Odd young ladies"! she was sorry they had established themselves at Hadleigh! It was really too bad of Grace to condemn them in this fashion. But of course it must be Mattie's fault; she had written a pack of nonsense, exaggerating things as much as possible.

Poor Mattie would have had to bear the brunt of his wrath as usual, only, as he turned to her with the frown black on his forehead, his eyes caught sight of her dress. Hitherto the room had been very dimly lighted; but now, as he looked at her in the soft lamplight, his anger vanished in amazement.

"Why, Mattie, what have you done to yourself? We are not expecting company this evening; it is nearly ten o'clock."

Mattie blushed and laughed, and then she actually bridled with pleasure:

"Oh, no, Archie; of course not. I only put on my new dress just to see how it would fit; and then I thought you might like to se it. It is the one uncle gave me; and is it not beautifully made? I am sure Mrs. Cheyne's dresses never fit better. You and Grace may say what you like about the Challoners, but if they can make dresses like this, it would be tempting Providence not to use such a talent, and just because they were too fine ladies to work.'

"Turn round and let me look at you, girl. Do you mean that she—that they made that?"

Mattie nodded as she slowly pivoted on one foot, and then revolved like the figures one used to see on old-fashioned barrel-organs; then, as she stood still, she panted out the word,—

"Is it not just lovely, Archie?" for in all the thirty years of her unassuming life Mattie had never had such a dress, so no wonder her head was a little turned.

"Yes, indeed; I like it excessively," was Archie's comment; and then he added, with the delicious frankness common to brothers, "it makes you a different person, Mattie; you are almost nice-looking to-night."

"Oh, thank you, dear!" cried poor Mattie quite moved by the compliment; for if Archie thought her almost nice-looking he must be pleased with her. Indeed, she even ventured to raise herself on tiptoe and kiss him in gratitude, which was taking a great liberty; only Archie bore it for once.

"She really looked very well, poor little woman!" thought Archie, when Mattie had at last exhausted her raptures and bidden him good-night. "She would not be half so bad-looking if some one would take her in hand and dress her properly. The women must be right, after all, and there is a power in dress. Those girls do nothing by halves," he continued, walking up and down the room. "I would not have believed they had made it, if Matie had not told me. 'Rash and designing,' indeed! just because they are not like other girls,—because they are more natural, more industrious, more courageous, more religious in fact." And then the young clergyman quoted to himself the words of the wise old king, words that Nan and her sisters had ever loved and sought to practise:

Obstinate Indigestion Can Be Cured

No trouble causes more wide spread suffering and discomfort than indigestion. The ailment takes various forms. Some victims are ravenous for food: others turn sick at the sight of meals; but as a rule every meal is followed by intense pains in the chest, heartburn, sick headache and often nausea. Indigestion assumes an obstinate form because ordinary medicines only subdue its symptoms—but do not cure. So-called pre-digested foods only make the digestion more more sluggish, and ultimately make the trouble take a chronic form.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion because they go right to the root of the trouble. They make new, rich blood, which so strengthens the system that the stomach does its own work and digests the food in a natural way. Many a terrible sufferer from indigestion has found a permanent cure through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among them is Mrs. H. Carmern, Locke street, North Hamilton, Ont., who says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only gave me new health but new life. For five years I was a great sufferer, was almost constantly doctoring, and spent a great deal of money with absolutely no result. My stomach was in such a dreadful condition that frequently it would not retain nourishment of any kind. When I ate I suffered terrible pains, a fluttering of the heart and often a feeling of nausea. In addition to this I was in a very anaemic condition, and felt as if I was lingering between life and death. One day while sitting in the park a lady got into conversation with me, and I told her my trouble. She asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, saying that they had been a great benefit to her daughter. When I went home I decided to try this medicine. I soon found the pills were helping me, and continued taking them for several months, when I was restored to better health than I had enjoyed for years, and I have since been the picture of health. I hope my experience may be the means of pointing to others the way to health."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

SPEEDING OBJECTED TO

The former is contrary to bylaw, and as for the latter, there is no need of them, and they are a serious nuisance. They have nearly caused several accidents.

AIRMEN ARE PRIVILEGED

Because the Curtis Aeroplane and Motors, Limited, are building flying craft for the British Government and aiding the cause of the allies, Judge Cohen decided at Toronto Police Court that they should be allowed a little latitude. The company was charged with breaking the speed by law, and the case was remanded until called upon. It appears that there had been an accident at the company's plant at Long Branch and the automobile was speeding to the scene.

"They are making airships for the Government, and this was a case of accident. We should allow, a little latitude," said Judge Cohen.

WHEAT STORY IS UNTRUE

OTTAWA, Aug. 13.—Sir George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce has issued a denial of the Toronto report that on account of Canada's customs restrictions American grain and flour, instead of Canadian, are finding their way to Great Britain.

"The prohibition of the export of grain and flour to certain countries," said the Minister, "was by the British Government, so we pohibited the export of Canadian grain and grain produce to other than the British Empire. Provision was then made to allow shipment through the United States under such precautions as would ensue that it did not go from there to any countries not prescribed in the order.

"As to the statement that the British Government is getting American grain and flour, the rumor has been heard many times. However, you may state that I have no information that Britain is getting supplies of American wheat and flour; that my information, in fact, is directly to the contrary effect."

SHAMING THE HANG-BACKS

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A recruiting meeting for a London battalion in Trafalgar Square this morning was addressed by a Canadian sergeant, who adopted the direct personal rather than the general style of appeal. "What's that chap doing over there?" demanded the speaker, indicating a man in the crowd. The individual thus singled out produced a certificate of rejection. A dozen similar certificates were handed up in the course of the next quarter of an hour, the sergeant closely scaning them before returning them to the owners. One man declared himself a civil service and constabulary since the war started," was the sergeant's comment.

This style of recruiting afforded considerable diversion especially to those obviously unfit for military service, who consequently were not called upon to publicly give an account of their works in the middle of Trafalgar Square at noonday.

14-YEAR-OLD BOY SOUGHT TO ENLIST

Kennedy McGill, a fourteen-year-old Havelock lad, picked up his belongings and made for Kinston for the purpose of enlisting in one of the overseas units. After arriving in the city he enquired where Barriefield Camp was, and made for it. The recruiting officer saw that he was much under age and for that reason the lad was refused admission into Canada's army. Although turned down he still "stuck around," evidently with the hope that he might get attached.

When the family at Havelock missed the lad they got busy and notified the Chief of Police. When Police Constable Samuel Arniel paid a visit to the camp on Thursday morning he had no difficulty in locating the boy who was brought to the city and placed in the cells at hte police headquarters. He will be sent to his home.

BIG STEEL FACTORY FOR OSHAWA

Some two or three weeks ago the Mayor of Oshawa called a number of the leading citizens together at the Town Hall to take into consideration a proposition regarding a large steel plant for Oshawa, on which he and another influential citizen had been working for some time, stating the progress made. They met Mr. Maxwell, a gentleman who at once impressed those present favorably. The Mayor explained the proposition was to establish a large steel plant on the farm owned by the town, adjacent to the lake, and left it with Mr. Maxwell who is the head of the project, to explain it in detail.

REQUIRED 200 ACRES.

He had with him plans of the proposed plant, which he stated when completed would require about 200 acres of land, but before going into the land feature, he explained at some length the steel situation in Canada and elsewhere. He said the impression was somewhat prevalent that there was no money in steel production today. The reason for this idea was that all the strong steel corporations are overloaded and therefore unable to pay large dividends on stock capitalizations many times more than their plants are worth. But he could assure them there is money in steel.

In the concern he proposed starting here there would be no watered stock. It would be a straight business proposition,, conducted on the same principle as that on which a man would run his own business. There was an excellent opening for a steel plant in Canada today, and the place for it is in Ontario. Although there are three steel plants in Canada already, over a million tons of steel is still being imported annually. The plants already operating in this country make very little structural steel, and what they do make is only in the small sizes. This was the line of production his company proposed to specialize on.

The company asked for two hundred acres of land and bond security for $60,000. They agreed to employ two hundred men to start and fifteen hundred when completed.

GIFT SWORD OF PARIS READY FOR KING ALBERT

PARIS, Aug. 3.—(By Mail).—The sword of honor to be presented by the people of Paris to King Albert has been completed by the sculptor Fetu. It will first be submitted to General Florentin, Grand Chancellor of the Legion Honor, then to President Poincare, after which it will be placed on view for a time at the Exhibition of Belgian Art.

"No thoroughfare" is the inscription upon the guard at the foot of the hilt in the form of a statuette in massive gold, representing a young athlete upon the defensive, brancishing a club. The statuette represents the Flemish type, a Belgian having posed for the figure. The arms of the City of Paris in blue and red enamel, with the cross of the Legion of Honor and the device "Fluctuat nec mergitur," and the date 1914 in diamonds upon an oak branch in green enamel. On the other side of the guard, in golden letters upon blue enamel, is the inscription: "The people of Paris to his Majesty Albert King of the Belgians" The inscription on this side is surmounted by a laurel wreath set with emeralds and rubies.

"Droite, sans tache, sans effroi,
J'ai pour ame ton ame, o Roi," (Straight, spotless, and fearless,
I have for my soul thy soul, O King.)

The sheath is of fish skin, tanned by a process revived from the eighteenth century. The chape bears the arms of the thirteen Belgian provinces, on a field of flowers and vegetables of the country; flax, hops, and colza. It is surmounted by a mural crown.

"Then I musn't call a policeman an ass?" he said.

"Certainly not," said the judge. 'You must not insult the police."

"But you wouldn't mind if I called an ass a policeman, would you?"

The motorist turned to the man who had arrested him. "Good day, policeman," he said, and immediately left the court room.

8th C.M.R. Leave For Barriefield

The Week-end Spent in Belleville Was in Every way Successful

After a pleasant sojourn in this city since Friday evening, the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, who are in training in Kingston, left here at 8.30 this morning for their return journey to their camp at Barriefield. During Saturday and yesterday the members of the visiting Rifles spent a most enjoyable time viewing the city and the surroundings. Their stay in the city was most pleasant in every respect, and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The men were fine specimens of Canadians, who are prepared to go to the front to do duty for the King and Empire. The men were stationed at the Agricultural Park and had every conveniénce for their welfare. The general impression by the officers was that the visit to this city was all that could have been desired. At 8.30 this morning the members of the Mounted Rifles left the Agricultural Park and marched down Bridge street west to Front street and proceeded to Bridge street east and thence to the city limits and eastward towards the Limestone City. It was anticipated that Napanee would be reached this evening, where a halt would be made for the night, and tomorrow morning the march to Kingston will be proceeded with. Along the line of march this morning the streets were lined with spectators and applause was by no means stinted. The visit of the ment to the city was much appreciated by all classes of citizens.

...Drum Head Services.

At 9.30 on Sunday morning a drum head service was conducted by the Rev. Canon Beamish, rector of St. Thomas church, and chaplain of the 15th Regiment of this city. The service was most appropriate for the occasion, and was heartily entered into by the khaki congregation.

On Sunday evening Canon Starr, who came up with the 8th C.M.R., preached in St. Thomas' church. A report of his sermon will be found in another column.

OFFICERS ENTERTAINED

The officers of the 8th C.M.R. were entertained by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn on Saturday afternoon by a cruise in his launch "Allie Dale." Col. Ketcheson of the 49th also assisted in making it pleasant for the guests. The officers met together at the Hotel Quinte, were taken to the dock and proceeded up the Bay to Trenton, going up on the north side and coming down on the south side of the bay, running down to Big Bay, making a cruise of all together about 40 miles. The officers very much enjoyed the trip. The day was a delightful one and it was the expression of all the officers that the scenery could not be surpassed. The party consisted of: Lt.-Col. J. R. Munro, Major McLaughlin, Major J. R. Routh, Major W. T. Brown, Capt. W. A. Blue, Capt. L. E. Askwith, Lt. E. A. Godfrey, Lt. T. L. Harling, Lt. H. A. Scott, Lt. E Gamble, Lt. W. G. William, Capt. G. G. Memberry, Lt. L. Conn, Major G. H. Gillespie, Lt. G. S. Stewart, and Lt. H. C. Farthing.

The boat returned to her dock at 6 o'clock and the merry party broke up after having a pleasant afternoon on the Bay of Quinte. The yacht has done yeoman service in entertaining guests in the City, but there never was a happier party than sailed from the dock on Saturday afternoon.

The officers are a fine collection of men and will not soon forget their visit to Belleville.

SOCKS FOR SOLDIERS

The ladies of the Patriotic and Red Cross Association decided on Saturday afternoon to present the officers and members of the 8th C.M.R. each with a pair of their socks. Thousands have been sent to the front by our ladies but they thought that when an opportunity came of giving them to the boys on the ground it would be a good thing to do so.

A committee composed of Mrs. Col. Lazier, President, Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Convenor of Camp Supplies and Mrs. Dr. Yeomans, Convenor of the Knitting Circles, had parcels neatly prepared and marked for the respective squadron for machine gun section and band, and took them to the Head Quarters on the Fair Grounds and placed them in charge of the Orderly Officer. The socks were distributed this morning before the regiment left for Kingston and no doubt will be fully appreciated by the officers and members of the regiment.

The ladies are to be congratulated on their thoughtfulness in this move but it is only in a line with what they have been doing since the war broke out.

The citizens have been very much pleased with the visit of this unit and the appearance of the officers and men has won the admiration of the citizens while their conduct without exception has been such as to bring high credit to the organzation.

BRITISH USE GERMAN BOMBS ON ENEMY

Sweep Back Germans, Who Piled up Dead as Barricades, by Use of Bombs Which They Had Captured

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Special)—A correspondent of the Morning Post at British headquarters in a despatch describes the recapture of the lost British trenches at Hooge, which appears to have been most capably and creditably accomplished. Officers and men, says the correspondent, alike bear enthusiastic testimony to the accuracy and efficacy of the British artillery fire. The Germans were undoubtedly taken by surprise, says the correspondent, and were almost all waiting comfortably in their dugouts for the bombardment to cease.

"The attack was upon them before they realized that the bombardment was off. In one of the dugouts a benevolent-looking gentleman was found so absorbed in a work of philosophy that he had apparently forgotten that a battle was going on.

"The German officers barricaded themselves in their dugouts and declined to surrender. Sandbags had to torn from the roofs of the dugouts and bombs dropped in from above. One by one the dugouts and their occupants were blown to pieces, and the fight passed forward out o fthe redoubt to the northwest and along a trench which declined from it over the crest of the hill.

"It was not intended to extend our line far along this trench, but it was impossible to restrain the men. The trench was very deep and so narrow that the bayonet could not be used, and all the work had to be done by bombing. The enemy who escaped from the redoubt had retired down this trench, offering a desperate resistance and contesting every traverse.

"We had, however, at that moment not only our own bombs, but a considerable number of the enemy's, and we fought him back, foot by foot, literally with his own weapons. The slaughter in this trench was very heavy, but the Germans suffered far more than we, and as our men forced them back the bottom of the trench was so filled with dead and dying that the Germans were raised up on the bodies of their own men, and in consequence had to fight in a stooping position.

BARRICADES OF DEAD.

"The Germans, to ward off the attacks, piled up a barricade of their dead to act as a traverse. Our men pushing forward, got to a point in the slope where they could see a crowd of Germans in the hollow below. Unable to reach them by any means themselves, they communicated the fact to the guns, and a salvo of shrapnel swept them out of existence.

"Meanwhile, on ther ight of the redoubt a trench had been carried as far as an old crater, which was filled with Germans, apparently waiting in reserve. Their position when our men reached the lip of the crater was hopeless. They were most anxious to come out and surrender, clambering up the side in order to yield themselves. The bulk of the prisoners taken came from this spot. Unfortunately, it happened that when marching to the rear one of the enemy's shells killed a number of them as well as some of their escort."

French Aviators Are Victorious

Half a Dozen German Machines are Forced to Descend in Damaged Condition

PARIS, Aug. 15.—French aviators are reported to have destinguished themselves recently in several aerial combats with German machines. A French craft reconnoitring above Colmar Thursday was attacked by a German machine, which it forced to descend within the German lines in Alsace, evidently damaged by shots.

The same day two German planes were chased back from above French positions in Artois, while two French patrols attacked and apparently damaged another German aeroplane. An Albaross machine was forced to the ground in the same way on Wednesday.

A squadron of ten German aeroplanes which attempted a bomb attack on Toul and Nancy on August 1, was forced to retreat by French machines, dropping the projectiles they carried upon open fields.

French Capture Machine Guns

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 16.—(Afternoon official statement)—There was intermittent cannonading last night in the vicinity of Souches and the plateau of Nouvron, to the north of the River Aisne.

There were also engagements with bombs and hand grenades in the section of Quennieveres and in the western part of the Argonne district.

In the Vosges an explosion of a mine against an enemy trench located between Burnhaupt-le-Bah and Ammertz-Willer, made it possible for us to take some prisoners and to capture two bomb-throwers and machine guns.

Daly, his secretary and will review the troops now at the big camp. Senator Lougheed, accompanied by Hon. Allies Preparing For Big Drive

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A Chronicle correspondent, G. H. Ferries, writing from Nancy, France, says, an effort on the part of the allies is in course of preparation, the magnitude of which has not been imagined.

Poverty is said to be a sure cure for dyspepsia, but the cure may be worse than the disease.

Lots of Wheat From India

LONDON, June 14.—No explanation of reported cancellations of orders for wheat from America by the Entente allies have so far been obtainable. Persons connected with the wheat market including a Government broker on the Baltic exchange, professed ignorance on the subject.

It was suggested by those in touch with the market that the report if correct, might be connected with the fact that the Indian wheat crop was much larger and of better quality than anticipated, or the improved prospects of Russian wheat getting out through the Dardanelles.

TURKS SEE THE EARLY FINISH OF THE FIGHT

German Commander of Ottoman Forces Sends His Family to Berlin

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A cable to the Tribune from Ligano says the wife and family of Von Der Goltz Pasha, reorganizer of the Turkish army, passed through Buckharest Tuesday, from Constantinople, bound for Berlin. This is considered a sign that he believes the position of the Turks desperate.

The substitution of the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg of Liman von Sanders as commander-in-chief of the troops at Gallipoli is called another proof of dissensions in the German staff at Constantinople. Germany is making her best efforts to intimidate Bulgaria and Roumania by pouring immense numbers of troops into Hungary. Nearly 140,0000 are now concentrated between the Ess and the Danube.

If the attack on Serbia is successful Bulgaria will be summoned to grant free passage to the Austro-German army on its march to Constantinople. This critical situation forces the Balkan States to decide immediately with whom they will side.

A Balkan Agreement.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 13, via London, Aug. 14.—The newspaper Schode Bulgarie, in an editorial on the anniversary of the Treaty of Bucharest (August 10, 1913), which the paper says has been disastrous not only to Bulgaria but to all the Balkan States, declares that "until that stumbling block is removed from the path of the Balkan peoples there will be neither peace tranquility or security in the peninsula."

The paper, speaking of the conditions for joining the Entente allies, holds that a Balkan Entente is impossible unless this treaty, which it asserts violates the racial rights of the interested nations, is annulled.

Short of Munitions

Athens, Aug. 14.—In spite of optimistic statements from Constantinople, the Turkish ammunition supplies are nearing exhaustion as the result of repeated attacks by the allied forces at the Dardanelles. Private advices received here today said that the German and Turkish diplomats have renewed their efforts to obtain consent of the Balkan States for the passage of munitions to Turkey.

Boatloads of wounded from the latest fighting on Gallipoli peninsula continue to arrive at Constantinople. It is estimated that 120,000 Turkish wounded are now in the Constantinople hospitals.

Turk Ambassador Recalled

London, Aug. 14.—A despatch to the Daily News from Athens says Mukhtar Pasha, Turkish Ambassador at Berlin, has been recalled at the Kaiser's request, because he reported to Constantinople that Germany and Austria were in the last stage of exhaustion and that the first serious German repulse would bring destruction.

The Ambassador recommended to the Porte to employ discretion pointing out that if Germany lost she would use Turkey as a scapegoat.

Field Marshall Von Der Goltz, on hearing the report, immediately cabled a demand for Mukhtars recall.

PUTTEES TO REMAIN FOR HOME PURPOSES

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—It is announced by Senator Loughead, Acting Minister of Militia, that the change from puttees to boots in soldiers' equipment is for trench use. For home service and marching purposes the puttee is to be retained. This is also understood to be the intention of the British authorities.

STORM ON NORTH SHORE OF LAKE ONTARIO

Number of Buildings Flooded and Bridges Swept Away—Whitby in Darkness—Scarboro' District Caught in the General Downpour

The north shore of Lake Ontario was a storm belt Sunday afternoon and evening, but the town of Oshawa and district proved eventually to be the real storm centre. The disturbance of the atmosphere was noticed early in the afternoon by residents of Long Branch who waited for the storm to break over them sooner or later. There was a wind with velocity of 30 miles an hour, and just as a heavy downpour was threatened it changed its course and swept across the lake. The official explanation of the cloudburst at Oshawa is that it was the result of a violent electrical storm.

The Real Storm Centre

Oshawa, Aug. 15.—(Special)—While Oshawa worshipped tonight the town was plunged into darkness. Congregations going home there discovered the cause. They found the streets impassable owing to a torrent of water several fet in depth rushing along. The torrent rapidly grew worse, crossing the dip in the main street. It flooded out all the houses in its path and the factory of the Oshawa Canning Company, bursting the doors and windows in the lower stories and carrying all the contents on with it.

Barrels of canned produce, pianos, furniture and articles of every description were caught in the flood. So large became its size and the danger of the spectators being drowned that the local fire and police departments were called upon to rope off the dangerous district and hold the people in safety.

Seven new cement bridges, which were built at a cost of over $20,000, were carried away, and the only cause of the old bridge over Oshawa Creek, north of the town of Oshawa, standing till now, is the fact that the new steel bridge erected by the Toronto Eastern Railway somewhat above it has shielded it from the full force of the trees and wreckage afloat in the stream.

Telephone and telegraph communication is cut off from the central points and the roads are impassable, hence, although the fullest particulars cannot be had, there is no doubt that the loss will run into thousands of dollars.

POSITION IN ARRAS TAKEN BY CANADIANS?

BUFFALO, Aug. 15.—A London cable published in The Courier today states that Canadian troops have distinguished themselves again by the capture of a strong German position on a hill in the Arras district. It states that the war office in making the announcement refers in glowing terms to the coolness in battle and grim determination of the Canadians.

No confirmation of the reported announcement by the British war office has been received. The reference to the Arras region, which is far removed from the known British zone of operations casts further doubt on the authenticity of the report.

ITALIANS GET READY FOR A GREAT MOVE

ROME, Aug. 15—News from the Italian front conveys the idea that feverish preparations are taking place with a view to a resumption of the battle for completing the occupation of the Carso plateau. During the last ten days the troops have strengthened the positions and conquered a formidable new base of operations against Goritz and Tolmezzo, which was virtually evacuated following the partial occupation of Mount St. Michael. The Italians are preparing an attack against Mont Sabotini, whose batteries dominate the peak of St. Michael.

Despite an absence of heavy engagements the Italians are slowly and quietly securing posts of advantage, which the enemy is attacking daily. The new offensive on the Carso is regarded as imminent.

INDIA TAKING MEASURES AGAINST ALIEN ENEMIES

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Government of India, according to a special despatch from Simla has been obliged to adopt more drastic measures in the treatment of alien enemies throughout the empire. The despatch says:

"A statement describing in detail the measures for internment, surveillance and registration hitherto applied to alien enemies in India, has been issued by the government. It states that the prolongation of the war and the bitterness aroused by German savagery have now altered the position besides adding to the continued strain of supervision. It has accordingly been decided, with the approval of the secretary of state for India, to repatriate all women, children and men of non-military age as soon as the necessary arrangements can be carried out."

AUSTRIAN ARCHDUKE TO BE KING OF POLAND

Proclamation of Karl Stephen is Expected Shortly

PETROGRAD, Aug. 15.—The proclamation of the Archduke Karl Stephen of the House of Hapsburg as King of Poland is expected shortly. It has been recently reported that Germany has agreed to his selection.

For several years India has steadily increased its production of coal, iron and copper.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—David Johnston, of Lurgan, who, after shooting at registration enumerators, barricaded himself in his house and kept discharging revolvers from behind his barricades, was found dead this morning in the house, with a bullet wound below the eye. He had used his last cartridge to cheat the police. He is believed to have been mentally irresponsible.

100 Americans Fallen in Battle

(Canadian Press Special)

ONTARIO HOSPITAL TO BE LOCATED IN KENT

LONDON, Aug. 14—Difficulties having arisen over a question of lease, The Mail and Empire understands the Ontario Government Hospital will not be established at Cambridge, but that an alternative location at Orpinton, Kent, will be chosen. Orpinton is a poultry farm town on the Folkestone Road, fifteen miles from London.

Russians Still Being Pursued

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Von Mackensen continues his pursuit of the Russians from the south toward Brest-Litovsk, and has occupied Ciale and Slawatycze, according to an official announcement made by the German army headquarters today. The army of Prince Leopold, of Bavaria, pressing the Russians from the west, has occupied Losyce and Miedzyrzec.

BALKAN SITUATION APPROACHING CRISIS

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 16—Morning papers give prominence today to the Balkan situation which they point out may reach a crisis within twenty-four hours.

Italy's Boy Crown Prince

Chats with the Public—Queen and Princes Sell Red Cross Lottery Tickets

ROME, Aug. 14.—Democratic friendly, the Royal house of Italy mingles with the mothers and wives and sisters and sweethearts of the men fighting at the front, in marked contrast to the situation at other of the war capitals where royalty goes about guarded by bristling weapons.

The scene at the Red Cross Fair the other day could scarcely be repeated in any other monarchy in the world. The eleven-year-old Crown Prince, dressed in a boy scout suit, stood in a booth in the gardens of the quirinal, selling his photographs for charity, while crowds of women pressed about him, exclaiming, "Isn't he handsome? Such a darling little fellow."

"The little fellow with a bright smile on his lips and a frank look in his big big brown eyes, was replying to questions put to him by admiring women in a most democratic manner. And while he talked and sold his photographs, murmurs were stirring other sentiments in the gardens of the Royal palace.

"Why does the King take such chances at the front?" ran the comment, "It would be a crime to burden such a child with the responsibilities of a kingdom at such a time.

In other parts of the garden the beautiful Queen Helena and the Princess Yolanda were selling chances for the Red Cross littery. A small Red Cross ticket fee was the only requirement for entrance into the royal garden and excepting a few guards who quietly told visitors not to stop to look back at the Crown Prince, there were few precautions taken to safeguard Italy's royal family.

ENLISTED IN ORDER THAT THEY MAY WED

Hull Couple Could Not Get Parents' Leave to Marry Otherwise

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—Mars as an adjunct to Cupid is the role the war god is playing in a pretty little romance which has come to light in the enlistment in the 77th battalion being raised in this city for the front of Arthur Belanger, a youthful Hull citizen. It has been claimed that love disappointed has driven many a man to serve his flag but this is a case where love and duty promise to synchronize. They have led Arthur Belanger to enlist and they have also resulted in the simultaneous application to the Militia Department for a position as a nurse of Miss Eugenie Ladouceur, also of Hull.

Even these twin facts almost any reader could construct a romance without further assistance. Truth in this case, however, is every whit as strange as fiction could well be since Mr. Belanger and Miss Ladouceur are going to the front to get married. They cannot get married here because, despite a long wooing on the part of Mr. Belanger, to which it is understood Miss Ladouceur has listened for some time with favor, the parents of both have opposed the match.

It was at this stage of the romance that Cupid, seeing that outside assistance was necessary, whispered in the ear of Mars, and the result is the enlistment of Mr. Belanger and the application of Miss Ladouceur. The latter is already a skilled nurse and consequently her application is expected to meet with no obstacles. Once in England the young couple expect to meet and become man and wife in London, that old city which has already witnessed many such another romantic wedding as that of this khaki clad soldier and Red Cross nurse.

REGRETS HE WROTE THE SONG OF HATE

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 14—Even Ernst Lissauer appears to be becoming ashamed of the song of hate. He writes to the Berlin Tageblatt saying he agrees with its view that the song is not intended for the young, and he has often advised against its publication in school books. "The song of hate", he writes, 'was written as the result of a passionate impulse in the [illegible] week of the war, when the impression created by England's declaration of war was fresh. The song of hate is a political poem not directed against individual Englishmen, but collectively against the English will [illegible] the destruction which threatens German. In the excitement of those days my feelings were deeply stirred by this. Whether these feelings can continue with the cool consideration of practical politics is another question.

Occasionally we meet a man who has sense enough to do the very best he can.

Pretty Thin.

"Thin!" replied the man who was talking about a mutual acquaintance. "Well, he's so thin that when he eats macaroni he can only swallow it one piece at a time!"—Pittsburgh Press.

The Nearest He Ever Came to It.

"Colonel," she asked, "have you ever been up in a balloon?"

"No," he answered, "but I got to talking art to a Boston lady once, and she had me away up in the air inside of two minutes."—Exchange.

Stale Candy.

Stale candy can generally be worked over by reboiling. In the case of acid candies, such as lemon drops, the candy is boiled, the acid is withdrawn by the use of lime or chalk, and the sirup may then be used in the manufacture of that or any other species of candy.

The Intelligencer Tobacco Fund

PARCELS DESPATCHED.

The amount contributed by the readers of The Intelligencer to our Tobacco Fund was $47.10. The lady who kindly undertook the task of making the purchases expended the whole of the sum in Belleville stores with the exception of 49 cents. This we have handed over to Miss Wilmot, who is collecting for a machine gun. Goods to the amount of $40.75 were bought; postages amounted as under:—Capt. O'Flynn, $2.28; Q. M. Sergt. Spafford, $2.78; Signaller Bombardier H. Yeomans, 80 cents; making with the balance, 49 cents, given to machine gun, $47.10.

Belleville, Ont.,
August 12, 1915.

Dear Captain O'Flynn,—

In these packages you will find some tobacco, cigarettes and chewing gum which we would like you to distribute among your fighting men.

This tobacco, etc., was subscribed for through the columns of The Intelligencer by a number of our citizens who had the welfare of the fighting men of the Empire at heart. We are,

Yours truly,
The Intelligencer Printing & Publishing House, Ltd.

We must thank our readers for having so promptly responded to our appeal on behalf of the Belleville lads, who we are sure will fully appreciate their generosity.

Auto Kills Man Injures Woman

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—Struck down to death by the insolent nonchalance of a big touring automobile that neither gave warning nor stayed its purring speed, was the fate of Joseph Vezena, a pedestrian on the Kingston road, at 9.20 o'clock last evening. Miss Margaret Sizzell, who was accompanying the young man, was also swept aside by the modern juggernaut, and is now lying in a very critical condition at St. Michael's Hospital. It is feared her injuries are fatal.

Car Sped Heedlessly on.

Having done its fell work, the car sped on its way like a thing conscious of nothing but speed. The driver, who must have known the possibilities of the collision, did not even pause to inquire as to damage or assist in alleviating the suffering of his victims.

Man Dies on Way Homeward.

The unfortunate couple were immediately accorded sympathetic attendance by nearby residents and visitors. They were carried into a passing radial car going cityward but before the end of the journey home the young man succumbed to his terrible injuries having received a fractured skull and a broken leg while his whole body was badly battered. He lived at 14 Sumach street, but the remains were removed to the city Morgue pending preliminary investigation.

The young woman, Miss Margaret Sizzell, who is about 21 years of age and whose home it at 34 St. Paul street, is also very seriously injured. She was removed to St. Michael's Hospital by the General Hospital Ambulance, and was reported late last night to be at death's door.

Officers Start Search.

On receiving news of the accident County Constable Robert Burns hastened immediately to the spot, and securing all the information possible at once set the hounds of the law in pursuit of the ruthless flier. Several police cars scoured the countryside up to a late hour last night, and city officers are co-operating in the search. Up till midnight, however, neither the car nor its inmates had been identified.

A DEPLORABLE ROAD

The county officials who have under their supervision the keeping of the county gravel roads in repair, should give their attention to that portion of the road in Thurlow Township which leads from Corbyville to Tweed. From the Grand Junction Railway crossing to O'Brien's bridge the road is in a most deplorable condition, being at certain places almost impassable for vehicles and pedestrians. This road is one of the most extensively travelled in the township, and should be placed in a proper state of repairs. There are cerain points between the Corby distillery and Thrasher's Corners where water lay at a depth of some inches. Residents along the road are loud in their denunciation of the state of the road.

COBOURG SENT 30 RECRUITS

Troop, local recruiting officer for the 40th Northumberland Regiment, the Cobourg Citizens' Band, the Cobourg Heavy Battery, other military men, Mayor Duncan and many citizens joined in the parade to the station and gave them an enthusiastic send-off. On behalf of the town Mayor Duncan commended the spirit that had prompted them to rally to the Empire's defence, and wished them God-speed and a safe return. Previous to their going away they were entertained at the Armories by the Cobourg Women's Patriotic Club.

MARIE CORELLI'S APPEAL.

Famous Novelist Has Turned Recruiting Agent for Britain.

Miss Marie Corelli, the celebrated English novelist, who has been actively engaged in a recruiting campaign, recently urged the necessity for recruits in a speech from which the following are extracts:

This fearful war is not a game of football; we cannot play at it, or put it aside as something to be thought of casually after we have consulted our own humer and convenience. It is a time of self-sacrifice; we owe the best of all we have to our country. We must give, not only ourselves, but those we love, to the country's service. In these fortunate islands, mercifuly protected by the sea, we have not as yet experienced the horrors of invasion; but invasion may come, and will come, if we are not prepared, alert and watchful. We must grudge nothing to prevent such disaster. We must put aside our own concerns entirely and think of what this great war means. It means wider freedom for the whole world. It means an end to the tyranny and savagery of Prussian militarism; it means greater progress and broader civilization. And, being such a war, every man should be proud and eager to bear his part in it.

Any man physically fit who hesitates or hangs back at such a crucial moment in his country's hour of trial is a coward. And any woman who holds him back is also a coward, and a selfish one. We love our men—yes—but love is not true love if it hinders a man from doing his duty. There is danger—there is chance of death in the field of battle, but death comes to all of us sooner or later, and we may question whether it is not better to pass away gloriously with honor than to creep languidly out of existence in bed, surrounded by physic bottles. A soldier must face all possibilities, and a brave man must be willing to risk the worst for the chance of winning the best. As Shakespeare tells us:

"Cowards die many times before their deaths,
The valiant only taste of death but once."

If I had the right, the eloquence or the power to plead with you, I would ask every man here present who can join the colors, but who has not done so, to do it now! And I would also ask every man whose skill and strength are needed for the manufacture of war material to work steadily, cheerfully, and ungrudgingly, in the full consciousness that by urging on the necessary output he is helping to save hundreds of the lives of his countrymen. He, the worker, is as necessary to the Empire as the soldier, he also is fighting the King's enemies

And if I had any force to persuade I would pray every woman in this audience to prove her love for the men belonging to her by inspiring them to do their duty to King and country, either by sending them away to join the army, with all good blessing and trust in God for their safety, or by heartening them up to their work in war munitions and putting no difficulties in their path of honor.

For every man that hangs back from military service or shirks his work, refuses to help his brothers, and every woman that keeps a man away from the great fight, or encourages him to grudge and shorten his hours of labor, is wronging other women's husbands and sons. In this great test of national character none of us must fail. In the war as in work we must all pull together, shoulder to shoulder, to win the victory which must and shall be ours.

"If England to herself do rest but true!"

Only Thirty-Seven Survive.

Late in February the 5th Royals, one of the crack Canadian regiments, eleven hundred strong, left Montreal en route for England and the great European war. Less than four months later, after weeks in the trenches at Ypres, only thirty-seven of those eleven hundred men were known to remain alive and they are prisoners in the great military camp at Goettingen, Germany.

Overpowered by the gases wafted toward their positions, deserted by colored troops supposed to come to their support, all but decimated by the deadly German fire, the little band of four non-commissioned officers and 33 privates was easy prey. Before they regained consciousness they were in captivity.

The thirty-seven at Goettingen hope that some of their brave regiment may have escaped and may still be fighting, but they do not believe it. They were on the outskirts of the gas columns that swept over the trenches, and they escaped with their lives because they did not have to breathe the noxious fumes in their full strength.

Many of them have as yet not been able to establish communication with their families in far-off Canada, and are not sure whether mothers, wives, and sisters know that they have escaped death.

In a Big Hurry.

The Golden Age Is Coming, Says Canon Starr

Rev. Canon Starr, of Barriefield Camp, who came to Belleville with the 8th C.M.R., occupied the pulpit last night at St. Thomas Church, and preached to a large congregation. "In the latter day it shall come to pass," were the words of his text.

"It seems to me, brethren," he began, "as if a feeling of pessimism had taken possession of the people during the last week. The dark cloud which hung over us seemed to be shot through with the possibility of a victory. Then there came a stand still, and we could not understand the operations. The Dardanelles had not been taken. On all sides we hear the outlook is dark. It seems to me necessary in times like this that we should go back to first principles and consult the Old Book for some inspiration. Here is the first gleam that the fight must be to a finish. Above the mists light is shining and more towards a perfect day—to the time when the war drum sounds no longer; when injustice, bitterness and strife has passed off the earth and the golden age is come."

The preacher quoted Sir Thomas Moore, who 400 years ago spoke of the time coming when there would be a Parliament of Man and a Federation of the World. All things were tending in that direction, and while on the surface all was not right with the world a better day must dawn. Some said that was visionary. It might be. It was the men who dreamt deams that the world wanted today. They looked forward to the latter day and its accomplishments. It seemed to him that even in the present crisis they were getting nearer to realities. Old things were shaken up. In the last few days he had been much impressed by conversations he had had with two soldiers. One young fellow who had knocked about the world a good deal said he had been thinking seriously about religion. He asked him if he was a member of any church, and he said, "No, Sir, I have always believed in God, but somehow it never came home to me as it does now. On the first opportunity I would like to join a church." Men were now thinking below the surface. Another young man turned suddenly and said, "Conversion is something that does not come to a man in his sleep, or with his eyes shut. It seems a wonderful thing that Christ died for men." He (the preacher) replied, "It is the most wonderful thing in all our knowledge."

One of the young fellows went for a swim and would have been drowned, but two of the officers plunged in, at the risk of their lives, and brought him to safety. "That represents somewhat our nation," said the Rev. gentleman. "Little Belgium struggling, and Great Britain plunging to save her. We did not consider the consequences. It was the old spirit for which the flag stands—"Noblesse oblige." "In the latter day it shall come to pass." "It will represent a brotherhood of man such as the sun has never shone upon," said the preacher. He went on to say that a year ago he was addressing men from the slums of Whitechapel, in London; and when he talked about the serious condition of the war they seemed to take no notice. But afterwards out of that very community there marched 2000 men. They had caught a vision that there was something in that old Empire worth while, and for which they were prepared to give their lives.

"When an old Whitechapel man comes to this country," he proceeded, "we have never welcomed him. But I am going to act in quite a different way in the future, on account of that spirit shown by those Whitechapel men." He believed that this war was in God's hands, and that when we had made the sacrifice a brighter day would dawn. It was a sacrifice when a man died for his country. "There is no death. He who dies for his country lives eternally. The Kingdom of Righteousness and the Kingdom of this world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord."

The New Russia Bear Becoming A Brother

A large congregation in the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last night listened to Mr. Smith's third sermon on "Present Blessing from the Great War."

Taking as the basis of his remarks, Acts xvii:26—"God hath made of one blood all the nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth", Mr. Smith said in part:

These words form the pith and crux of St. Paul's remarkable sermon before the philosophers, the epicureans and stoics, on Mars Hill, the highest tribunal of ancient Athens. The doctrine he ennunciated and the evangel he declared to those scornful sages and wits of Athens was none other than that which we call by the rather hackneyed phrase "the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man." He preached a gospel of cosmopolitanism as opposed to crass parochialism and national bigotry. And the marvellous thing about this sermon was that the preacher on that noted areopagus was an erstwhile bigoted and persecuting Jew; and his auditors were men who represented the acme of culture, albeit it culminated in ignorance: for their altar was dedicated "To the unknown God."

St. Paul in this chapter and verse sets forth the one eternal basis of true Divine Fatherhood and Human Brotherhood, namely and to wit, knowledge of God and acceptance of His Christ. This is the only bond that can ever bind all men into a world-parliament of men and a world-federation of mutual service and brotherliness. This cosmopolitan idea doesn't preclude patriotism, rather it enhances and ennobles it. We should love our own land and our own people the best, but we must learn to respect and appreciate other nations and races, and adopt a spirit of helpfulness towards them, as being in God's purpose 'of one word' "for to dwell on all the face of the earth."

One of the blessings of the great and vital wars of history is that, military alliances of great races of diversified habits, tongues and religions, has invariably resulted in breaking down the middle wall of parochialism and isolation of nations, and increased the bond of brotherhood of these nations. This has been one of the overrulings of Providence, and a fruitful cause of religious awakenings after every great war in history. I believe that this will be one of the great blessings arising out of this present awful war; namely, a new Russia. This great Slavonic people has been looked upon by Anglo-Saxons as "the Bear that walks as a man"; a mighty and mysterious people, likely to prove a peril to Europe and Britain in the years to come. It was one of the great surprises of our Empire to find ourselves, last August, in alliance with this same feared and unknown Russian nation. We said little or nothing about it, you will notice. We rather magnified our obligations to Belgium, whose neutrality was being ruthlessly violated, and we were silent about our alliance with Russia. This was due to ignorance and prejudice, which are the Siamese twins of parochialism and insularity. "The man in the street" knew that Russia was an Empire of vast areas. It embraces one-sixth of the land surface of the earth, and is nearly three times as large as Canada. Its vast coast line is washed by the Arctic Ocean on the north, an dthe Pacific Ocean on the East, while its western frontier overlooks the widespread grassy steppes or sandy wastes of central Asia. "The man in the street" probably also knew that Russia was immensely rich in agricultural lands, timber areas, and minerals; that 70 per cent. of her 150,000,000 inhabitants could neither read nor write, and were really semi-barbarous, and ruled by a haughty bureaucracy whose measures were rigidly repressive and demoralising. But a great change has come about in our thinking and knowledge of our great ally, Russia. We magnify their bravery and patience and faithfulness in this war, and we welcome every good thing that can be told us in their behalf by the great army of reporters and writers who have toured Russia during the past year. And we have had just cause to revise our sentiments and abolish our fears, in regard to this mighty Slavic nation. The evils of Russia and the reported terrible cruelties of their Cossacks, and their knouts and Siberian prisons, spring from a bad system of government, and a state religion that puts a premium on ignorance, and persecutes all who dissent from their Ikons and creeds. We have learned during this past year that the "Russian Bear," so-called, really wants to be a "brother," worthy of his great colleagues in this awful struggle for liberty and righteousness. David Lloyd George spoke prophetic truth when he said recently, "The Russian people are shaking themselves free of stifling debris. Their mighty limbs are preparing with new spirit and new hope for a new land. Our enemies do not understand what they are doing in the East. Their mighty cannon are shattering the rusty bars that fettered Russia." We can well afford to watch with fascinated eyes the movements in Russia at this present hour, which are the direct outcome of this war, and her association with Great Britain and France in the defence of weak nations and the freedom of the world from the German oppression. Mighty destinies are in store for Russia, by the grace of God. The suppression of vodka, the humane treatment which Russia has accorded to her prisoners, the deep and serious religiousness of the Russian people, all presage a new and nobler Russia than ever the world dreamed was possible before this bitter war. Then, too, since this war began the internal strife of class against class and race against race, and religion against religion that abounded in Russia has practically ceased, and is as though it had never been; and things can never be the same in Russia any more. She must proceed to adopt government of the people and for the people, under an enlightened leadership. We see also a new Russia in the liberation of the Poles. Almost at the very commencement of this war Russia freed the Poles, and ameliorated the lot of the Jews, who number 5,000,000, and heretofore have been placed under grievous restrictions, and have been bitterly persecuted. We see a new Russia in the freedom of the long persecuted Protestants and especially Baptists, of Russia. Since the war began Russia has technically freed these evangelicals of her empire, who number 4,000,000, and set them at liberty to worship God after the dictates of their own conscience, and enlightened souls. Nothing but this war would have brought this about so soon and so completely. When the war broke out the Baptist Church at Petrograd offered its commodious building, Dom Evangelia, for hospital service, and the church members contributed 12,000 rubles for relief work. (A ruble is equivalent to 77c. of our money). The Empress wrote a personal letter of thanks. But the Baptists gained so much credit that the jealousy of the Greek Catholic priests was aroused, and they compelled the church to close temporarily and exiled the pastor and deacons. But after the war the new Russia will never permit religious persecution and disabilities. Superstition will give way to an enlightened faith and to freedom for all. For us as Canadians it is interesting to know that in the last 16 years nearly 200,000 Russians and Slavic peoples have come to Canada. They make good settlers and are peopling our great West, and will make loyal citizens of our land.

Our Schools and Our Flag.

The national pledge for our flag was recommended by the American Flag Day association. The pupils, standing with right hand uplifted, palm upward, to a line with the forehead, in the attitude of salute, repeat the pledge in these words: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands. One nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." At the words "to my flag" each one extends the right hand gracefully, palm upward, toward the flag until the end of the pledge; then the hand is dropped to the side.

Children in the primary grades are taught to repeat a shorter pledge in these words: "I give my head and my heart to God and my country. One country, one language, one flag."—Philadelphia Press.

Bombay's Huge Road Mirror.

Road mirrors are not rare in England, where they are set at dangerous turns or crossings to warn drivers of vehicles or pedestrians just around the corner. Their success was immediate, and some American cities are showing an interest in the device. Bombay, however, has led the world with the largest road mirror on record as well as the first in India. It is set at the corner of Gamdevi road and Hughes road, a dangerous point, and measures 5 by 10 feet, which is seven times as large as the average English road mirror.—New York Independent.

HINDRANCES TO RECRUITING

The figures published in Saturday's Intelligencer, giving the percentage of recruits in the different Provinces, showed that Quebec holds the unenviable position of having the lowest percentage for Canada. This is attributed by Beck's Weekly to the course adopted by certain priests throughout the Province of Quebec, which has aroused considerable indignation in high military quarters. The line of argument adopted—and presented from the pulpit—is that France is agnostic and anti-Catholic, while England is Protestant. Therefore the advice is given that French-Canadian Catholics are not called upon to fight for such nations, and should not go abroad in such a cause, but should only fight if attacked at home. Not long ago such a sermon was preached at a leading church in the North End of Montreal. So extensive has this been that a proposition has even been made to send expert stenographers and witnesses to report some of these seditious sermons and then take action against the preachers. This, in the somewhat peculiar circumstances, was considered inadvisable, and nothing has been done save through the authorities of the Church.

This campaign of sedition—for it is nothing else—has been entirely contrary to the ideas of Archbishop Bruchesi, who is not only a loyal British subject, but actively loyal. His Grace, during the past few months, has done a great deal more than most people know to aid the Empire in his Archdiocese. In fact, it is stated that His Grace's influence was behind the recent emphatic statement of Hon .T. Chase Casgrain that the Canadian Government had not the slightest idea of ever attempting conscription. Archbishop Bruchesi, as spiritual head of Montreal, was naturally appealed to by loyal French-Canadians, after the recent disgraceful outbreak on Lafontaine Park, and the subsequent efforts to hold "soap box" meetings at street corners to pursue an anti-recruiting campaign. His Grace replied that he was an archbishop, not a policeman, and pointed out that, in the face of the recent tactless conscription speeches of Mr. N. K. Laflamme and the blunt intimation of Mr. C. C. Ballantyne, it was difficult to quiet men who had reason—or thought they had—to fear that great bugbear of all French-Canadians—conscription. However the Archbishop, though no policeman, is a very considerable diplomat, and within a few days the Postmaster-General, as representative of the French-Canadians in the Government at Ottawa, came out with his flat contradiction of all conscription rumors.

Since then not only has the anti-recruiting campaign stopped, but recruiting amongst the French-Canadians in Montreal has shown a marked increase. Lieut.-Col. Dansereau, who is organizing the 69th Battalion, has reaped the benefit of this fine crop of recruits. Already he has nearly two hundred men, after little over a week's work, and the recruits are coming in at from 30 to 40 a day. This, without any special campaign, is good work, since he is getting almost as many men day by day as the 60th Battalion did at the height of their recruiting campaign. He will doubtless be helped by the recent order which abolishes the mischievous buying out privilege, and also by the revoking of the provision that wives could refuse permission for their husbands to go to the front. We shall probably soon see Quebec beating the Maritime Provinces, which also have a very low percentage.

CURRENT COMMENT

There was an increase of 250,344 tons in the unfilled orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation on July 31st as compared with June 30th. Here is further proof of the way the iron and steel business is building up.

There is a report that the German plan is to make Poland an autonomous kingdom, with Prince Joachim, the Kaiser's sixth son, as its ruler. That resembles Napoleon's idea of establishing independence and autonomy among the people whom he conquered.

There was an increase of more than $80,000,000 in the value of imports into the British Isles last month. Food and war materials naturally were mainly responsible for this great increase. These figures show how the British foreign debt is piling up.

The New York Life reports that of the 2,541 policy-holders (insured for $8,009,536,26) who died during the second three months of this year, 158 were 30 years of age and under; 436 were between 30 and 40; 688 were between 40 and 50; 664 were between 50 and 60; 595 were more than 60.

Canada is primarily an agricultural country. At the present time every industrial, every transportation company, every banker and business man is awaiting the harvesting of the crop. On it depends the prosperity of the nation more than on anything else. It is for this reason that the greatest apprehension is felt as to the recent rains.

Brazil is now shipping beef to the United States. As that country has 25,000,000 head of cattle and possesses an almost unlimited range of territory, it might very easily develop into a great meat producing country. Anything which would tend to increase the world's supply of cattle would be welcomed—Montreal Journal of Commerce.

The suddenly developed race consciousness of the Turks has now become so acute that the government has forbidden the use of any other than Turkish characters in the street signs in Constantinople. The Turks are apt pupils, but they have not yet reached the advancement of those Germans who are urging all German patriots to rechristen their dogs with strictly German names.

Windsor, Ontario, plans to insure all the married men who volunteer to go to the front. In October the city council will meet and it is believed will unanimously authorize an appropriation of at least $8,000 for payments on insurance policies taken out by members of the first two contingents that have gone to the war. In the new plan married men will be insured for $1,000, while those with three or more children will be granted $500 additional. Single men with dependents will be insured for $500.

Jane Addams, of Chicago, formerly reputed to be one of America's brainiest women, came back from The Hague peace conference to say that she could not find out who started the war, and she had found out that soldiers were doped with drink to give them the courage to charge. It seems to us that as a finder Jane is a distinct failure. We know without crossing the Atlantic what she failed to find, and we also know that what she says she found she must have dreamed. Who carries the keg before the charge is made anyway?—Canadian Courier.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

To bring this war to a successful conclusion Germany must supply herself with a great mass of material such as formerly she had no difficulty in procuring from abroad.

To do this now is rendered more impracticable every day, owing to the machinations of our foes. It, therefore, becomes imperative that the State should forcibly acquire at its own price all that it needs from the civilian population of this country.

We have sufficient faith in the patriotism and self-sacrificing spirit of the nation as a whole. We feel sure that the people will respond to call as Germans should. So vital, however, is this question that adequately to meet it there must be no halting, no stopping half-way. In other words, the recalcitrant, whoever he be, must be shown no quarter.

When the Government makes demands they must be met, and those who will not see the necessity for it must be made acquainted with the interior of a German prison and be mulcted in their property all the same—The official "Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung."

HELP TO MAN THE GUNS

Young men of Canada! Do you not hear
The call that comes from yonder battlefield
From heroes who are fighting over there
Our Flag of truth and liberty to shield?
Their ranks are thinned. More men is what we need
To crush that countless horde of German Huns.
Would you stand by while those brave fellows bleed?
Enlist today; and help to man the guns.

Just think of those who there at Ypres fell,
Poisoned by fumes of suffocating gas,
Torn limb from limb by deadly shot and shell,
Outnumbered by that still increasing mass—
Oh! What a price they paid for victory,
That band of Canada's heroic sons.
Avenge the boys who died for liberty;
Enlist today, and help to man the guns.

While duty calls, come forth with willing hand
And fight to keep our country's flag from shame;
For should conscription come into our land,
Nobody but yourselves will be to blame.
Our dear old Union Jack must never fall,
For lack of courage in our Empire's sons;
Wake up, and answer to your country's call,
Enlist today, and help to man the guns.

TORONTO.

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—The decided broadening of the markets during the past week has been one of the most satisfactory features observable for a long time past, indicating as it does a general public appreciation of improving conditions and a greatly increased public interest in financial and stock market affairs. It was also to be noted that, combined with this broader trading, was a very marked degree of strength in securities of almost all classes, which strength did not, however, react on those specialties which had been acting in so spectacular a manner for the previous month. That the markets of this country should have exhibited this progressively improving tendency was only to have been expected, in view of the amount of good news and favorable developments which materialized during the week.

NATIONAL STEEL CAR (Canada) —The National Steel Car Company was one of the first companies in Canada to receive orders for war munitions, and as a consequence, the company is in an enviable position as regards this class of business, its plant having been complete and in running order for nearly a year. The present output is of three-inch shells, camp kitchens and tenders, freight cars for gun transports and artillery wagons. It is worthy of note that the company does all its own forging and turning and sublets no part of its steel contracts, delivering the shells ready for time fuse and powder. The National Steel Car Company is working in close harmony with the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, and when its present contracts (amounting a few months ago to $3,000,000, since which time no further orders have been received) are filled, the company may confidently look for more of this class of business from the Car and Foundry Company.

The capital of the company is $2,000,000, 7 per cent. cumulative preferred and $1,500,000 common stock. The preferred dividend is now 21 per cent. in arrears, but the profit on war orders already filled is said to be sufficient to pay this amount in full and leave a large percentage applicable to the common stock. The probable earnings on the common have been variously estimated at from 15 per cent. to 40 per cent., and many brokers and others in close touch with the company's affairs believe that the stock is headed for 80.

POWDER AND BALL

The Deadly Successors to Man's First Crude Weapons.

FROM JAVELIN TO CORDITE.

Cannon and Guns Are Merely In the Nature of Chemical Catapults—The Introduction of Explosives and the Principles Governing Them.

When the first man in the old stone age thousands of years ago threw his first javelin against a hairy mammoth he put his foot over the threshold of the problem of explosives. For it seemed to him—and our feelings today are with him—that it would be more pleasurable if one could hurt and kill one's enemy without the gratuitous thrill of having to sit on the massive tusk on the verge of a cavernous mouth or of having to approach within a few paces of the huge legs which might the next moment descend upon him. It would be more convenient to stand at the cave entrance on a dizzy ledge of rock and hurl a weapon at the distant enemy.

So man was driven to invent the catapult, and a gun is merely a chemical catapult. The trigger is pulled back like the leather of the catapult, and the sudden and extraordinary expansion of the explosive corresponds to the elasticity of the rubber or spring, the essential feature of both instruments being the employment of some source of more than human power which can be made to yield up its energy at a given moment in the required way.

Explosives are, therefore, tabloid energy or power, and it is a just reminder of the fact that some substances are explosive generally, whereas quite a number of common things may be made explosive by some particular kind of treatment. When water boils on the fire there is no explosion as it is changed into steam, but if the spout were sealed and the whole of the water could be changed into steam in a second there would be an explosion. And the instance is good because it is really a kitchen model of a volcano. Moreover, steam guns were used in America in the sixties.

The essential idea of an explosive is then the violent release of some pent-up thing; just the opposite, from this standpoint, of the catapult, which works by allowing a distended thing—the elastic—to contract suddenly, whereas all explosives release a compressed thing. The release gives rise to an air wave, and this, of course, is experienced as a sound. It is the sound which is popularly called an explosion.

Now, it has been said that an explosive is tabloid force, power, energy. How is it made available? It is easy to follow the mechanism of an explosive further. Explosives, as commonly used, are solid substances which, by burning, produced almost instantaneously an extraordinary large volume of gases. The heat and pressure of a blow cause the burning to start, and the burning also produces heat which, acting upon the gases, increases the volume still further. It may be suggested that there is no obvious reason why even a sudden and enormous expansion should cause the damage of an explosion. And the suggestion is quite just.

It is only when they are confined that explosives are really dangerous. Gunpowder burned in the open merely causes a noise like "pouf" and burns quickly. Guncotton may be burned on the hand—it is not to be recommended as a fashionable hobby—without any serious inconvenience. Indeed, gunpowder was first used as an incendiary composition. But a firework or a gun charged with gunpowder will explode with a loud report and may cause fatal wounds.

Gunpowder is the best known explosive mixture. It is made from the commonest ingredients—carbon, sulphur and saltpeter. There are several modifications of gunpowder, other nitrates being substituted for the saltpeter—potassium nitrate. The nitrates give the oxygen to the mixture, without which it would not burn at all; other explosive mixtures containing chlorates which have the same amount of oxygen as saltpeter and the nitrates. The different powders are used in different circumstances where a more violent or a slower or a safe explosive is required, for it is not always the same effect which one asks from an explosive. Velocity may at times be sacrificed, say, in favor of a bigger weight of common shell. Gunpowder is a "low" explosive. Its explosion is slow, and its effect is less violently disruptive.

"Dynamite is probably the best known "high" explosive, and the name does not stand for one particular substance, but for a large class, which are, in effect, diluted nitroglycerin and which are generally used for blasting.

Guncotton may be described as a nitrate of cotton wool (which the chemist would call cellulose). Both nitroglycerin and guncotton are less useful as explosives themselves than their derivatives, although Russia and the United States use compressed wet guncotton in their high explosive shells. One of the most famous derivatives is the smokeless propellant called cordite.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It is not what the best men do but what they are that constitutes their benediction to their fellow men.—Phillips Brooks.

How to Be an Orator.

"What is your recipe for good oratory?" a reporter asked.

"I am afraid oratory comes natural," was the reply. "There is, though, one recipe for it—old Job Walmby's, but it is hardly satisfactory. 'Tha wants to be a public speaker, dost tha, lad?' Job in his Yorkshire dialect would say, 'an' tha thinks Aw'm the chep to put tha up to a wrinkle aboot it? Tha's right; Aw awm. Now, hark tha! When tha rises to meek thy speych hit taable an' oppen thy mawth. If nowt comes tak' a sup o' water an' hit taable again. Thin oppen thy mawth wider than afoor. Thin, if nowt comes, tak' thysen off an' leave public speakin' to such as me.'"—London Tit-Bits.

DOUBLE ORDERS IN CANADA EXPECTED IN NEAR FUTURE

British Representative on Munitions Very Well Pleased With Facilities in Canada

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—Mr. D. A. Thomas, representative of the British Government in Canada on munitions, will return from New York on Friday. With General Bertram he will leave for Toronto on Sunday night to inspect the factories in Ontario engaged in the manufacture of shells. Among the points which will be visited are Toronto, Hamilton, London, Galt, Stratford, Dundas and Welland. The following week they will commence their western inspection, calling at Fort William, Winnipeg, Moose Jaw, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

DOUBLE THE ORDERS.

As soon as the inspection of the Canadian plants is completed it is believed there will be no delay in the allotment of further orders, as the British representative has been more than pleased with the facilities in this country for the production of both shrapnel and high explosive shells. He has paid many strong tributes to the work of the shell commission, the scheme of which organization has been adopted in Great Britain. It is believed that the satisfactory condition of affairs in this industry will lead to the placing of further orders at least equal in value to those already being placed in Canada.

"Let Her Go, Gallagher!"

Judge Becker of Mercer county, Ky., had a trotting mare of which he was very proud. The animal was always driven at the race meets by a man named Gallagher, who was at that time city marshal of Harrodsburg. On one occasion the judge entered his mare at a trotting meeting in Tipton county. Some sports there, knowing of the judge's pride in the animal, thought they would lower his colors for once, so they entered against her a noted fast trotter. At the end of the first mile the two trotters passed under the wire neck and neck at a 2:40 pace, and the judge grew wildly excited. "Let her go, Gallagher! Let her go!" he shouted. And Gallagher, hearing, loosened the lines. The mare quickly responded and finished more than a dozen lengths ahead amid the wild cheering of the crowd.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

SERBIAN PRINCE BARS AGREEMENT

Alexander Persists in Holding on to Macedonia.

BULGARIA WANTS PRIZE

Demands of King Ferdinand for Handsome Slice of Balkan Territory is Held Up By Opposition of the Formerly Despised Crown Prince of Serbia—Bulgaria's Price.

IT is one of the little jokes of fate that the young man, Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia, who was treated with such contemptuous condescension by the exalted personages assembled at London in June, 1911, for the coronation of George V.—that he Prince Alexander, should be, in June, 1915, the arbiter of the immediate destinies of Europe.

Bulgaria's entrance into the war on the side of England, France, Russia, and Italy would, it is quite openly stated in each of their capitals, help to bring about an early termination of the war. It would release Roumania, now fearful of a Bulgarian attack on her flank if she flung herself at Austria's throat in Transylvania. It would furnish the allies with a veteran Bulgarian army to march upon Turkey through Thrace, and it would give to the allies the Bulgarian port of Dedeagatch, on the Aegean Sea, for the landing of their own troops to co-operate with the allied navies at Constantinople.

THE CROWN PRINCE OF SERBIA.

Bulgaria's Demands.

Bulgaria makes no secret of her willingness to be bought for such assistance. But she has only one price. The Crown Prince of Serbia, Regent in his country, can alone pay it in full. This he persistently refuses to do.

Bulgaria demands, above all else, that part of Macedonia which is inhabited by Bulgarians and which is in the possession of Serbia. To reclaim Macedonia from Turkey, and in pursuance of the ideal of nationality, Czar Ferdinand began the first Balkan War, fortified by a solemn agreement with Greece and Serbia that, in the spoils, Macedonia was to go to Bulgaria. The blood of thousands of Bulgarian patriots was shed in the victorious campaigns of Ferdinand. Greece and Serbia became fearful of Ferdinand's ambitions to dominate in the Balkans. They preferred to entrap and betray him.

Alexander, the twenty-four-year old commander-in-chief of the Serbian army, captured Monastir from Turkey, thus bringing about the fall of the whole of Macedonia, and from Monastir the Bulgarians were barred by the sword as from Salonika.

Roumania is to-day feverishly eager to restore the Dobrudja if thereby she can quiet the dogs of war upon her flank and rush her force of a million men into Transylvania. It comprises thousands of acres of territory and millions of inhabitants, Roumanian in blood, to the thousands of the Dobrudja. Austria-Hungary, at the present moment, could not defend Transylvania. Greece will not give up Thrace to Bulgaria, but England, France, and Russia have offered compensation elsewhere which is acceptable. It is only Serbia which is the stumbling block, because it is Macedonia which Bulgaria demands first and last, and for which she will not be compensated elsewhere.

June 24 of last year King Peter, a man of seventy-three and weak in health, left his capital and the Crown Prince was appointed Regent. Alexander has coldly rejected every compromise which included the giving up of a foot of territory now held by Serbia. His father is ensconced at some watering place away from Belgrade. His elder brother, Prince George, has been dancing and dining in the hotels of the Riviera.

ARTILLERY STEEL.

Germany Must Soon Come to the End of Her Supplies.

Modern high-powered guns could not be built without steel strong enough to resist the enormous pressures to which they are subjected. Few understand how great these pressures are—almost as far beyond ordinary comprehension as are the distances of the stars or the number of atoms in a glass of water. An attempt to state the matter in a form that will mean something to the ordinary mind is made by a contributor to La Nature in an article entitled "The Strains Resisted by Gun-Metal." He writes:

"When the marvels of modern artillery are described, perhaps we direct our admiration too exclusively to the mechanicians who have combined to construct it. We must not, however, forget the metallurgist, for it is owing to the astonishing qualities of the metal that the gun is so well able to resist the enormous strain due to the detonation of the explosive.

"It is interesting to cite here some figures published by Commandant Regnault. At each discharge of a gun, in the case of our field-pieces, in less than three-tenths of a second the pressure exceeds twenty tons to the square inch, and the speed of the projectile leaving the muzzle is more than 2,500ft. a second.

"The energy developed may be put at about half a million foot-pounds; in other words, considering the cannon as a motor working during an exceedingly short time, we may place its rating at about twenty million horse-power.

"Not only must the metal be able to resist these strains time after time, but to do so under unfavorable conditions, such as the high temperatures produced by the explosives. And not only must the metal of the gun be as strong as this, but it is the same with that of the shell. The shell of our 'seventy-five' supports a pressure estimated at seventeen tons; the work of the device that takes up the recoil reaches about twelve tons to the square inch, and the mount neutralizes at each discharge about two tons.

"In fact, these conditions are realized in quite a remarkable way. It has been possible to test in the machine-shop the pieces of a battery that has fired several thousand shots and to show that they have suffered not the slightest deformation.

"This is why it is necessary to employ special steels. The use of nickel, in proportions of 1 per cent. to 2 per cent., gives to steel special qualities. This is one of the points where the economic blockade to which the Germans are subjected is likely to cause them great trouble when it becomes necessary for them to renew their war material. For nickel comes exclusively from New Caledonia and Canada, that is to say, from a French colony and a British one. When the Germans, therefore, have used up their stock, there will be no source from which to replenish it."

Shells Ruined Memory.

The Moose Jaw, Sask., News publishes a letter from the front in France which relates a remarkable story of loss of memory on the firing line. The writer is George Hitchcock, who was a clerk in the C. P. R. freight office in Moose Jaw, and who went with the first contingent. He writes as follows:

"I am sorry to say I have been suffering from concussion owing to a shell bursting almost on top of me. Owing to this I have lost my memory and cannot yet remember any of you. I cannot remember ever being in Canada at all. The first thing I can remember is waking up in the hospital in France and asking where I was. I was told that I had been there for ten days. I am much better now, although I don't remember my mother or anyone I knew before this happened. The doctors say it will all come back in time, so I'm not worrying very much, although it's rather awkward at times.

"You asked me how Tom was getting on. Well, I don't remember him, but my mother came to see me and was telling me about a fellow named Tom Haswell, who was in Canada with me, so perhaps it's the same. If so, she brought me some wedding cake from him and told me he had got married. They tell me we were in an awfully warm corner when I got hurt and that my company was almost wiped out, so I suppose I am lucky to get away as well as I did."

In a postscript Hitchcock states that he has been in five different hospitals and one convalescent home.

Casement Mobbed.

The London Morning Post's Berne correspondent says that a number of Americans are still arriving in Switzerland from Germany, and all agree in stating that the position of their fellow-subjects in the latter country is becoming unbearable except in the case of German-Americans. One of these Americans lately arrived in Switzerland from Germany related that Casement was recently sent to visit a camp in Germany where Irish prisoners of war were interned in order that he might address them and endeavor to suborn them against England. As soon as he began to speak, however, they discovered who he was, and a rush was made upon him. Indeed he would have been lynched had he not been at once surrounded by armed men on guard.

Cannibals Sentenced.

Two Ivory Coast cannibals named Bako and Tere, who in 1913 captured, killed, and ate a commercial traveler named Huberson and who had been sentenced to death by a local court, were refused an appeal by the highest Paris tribunal a few days ago. The lawyer who appeared for the cannibals is an eminent member of the French Bar. He unsuccessfully argued that the savages had justifiable provocation for their deed.

NORRIS HAS HAD A TRYING ORDEAL

Manitoba's Premier Fought Against Heavy Odds.

HE AVOIDED PERSONALITIES

Man Who Led Manitoba Liberals to Overwhelming Victory is a Bachelor and a Farmer—The Plea Throughout Has Been for a Higher Standard of Citizenship.

NO man who has aspired to a position in the public life of Canada has ever been subjected to an attack so gross in its details as has been laid against the new Premier of Manitoba, Hon. Thomas Crawford Norris, during the past two months. All the accumulated cunning of fifteen years of political intriguing in connection with the administration of the affairs of this Province were released by the discredited power behind the late Roblin Government, for the purpose of dragging down into the mire of its own making the new Premier. But he has emerged from the political jungle clean and carrying the respect of the people of Manitoba.

Mr. Norris is 53 years old and a bachelor. He bought a farm near Griswold, Manitoba, after leaving Peel County in 1887, and for twenty-eight years Griswold has been his home. In 1896 he was elected to the Manitoba Legislature as representative of his present constituency of Lansdowne. When the Greenway Government was defeated he lost his seat for four years, but was returned again, to grow up in opposition to Roblin and Rogers. In 1907 Mr. Norris was chosen leader of the Liberal party in Manitoba, and he has held that place in the face of the heaviest odds, fighting against the machinations first of R. P. Roblin and Robert Rogers, and secondly of Sir Rodmond Roblin and the Honorable Robert Rogers, M.P. He was not ambitious for office, he is not ambitious with the Premiership. "My years," he said recently, "has been to put the Roblin Government out of business in Manitoba. "And," he added, "if anybody would take over this job of mine now I would give it up willingly."

HON. T. C. NORRIS.

To look at, the new Premier is far above the average in appearance. He is a big man, standing over six feet, and he has a quiet dignity which lends distinction to his presence on the platform. There is a decided firmness about the set of the straight mouth, the prominent chin, the cool, blueish grey eyes, and well-formed aquiline nose. He speaks very fluently and presents his arguments forcibly and well. Mr. Norris, one would say, has any amount of physical strength and a mind of his own. His speeches show a disinclination to indulge in personal attacks and mud-slinging. During the campaign just ended his whole argument was for an improved standard of citizenship. "The people of Manitoba are on trial in this election," was his constant statement. In the face of heckling or questioning the Premier presents himself very favorably, because in spite of a countenance which might be judged as a bit severe, he has a keen sense of humor and a kindly attitude towards those who differ with him. Particularly in the country Premier Norris is popular. He knows the farmer well, and he believes strongly in the progressive measures which the farmers' organizations have been demanding throughout the entire west.

Turn Over Dark Page.

With the passing of Sir Rodmond Roblin and the election to office of Mr. Norris the darkest page in the political history of Manitoba has been turned over. For fifteen years Manitoba has been controlled by an organization which became allied with every institution which represented selfish privilege and an autocratic as opposed to a really representative form of government. The disastrous end of Roblin rule was in itself an evidence of the character of Manitoba's political history since 1900. Manitoba now steps up beside Saskatchewan and Alberta in the matter of proposed legislation, and the middle western Provinces become truly the ground of a new democracy.

Dorando Leaves for Front.

Dorando Pietri, of Marathon fame, has volunteered his services with an Italian automobile corps which is starting for the front.

Cyclists as Carriers.

Eight companies of cyclists can carry 256,000 rounds of ammunition as against 72,000 carried by a whole cavalry division of nearly 2,600 men.

NAKED WARRIORS.

Australasian Troops Have Reduced Clothes to a Single Garment.

Ellis Ashmead Bartlett in the course of the despatch to The Chronicle and other London papers dated Eastern Mediterranean, July 15, and dealing with the role played by the Australians and New Zealanders in the Gallipoli Peninsula, says:

"A peculiarity of the colonial soldier which distinguishes him in a marked degree from our own men is his dislike of clothes. I suppose that since the Dervishes made their last charge at Omdurman no such naked army has ever been seen in the field. The British Tommy likes to move and work and fight with the majority of his worldly goods hanging round him. No matter what the state of the temperature, the men in our front trenches sit with their packs on, sweating in the broiling sun, and they will dig trenches without removing a garment, but to find an Australian wearing anything except a pair of shorts is extremely rare, whether he be in the trenches, in the rest camp, or on fatigue. One by one they have thrown aside their various articles of clothing. First their coats went, then their shirts, then their underclothes, now a very large number have chucked aside their boots and putties, and only a lingering feeling of decency still kept alive by memories of the mixed bathing season at Sydney preserves the shorts, which, starting a few months ago as full-length trousers, have now arrived half way up the thigh. In this primitive costume the Australians and New Zealanders live and work and fight. Their huge frames and giant limbs are now burnt by the sun to a dull brick red.

"The endless procession of naked warriors covered with sand and dirt never ceases from sunrise to sunset. No sooner is a colonial released from duty than he makes for the water, for here, in far-off Gallipoli, for a short period each day, they imagine themselves once more under the southern sun, and return reinvigorated and refreshed to the stern work of the hills above."

STREETS AT THE FRONT.

Pte. T. Ogilvie, of the Royal Scots, writing home to his parents, 8 Royal Park Terrace, Edinburgh, on date 9th June, says:

"After having a good rest we are back again in the trenches. We left our billets last night at 9 o'clock and arrived here about midnight. This is a treat and no mistake. The trenches are just lovely, and you could not wish for a better place. They are the best made trenches that we have seen so far and we have seen a few. There are dugouts also, right along the whole trench, and they are very neat. The one that my mate and I are in is made of wood in the inside, with brick and earth on the outside. There are shelves all around, very handy for odds and ends. We are very comfortable when lying down; at night you can pull down your screen, light your candle, and if you are lucky enough to have a book you can fairly enjoy it.

"You can walk any distance you like with safety, and it is very amusing when you come to a sign-post telling you where you are. Football Avenue, for instance, is a very nice walk. Then you came to Grove's Villa—beautifully constructed dug-outs that are just like our own summer-houses. Euston Station is a busy thoroughfare. Then we have Whistband Avenue, but as the German shells burst there we give it a wide berth. I have only described a small part of a trench, as that is all of them I have seen as yet.

"There is a piano in the trench, so we have music. The Germans are about 500 yards from us, and you wouldn't think we were at war, everything is so quiet. The trees are lovely, the only thing that mars the beauty are one or two farms in ruins.

"The heat is something awful. I wear as little clothing as possible. In weather like this you require a wash every hour or two. We are all in good health and spirits."

Feeding the Fighters.

When it is mentioned that 2,000 tons of goods—food and other necessities—are sent every day from the base depots to the firing-line of the British Army, some idea of the gigantic task of the Army Service Corps will be gathered.

This enormous weight of goods comes almost entirely from the British Isles, for we are not buying in France even so perishable an necessity as milk.

All day by motor lorry and railway truck supplies for the troops are sent out from these base depots to stores as near as possible to the firing-line. And just as reserves are accumulated in the docks, so reserves are accumulated near the front, since an accident to the railways might cut off the fighting soldiers' supplies.

On one occasion there was a delay on the railways of thirty-six hours, but not only did the soldier at the front get all his food and ammunition, but he did not even have to draw on the reserves just mentioned; regimental stores were sufficient for his need. Everything goes by clockwork. There is no room for an accident.

Sven Hden in Disfavor.

The revulsion of feeling in Sweden since last January, when everybody was pro-German, the Mail's informant ascribes mainly to the sinking of the Lusitania. Sven Hden, the noted Swedish explorer and author, is declared to be unpopular because of his pro-German propaganda. He is reported to have made $25,000 on his autumn tour with the German armies. The Swedish people, according to the interview in the Mail, regard him as a German agent, paid by the German Government.

'TWAS PRINCE WHO ISSUED THE ORDER

Louis of Battenberg Mobilized the British Fleet.

CHURCHILL GOT THE CREDIT

Interesting Correspondence in London Now Proves That Former First Sea Lord Stayed the Order for the Demobilization and Stood Ready for Opening of War

MUCH interest has been aroused by the confirmation from Prince Louis of Battenberg that it was he and not Winston Spencer Churchill who issued the famous order to mobilize the fleet at the beginning of the war. From the outset Mr. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, has received the highest praise for his foresight in having the British fleet mobilized at the critical moment. Some time ago, however, F. T. Jane, a well-known naval expert, publicly announced that Prince Louis of Battenberg deserved this credit. It will be recalled that shortly after the war began Prince Louis of Battenberg resigned as First Sea Lord because of bitter criticism, based chiefly on the fact of his German descent.

PRINCE LOUIS.

And now comes the article by the Prince himself in the Standard, finally clearing the matter up and making it plain that it was he and not Mr. Churchill, who ordered the mobilization of the fleet.

"When the war came," said Mr. Jane, "the British navy was ready and waiting. This fact is generally put down to Mr. Churchill's credit. We have all read it in the press and we have all believed it, but it was the First Sea Lord of those days, Prince Louis of Battenberg, who kept the fleet together. He it was who saved us the horrors of Belgium."

The confirmation by the Prince of Mr. Jane's assertion as it appears in the Standard is: "It is quite true that it was your humble servant, and not Mr. Churchill, who was spending the week-end at Cromer with his wife. It was I who ordered all ships to stand fast instead of demobilizing as ordered."

It is recalled that Mr. Churchill himself admitted this fact when he wrote Prince Louis after his retirement. "The first step which secured the timely concentration of the fleet was taken by you," said Mr. Churchill at that time. Sir G. Robertson, M.P., explains why Prince Louis did not let the world know before the great service he had performed for the country by keeping the fleet mobilized. He says that Prince Louis seemed to think that if the facts were published some sort of injury to the national interests might result.

It is generally agreed that the action of Prince Louis saved England from invasion at the outbreak of the war by an enormous number of picked German troops. Mr. Jane says that 100,000 German troops were actually embarked and were on their way to the east coast when the unexpected preparedness of the British fleet made them turn back.

An effort to find Mr. Churchill, that he might confirm the claim of Prince Louis, has developed the fact that he is busy painting in a little farm house which he has taken in Lancashire. His duties as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster evidently leave him plenty of spare time.

It is said that one of the newest types of British torpedo has an effective range of four miles and a force sufficient to blow a hole as large as a haystack in the side of a battleship.

I ordered a simple enough dinner, at least, to our Idaho standard—a dinner of clams, cold consomme, grilled brook trout, filet of beef with mushrooms, chicken a la broche, and so on—yet a simple enough Idaho dinner, but, by crinus, they kept me waiting in the heat and noise and smells an unconscionable time. Unconscionable!

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS

By

Rosa Nanchette Carey

Author of "Aunt Diana," "Averil," "Merle's Crusade," "Only the Governess," etc.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"Oh, You Are Proud!"

On the following Monday morning, Nan said in rather a curious voice to Phillis,—

"If no customers call to-day, our work-room will be empty. I wonder what we shall do with ourselves?"

To which Phillis replied, without a moment's hesitation—

"We will go down and bathe, and Dulce and I will have a swimming-match; and after that we will sit on the beach and quiz people. Most likely there will be a troupe of colored minstrels on the Parade, and that will be fun."

"Oh, I hope no one will come!" observed Dulce, overjoyed at the idea of a holiday; but seeing Nan's face was full of rebuke at this outburst of frivolity, she said no more.

It was decided at last that they should wait for an hour to see if any orders arrived, and after that they would consider themselves at liberty to amuse themselves for the remainder of the day. But, alas for Dulce's hopes! long before the appointed hour had expired, the gate-bell rang, and Miss Drummond made her appearance with a large paper parcel, which she deposited on the table with a radiant face.

The story was soon told. Her silk dress was such a success, and dear Archie was so charmed with it—here Mattie, with a blush, deposited a neatly-sealed little packet in Nan's hand—that he had actually proposed that she should have another gown made after the same pattern for every-day wear. And he had taken her himself directly after breakfast down to Mordant's and had chosen her this dress. He had never done such a thing before, even for Grace; so no wonder Mattie was in the seventh heaven of delight.

"It is very pretty," observed Nan, critically: "your brother has good tacte.' Which speech was of course retailed to Archie.

Nan, who had just begun her cutting-out, met her with a pleased glance of recognition, and then, remembering her errand, bowed rather gravely. But Miss Midleton, after a moment's hesitation, held out her hand.

She had not been able to make up her mind about these girls. Her father's shocked sense of decorum, and her own old-fashioned gentlewoman's idea, had raised certain difficulties in her mind, which she had found it hard to overcome. "Recollect, Elizabeth, I will not have those girls brought here," the colonel had said to her that very morning. "They may be very well in their way, but I have changed my opinion of them. There's poor Drummond; now mark my words, there will be trouble by and by in that quarter." For Colonel Middleton had groaned in spirit ever since the morning he had seen the young vicar walking with Phillis down the Braidwood Road, when she was carrying Mrs. Trimmings' dress. Elizabeth answered his gentle protest by one of her gentle smiles. "Very well, dear father: I will ask no one to Brooklyn against your wish, you may be sure of that; but I suppose they may make my new dress? Mattie's has been such a success; they certainly understand their business."

"You have a right to select your own dressmaker, Elizabeth," returned the colonel, with a frigid wave of his hand, for he had not got over his disappointment about the girls. "I only warn you because you are very quixotic in your notions; but we must take the world as we find it and make the best of it; and your brother is coming home by and by. We must be careful, for Hamomnd's sake." And as Elizabeth's good sense owned the justice of her father's remark, there was nothing more said on the subject.

But it was not without a feeling of embarrassment that Miss Middleton entered the cottage; her great heart was yearning over these girls, whom she was compelled to keep at a distance. True, her father was right, Hammond was coming home, and a young officer of seven-and-twenty was not to be trusted where three pretty girls were concernd; it would never do to invite them to Brooklyn or to make much of them. Miss Middleton had ranged herself completely on her father's side, but at the sight of Nan's sweet face and her little bow she forgot all her prudent resolutions, and her hand was held out as though to an equal.

"I have come to ask you if you will be good enough to make me a dress," she said, with a charming smile. "You have succeeded so well with Miss Drummond that I cannot help wishing to have one too." And when she had said this she looked quietly round her, and surveyed the pretty work-room, and Dulce sitting at the sewing-machine, and lastly Phillis's bright, intelligent face, as she stood by the table turning over some fashion-books.

At that moment Mrs. Challoner entered the room with her little work-basket, and placed herself at the other window. Miss Middleton began talking to her at once, while Nan measured and pinned.

"I don't think I ever spent a pleasanter half-hour," she told her father afterwards. "Mattie was right in what she said; they have made the work-room perfectly lovely with pictures and old china; and nothing could be nicer than their manners,—so simple and unassuming, yet with a touch of independence, too."

"And the old lady?" inquired the colonel, maliciously, for he had seen Mrs. Challoner in church, and knew better than to speak of her so disrespectfully.

asrf: nY re,r face tood a Prird

"Old, lady, father! why, she is not old at all. She is an exceedingly pleasing person, only a little stately in her manner, one would not venture to take a liberty with her. We had such a nice talk while the eldest daughter was fitting me. Is it not strange, father dear, that they know the Paines? and Mrs. Sartoris is an old acquaintance of theirs. I think they were a little sorry when they heard we knew them too, for the second girl colored up so when I said Adelaide was your god-daughter."

"Humph? we will have Adelaide down here, and hear all about them," responded her father, briskly.

"Well, I don't know; I'm afraid that would be painful to them, under their changed circumstances. Just as we were talking Miss Mewlstone came in; and then they were so busy that I did not like to stay any longer: Ah, there is Mr. Drummond coming to interrupt us, as usual."

And then the colonel retailed all this for Archie's benefit. He had come to gleam a crumb or two of intelligence, if he could, about the Challoners' movements, and the colonel's garrulity furnished him with a rich harvest.

Phillis had taken Miss Mewlstone in hand at once in the intervals of business; she had inquired casually after Mrs. Cheyne's injured ankle.

"It is going on well, she can stand now," returned Miss Mewlstone. "The confinement has been very trying for her, poor thing, and she looks sadly the worse for it. Don't take out those pins, my dear; what is the good of taking so much pains with a fat old thing like me and pricking your pretty fingers? Well, she is always asking me if I have seen any of you when I come home."

"Ah, just so. She has not forgotten you. Magdalene never forgets any one in whom she takes interest; not that she likes many people, poor dear! but then so few understand her. They will not believe that it is all on the surface, and that there is a good heart underneath."

"Ah, just so; I forgot. You see, I knew her as a child,—oh, such a wee toddling might! younger than dear little Janie. I remember her just as though it were yesterday; the loveliest little creature—prettier even than Janie?"

"Was Jane the child who died?"

"Yes, the darling. She was just three years old; a perfect angel of a child! and Bertie was a year older. Poor Magdalene! it is no wonder she is as she is,—no husband and children. When she sent for me I came at once, though I knew how it would be."

"You knew how it would be?" repeated Phillis, in a questioning voice, for Miss Mewlstone had come to a full stop here. She looked a little confused at this repetition of her words.

"Oh, just so—just so. Thank you, my dear. You have done that beautifully, I am sure. Never mind what an old woman says. When people are in trouble like that, they are often ill to live with. Magdalene has her moods; so have we all, my dear, though you are too young to know that; but no one understands her better than her old Bathsheba; that is my name, and a funny old name, too, is it not? continued Miss Mewlstone, blinking at Philis with her little blue eyes. "The worst of having such a name is that no one will use it; my father and mother called me Barsy, as Magdalene does sometimes still."

Bathsheba Mewlstone! Philis' lip curled with suppressed amusement. What a droll old thing she was! and yet she liked her, somehow.

"If she takes it into her head to some and see you, you will try and put up with her sharp speeches?" continued Miss Mewlstone, a little anxiously, as she tied on her bonnet. "Mr. Drummond does not understand her at all; and I will not deny that she is hard on the poor young man, and makes fun of him a bit; but, bless you, it is only her way! She torments herself and other people, just because time will not pass quickly enough and let her forget. If we had children ourselves we should understand it better, and how in Ramah there must be lamentation," finished Miss Mewlstone, with a vague and peculiar reference to the martyred innocents which was rather inexplicable to Phillis, as in this case there was certainly no Herod, but an ordinary visitation of Providence; but then she did not know that Miss Mewlstone was often a little vague.

"After this hint, Phills was not greatly surprised when, one morning, a pair of gray ponies stopped before the Friary, and Mrs. Cheyne's tall figure came slowly up the flagged path.

It must be owned that Phillis's first feelings were not wholly pleasurable. Nan had gone out; an invalid lady staying at Seaview Cottage had sent for a dressmaker rather hurriedly, Miss Milner had of course recommended them. Nan had gone at once, and, as Dulce looked pale, she had taken her with her for a walk. They might not be back for another hour; and a tete-a-tete with Mrs. Cheyne after their last interview was rather formidable.

Dorothy preceded her with a parcel, which she deposited rather gingerly on the table. As Mrs. Cheyne entered the room she looked at Phillis in a cool, off-hand manner.

BARIEFIELD CAMP

Nine horses from the 38th Battalion have been turned over to the officers of the 59th Battalion. None are of the variety that David Harum sold to the deacon.

Leave of absence has been granted to the following: Lieut. A. C. Trousdale, 47th; Capt. Hutchins, 59th; Lieut. J. L. Thomson, 59th; Lieut. F. D. H. Cunningham, 59th; Lieut. W. G. W. Robinson, 59th; Lieut. G. P. Reiffenstein, 59th; Lieut. A. R. Fairbairn, 41st; Lieut. Wrightmeyer, 15th, Capt. R. E. Porter, 45th; Lieut. H. A. Coon, 47th.

Miss E. M. Bartlett, of Napanee, a graduate nurse of the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, was in camp yesterday morning consulting with Major Gardiner, A.M.S. Miss Bartlett has been accepted as nurse for overseas service.

Lieut. Welch, of the C.A.S.C., is on the sick list, and the cause of his condition has not yet been diagnosed. He is a brother og Capt. Welch, O.C. No. 3 Company, C.A.S.C.

Major Medd is in command of the 8th C.M.R. in camp in the absence of Lt.-Col. Munro. Major Medd spends mcuh time in reading military history and great wars of the past have a fascination for him. He is a great admirer of General Lee, the southern general who led the Confederate forces in the rebellion of 1861-5.

All over the divison there is much interest in the welfare of the 59th battalion, and a number of centres are already active in undertaking to purchase something of use to the battalion. Many machine guns in particular have been promised, and this weapon seems to be the chief desire of most of the people who are anxious to assist the Kingston battalion. The commanding officer and his staff know the requirements of their battalion, and while they appreciate every contribution, whether it be a machine gun of a field kitchen, they could be better helped by donations of money, allowing them to purchase in the names of contributors such things as the battalion may need. This would prevent overlapping in donations, and would also save the battalions from having too many guns or too much of any other requisite, above that supplied by the militia authorities. Three more field kitchens are needed for the 59th battalion, and a great many other things, the need of which never occurs to one outside of the inner workings of a battalion organized on active service lines, and if all the forces now organized to augment the funds of the 59th battalion will make donations of money instead of making the purchases themselves, they may trust to the good judgment of Lt.-Col. Dawson and his staff to spend it in the best interest of the batalion, and in a way most helpful to its work.—Kingston Standard.

'CONSTIPATIENTS

Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c. stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health. 1

There was no business before the magistrate this morning, not even a drunk having been apprehended.

PURSE FOUND

On Saturday a young lady brought to the police station a purse which she found on Bridge street. It contained a small sum of money.

MONEY CLAIMED

NO ARRESTS MADE

In police circles since Saturday everything has been exceptionally quiet. There have been no arrests and not even a tramp has occupied the tramp room.

BUSINESS PLACE INSECURE

A prominent business place on Front street was by the police on Saturday night found insecure after the store was supposed to have been made safe.

A DESPICABLE TRICK

Some time during Saturday night after a business place on Front street had been closed up, a placard bearing the inscription "Scarlet Fever" was tacked upon the front door. As the owner of the store and family live on the premises, it led some to believe that there was a contagious disease prevalent about the premises, whereas such was no the case. If the party who did the act is detected he will no doubt be severely punished.

Recruiting in the Maritime Provinces

Belleville, Aug. 16, 1915

To the Editor of the Intelligencer:—

The article in your Saturday's issue on Recruiting Figures contains the statement that the ".... low showing of the Maritime Provinces was unexpected." There are some legitimate reasons for their so called "low showing." There are two classes among whom it has been easy (in Ontario and the West) to secure recruits—the British-born, who have so freely offered themselves for their country's service, and the unemployed class, who enlist with the desire to be employed combined with a sense of duty to their country—that are almost entirely absent in the Maritime Provinces.

The ratio of those born in the United Kingdom to total population is only 27 to 1000 or 2.7 per cent. in the Maritime Provinces; in Ontario it is over five times as high, 13.8 per cent. Considering the very large number of British-born who have enlisted in Ontario, the Maritime Provinces compare favorably with this province in regard to Canadian-born recruits.

Large numbers of men were said to have enlisted in Ontario and the West mainly because they were out of work. The little provinces down by the sea could never boast of a boom, nor do they feel the present depression as the other provinces do; business is going on as usual. They have practically no unemployed class.

There is another reason for the comparatively small number of recruits down east. For years thousands of young men crossed to the cities of the United States and more recently the lure of the Canadian West has drawn many more. Proximity to the ocean also has led many to follow seafaring lives. The result of this emigration is that in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, there is a comparatively small proportion of men of recruiting age, a marked contrast with Western Canada, where, as your article stated, there is a preponderance of young unattached men. No province or locality or party holds a monopoly of loyalty and devotion to the Empire, notwithstanding the statements of some public men and the party press.

I think that the Maritime Provinces have done very well.

The Spirit That Should Animate all Loyal Canadians

Mr. John Snell of this city received the following letter from his only son Harry, which explains itself:

Winnipeg, Aug. 1, 1915

Dear Father.—Just a line to tell you I have joined the 90th regiment here for active service and will enter the barracks on Tuesday and will send you my company address then.

Perhaps my action does not fall in with your way of thinking but I sincerely hope it does. Conditions prove it to be a necessity and I feel it the duty of every fit Canadian in a position to go to at least show his willingness.

Hoping you are all well at home,

Grand Lodge of Ontario I.O.O.F.

Belleville Man Elected Grand Master for the Coming Year

STRATFORD, Aug. 13.—The I.O.O.F Grand Lodge resumed its session this morning.

The sum of $1,000 was voted to be used in the fitting up of an Oddfellows' Ward in the base hospital being established in England by the Ontario Government.

The Committee on Judiciary approved of the decisions of the Grand Master with a few changes and gave a decision that representation to district meetings should be based on the membership at the end of December preceding the meetings. Three hundred dollars were granted to carry on the work of the Triple Link First Aid Association.

The Grand Lodge supported the application of the Minnewaska Sanatarium Company to the Ontario Government for the usual grants for the treatment of tuberculosis. The matter of brothers afflicted with consumption will be considered by a special committee to prepare a report for submission to the next Grand Lodge.

In regard to redistribution of districts it was resolved that the D.D.G.M.'s now decided on by districts be recommended to the Grand Master as D.D.G.M.'s for the districts in which their lodges are located, while in other districts, where no D.D.G.M. has been nominated or where two are in nomination, the Grand Master shall appoint the Past D.D.G.M. or some other person to convene the district meeting. The matter of naming the districts is to be taken up at the first meeting of new districts.

The Grand Secretary in future will have all new amendments to the constitution printed on slips and sent to all lodges.

Refer to Grand Master

All questions relating to the laws of the Order asked of the President of the Rebekah Assembly during the recess are to be referred to the Grand Master.

A resolution was adopted that the Railway Passenger Association be requested to issue tickets to representatives to the Grand Lodge session at a single fare, plus 25 cents, instead of on the certificate plan.

The following nominations were made for Grand Warden:—H. G. Robertson, Barrie; A. Abraham, Stratford; Dr. Hermiston, Toronto; N. R. Sinclair Cochrane; E. H. Gregory, Walkerville; W. J. Hamilton, Fort William; W. H. Moss, Dundas; R. H. James, Ottawa; A. T. Lawson, Ottawa; Dr. Smuck, Toronto; A. G. Carscadden, Toronto; J. I. Hartt, Orillia; J. W. Simpson, Sarnia; A. Switzer, Toronto; Rev. W. Cox, Gananoque; Jas. McDonald, Tara; G. L. Zeigler, Elmira; W. Bradley, Lucan.

Invitations for next year's session were received from Windsor, Chatham and St. Catharines. Chatham was selected.

Officers were installed for next year as follows:—Grand Master, L. B. Cooper, Belleville; D.G.M., S. C. Parks, Toronto; Grand Warden, C. H. Mann, Hamilton; Grand Secretary, W. Brooks Toronto; Grand Treasurer, W. J. McCormack, Toronto; Grand Marshal, G. L. Zeigler, Elmira; Grand Conductor, Neil McFadyen, Lindsay; Grand Guardian, W. H. Moss, Dundas; Grand Herald, M. D. Graham, International Bridge; Grand Messenger, Geo. Latcham, Windsor; Grand Chaplain, Rev. W. Cox, Gananoque.

A Past Grand Master's Jewel was presented to the retiring Grand Master, D. M. McIntyre after which the Grand Lodge closed.

Which Was Which?

By EUNICE BLAKE

A young man walked into a gold mining town in the far west with pick and shovel on his shoulder and, approaching a couple of miners standing before a saloon, asked some questions as to whether it was worth while to do any prospecting in the country round about. One of the men replied to him, while the other kept a pair of steel gray eyes on him from under a sombrero hat as he ground hard on a quid of tobacco. When the young man had passed on the gray eyed man said to his companion:

"Well, that beats anything I ever saw before! I knew Jim Allison had cheek, but I didn't reckon he'd walk into this town barefaced like that after the hosses he's run off."

"Shore! I'd know him if his face was charcoaled."

Within another ten minutes half a dozen men surrounded the stranger with drawn pistols and called on him to surrender. Astonished, he asked what he was wanted for.

"You can't brazen it out that a-way in this yere camp, Mr. Allison. We'll see that no more hosses are run off by runnin' the biggest hoss thief of the territory up on a rope. It'll be on the other neck this time."

"Allison! My name's not Allison; it's Ruggles."

The disclaimer had no effect except on one man who had once seen Allison and doubted if this man were he, but the gray eyed man was so cocksure that the prisoner was hurried away and, since the sheriff was handy, was turned over to him.

It happened that the jailer's daughter, Annie Sweetzer, was visiting her aunt over the divide and one day received a letter from her mother mentioning among other things that the noted horse thief, Jim Allison, had deliberately walked into the camp, had been arrested and was to be hanged the next Friday. Mrs. Sweetzer spoke of what a decent looking young man he was and what a pity he should have sunk to horse stealing.

The day Annie received this letter a party of men rode into the place, and in their center was Jim Allison, himself. They rode by the house where Annie was staying, and she was told who the prisoner was. She asked why he had been brought there instead of being taken to the mining camp and was told that he had been run down with some horses in Stony Gulch. This set the girl to thinking. Were there two Jim Allisons?

The same afternoon Annie went home. The jail was a small brick structure back of her father's house, and on her arrival she went out to have a look at the prisoner. The moment she laid eyes on him she saw that he was very like the man she had seen in the morning; but, while the latter had a hangdog look about him, this one looked honest.

"Pop," she said, "that young feller out in the jail isn't a horse thief. He isn't Jim Allison neither."

"You, Ann, you mind your own business. Every time a good lookin' young feller is taken in you get soft on him."

"I tell you, pop, they got Jim Allison over at Aunt Martha's. I saw 'em bringin' him in."

The father had gone out of hearing before the sentence was finished. Annie went back to the prisoner and told him of the situation. He was to be hanged next day and there was not much time in which to act. The minds of the campers were made up that they had got the man who had been stealing their horses, and they could hardly wait till the next day to hang him. If Annie told them the story of the other Jim Allison they would attribute her evidence to be prompted by a desire to save the life of a man with whom she had fallen in love.

"You just wait," she said to the prisoner, "till tonight. I'll bring you a file."

"I see."

"That's the easiest way. And I'll bring you a bed comforter, too, for you to put over the lock while you're filin', so they won't hear you at the house."

Annie provided the file and the comforter, but that night she heard the filing, and, fearing others would hear it, she set up a moaning, declaring she had a bad toothache. When she was assured that the filing had ceased for good she quieted down and after midnight went out and unlocked the outer door to the jail, the key to which hung in the kitchen. The prisoner had done his part of the work and was ready to leave.

"Goodby, little girl," he said. "Quite likely you have saved my life."

"Where you going?" she asked.

"Anywhere to get away from here."

"You go over to where your double is. That's the safest way. They'll get you sure. If you go where they've got the real horse thief it'll be all right."

"Oh, never mind the goodby; I'm goin' with you."

The man took her in his arms. Then they started out on foot and in the morning reached their destination.

There was no doubt on the part of the real Jim Allison's captors that they had got the right man, and Peter Ruggles was cleared. When all was safe for his return to the camp he and Annie went back together. Those who had intended to officiate at a funeral gathered at a wedding.

Still In Doubt.

"Why don't you marry, old chap?"

"Do you think a man could procure all the necessaries of life on $1,800 a year?"

"Of course, but not the luxuries."

Canadian Pioneers Are To Be Recruited

Hunters, Prospectors, Miners, Farmers and Engineers to Form Regiment For Special Service

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—A new regiment composed of hardy Canadian pioneers is to be recruited. A pioneer battalion has already been formed in the west, and so splendid a reputation for efficiency and all round ability has it gained that it has been decided to form a similar regiment in the east.

The new pioneer regiment will be composed of hunters, prospectors, miners, construction men and engineers of all kinds, farmers of the north, etc. The battalion will be expected to do whatever special servises are required.

The headquarters of the regiment will probably be in Ottawa. The commander will be Col. Davis of Chatham, Ont.

Sir R. L. Borden Pays Tribute To Canadians

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—The courage and efficiency of the Canadians on the battlefield of Flanders finds a fitting tribute in a message addressed by Sir Robert L. Borden to General Alderson, following the Prime Minister's visit to the men at the front. Sir Robert's message was as follows:

"The fine spirit of the Canadian division, and their evident efficiency for the great test in which they are engaged, very deeply impressed me. It was a great privilege to have the opportunity of seeing them, and of conveyto them from the people of Canada a message of pride and appreciation.

"As I said on more than one occasion in addressing the officers and men, they can hardly realize how intensely all Canada has been thrilled by the tidings of their achievements.

"The President of the French Republic, as well as General Joffre and Sir John French, spoke of the troops under your command in terms of the highest praise.

"I bid you God speed in the great task in which you are engaged."

40 PER CENT OF BATTERY DRAFT, CANADIAN BORN

In a draft that is leaving the city some time next week from "C" battery R.C.H.A. there are forty per cent. of the men who are Canadian born This is the largest percentage of Canadians in any unit that has left for overseas. The men who compose the draft are nearly all married men and the single men with the exception of fourteen have signed over part of their pay to their parents. This is a most commendable act, as the regulations now in force do not compel a man to sign over any of his pay.

BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK 600 OUT OF 1350 SAVED

Lost in Aegean Sea—Soldiers Comprised Reinforcements for the 29th Division and Details for R.A.M.C.—Few Canadians if any Believed to be on Board

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 17—The British Transport, Royal Edward, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine last Saturday morning. An announcement to this effect was made officially today. Six hundred men were saved out of 1,350 troops and 220 other persons on board.

The Royal Edward was built in Glasgow seven years ago, was eleven thousand tons, and owned by the Canadian Northern Steamship Co. of Toronto.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 17.—An official statement says: The British Transport Royal Edward was sunk by an enemy submarine in the Aegean Sea last Saturday morning. According to information at present available, the transport had on board 32 military officers and 1,350 troops, in addition to the ship's crew of 220 officers and men.

The troops consisted mainly of reinforcements for the 29th Division and details of the Royal Army Medical Corps. Full information has not yet been received, but it is known that about six hundred have been saved.

LATER.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug 17.—An official communication by the Admiralty contains all the facts of the sinking of the Royal Edward yet published. This steamer, which was requisitioned last September by the Admiralty, was recently employed in transporting troops to the Dardanelles. In fact her agents understand she made several trips thither.

Another British transport was sunk off the Turkish coast several months ago, but without heavy loss of life. This is the first time the German submarines have scored heavily against the hitherto uninterrupted successful transportation of troops by the Admiralty, who have carried probably at least one million men over water.

FEW CANADIANS, IF ANY ON BOARD

(Canadian Press Special)

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—In official circles here, it is not believed there were any Canadians on board the Royal Edward, though there is a possibility that a few may have been in the Medical Corps detachment mentioned as being on board.

Militia authorities have no news of the movement of fifteen thousand Canadians to the Dardanelles, as reported in the speech by Hon. T. Casgrain, at Vancouver last night, though it is probable that the Postmaster General might have obtained the information direct from General Hughes.

Germans Driven Back to Their Trenches by the French

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 17.—(Afternoon official statement) Last night saw a spirited canonading at various points on the front, notably at Boesinghe, and at Quennivieres and in Lorraine, in the vicinity of Arracourt and at Lentrey.

There was fighting with hand grenades in the Argonne at Fontaine Aux Charmes, and at Haut Che Vapchee. At this latter place the Germans came out from their trenches last evening to deliver an attack but our fire drove them back to their lines.

Resignation of Greek Cabinet

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 17.—A Reuter despatch from Athens says King Constantine has accepted the resignation of the Gournaris Cabinet, and Venizelos, leader of the opposition was invited to confer with the King today.

In Paris it is considered premature to suppose that a change of the Greek Cabinet means that Country's whole hearted support of a Quadruple Alliance.

15,000 Canadians For Dardanelles

Part of the Men Now in England to Assist the Australians

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 16.—Hon. T Chase Casgrain announced at the Canadian Club banquet in Vancouver to-day that he had been officially advised by the Minister of Militia that 15,000 of the Canadian soldiers now in Britain will be sent to the Dardanelles.

ONLY THREE DISLOYAL OF 2,000 PRISONERS

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A French doctor who has just returned from a German prison declares that when the Germans attempted to form an Irish brigade to fight against England, from two thousand prisoners at Lemberg, only three agreed, while the others mobbed the guards who made the proposition.

Made Turkish Ships Dance Off Constantinople

Translation of Vivid Story Recounting Daring Deeds of British Submarine

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A vivid account of the raid of a British submarine, the E-11, on the shipping at Constantinople is translated from the Stampa, of Turin, in the Manchester Guardian. Lieut-Commander Nasmith, who was in charge of the E-11, received the Victoria Cross for his daring. The account follows:

"I was at a window in Pera watching what went on in the harbor just below me, and in the courtyard of Toppane, occupied by two batteries of old .77 dismountable Krupp guns. All at once a razor blade shot into the harbor and the people began to run hither and thither on the quay, making strange and grotesque gestures.

"The razor blade came from the open sea and coursed across the harbor like a thing of intelligence, slightly raised above the water, which it cut through leaving only two thin streaks of foam to right and left. The soldiers on the transports Mahmoud and The Bosphorus began foolishly to discharge their rifles into the water. Then a bunch of humanity dressed in yellow garments jumped into the sea; another followed; others jumped to the quay, which in a short time was crowded with panic-stricken soldiers.

"But the live thing in the harbor pursued its course. In a wide sweep it passed behind the Stamboul (another transport), whose crew were jumping into the water, and lo, behind the defenceless, abandoned vessel there arose a white cone of foam, and a mighty wave ran over the harbor, so that all the boats began to dance at their anchorages like mad things. Everyone cried out at once, and the Galata bridge, with all the trains and waggons upon it, began to tug at the caissons which supported it as a rearing horse tugs at its tethers.

"But the thing in the harbor paused not a second, and, continuing its furious course, completed the wide curve and went up the Bosphorus, disappearing in a few seconds behind the point of Amutklin. At this moment there was a fresh outcry and the two batteries of .77 at my feet fired at once; one shell sruck he Stamboul, which was not wanting it at all, and another steamer, the Chirket Nacie, which was anchored outside Seraglio Point, and had wounded on board.

"The impression caused by this raid was prodigious. It straightway put a stop to all winter communications between Constantinople and the Narrows, and kept the Turks of the capital at a high pitch of excitement for some time."

HAD HIS HANDS CUT OFF

Photographed by Relatives of Mutilated Soldier

SARNIA, Aug. 16.—Mrs. H. Turner of Point Edward has received from Mrs. Wallace Kelk who is now in Birmingham, England, a photograph and a letter giving authentic details of the fiendishness of German soldiers in Belgium.

The photo is of Charles Kelk, of Birmingham, Engand, brother of Wallace Kelk, formerly wireless operator at the Point Edward wireless station. The young man was a member of the first British army to be sent to Belgium on the outbreak of the war.

In her letter Mrs. Kelk says: "Enclosed is a photo of Charles Kelk, Wallace's brother. He's over six feet tall, finely built and manly. Poor Charlie boy was nearly killed. His father has not yet recovered from the shock. Charlie had seventeen pieces taken out of his right eye and nearly lost the other one. The Germans hacked his hands off when they found him wounded in the trenches. That poor boy has been through something and he is so brave and silent. Really he was called a handsome boy. He is only twenty years old. His face is badly cut up but is healing now."

Leo Frank Lynched

(Canadian Press Special)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 17.—Leo. M. Frank, Geogria's noted life-term convict, who was convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, was removed from the Georgia prison farm here last night by 25 armed men, who overpowered Warden Smith.

Previous to the attack wires leading to the prison itself had been cut. Frank was placed in an automobile and rushed in the direction of Eatonton.

DROWNED IN QUINTE BAY MYSTERIOUS ACCIDENT

Mr. Samuel Stocker, of Belleville, Fell Out of His Boat—Supposed to Have Been Overcome By Weak Spell

The waters of the Bay of Quinte yesterday afternoon claimed as a victim Mr. Samuel Stocker of this city. The unfortunate man, who had been for some time engaged in the capacity of an implement agent, left the city yesterday shortly after noon in a row boat for Mr. Wallbridge's farm, situated on the opposite side of the bay. After transacting his business Mr. Stocker proceeded homeward and was within a few hundred feet of the new dock at the foot of South Front street, when he met a watery grave. The circumstances of the drowning accident are meagre as no one actually saw the man fall from the boat. It is surmised that the man was taken ill, as he was subject to weak spells on account of some heart trouble. By parties who were upon vessels at the dock, Mr. Stocker was noticed to be rowing rather strangely, first with one arm and then with the other. He, however, made headway, and when in the channel leading into the harbor he stod up and took off his coat, placing it in the bottom of the boat. Then he suddenly fell backward into the water, the skiff remaining upright and his hat floating away near the boat. He lay on the water for a long time, apparently unconscious, with his hand under his head. Spectators secured a boat and were approaching the spot where he was when he sank, to rise no more. In a comparatively short time skiffs and motor boats were secured and with grapples every effort was made to locate the body. Grappling was continued, with some difficulty, owing to the roughness of the water and rain, until dark, when the search was discontinued. At an early hour this morning search was continued, and at one o'clock this afternoon the body was brought to the surface by Messrs. Walter Keller and Herbert Thompson, who were in a row boat using grapples. The body was recovered about 200 feet southwest of the new dock, at a point where Mr. Stocker was last seen in the boat. The sad affair attracted, last evening and to day, many to the scene of the occurrence. Whilst the family of the victim are naturally heart broken over the distressing affair, there is at least one consolation, namely, that the remains have been recovered.

After the recovery of the body it was conveyed to Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, where it was prepared for burial, after it had been decided by Dr. Yeomans, Coroner, that an inquest was unnecessary, as there is no doubt that it was a case of accidental drowning.

Deceased was 60 years of age, and was born at Devonshire, Eng. He had resided in Belleville many years, where he was well known and much respected. Some years ago he married Miss Emma Wickett, daughter of the late Mr. James Wickett, of this city. In addition to the widow, four sons, Roy, of Newark, Ernest of Montreal, George of Toronto, and Lorne of this city and three daughters, Misses Lilla, Eva and Lena of this city survive. To the bereaved ones will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends. Mr. Stocker was a member of Holloway Street Methodist Church, and for years was on the official board. He was a member of the A.O.U.W. Society.

Later in the day the remains were conveyed to the family residence on Charlotte street.

MURDER CAR IS NOT YET LOCATED

Police are Following Clues, But Nothing Definite is Ascertained

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—The identification of the motor car that ran amuck Sunday evening on the Kingston road and caused the death of Joseph Verznia and seriously injured Miss Margaret Frizzell, is still surrounded in mystery, and though the local police have made strenuous efforts to apprehend the driver, so far they have not met with the slightest success.

Provincial Inspector Miller, when interviewed, said: "There is nothing doing yet," but as a search of the vicinity yesterday resulted in the discovery of a stray part of an automobile, the police believe that they have a clue that will put them on the trail.

Word was also received by the police that a large car of French manufacture, the radiator covered with blood, was seen to enter a garage early yesterday morning, but as yet nothing has materialized through that source.

Romantic Wedding Of a Canadian Soldier

Marries Real Widow of George Smith, the Brides-in-Bath Murderer

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Great interest surrounded the marriage yesterday at Christ Church, Leicester, of the real widow of George Smith (brides in bath murder), who paid the penalty only two ago for the murder of Miss Mundy.

It will be remembered Smith married as his first wife Caroline Beatrice Thornhill in the name of Love. Shortly afterwards he deserted his seventeen-year-old bride, who emigrated to Canada, where she met her present husband. The bridegroom was Thomas J. Davies, of New Westminster, B.C., and now of the Royal Engineers. Among those present at the ceremony was the bridegroom's father, George Davies, who had travelled specially from the west.

FIND PLOT TO STEAL $2,500,000 OF PEARLS

PARIS, Aug. 16.—(Special)—A plot to burn the French pavilion at the San Francisco Exposition and at the same time to rifle the show cases containing an exhibit of pearls and other jewels owned by Leonard Rosenthal, known as the "Pearl King," has been discovered, acording to reports received here by Rosenthal's agents.

Rosenthal is one of the richest men in France, and the jewels exhibited by him at San Francisco are valued at more than $2,500,000. Many of them are unique and could not be replaced. Rosenthal is proprietor of seven-tenths of the pearl fisheries of the world. Among his richest fisheries is that in the waters of Tahiti, which he cornered soon after the great cyclone and tidal wave in the South Pacific ten years ago.

He purchased the principal heirlooms of the dowager Empress of China, which were sold after the establishment of the Republic, also a majority of the diamonds of the former Sultan of Morocco, which were sold in Paris in 1912.

The French authorities, in conjunction with the San Francisco police, have established a special watch over the French pavillion and its contents. Rosenthal has positively refused to remove the exhibits, declaring he will hold the Exposition management responsible for their safety.

Three Machine Guns Already Secured

COBOURG, Aug. 16.—Last week the ex-officers of the 40th Regiment commenced a movement to supply machine guns to the battalion on service in which are members of the 40th Regiment, and already three machine guns have been promised and a subscription list is being circulated in town to raise money for another by Lt.-Col. Floyd, ex-O. C. of the 40th and Mayor Duncan. It is thought that two guns can be obtained in Cobourg, and endeavors will be made to have Colborne, Brighton, Campbellford and other places take steps to obtain a gun.

This week Lt.-Col. Floyd received a check from Mr. Harry Black, of New York, an old Cobourg boy, for $1,000 for one of these guns. Mr. Black's father was a sergeant-major in the 40th, and all the family were at one time or another connected with the regiment.

Lt.-Col. Birdsall, of Birdsall, also an ex-O. C. of the 40th, and whose son is a lieutenant in the 2nd Batt., 1st Contingent, on behalf of himself, Mrs. Birdsall and daughter Ruth, has promised $1,000 for a machine gun. Col. Birdsall has written Col. Floyd stating that Mr. E. F. Mason, who resides near him will donate $1,000 for a machine gun for the 40th boys.

This splendid movement has received an excellent start, and it is hoped will receive general suppot. Canadian forces have been miserably short of machine guns, and it is an admitted fact that the Germans have been able to make the pace so far as a result of their superiority in machine guns.—Port Hope Guide.

Impressive Parade Was Held on Sir John Moore's Plain at Shorncliffe

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Princess Alexandra of Teck, accompanied by Lady Northcote and Gen. Sam. Hughes, reviewed the Canadians on Sir John Moore's Plain at Shorncliffe to-day. Gen. Steele was in command, and with him were Brigadier Carson and Col. Grant Morden. On the arrival of the princess, the troops fixed bayonets, and the National Anthem was played by massed bands as the infantry marched past the saluting base.

The princess was delightfully impressed with the physique and splendid bearing and appearance of the men.

Gen. Steele afterwards gave a reception at Beechboro House for the officers to meet the princess.

Manitoba Crop Beats All Records

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16.—Twenty-five per cent. of the wheat and oat crops of Manitoba is already in stook. Ten days more fair weather will see practically all the crop down. Wheat will average 25 bushels to the acre, and oats 50, and both will grade high. Several carloads of the new wheat have already reached Winnipeg and it has gone No. 1 Northern. Today was dark and cool, but no rain fell. There has been almost too much sun lately, and the dark day was appreciated, as it will have a tendency to slow up the ripening process which has been too fast during the past week owing to the intensity of the heat.

Ald. Frank Fowler, grain-dealer, after an automobile tour of the Province, states that it would take a very severe frost to hurt he crops now it is so far advanced. Reports come from many points that the crop this year excels all records. The prayers are for ten days more warm weather.

The Vanishing Road.

We are all treading the vanishing road of a song in the air, the vanishing road of the spring flowers and the winter snows, the vanishing roads of the winds and the streams, the vanishing road of beloved faces. But in this great company of vanishing things we feel that there is a reassuring comradeship. We feel that we are the units in a vast ever moving army, the vanguard of which is in eternity. The road still stretches ahead of us. For a little while yet we shall experience all the zest and bustle of marching feet. The swift running seasons, like couriers bound for the front, shall still find us on the road, and shower on us in passing their blossoms and their snows. For a while the murmur of the running stream of time shall be our fellow wayfarer—till, at last, up there against the sky line, we, too, turn and wave our hands, and know for ourselves where the road wends as it goes to meet the stars. And others will stand as we today and watch us as we disappear, and wonder how it seemed to us to turn that radiant corner and vanish with the rest along the vanishing road.—From "Vanishing Roads," by Richard Le Gallienne.

Siberian Signal Men.

It is probable that nowhere save in Siberia are convicts employed in any service pertaining to the operation of railways. In that place of exile there are many "good conduct" men, who spend their lives in little huts along the line of railway, always a verst apart, whose duty it is to signal with green flags that the road is clear. At night they signal with a green lamp.

If the traveler stands between the railway cars at midnight he may tick off the green lights as the train spins along. Away down the black avenue will appear a tiny green speck. As the cars proceed this speck will become larger and larger, and finally the figure of a man holding up the lamp is distinguishable in the darkness. And there are thousands of these men along the line. A signal started today in Moscow runs for eleven days, until it is broken on the banks of Lake Baikal, beyond Irkutsk.—Minneapolis Journal.

Hard Water.

Do you realize how hard water is when a boat sails through it at full speed? Water passing at fifty miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give or even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

If a swordsman should enter one of the great hydraulic quarries, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, and attempt to cut into one of those streams his sword would fly in pieces without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron.

An Up-to-Date Dancing Academy

A few months ago Prof. Johnstone's dancing academy, situated in the Metropolitan Block, corner of Front and Campbell streets, was severely damaged by fire, rendering it unfit for the purposes for which it was used. The Professor, however, had the damage repaired, and last evening the academy was reopened, and it presented a most attractive appearance.

A number of young people were present and thoroughly enjoyed themselves until near the midnight hour. The academy, if possible, has been made more beautiful and attractive than it was previous to the fire. A new maple floor has been laid, and it is not only smooth, but has been put in first-class condition for dancing. The walls are of a light green shade, lending a cheerful appearance to the spacious dancing room, and beautiful curtains are hung at each window.

At the eastern part of the academy is situated the reception room, the wainscotting and walls of which are tinted an old rose shade. The new band shell is situated here and it is in every respect an up-to-date place for the orchestra. Ladies' and gents' waiting rooms with every convenience have not been overlooked. The academy is up-to-date in every detail and Prof. Johnstone is to be congratulated upon the enterprise he has exhibited and there is no doubt that he will be amply rewarded for the pains and expense he has undertaken to provide such an attractive academy. Mr. Scantlebury did the decorating and Mr. Luffman the carpenter work.

Hurled Bombs At Venice Forts

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(Special)—An Austrian seaplane which attempted to bombard the coast forts of Venice on Sunday met with a warm reception. Only one of the bombs reached the fortification, and five Italian airmen at once ascended in pursuit of the seaplane, while the forts and war vessels opened fire on the visitor. According to the Italian version the seaplane was hit several times but the Austrian War Office claims that it retired safely, and claims to have by machine gunfire forced two of the airships to descend, and that, although the others followed the seaplane close to the Istrian coast, they were obliged to turn back unsuccessfully.

The Italian advance east of Condino (30 miles south-west of Trent, in the Trentino) towards Riva, at the head of Lake Garda, is being continued notwithstanding stormy weather and terrific hailstorms. Reports say that the trenches captured by the Italians are full of water, in which bodies are floating.

Last Thing His Eyes Saw

The King today conferred the silver medal for military valor to Luigi Pompili, of Rome, a soldier of the 94th Infantry Regiment, who after having lost both eyes in a recent engagement, declares:

'I do not mind in the least the loss of my eyes, because the last thing they saw were the Austrians in full retreat on July 19."

Italy has more than trebled the number of her artillery regiments, and her new quick-firing guns of the Deport model, which fire 40 shots a minute. This gun is said to have been found more practicable than the models previously in use. It is declared to be excellent for use on rough ground.

ALLIES CAN OBTAIN HORSES IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16.—The militia department has never placed any restrictions upon the purchase of horses by Great Britain and the allies. It is true that for some time after the beginning of the war, it appeared that the allies were buying horses in the United States in preference to Canada but there was no further order regarding this. It was simply believed to be a policy made necessary by the possibility that horses might be declared contraband of war.

The United States and Russia are the two great horse producing countries and so only the former was left open to Great Britain and France. The policy was understood to be to buy in the United States as speedily as possible in case of a declaration of contraband. However, horses are not urgently required and will not be until the mode of warfare changes.

There are still nearly 3,000,000 horses in Canada in spite of the number sold for army purposes. There is an increase of 481,361 over last year, according to a report of the census and statistics branch.

Restriction Understood.

It was always understood in Toronto that Sir Adam Beck, chief remount officer of the Ottawa government, has forbidden or requested the British or allies not to buy in Canada until the wants of Canada had been supplied.

Toronto horse firms were asked some weeks ago to supply horses for the Italian army, but considered that they would not be allowed to buy and passed the order. Evidently they now have a chance.

In the Stocks.

In England the punishment of the stocks has been inflicted within the memory of men now living. In the Manchester Guardian of June 14, 1872, there is an account of a man enduring this form of punishment at Newbury. He was a rag and bone dealer of intemperate habits and was fixed in the stocks for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. "Twenty-six years had elapsed since the stocks were last used," states this account, "and their reappearance created no little sensation and amusement, several hundreds of persons being attracted to the spot where they were fixed." The "amusement" does not appear to have been shared by the prisoner, who was released after four hours and "seemed anything but pleased with the laughter and derision of the crowd."

The Canadians At Shorncliffe

The 39th Infantry Battalion

(By William Blaynay)

The 39th Infantry Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, with the 36th and 48th is quartered under canvas at Upper Caesar's Camp. Day in and day out the officers and men look upon the remains of the ancient fortifications and earthworks of Castle Hill, forming the southern boundary of their camp; day after day they climb to the top of the hill, wander through all that is left of the various ramifications of the works and, coming from a new country, devoid for the most part of such relics of bygone ages, take th e liveliest interest in the past history of the Castle Hill fortifications.

A Belleville Battalion

The 39th Battalion was mobilized at Belleville, a pretty town and summer resort on the northern shore of Lake Ontario in the Province of Ontario as recently as April 1. Similarly to the 36th Battalion the 39th is made up of nine different units contributed by as many Militia regiments of the 3rd Divisional Area. These units for many months past have been mobilized as such and trained for Overseas service at their respective headquarters; but on April 1 they were all centralized at Belleville and formed into a complete Battalion. From the time of its centralization until its departure for Britain, the 39th underwent a period of strenuous training in field work of every description. Whilst this training was in progress the equipment and organization of the battalion into its component parts was carried through and completed. Here at Shorncliffe the 39th, like every other battalion stationed in camp, is carrying through a programme of training arranged and planned according to a certain schedule. Each day, each week, each month has its allotted work. A stated period has to be devoted to musketry, another to bayonet fighting, another to field work, trenching, and so forth, and such operations as route marches, outpost duty, night marches and work, sea-bathing parades, etc., are sandwiched into the general scheme as opportunity arises. When the training programme as laid down is completed in its entirety, each man, each platoon, each company, and each battalion is considered to be ready to take a place in the firing-line. Machine gun sections, bombers, snipers, and signallers undergo separate training, and to this end are units unto themselves.

The Contributing Regiments

The 3rd Divisional Area, with headquarters at Kingston, Ontario, has now furnished three complete battalions of infantry for active service overseas—the 2nd, now with the 1st Canadian Division in France; the 21st, with the 2nd Division at Shorncliffe and the 39th, acting as a Reserve battalion, also at Shorncliffe. The Militia regiments which contributed units in the formation of the 39th Battalion were the following: 14th Princess of Wales' Own Rifles, Kingston Ont.; 15th Argyll Light Infantry, Belleville; 16th Prince Edward Regiment, Picton, Ont., with companies at Black River Bridge, Allisonville, Rossmore, Northport, Wellington and Bloomfield; 40th Northumberland Regiment, Cobourg, Ont., with companies at Campbellford, Brighton, Norwood, Grafton, Colborne, and Castleton; 45th Victoria Regiment, Lindsay, Ont., with companies at Cameron, Omemee, Norland, Tory Hill, Woodville and Bobcaygeon; 46th Durham Regiment, Port Hope, Ont., with companies at Lakefield, Orono, Millbrook, Blackstock, Campbellcroft, Janetville, and Haydon; 47th Frontenac Regiment Kingston, Ont., with companies at Inverary, Sydenham, Westport, Napanee, Verona, Tamworth, Odessa and Arden; 49th Hastings Rifles, Belleville, with companies at Stirling, Sidney, Madoc, Tyendinaga, Trenton, Bancroft and Marmora; 57th Peterboro' Rangers, Peterboro, Ont. The latter regiment is allied with the Duke of Cambridge's Own Middlesex Regiment, of the Imperial Army, whilst the 45th Victoria Regiment is the regiment in which Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence served from May, 1873 onwards for upwards of 30 years, first as a lieutenant and latterly as Colonel Commanding the regiment. He is now Hon. Colonel of the 45th.

Belleville's Interest

On the mobilization of the 39th Battalion at Belleville, the canning factory there was converted into barracks for the accommodation of the men. Very deep interest was naturally taken in the battalion by the people of Belleville and the surrounding municipalities and adjacent counties which had contributed units to its formation. They organized a battalion fund for the purchase of field kitchens, band instruments, field comforts of all kinds for the men and for other useful purposes. To this fund the Cheese Board, of Belleville, contributed $600 the county of Hastings $1,000, and the city of Belleville itself a liberal amount Separately, the men of Belleville generously contributed upwards of $600 to the Officers' Mess Fund, while the ladies of the local Women's Canadian Club purchased, worked, and presented to the battalion its very handsome colors—both the King's and the Regimental. The presentation of these colors was a red-letter day in the annals of the 39th and the occasion of a gala day in Belleville, the Colonel Commanding and his officers receiving the colors for the battalion at the hands of the Minister of Militia and Defence, Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes.

It is roughly estimated that some 75 per cent. of the rank and file of the 39th are of British birth. Many of these have had previous military training in the Imperial Army, and not a few of them have already seen active service in South Africa or elsewhere in the Empire. In physique, fighting qualities, and military bearing, as well as in other ways, this battalion is the equal of any of the battalions of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and their training is so well advanced that one may expect before very long to hear of some of them at any rate taking their places alongside their comrades of the gallant 1st Division in the fighting-line. Battalion after battalion of infantry continues to arrive in Britain from Canada, but still there is no deterioration of soldierly qualities in the later arrivals. The standard set in the First Contingent is maintained in every way and what that standard is has been known to all world since the Battle of Langemarck, at the end of April.

The Officers of the Battalion

The command of the 39th Battalion has been given to Lieut.-Colonel John A. V. Preston, who in Canada, commands the 46th Durham Regiment, of Port Hope, Ontario, a regiment of Militia which has been in existence for nearly half a century. The other 41 officers of the Battalion are as follows:

"The Stowaways."

The two last-named, officers are known to their brother officers of the 39th as "The Stowaways." Almost immediately before the Battalion left Belleville for England, Lieut. Elliott and Lieut. Bateman, together with other junior officers who were supernumerary to its full strength, had the misfortune to learn that they were not to be taken with the Battalion on active service. They were ordered to report to the base batalion. Instead, however they procured privates' uniform, and, unseen, smuggled themselves aboard the troops train among the rank and file. At Kingston they were discovered and reported to the Commanding Officer, who again ordered them to return home and report themselves for duty with the Base battalion. With persistent determination, however, they managed to smuggle themselves aboard the train a second time, only to be rediscovered again at the station at Montreal. A second time the dis-

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

If we cast our minds into the future, and reflect upon the many altered conditions in our national life which may result from this war, there is one change which seems almost certain. Women will stand upon a higher plain than they have ever done before. We are, of course, referring entirely to the national, and not to the social aspect of the question. There are no terms too highly eulogistic in which to speak of the work which Canadian women have done in this war. From knitting socks to standing at street corners and soliciting subscriptions for machine guns, the women of Belleville have set a fine example of patriotism, energy and self-sacrifice. And what may be said of the women of Belleville and of the Dominion generally may also be said of the women of the whole Empire. Indeed, it must be an incentive to the young fellows who volunteer for the front to feel that they have behind them what they value more than all else in this world—the sympathy and support of the feminine sex.

The women of the Empire, to whom we owe so much, have had no motive in view but that of pure patriotism. They have shown their eagerness to enter into almost every kind of work, in order that the men may be free to go to the front. In England they are acting as conductors of omnibuses and tramcars, or engaging as butchers' boys and delivering meat. But this voluntary work has unconsciously, perhaps, increased women's hold upon the nation; and it is not surprising to find that an effort is on foot to organise women workers. Now that their activities in the fields of social and industrial work are increasing so rapidly, and their position, both in matters relating to the labour markets and those concerning social reform is becoming more and more important as time goes on, it is obvious that some careful system of organisation is necessary if full advantage is to be taken of all the possibilities thus offered to them.

Women will never be able to obtain full value for their labours without some definite concerted effort, and a unity of aim and interest which will bind them together in a common cause. It is, therefore, most welcome news that the National Union of Women Workers is arranging a conference, to be held in London from October 4 to October 8, at which the chief point for discussion will be "Woman's share in the work of reconstruction after the war." The programme arranged is one of exceptional interest, by reason of the well-known ability of the speakers and the importance of the matters which will be brought up for consideration.

The union includes among its members not only industrial and professional workers, but those engaged in philanthropic, social, educational, and religious work, and also women working in or for the home; and it is generally recognised as being the most representative and influential body of women in the United Kingdom. Its objects are to promote sympathy of thought and purpose among women, and to bring into touch with one another societies and individuals who are working with like aims. It is thus in a position to help and organise towards a united effort, instead of detached and spasmodic attempts at reform which are in danger of overlapping or working contrary to one another. The governing body of the National Union of Women Workers, known as the National Council of Women of Great Britain and Ireland, brings together women of most varying political, social, and religious views. As this is generally recognised, its recommendations receive the serious consideration of Government Departments, as expressing the opinion of the women of the country as a whole, apart from any political or sectarian bias.

During the last few months two new committees have been formed—the Women's Patrol Committee, which has organised a force of women patrols under the official approval of the Home Office and the Chief Commissioner of Police, and the Consultative Committee, consisting of representatives of the various organisations in London engaged in relief work in connection with the war. It will be seen that this union is meeting the present most urgent need for concerted effort, and it is hoped that the many women who profess themselves so anxious to work for the good of the country will attend the meetings at the October conference, and hear for themselves where and how women can best help, and on what lines their activities will prove of most value.

An organized effort apparently is being made to divert Canadian shipments from the St. Lawrence route and Canadian ports to Boston and other ports in the United States. Should this attempt prove successful it probably would be years before the trade could be recovered for the Canadian routes, and indeed the Canadian ports might never regain it. Scares and rumors are part of the programme of those who would benefit by such a diversion of trade. Even although patronage of the Canadian route may not always be most advantageous, Canadian shippers have a patriotic duty to perform. They should not lose their heads. Shipments from Canadian ports are safe and, generally speaking, can be made as advantageously as from United States docks. The trade should be saved for the Dominion.—Toronto News.

But if there is to be war in the world at all, the thing is clearly emerging. It is that the voluntary system of public defence, as practiced in the British Empire and in this country, is broken down. Every citizen must be a soldier. He must be able to accommodate himself to military discipline, to shoot straight and to defend himself in the field. This matter, moreover, is something much more than the question of cadet corps in the schools. It goes down to the means of production. To say nothing of the Remington strike, the strike of the Welsh coal miners is a case exactly in point. Such a strike would be impossible in France or Germany. The men would be automatically called to the colors, and delegated as soldiers to attend to the business of mining coal for the nation's supreme necessity.—Wall Street Journal.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES.

The absolutely comical absence of intelligence in certain matters on the part of the English—a people which nevertheless has accomplished much valuable work in many spheres of universal utility—has to us always been a psychological puzzle.

It is this lack of intelligence, or it may be superabundance of the love of comfort, that may perhaps account for the incomprehensible negligence of the English people in allowing their supine but criminal leaders to rush them blindfold into the hell of war.

While, in a Continental city, a man with a courteous bow will ask another or a policeman: "Could you kindly tell me the way to the bank?" in London the mumbled word "Bank?" is considered more than ample to express one's need for guidance.

Whoever raises his hat, or introduces his inquiry with the words: "Pardon me," is sure to be a foreigner, and, as such, is now invariably regarded with deep suspicion as a spy, and may thank his stars if his politeness has not landed him in gaol.

Lord Kitchener's appeals for recruits are headed: "Young man; want you"; here the personal pronoun "I" is purposely omitted, another characteristic English way of denoting that the person addressed is an inferior being on whom courtesy would be wasted.—Tagliche Rundschau.

The Poet's Corner

QUEEN MARGHERITA'S POEM

When the hospital established by the dowager Queen Margherita in Rome was opened recently it was found that a verse had been placed above the entrance to each ward. There were many compliments from the distinguished guests who attended the ceremonies. Afterward a lady-in-waiting revealed that the author was the Queen herself. The lines, freely rendered into English, follow:

Deserving of the holy love thy children bear to thee.
Behold! Armed for thy defence and eager for thy sake,
Content with any sacrifice though death be close at hand,

Though perils compass them about, though foes in legions rise,
They see the star of Italy shine clearly in the skies,
And with the courage that it brings, their blood they freely shed,
Each drop a gem that well may grace the crown upon the head;
And while that star holds out to shine its light will not depart,
To leave in darkness and despair the brave Italian heart.

Beneath their glorious uniforms their bosoms nobly thrill
With all the lofty sentiments their country can instill.
Forever have their eyes been turned to every far frontier
Where haply an invading host of foemen might appear.
These are the men who make you great, who loyal, firm and true,
Have dared to do the mighty deeds we dreamed that they would do.

And when the time of peace has come and wondering children see
The scars the war-worn patriots received—for Italy,
They too shall be inspired to deeds upon the field of war
To match the glorious record that their fathers made before.
Let all who see the colors pass with heads uncovered stand

As he patrols thy shining seas or watches from thy peaks.
Their country is their life, their all—let every woman's prayer
Arise to God to bless them, and the mighty arms they bear.
Oh, sun, which gilds our lovely land from shore to sea washed shore,
Was ever more inspiring sight than these—our men of war?

Queer Postage Rates.

The city of Christobal, in the canal zone, is separated from the city of Colon, in the republic of Panama, by a street only. One side of the street is in one city, the other side in the other city. A boy or girl living in Christobal can for 2 cents send a letter all the way to New York, or, farther yet, to San Francisco. Or if he wants to send it a long, long way a two cent stamp will carry a letter from Christobal to Alaska or Hawaii or Guam or even halfway around the world to the Philippine Islands. But suppose that boy or girl wants to send a letter across the street to some friend in Colon. How much postage must he use? Why, 5 cents, of course! It doesn't seem quite right, does it?—St. Nicholas.

It Certainly Was.

"And you are afraid of the dark Tommie?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"But there's nothing in the dark to hurt you."

"Well, what's pop limping around for?"

"Oh, he fell over a chair when he came home late last night."

"Well, that was in the dark, wasn't it?"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Grocer's Euphemism.

"Why is it that the berries at the bottom of your boxes are always so much smaller than those at the top?" asked Mrs. Newlywed.

"Ah, madam," said the grocer, "you don't put it quite correctly. You should ask why the berries at the top of the box are so much larger than those at the bottom."—Judge.

The Wasp.

It is said that the male wasp does not sting, but as the male and female wasps wear the same kind of polonaise and look as much alike as twins the only way to distinguish their sex is to catch one. If it stings it is a female; if not, it is a gentleman wasp.

Cossacks as Riders.

When crossing rivers the Cossacks, to avoid getting wet, throw the left stirrup leather across the saddle and the right stirrup leather in the opposite direction. Then, placing their feet in the reversed stirrups, they stand upright.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS

PROHIBITING THE SLAUGHTER OF CALVES.

A "Maintenance of Live Stock" bill has recently received its second reading in the British House by which it is made unlawful to slaughter calves before the age of three months and also any animals obviously pregnant. All stockmen have not taken kindly to the bill and one farmers' meeting expressed its opinion in the form of the following resolution:—

"That this meeting, while being specially desirous in the national interests of increasing the meat production of the country in every practical way, strongly protests against the recent order of the Board of Agriculture prohibiting the slaughter of calves under the age of three months, on the following grounds:—(1) That a large number of calves are totally unfit to rear. (2) That the retention of all calves must mean the lessening of the food supply, as these calves cannot be kept in addition to, but must be instead of other cattle, so that the immediate supply of beef, cheese and milk would be curtailed. (3) That the order involves farmers in serious financial loss and disorganization without any corresponding advantage being gained by the community as a whole. Finally we recommend that if any restriction on the slaughter of calves is to remain in force the age limit shall not exceed six weeks instead of three months as at present."

There is no doubt but that there is need of conserving, in so far as possible the live stock and meat-food supplies of the Empire. There is need for every stockman in Canada, as well as in Britain to consider the possibilities of the future and to hold all promising well-bred animals for breeding purposes, but no one is a better judge of what is suitable to keep and breed and what should go as veal than the practical breeder. He is in a better position than any one else to solve the problem if he will only act in his own best interests. Thousands of calves from milk-producing sections are suitable for nothing but veal. This is no doubt due to the use of "any old scrub" of a sire to get the cows in calf. What should be done first is to encourage all farmers to use nothing but pure-bred sires capable of getting good, strong, valuable calves. There is obviously no gain in keeping a cull calf. There should and would be fewer cull calves if nothing but good bulls were used. It is getting on dangerous ground when the farmer is compelled to kill to keep. He should be the judge and he should make conditions such that no such enactment would be necessary. Every good calf should be kept. Only the right kind should be produced through the use of the best sires on good females. Now is the time to improve in this country. Keep all the promising youngsters, kill off the scrubs. Then very soon there will be few scrubs produced.

It is also a shame that so many in-calf cows and heifers are slaughtered year after year. Surely it would pay to get the calf and the milk from the cow. If not she is the wrong kind and never should have been bred.—The Farmers' Advocate.

CANADA AT WAR

THE PART WHICH CANADA HAS PLAYED IN THE EUROPEAN WAR

A Brief Review of What Has Been Done During the Past Year.

What Remains to Be Done Shall Be Limited Only by the Need.

AFTER one year of the great struggle in which Great Britain is participating in order to implement her bond, destroy militarism, and perpetuate the Empire, a review of the part Canada has played clearly shows that this country has been an effective factor in the success of the allied forces and in the check administered to the overweening ambition of the Kaiser and his junkers. There were those in high places, both in Britain and Canada, who had maintained that Canada would not or should not participate in the Empire's wars, but the wonderful response to Sir Robert Borden's call for aid to the Motherland has completely confounded these apostles of Little Canadianism. Not only has Canada rallied to the call, but has sent across the Atlantic the largest expeditionary force ever dispatched either from America to another country or from Europe to America.

Previous Preparation.

The defeat of the Government's naval aid bill was a severe check in the preparation for the day of conflict that ominous and significant events indicated would not be long delayed. While this was a great disappointment it did not prevent the Government continuing its policy of preparation. At once a committee of the heads of all departments was formed to prepare plans to meet any emergency that might arise, and their report was completed only a few weeks before the actual outbreak of war.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN, Canada's Prime Minister.

Immediate Action.

War was not declared against Great Britain until August 4th, last year; but three days previous, in a secret dispatch, Sir Robert Borden offered a considerable force if necessary. On August 4th a reply was received that there seemed no immediate need. A few hours later war broke out. On August 6th Canada's offer was accepted, and the same day orders were issued to mobilize militia units in preparation for active service, and four days later it was decided to send a first contingent of 22,218 men. This number was afterwards increased to 33,000. The troops were mobilized at Valcartier, and within thirty days after the outbreak of war, this army, fully equipped, was reviewed by his Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught. In October they sailed for England, and since have won undying fame in France and Belgium. Since then a steady stream of reinforcements have been transported across the the Atlantic. Two days after the outbreak of war the Dominion Government offered one million bags of flour as a gift to the British Government to be used as they saw fit.

Canadian Forces.

Canada has at present under arms in France, England, Bermuda, St. Lucia, and at home 150,000 men. As soon as the first overseas army landed in England, enlistment of more men commenced, and it was decided to maintain two army divisions of 25,000 men each at the front with sufficient reserves in England and Canada to keep them at full strength. The Canadian troops are now distributed as follows: In France and England, 80,000; in Bermuda, 1,000; in St. Lucia, 500; on home defence, 19,009, and in preparation in training camps in Canada, 60,000. There have been at least 40,000 men sent across the English Channel.

A Splendid Record.

Of the Canadian forces the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry first met the Huns. All during the terrible winter campaign they fought in the trenches side by side with the veterans of France and England. Of the 1,100 men, who in Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, received the regimental colors from her Royal Highness, Princess Patricia, only 40 remain in service. Early in the spring the First Division landed in France and at Ypres, Hill 60, Langemarck, St. Julien, and Festurbert, they fought with such gallantry and desperation as to win even from the Germans the tribute of being the best troops in the Allied armies. On that memorable day at St. Julien when the Turcos broke before the German gas fumes only the Canadian division stood between the Huns and their goal—Calais. The Canadian line was extended to fill the gap; they stopped the German rush, but at an awful price. Again at Festurbert they smashed the German line.

Naval and Aerial Services.

Assistance in the naval defence of the Empire on a large scale has been impossible owing to the action of the Senate in defeating the Government's proposals in 1913. On the outbreak of war, however, two submarines were purchased in Seattle for the defence of Vancouver and Victoria against the German raiders on the Pacific, and the Niobe and Rainbow were refitted to act as transport convoys and to help keep trade routes open. The British navy has, however, again vindicated its supremacy, and Canada under its protection has enjoyed complete immunity from attack. There have also been established aviation schools, and the first detachment of Canadian aviators are now in England in the British aerial service.

Munitions and Equipment.

In providing munitions and equipment for the allied armies Canada has played a great part. So far contracts for over $300,000,000 have been placed in this country. Of this huge amount $152,000,000 is for shrapnel and high explosive shells. Shortly after the outbreak of the war the Canadian Government established a Shell Commission which was so successful in speeding up the production of munitions that last May a similar system was adopted in England. From Sydney to Victoria our manufacturing plants are turning out completed shells at the rate of 30,000 a day.

Financial Arrangements.

To preserve our credit, prevent a panic, and maintain our industrial and financial prosperity, at the outbreak of the war the Government adopted measures which have been eminently successful. No serious business disruption was experienced, although the outbreak of war occurred during a commercial depression, the sequence of years of feverish speculation and inflated values. For our war expenditure arrangements were made with the Bank of England through the British Government for a line of credit to last until the cessation of hostilities when our debt will be consolidated and repayment spread over a period of fifty years. There were also new revenue measures enacted in the form of special taxes and increased tariff imports. These have been very successful, and our revenue promises for the current fiscal year to regain its normal level. Recently the Minister of Finance successfully floated in New York, for domestic purposes, a loan of $45,000,000.

Future Assistance.

"The measure of our assistance will be limited only by the need," was the declaration of our future policy made by Sir Robert Borden. With 150,000 men under arms the Government is steadily recruiting more men, and if the war lasts another year there will be at least a quarter of a million Canadians fighting for the Empire. Huge training camps at Vernon, Calgary, Sewell, London, Niagara, Barriefield, Valcartier, and Sussex have been established, and here the thousands of young Canadians receive preparatory training before going to England.

Welfare of Troops.

Canada's soldiers receive the highest pay of any troops engaged in the war, and the pension provisions are also the most generous. A patriotic fund generously contributed by those who cannot go on active service, has assured the comfort and welfare of the dependents of those fighting for Country and Empire. To care for the sick, wounded, and convalescent returning from the front a hospital commission has been established. At Quebec they have fitted up a hospital, and from there the convalescent soldiers will be sent to the many homes placed at the disposal of the Commission by the benevolent citizens.

Imperial Relations.

The war has established new relations between Canada and the Empire. When Sir Robert Borden sat with the British Cabinet in conference on the affairs of the Empire it was a notice to the world that Canada has ceased to be a ward and had become a partner of Great Britain. Official recognition was given this new status of the Dominion in the Empire by leaders of the Imperial Government who have declared that in future the overseas Dominions will be consulted on matters affecting foreign policy and defence.

NOT A MATRIMONIAL BUREAU

Housewives'-League of New York City Obliged to Announce Neutrality.

Well trained wives who can cook and keep house and who know more about sanitary conditions than "mother" ever dreamed of knowing are among the supplies that are being demanded of the National Housewives' league at its headquarters in West Forty-fifth street, New York city.

Two men called at the headquarters of the league within the last two weeks, and each of them wanted a wife. One of them was a widower with several children and no one to look out for them, and the other was one of the lonely young men of New York. He had no friends in the city, few acquaintances, and he felt that if he could only get a nice wife with domestic tastes, one who could manage the income of a rising young man, he would be happy.

Where can any one go to find a good, sensible wife if not to a place like the league? That was what the young man thought. New York has all the modern conveniences and more than enough modern amusements, but where can one go to find a heart and helpmeet? he asked.

That is what a good many young men—and young women, too—who make their homes in New York are asking, and the league would like to help them out, but that is where it has to draw the line. No matrimonial aspirants need apply, though the league appreciates their need.

"That men thinking of marrying should come to a place like the Housewives' league," said Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the league, "emphasizes the fact that one of the greatest needs of the present time is efficiency in the housewife. Women should be trained to spend the income of the family as the men are trained to produce it. Men are looking for real partners in the business of home making. Hitherto it has been a question of the husband supporting the wife and of the wife being supported. The majority of women are willing to do their share in maintaining, but they are not properly trained. This makes young men with moderate incomes hesitate before they even think of marriage.

"When the league started three years ago we were asked if we would do anything about the servant problem, and we said no. We intended to first train the mistress. Now we have come to the place where the mistress is on the way to obtain proper training, and we are extending our work, but not on the basis of 'mistress and maid,' but of 'employer and employee.' Statistics speak of the 'employment problem' and the 'domestic problem' as two separate and different subjects.

"When they are considered as one and the same thing then people will begin to think of hours and wages. I have very little use for the woman who goes to Albany to advocate the eight hour law for men and then comes home and works her own maid twenty-four hours a day."

Sympathetic.

"How did you ever get the nerve to play the cornet? Doesn't your practicing drive your wife almost to distraction?"

"No," replied Mr. Meekton. "She encourages me. She thinks that anything that'll change my ordinary facial expression is worth some sacrifice."—Washington Star.

Care of the Baby In Summer

Weaning and Supplementary Feeding.

[Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.]

Many a mother looks forward with dread to the weaning period as one fraught with trouble to herself and more or less disturbance for the baby, but this need not be so.

One of the difficulties of weaning is the baby's objection to the rubber nipple, but if he has been given his drinking water by means of a nursing bottle throughout his life, he will already have learned how to use it.

Another and the principal trouble with weaning is to find food that suits the baby, and on which he thrives, which may safely be offered to him in the place of breast milk. Much of this trouble may be avoided if the weaning is done so gradually that the baby learns to take cows' milk while he is still getting breast milk to keep his digestive processes in good order.

Some of the rules for successful weaning are these: First, never wean a young baby until every means for keeping up the breast milk has been tried; second, do not wean the baby in the heat of summer, and, third, do not wean the baby because you think your milk disagrees with him. The trouble is almost certainly not with the quality of your milk, but because you do not have enough of it.

The way to wean the baby comfortably is to begin at the eighth or ninth month to give him one bottle feeding a day in place of one breast feeding. A little later another bottle is added, and so on until at the end of the year the breast is taken away altogether. These bottle feedings should consist of clean fresh cows' milk, diluted and sweetened. It is necessary, however, to remember that a baby who has been breast fed all his life cannot immediately digest cows' milk, as a bottle fed infant has learned to do. Accordingly a very weak mixture should be used to begin with. For example, for a baby of nine months of age the milk should be that intended for a bottle fed baby of four or five months. The strength of the food should be gradually increased, if the baby shows no signs of disturbance, until the full strength feeding is reached.

When a baby is weaned at the end of the first year he may be taught to drink directly from a cup and to be fed with a spoon.

It sometimes happens that the mother thinks her milk does not agree with the baby because he cries a good deal or is not gaining in weight. Under such circumstances, often with the advice and encouragement of her neighbors, the young mother weans her baby, even though he may be only a few weeks old. This is almost always a mistake. The trouble is not that the mother's milk is poor in quality, but because there is not enough of it. Instead of weaning the baby the mother should do all in her power to save it and to increase it for the baby's sake by eating more nourishing foods, such as eggs, meat, milk, fresh vegetables and good bread and butter, by taking plenty of fluid, water or milk, and by taking more rest and plenty of out of door exercise. Above all, she should stop worrying. Nothing more seriously interferes with successful nursing than worry and anxiety on the mother's part, and as far as possible a nursing mother should be relieved of the causes of mental disturbance, not only for herself, but even more for the sake of the baby.

At the same time, the baby will require some additional food. He should be given one or two prepared feedings in a nursing bottle each day until the mother's milk has increased sufficiently for his needs. The same rules govern "supplementary" feeding, as it is called, as those which apply to artificial feeding, except that a much weaker milk mixture must be used for a baby who has had nothing but breast milk from birth than for a bottle fed baby of the same age.

The mother should nurse the baby at least four times a day in order to keep the breast in good order and to induce a greater milk supply.

If the mother can have the help and advice of a good doctor at this time she should seek it, or take her baby to an infant welfare station. The country mother who cannot readily go to a doctor should have some good book to help her. The children's bureau of the United States department of labor, Washington, will send a pamphlet called "Infant Care," containing simple directions for the care of the baby, to any one who asks for it. This publication also contains many references to standard books on the subject.

Odds and Ends.

A lightweight moire with irregular and only vague water design is used for silk coat and frock costumes, but not extensively, and much more often in combination with other materials than alone.

As for taffeta, it seems to have reached the top note in favor, but instead of being made up in semitailored styles is seen more often in quaint models reminiscent of 1830 and in many cases with much fussiness of trimming detail.

Viewing the fashion field casually and impartially, one is impressed with the fact that an exaggerated fussiness threatens to characterize the season's modes. The clever dressmaker and the clever woman will avoid these styles.

CHARMING CAP AND GOWN.

Sheer Batiste, Embroidery and Valenciennes Lace Used.

FOR THE NIGHT TIME.

Midsummer brings many new additions to the summer girl's wardrobe in the way of charming lingerie. The pattern shown here is not so elaborate or complicated but that a clever girl could fashion it. Lingerie makes very good "pick up" work, and if a piece is always kept in the work basket it will only be a short time before a useful and dainty article of wearing apparel is fashioned.

ARTICLES OF VIRTU.

SUITABLE FOR BIRTHDAY GIFTS.

Handy Accessory.

A handy article to carry your crochet hook in, to prevent it piercing your work materials, is a cork covered with crochet made by starting with a ring crochet in s. c. until it is as large as the bottom of the cork, which should be the right size, when covered, to carry your thimble on.

Organdie Over Silk.

Flowered organdies are back in fashion for summer frocks. Lovely effects may be obtained by mounting the flowered organdie over thin silk. The silk need not necessarily match the tint of the flowers. For instance, a lavender flowered organdie is mounted over pale pink pussy willow silk; a rose flowered organdie is mounted over faint lilac, and so on. Black velvet ribbon sashes are much fancied with these pretty costumes.

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS

By

CHAPTER XXVI—CONTINUED

"I am come on business," she said, with a little nod. "How do you do, Miss Challoner? You are looking rather pale, I think." And then her keen glance travelled round the room.

The girl flushed a little over this abruptness, but she did not lose her courage.

"Is this the dress?" she asked, opening the parcel; but her fingers would tremble a little, in spite of her will. And then, as the rich folds of the black brocade came into view, she asked, in a business-like tone, in what style she would have it made, and how soon she required it. To all of which Mrs. Cheyne responded in the same dry, curt manner; and then the usual process of fitting began.

Never had her task seemed so tedious and distasteful to Phillis. Even Mrs. Trimmings was preferable to this; she hardly ventured to raise her eyes, for fear of meeting Mrs. Cheyne's cold, satirical glance; and yet all the time she knew she was being watched. Mrs. Cheyne's vigilant silence meant something.

If only her mother would come in! but she was shelling peas for Dorothy. To think Nan should have failed her on such an occasion! even Dulce would have been a comfort, though she was so easily frightened. She started almost nervously when Mrs. Cheyne at last broke the silence:

"Yes, you are decidely paler,—a little thinner, I think, and that after only a fortnight's work."

Phillis looked up a little indignantly at this; but she found Mrs Cheynes was regarding her not unkindly.

"I am well enough," she returned, rather ungraciously; "but we are not used to so much confinement and the weather is hot. We shall grow accustomed to it in time."

"No; but I believe it can be controlled", replied poor Phillis, who suffered more than any one guessed from this restraint on her sweet freedom.

Mrs. Cheyne was right; even in this short time she was certainly paler and thinner.

"You mean to persevere, then, in your moral suicide?"

"We mean to persevere in our duty," corrected Phillis, as she pinned up a sleeve.

"Rather a high moral tone for a dressmaker to take; don't you think so?" returned Mrs. Cheyne, in the voice Archie hated. The woman certainly had a double nature; there was a twist in her somewhere.

This was too much for Phillis; she fired up in a moment.

"Why should not dressmakers take a high moral tone? You make me feel glad I am one when you talk like that. This is our ambition—Nan's and mine, for Dulce is too young to think much about it—to show by our example that there is no degradation in work. Oh, it is hard! First Mr. Drummond comes, and talks to us as though we were doing wrong; and, then you, to cry down our honest labor, and call it suicide! is it suicide to work with these hands, that God has made clever, for my mother?" cried Phillis; and her great gray eyes filled up with sudden tears.

Mrs. Cheyne did not look displeased at the girl's outburst. If she had led up to this point, she would not have received it more calmly.

"There, there! you need not excite yourself, child!" she said, more gently. "I only wanted to know what you would say. So Miss Mewlstone has been to you, I hear?—and Miss Middleton, too? but that's her benevolence. Of course Miss Mattie comes out of curiosity. How I do detest a fussy woman, with a tongue that chatters faster than a purling brook! What do you say? No harm in her?" for Phillis had muttered something to this effect. "Oh, that is negative fact. I like people to have a little harm in them; it is so much more amusing."

"I cannot say I am of your opinion," returned Phillis, coldly; she was rather ashamed of her fit of enthusiasm, and cross in consequence.

"My dear, I always thought Lucifer must have been rather an interesting person." Then, as Phillis looked scandalized, and drew herself up, she said in a funny voice, "Now, don't tell your mother what I said, or she will think me an improper character; and I want to be introduced to her."

"You want to be introduced to my mother!" Phillis could hardly believe her ears. Certainly Mrs. Cheyne was a most inexplicable person.

"Dressmakers don't often have mothers, do they?" returned Mrs. Cheyne, with a laugh; "at least, they are never on view. I suppose they are in the back premises doing something?"

"Shelling peas, for example," replied Philis, roused to mischief by this; "that is mother's work this morning. Dorothy is old and single-handed, and needs all the help we can give her. Oh yes! I will take you to her at once."

"Indeed you must not, if it will inconvenience her!" returned Mrs. Cheyne, drawing back a little at this. She was full of curiosity to see the mother of these singular girls, but she did not wish to have her illusion too roughly dispelled; and the motion of Mrs. Challoner's homely employment grated a little on the feelings of the fine lady who had never done anything useful in her life.

"Oh, nothing puts mother out!" returned Phillis, in an indifferent tone. The old spirit was waking up in her, and she led the way promptly to the parlor.

"Mother, Mrs. Cheyne wishes to see you," she announced, in a most matter-of-fact voice, as though that lady were a daily visitor.

Mrs. Challoner looked up in a little surprise. One of Dorothy's rough aprons was tied over her nice black gown, and the yellow earthenware bowl was on her lap. Phillis took up some of the green pods, and began playing with them.

"Will you excuse my rising?—you see my employment," observed Mrs. Challoner, with a smile that was almost as charming as Nan's; and she held out a white soft hand to her visitor.

The perfect ease of her manner, the absence of all flurry, produced an instant effect on Mrs. Cheyne. For a moment she stood as though at a loss to explain her intrusion; but the next minute one of her rare sunshiny smiles crossed her face:

"I must seem impertinent; but your daughters have interested me so much that I was anxious to see their mother. But I ought to apologize for disturbing you so early."

"Not at all; all hours are the same to me. We are always glad to see our friends; are we not, Phillis? My dear, I wish you would carry these away to Dorothy and ask her to finish them."

"Oh, no! pray do nothing of the kind," returned Mrs. Cheyne, eagerly. "You must not punish me in this way. Let me help you. Indeed, I am sure I can, if I only tried." And to Phillis's intense amusement, Mrs. Cheyne drew off her delicate French gloves, and in another moment both ladies wer seated close together, shelling peas into the same pan, and talking as though they had known each other for years.

"Oh, it was too delicious!" exclaimed Phillis, when she had retailed this interview for Nan's and Dulce's benefit. "I knew mother would behave beautifully. If I had taken the Princess of Wales in to see her, she would not have had a word of apology for her apron, though it was a horrid coarse thing of Dorothy's. She would just have smiled at her, as she did at Mrs. Cheyne. Mother's behavior is always lovely."

"I made some excuse and left them together, because I could see Mrs. Cheyne was dying to get rid of me; and I am always amiable, and like to please people. Oh, it was the funniest sight, I assure you!—Mrs. Cheyne with her long fingers blazing with diamond rings, and the peas rolling down her silk dress; and mother just going on with her business in her quiet way. Oh, I had such a laugh when I was back in the work-room."

It cost Phillis some trouble to be properly demure when Mrs. Cheyne came into the work-room some time afterwards in search of her. Perhaps her mischievous eyes betrayed her, for Mrs. Cheyne shook her head at her in pretended rebuke.

"Ah; I see you will persist in treating things like a comedy. Well, that is better than putting on tragedy airs and making yourselves miserable. Now I have seen your mother, I am not quite so puzzled."

"No; but I am not going to make you vain by telling you what I think of her; indiscriminate praise is not wholesome. Now, when are you coming to see me?—that is the point in question."

"Dorothy will bring your dress on Saturday," replied Phillis, a little dryly. "If it requires alteration, perhaps you will let me know, and of course I will come up to the White House at any time."

"But I do not mean to wait for that. You are misunderstanding me purposely, Miss Challoner. I want you to come and talk to me one evening,—any evening. No one but Miss Mewlstone will be there."

"Oh, no!" responded Phillis, suddenly turning very red. "I do not think that would do at all, Mrs. Cheyne. I do not mean to be rude or ungrateful for your kindness, but—but ——" Here the girl stammered and broke down.

'You wish, then, to confine our intercourse to a purely business relation?" asked Mrs. Cheyne, and her voice had a tone of the old bitterness.

"Would it not be better under the circumstances? Forgive me if I am proud, but——"

"Oh, you are proud, terribly proud!" returned Mrs. Cheyne, taking up her words before she could complete her sentence. "You owe me a grudge for what I said that night, and now you are making me pay the penalty. Well, I am not meek; there is not a human being living to whom I would sue for friendship. If I were starving for a kind word, I would sooner die than ask for one. You see, I am proud too, Miss Challoner."

"Oh, I did not mean to hurt you," returned Phillis, distressed at this, but determined not to yield an inch or bend to the sudden caprice of this extraordinary woman, who had made her suffer so once.

"To be hurt, one must have feelings," returned this singular person. "Do not be afraid, I shall not attempt to shake your resolution; if you come to me now it must be of your own free will."

"And if I come, what then?" asked Phillis, standing very straight and stiff, for she would not be patronized.

"If you come you will be welcome," returned Mrs. Cheyne; and then, with a grave inclination of the head, she swept out of the room.

A MESSAGE TO THIN WEAK, SCRAWNY FOLKS

AN EASY WAY TO GAIN 10 TO 30 LBS. OF SOLID, HEALTHY, PERMANENT FLESH.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. J. S. McKeown and other good druggists have Sargol, or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.

WOMAN SUFFERAGE

IT'S WAR TIME ASPECT

LONDON, July 11.—The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their saving to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given so little trouble to the government that it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of those in Parliament, since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and so suffrage may soon come after this terrible war is over.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of womanly ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine though started nearly half a century ago, sells more widely today that any other womanly tonic. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, pain at times, should take this" Prescription" of Dr. Pierce.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism which requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and black circles about the eyes are only symptoms. Go to the source of the trouble and the other symptoms disappear.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. Smallest, easiest to take. One tiny, Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cures Sick Headache, Billious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Billious Attacks and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. 25 cents vial, by druggists.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

KEPT HORSE TOO LONG

Yesteray afternoon a soldier hired a horse and buggy from Mr. Post, liveryman of this city, intimating that he would return in about two hours, whereas he did not return for some hours later. $1 was the first price set, but as the soldier had kept the animal beyond the time specified, an extra amount was asked for, which was refused. As a result the police were called and an amicable settlement was effected.

SOME STALE BUTTER

A few days age a Campbellford man cut into a pound of butter which he bought at a grocery whose proprietor does not advertise, and found therein a small tin box, which contained a small piece of paper bearing the following, written in a neat feminine hand: "I am a girl of 18 years, good looking, and an excellent housekeeper. Should this be found by some unmarried Christian gentleman, will he please write to the following address," etc. The finder, being a bachelor, decided to unravel the affair, and succeeded, only to destroy the romance. The girl who had written the note had died many years before, leaving an aged husband and a grown up family.—Campbellford News.

LOCAL GARDNERS SUCCESS

Recently Government judges who had under their supervision the judging of field and other crops, visited this section and the result of their inspection has been made public. Mr. John Harris and son, gardners of this city, have the honor of carrying off first prize in tomatoes, obtaining 96 points out of 100; second prize in celery with 95 per cent., and third prize in onions with 93 per cent. The prize money amounted to $60. Messrs. Harris had about 1,000 celery heads in water, which had the effect of detoriating their value. The winners are, however, pleased with the result. They intend to exhibit celery, tomatoes and onions at the Toronto, London and Ottawa fairs.

covery was reported to Colonel Preston and a second time on the journey they were ordered to return to Belleville, but, still determined not to lose their chance of active service, they found their way by devious strategy from the railway station to the transport lying at the docks, and in the hurry and confusion of embarking the battalion, managed to slip aboard the steamer and hide themselves in some convenient corner. But not for long. A third time they were found and haled before the Colonel. Treating their unwonted determination to accompany the battalion with sympathetic and judicial consideration, he reported the case to Major-General, the Hon. Sam Hughes, the Minister of Militia and Defence, who had come down to the boat to say "Good-bye" to the battalion. "Take them along with you," was General Hughes' reply, and the "Stowaway" officers arrived in England with nothing more than the privates' uniforms with which they were clothed.

Of the 42 officers of the 39th Battalion, 36 are Canadian-born and 6 are of British birth.

HELD BACK THE PAY OF MAN WHO ENLISTED

Farmer Severely Scored By Magistrate for His Action

Magistrate Brunton severly scored Arthur Caulton, a farmer, who refused to pay his hired man the money due him because he suddenly left to join the colors. As her son was at camp at Niagara, Mrs. Wilcox appeared in the County Police Court against the farmer, claiming $55.80. When he heard the defendant's excuse, the magistrate said: "It is a contemptible thing for a man to refuse to pay another who is away fighting the battles of the Empire. You must get the money, I don't care how, if honestly, but you will pay $61.50 forwith or go to jail," he concluded, when the farmer pleaded that he had no money. The man was given 14 days to pay.

It is thougt that he was playing with a loaded gun, when it was accidentally discharged and he was instantly killed. He was in the pump house when Miss Crough, who was in the farm house at the time of the shooting, found him. Another boy, who was in the barn, heard the report, and also rushed in, alarmed by the noise.

WAR STORIES

CANADIAN "SANGFROID."

A Toronto reservist, a non-commissioned officer in the 21st British Field Ambulance, writes:

"The Canadian Contingent has caused no little envy among the regulars, because the very high wages paid. A number of good tales are told about the 'boys from God's country.'

"The best is that of a Toronto lad, on sentry, who failed to recognize his Brigadier-General. The B. C. turned and called back to the sentry: 'Why don't you salute your superior officer?" To which, I am reliably informed, the Torontonian, quite unabashed by the 'choking off,' replied: 'Come again, I didn't getchun.' It took some time for the B.G. to grasp the meanig of the sentry's words, but he probably was converted to the uselessness of a bilingual system in Ontario.

Another good one 'going the rounds' is that of a Montreal lad who stayed out late a few nights ago. Wishing to save a long walk, he jumped into an auto standing conveniently near and rode off, without asking the permission of the car's owner. When some distance from town he espied a soldier walking along and good-naturedly offered to 'give him a lift.' The soldier accepted and listened attentively for nearly half an hour to the Montreal man's story of his auto stealing exploit. Suddenly the latter asked: 'By the way, what's your name?' The 'pick-up' responded promptly: 'I'm General——.' The 'chauffeurr' promtply applied the brakes, brought the car to a standstill, reached in his pocket and found a flashlight, which he flashed into the general's face. 'Why, so you are! Gee it's handy I came along with the car, isn't it?' The British regulars can't understand why the 'Canuck' didn't get court-martial, but it is understood his only punishment was to return the car 'very stealthily' shortly after daybreak the following morning."

AN OFFICER'S EXPLOIT

An officer of the 1st (Ontario) Battalion, at present at home on leave in describing the attack on the German position known as 'Stony Mountain," at La Bassee, said that many individual deeds of bravery done on that occasion had already been recorded by the Canadian 'Eye-Witness' in his spirited account of the engagements, but he himself had seen no mention of Colonel Henry C. Becher, whose daring courage had brought about his death. After the mine had destroyed a portion of the trench and nearly all the bombers had been shot down, Major Becher stood at the end of the trench next to the huge hole made by the mine, and threw bombs. While he was advancing with a bomb it was hit by a piece of shrapnel or a bullett and exploded. Colonel Becher was terribly wounded in the neck. Even in this terrible condition his coolness and fortitude did not desert him, and while lying in a dying state he lighted a cigarette. He was carried a mile or two back, and chatted cheerfully most of the time to the doctor and the men who were carrying him. He only lived a couple of hours, his case being a hopeless one from the first. Captain D. E. Robertson, the medical officer attached to the Ontario Battalion, did splendid work in attending to the wounded under fire. Major Becher was buried with four other officers in Bethume cemetery. Colonel Hill and some 50 officers and 60 men were present. The grave was afterwards covered with flowers.

DEATH ROLL

MRS. WALTER GRAHAM

Mrs. Walter Graham of Fort William, Ont., died in Prescott on Monday last. The late Mrs. Graham was a sister of Miss M. Richardson, this city, agent of the C.P.R. Telegraph Co. She leaves a husband, one son and daughter, and three sisters to mourn her loss.

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Lieut. Ross, C.P.A.S.C., No. 2 Detachment, accompanied the 8th C. M. R. to Belleville on Thursday last to look after the supplies of the trek. Lieut. Williams is in command of the C. A. S. C. in the absence of Lieut. Ross.

Lieut. Fairbairn, who is attending the provisional school of infantry, met with an accident which will deprive him of the free use of one of his legs for some weeks. While playing a game of indoor baseball with the field engineers the lieutenant badly sprained his foot and leg. He went to Bockville on Saturday for a few days. He will be compelled to use crutches for some time.

The band of the 59th battalion has been started. In one week it is expected that the organization will be complete and ready for its instruments, which will be bought out of the fund of $500 subscribed by the officers of the 14th regiment some time ago. A bandmaster from Peterboro has offered his services, with 16 good players as a nucleus for the band. They are several men in the city waiting for the band to start, especially among the men of the 14th, who are good bandsmen.

The 59th Battalion will commence to do some trench work this week. Maj. Brown, G.S.O., and Lieut.-Col. Thompson have laid off the ground for trench digging south of the Gananoque road, and the men will be taught the work of digging modern trenches. The first trench work done since the camp opened was done a week ago by the machine gun school.

Every Province in Canada is represented in Barriefield Camp. There are men who have come from the isolated regions of the Mackenzie River and the frozen fringes of the far north. From the sparsely sections of Ungava, and the cold shores of Labrador, they have found their way to this camp, and have their hearts set on the trenches of Europe. There are a great number from the lumber camps of remote regions, and The Standard has met two men from distant stations of the Hudson Bay Company. To go in and out among these men from every walk of life and station, and from such a variety of callings, is a peculiar privilege. They all breathe but one spirit; they are filled with loyalty for the one King, and their hearts pulsate with the same love for humanity, and the same hope for the preservation of civilization, and the downfall and destruction of the fiendish Hun, whose cruel hand, dripping with innocent blood, has been raised against the world.—Kingston Standard.

Poverty is said to be a sure cure for dyspepsia, but the cure may be worse than the disease.

No Longer a "Corn Belt."

The "corn belt" used to be a strip of country running generally from Pennsylvania to Kansas, and including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and the southern half of Iowa.

But the fashion in belts is changing, as all fashions are liable to do. The corn belt is spreading itself out. It goes further east and further west, and most emphatically it is moving to the north and south. Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and even the Dakotas and Montana are now in the corn belt. The southern states are knocking at the door. Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas are showing that a hundred bushels to the acre is nothing to them.

The corn belt in the future will extend from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and it will reach to the Rocky mountains, if not beyond. It is no longer a belt, but a section, comprising almost the entire arable portion of the United States, and may even include the deserts and the mountains to a limited extent.—Farm Life.

Age of Granite.

It used to be thought that granite was the oldest of all rocks and that it formed the globe's first crust. Now, however, geologists believe that granite may be of any age or epoch. The granites found in Germany and the Vosges mountains of France date from one period of the world's history, those found in the British Isles from an entirely different period and those found in the United States from still other periods. Enormous pressure, combined with heat and water, must have been necessary to produce granite. Some scientists declare that the granites in the highlands of Scotland must have been formed when 60,000 feet of overlying rocks were piled above them and that those of Cornwall required 40,000 feet of rock pressure. In other localities it is estimated that the pressures under which granite consolidated must have been equal to that of an overlying mass of rock nine miles in thickness.—New York American.

Investment and Speculation.

When any one is buying a coat or a fishing rod or a rose tree or laying down a cellar or setting up a library either he knows what he wants, where to get it and what to pay for it or else he takes earnest counsel with his friends and with the most trustworthy professional advisers that he can find and uses all the wits that he and others can bring to bear on the subject in order to make sure that his purchase is prudently conducted. He attends sales, rummages in shops and discusses the matter in his club until he and it are voted a nuisance. If only half as much time and trouble were devoted to the careful selection of investments there would be fewer bad companies, unscrupulous promoters and ornamental directors, the world would be very much richer, and its riches would show less tendency to gravitate into questionable hands.—Cornhill Magazine.

A Curious Wish.

I want to be sick! I want to lie in bed and be fussed over and petted and nursed. So far in my life I have had but one disease—health. It sticks out all over me. It runs swiftly through me. It yanks me up in the morning. It tucks me up in bed at night and shoves me off into unexcited sleep not even to dream. It stands by my chair at meals and gives me an appetite for just the right food in just the right quantities.

I want symptoms. I want to be put to bed and petted. I want to come back to convalescence with brews and potions and soft cool fingers and dark rooms and sweet flowers to beguile me. I want to be sick!—H. S. Haskins in Smart Set.

The Other Way Round.

Mrs. Sourspite—When I gave you that solemn warning against marrying I said that some day you would regret it. That time will come, mark my words!

Mrs. Newed—The time has come.

Mrs. Sourspite (gleefully)—I thought so. Then you regret your marriage?

Mrs. Newed—Oh, no! I regret the warning you gave me. It kept me from marrying for nearly a year.—Pittsburgh Press.

Deduction.

"How can you tell that the conductor is married?" gasped the diminutive man.

"Didn't you hear the way that woman roasted him and he never even batted an eyelash?" retorted the great detective.—Buffalo Express.

"You must give me the change next time we meet."

"I will, sorr," replied the beggar; "and may yer honor live till ye get it."

Kaiser's Staff Said to Be Stunned

Lost 120,000 in Recent Battles in Poland

PETROGRAD, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—A Russian expert writing on the present lull in the German operations regarding Mackensen's army, which is known to be the chief factor in the plan for the envelopment of the Russian army, points out that the German lists of losses showing 1,616,761 casualties do not include 26 Bavarian, 174 Saxon and 228 Wuerttemburg lists, nor 40 lists of losses of the German fleet. These make a total of 3,500,000, to which must now be added 120,000 losses sustained by the Prussians during the last battles. These figures, he states, so stunned the German staff that, besides recognizing the frustration of its plan of envelopment, it was compelled to withdraw six corps from the fighting line. These were then used to form new reserves. About two corps only, amounting in strength to two regiments, have been sent against Serbia or to assist Austria against Italy. It is considered here that the absence of fights along the left bank of the Bug is due to the [illegible]an army having successfully established connection with the garrison of Brest-Litovsk.

Frederick Rennet telegraphs the Daily News: "The Russian general who left Novo-Georgievsk, which is now completely invested, declares the fortress is abundantly supplied with victuals and munitions sufficient to last a year. The fortress has been prepared to withstand a siege. The garrison is at its necessary strength and there were no unnecessary mouths to feed, all civilians having been expelled in time. The batteries and forts are similar to those of Osowiec, which have been holding out against the strongest German artillery for many months. The sanitary conditions of Novo-Georgievsk are excellent.

Western Campaign

French Destroy Heavy Batteries and Depots of Ammunition

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Afternoon official statement). Last night passed quietly along the German part of the front. There have been reported only artillery engagements in the sections to the north of Arras, between the River Somme and the River Oise, in the region of Roye, and in the vicinity of Lasigny.

There was fighting yesterday with bombs and hand grenades in the Argonne at Haute Chevauchee, at Fontaine aux Charmes, and in the forest of Cheppy. Our bombardment of the German positions near the Linge destroyed two heavy batteries and caused the explosion of several depots of ammunition.

On the crest of the Sondernach two fresh and violent counter attacks against a position taken by us yesterday were completely repulsed, and we made about fifty prisoners.

Canadian Northern Aids Highlanders

Col. Michie of the 48th Highlanders, stated last night that the head office staff of the Canadian Northern had donated 35 pieces of the finest English brass instruments to the band of the 92nd Overseas Highland Battalion. The instruments are valued at $2,500.

The National Club has donated three field kitchens to the "92nd" and James Scott had contributed one field kitchen for the use of the officers' staff. St. Andrew's Association of Hamilton have given a field kitchen for the company to be furnished by Hamilton for the "92nd" and also about 10 sets of pipes for the pipe band.

KOVNO CAPTURED VILNA WILL FALL

Capital of Russian Province, Kovno, Taken by Germans, with Forts and War Material—Vilna is Expected to Fall

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Kovno, the capital of the Russian province of the same name, on the right bank of the River Niemen, a fortress of the first class, together with all its forts and a quantity of war material not calculated, has been in German hands since last night.

More than four hundred cannon were taken. The fortress was captured by storm in spite of a most tenacious resistance by the Russians, says a headquarters statement issued today.

VILNA WILL FALL.

(Canadian Press Special)

PETROGRAD, Aug. 19.—German aeroplanes are persistently bombarding the city of Vilna, about fifty miles east of Kovno. The possibility of the capture of Vilna by the Germans is foreseen in Petrograd, and operations preliminary to its evacuation are in progress.

The Governor-General of Vilna has ordered the removal of the equipments of factories, and of banks, together with supplies of metals, including church bells, leather and everything else which might be useful to invaders. Horses and livestock are being taken away.

PETROGRAD, via London, Aug. 17.—An official statement was issued tonight:

"In the divison of Dvinsk stubborn fights continue but all German attacks have been repulsed. At Kovno there has been fighting of the most desperate character. Sunday and Monday the enemy having made careful preparation by the use of heavy artillery of all calibre up to 16 inches, launched a series of violent attacks in full strength, with the object of storming the fortifications on the left bank of the Niemen. Towards Monday evening he succeeded in carrying a small fort which had been greatly damaged by artillery fire, and in breaking into intervening spaces between some of the other forts in the northern sector. The fighting continues.

"On the left bank of the upper Narew we repulsed on Sunday a series of fierce German attacks in the direction of Bialystock and Bielsk. The enemy offensive between the Rivers Nurstry and the Bug has been successfully contained. The enemy has suffered heavy losses.

"In the Novo Georgievsk region there has been severe artillery firing and the enemy has brought up guns of the largest calibre.

Allies Advance At Dardanelles

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A further advance of five hundred yards by the Allies forces on the Gallipoli Peninsula is announced in a report from Sir Ian Hamilton, given out today.

Sir Ian Hamilton reports that in the southern zone the situation was unchanged during the fourteenth and fifteenth. The Turks kept up the usual artillery fire without much effect.

In the northern zone the right flank of Australian and New Zealand Army Corps' position was heavily attacked during the nights of the fourteenth, and fifteenth, but all attacks were repulsed.

At Suvla the troops on the left flank made a short advance on the afternoon of the fifteenth with a view to straightening the line. They moved forward under considerable gun and rifle fire and gained about five hundred yards, capturing a Turkish trench and taking two officers and twenty other prisoners.

AVENUE OF MAPLES IN HONOR OF THE CANADIAN DEAD

LONDON, Aug. 18.—At a special meeting of the Overseas Club yesterday it was decided to give immediate effect to a proposal of Fane Sewell to plant maple seeds around the graves of the Canadians who have been buried at Langemarck. It was further proposed, at the conclusion of the war, to plant there what is to be known as the Avenue of Maples, "to bear testimony to the undying glory and courageous self-sacrifice of the brave Canadian regiments that took their place willingly and spontaneously in the fighting line of the empire."

Sir Robert Borden has written warm expressions of sympathy with the project, adding, "Relatives of those who have fallen will appreciate greatly your efforts to beautify the graves of those who have given their lives to the empire."

WET SPELL AT AN END

Good Weather in Prospect for a Few Days at Least

Notwithstanding that the farmers have been greatly concerned about the amount of rain which has fallen lately, the weather man announced the end of the wet spell. In a tone full of feeling he said in answer to the question concerning how long the wet spell would last: "It is over for the present." He could not give an opinion how long "the present" would last.

In the forecast for to-day there is no mention of rain. The weather will be fair and cool, with north to north-easterly winds.

"We shall take, we must take, Verdun. Then the war will be finished by December at the latest."

LEFT VALUABLE RINGS IN STATION WASHROOM

TORONTO, Aug. 18—While washing her hands in women's waiting room at the Union Station late yesterday afternoon, Mrs. I. Benjamin took three rings, valued at $900, from her fingers and, forgetting to replace them left the washroom, leaving them on the basin. After she had boarded the train for Kingston she missed the rings and at once, returned to the waiting room to recover her jewellery, but found no trace of the rings. She immediately reported her loss to the police, but up to the present no trace of them has been located. Mrs. Benjamin, who resides near Kingston, purchased the rings at a well known firm of jewelers yesterday, and lost them within a few hours.

Looking for Motor With Broken Light

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—The local and provincial police have nothing new to report on the Kingston road accident of last Sunday night. The blood-stained car turns out to be that of a Queen street grocer, who satisfactorily explained its condition to the police, in that he stopped there to assist in removing the injured. There was no arrest, as was reported in a morning paper, nor do the police hold out any hopes of one during the next few days.

The only tangible clue which the authorities have at present is a few pieces of broken glass from a headlight or lamp. They believe if they can find a car with a damaged mudguard and smashed light they will have the guilty party in the person of its owner.

THOUSAND LIVES LOST ON BRITISH TROOPSHIP

Steamer, Formerly Operated by Canadian Northern, Sent to Bottom by Submarine—Nothing to Indicate That Canadians Were on Board

On board	1,602
Lost	1,002

London, Aug. 17.—The sinking, in the Aegean Sea by a German submarine of the Royal Edward, with heavy loss of life, has shattered the record of the British navy of having transported hundreds of thousands of men across the seas without the destruction of one troop-laden ship.

On two previous occasions transports have been attacked. The Wayfarer was torpedoed by a submarine in the Irish Sea, but the vessel was not sunk and only five lives were lost. The Manitou was attacked by a Turkish torpedo boat in the Aegean Sea, and although the ship was not damaged, 51 lives were lost through the breaking of a davit as a boat was being lowered.

There is no indication in the news obtainable that there were Canadian troops on board.

THE BERLIN REPORT.

Constantinople (via Berlin and Amsterdam), Aug. 17.—Official announcement was made today that a German submarine had torpedoed and sunk the British transport Royal Edward off the Dardanelles. The transport was sunk by a single torpedo, sinking in seven minutes after it was struck. The loss of life is believed to have been heavy, though other vessels helped to pick up the survivors.

500 R.A.M.C. For Gallipoli.

That Dr. H. King Wilson, son of Dr. W. T. Wilson, 280 Bloor street west, and other Canadians of the R. A. M. C., who were en route to the Dardanelles, might have been on the torpedoed Royal Edward, is made to appear unlikely by a letter just received by his parents. It is filed from Malta, July 28th, and states that the hospital transport ship, of which he did not give the name, had left England on July 20 with 500 of the R.A.M.C. on board and had just put into Malta for orders. It is understood from this letter that Drs. Edward King and Dr. E. S. Wishart, also of Toronto, were on board. Their arrival at Malta on the 28th of last month is thought to indicate that by August 14 they would have reached their destination in safety.

On a card written from Shorncliffe August 1 to his mother, who lives at 274 Dovercourt road, Pte. S. R. Smart, of the Canadian Army Service Corps, siad that he expected to leave for the Dardanelles on August 15. Mrs. Smart does not know whether the C. A. S. C. left England on that date

19TH BATTALION SAFE

Mrs. McLaren, wife of Lieut.-Col. McLaren, commanding the Nineteenth battalion, in which are a number of Hamilton men states that Lieut.-Col. McLaren's brother in Toronto received a cablegram from Col. McLaren from Shorncliffe, Eng. This sets at rest any fear of Hamilton people concerning the safety of Hamilton men in the Nineteenth battalion, as they are all in England.

Dr. Tennent Safe.

Information learned by friends of Dr. Tennent in Belleville, is to the effect that he left England for the Dardanelles on August 4th, and that it would have been impossible for him to have been on the Royal Edward.

The doctors were in attendance in the morning, including Lieut.-Col. Marlow, A.D.M.S., and three or four in the afternoon and evening. The majority of the applicants were sent by the regiments, but numbers came direct to the office. Many had to be rejected on account of eye troubles.

PROMINENT GERMANS OPPOSE ANNEXATION

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Humanite prints the text of the anti-annexationist petition addressed to the German Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, on July 9, and signed by 82 prominent Germans, including Bernhard Dernburg, Professor Adolf Harnack, Clemens Delbruck, and Prince Von Hatzfeld. This document, which was framed in answer to annexationist manifestoes, begins as follows:

"Germany did not enter the war with the intention of making conquests, but to preserve her existence against the threatened coalition of her enemies."

"We delcare ouserselves," the petition continues, "partisans of the principle that incorporation or annexation of peoples politically autonomous or accustomed to autonomy must be condemned. The German Empire sprang from the idea of national unity and homogeneity. It would only assimilate elements racially foreign slowly and incompletely."

"The danger that territories Germany would have to evacuate as a condition of peace," continues the document, "might become ramparts for her enemies could easily be provided against in some other way."

Millions in Gold Sent to New York

All of the $100,000,000 Deposited at Ottawa Has Been Returned

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—Some $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 of gold has just been shipped from the vaults of the Finance Department to New York. This is understood to be practically the last of the $100,000,000 of American gold which was deposited at Ottawa in different amounts beginning a few weeks after the war started. This gold, it will be remembered, was money owing to England in the United States, the greater portion being interest due on American securities held in Great Britain. It was placed here to the credit of the Bank of England for exchange purposes instead of shipping it across the sea. As more and more munitions of war and other supplies have been bought in the United States by Great Britain the exchange situation has changed and the gold has been slowly returning to its former habitat.

The shipment referred to is understood to have cleaned out this balance. A situation has been slowly developing as a result of Great Britain's heavy purchases of war munitions in the United States where exchange against her is becoming very stiff and it is expected that measures will soon be taken to meet the situation. A recent report was that a $500 million credit was to be established in New York for Great Britain by American financiers, but nothing has been heard as to this by the Finance Department.

Armenians are Being Massacred

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(Special)—The Daily News has received from Aneurin Williams, M.P., a copy of a letter from Constantinople, dated July 13, further describing the terrible plight of Armenians in Turkey. The letter says:

"We now know with certainty from a reliable source that Armenians have been deported in a body from all towns and villages to the desert regions south of Alop. Refugees will have to traverse on foot a distance requiring marches of from one to two or even more months. We learn besides that the roads and Euphrates river are strewn with corpses of exiles, and those who survive are doomed to certain death, since they will find neither house, work, nor food in the desert. It is a plan to exterminate the whole Armenian nation.

"Court-martials operate everywhere without cessation. Twelve Armenians were hanged at Caesarea on the charge of having obeyed instructions which they had received from a meeting secretly held at Bucharest by Trocohak and Henchak societies. Many have fallen from blows from clubs. Thirteen Armenians were killed in this way at Dairbekir and six at Caesarea. Thirteen others were killed on their way from Chabine Karahlisa to Sivas. Priests of the village of Kurk, with five companions, suffered the same fate on the road of Sou Chehrksivas, although their hands were bound.

"Hundreds of women, young girls, and even children groan in prisons. Churches and convents have been pillaged, defiled and destroyed. Villages around Van and Bitlis have been pillaged and the inhabitants put to the sword. At the beginning of this month all inhabitants of Harahiissar were pitilessly massacred."

AN IMPORTANT OFFER MADE TO GERMANS

If They Accept U. S. Proposition Long Step Toward Neutral Freedom is Taken

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—On its face dealing with a single case, the importance of which could be measured in a comparatively small number of dollars, the American note to the German Foreign Office, made public today, in regard to the destruction of the sailing ship William P. Frye by a German auxiliary cruiser, may have results most important in their bearing upon the whole question of the treatment of neutral commerce by the European belligerents.

The United States acquiesces in the German proposal that a joint board of experts fix the value of the Frye, which will be promptly paid for by the German Government. This was the original American proposition.

But the far-reaching effect of the note comes in its acceptance of the German offer to arbitrate "the question of legal justification" for the sinking of the Frye, in so far as that involves the interpretation of the existing treaties with Germany. If the German Government agrees to arbitration, in the form suggested, it is believed here that the American Government will be in a position to address itself to England with greater force than it has heretofore been able to exert in advocacy of the general freedom of legitimate neutral commerce on the high seas. In the State Department's view, this will be particularly true if Germany accepts the last suggestion in the Frye note and agrees to suspend, during the arbitration at least, its policy of destroying American ships carrying contraband.

JEALOUS WOMAN TELLS OF TWO MURDERS

Says Man She Lived With Killed Boy and Girl in New York

BALTIMORE, Aug. 17.—A man who says his name is Edgar Jones, but who looks to be an Italian, is under arrest here suspected of being the slayer of Eleanor Anna Cohn and little Charlie Murray in New York last spring. Jones is accused by Grace Elliott, also known as Grace Jones, who is also held. The pair were arrested for beating Mrs. Rose Byson of No. 117 West Barre street out of a board bill.

The woman appeared to be enraged with Jones. To Captain Santry she said: "You had better keep a close watch on this man and not let him go. He is the man who murdered Eleanor Anna Cohn and little Charlie Murray in New York last spring."

The captain questioned her later. She said that last spring she and Jones were employed in Bellevue hospital, New York, and that one evening she observed blood on the man's clothing, and when she questioned him she says he confessed that he had killed a little girl. She did not betray him, she says, because she was in love with him.

Later she says, Jones admitted that he had killed a little boy, but still she did not betray him. In the latter part of May, the woman said she and Jones left New York for Washington and then came to Baltimore.

RIFLE IN YOUR ARM BECOMES MACHINE GUN

Fifteen Shots in as Many Seconds—Weapon Offered to Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 17.—An ingenious attachment which will change the ordinary rifle at a cost of $1.25 into a rapid firearm, firing fifteen shots in as many seconds, has been brought to the attention of the militia authorities by a Russian inventor from Winnipeg named K. Shendreeck, who was formerly a gunsmith in his own country.

The attachments consist of a clip to be attached in the usual place below the barrel and a hand-grip by which the shells may be projected forward and ejected when fired without drawing the gun from the shoulder; the trigger finger on the right hand not being withdrawn till the clip is empty. For repelling a rush the attachment would be very useful, and the rifle under ordinary conditions could be used as at present.

H. Goldinsky accompanied the inventor as an interpreter, and Charles Geerie of Winnipeg introduced him.

Bad Delivery of Dynamite Causes Flutter on Hill

Twelve Sticks Found at Ottawa Under Governor-General's and Prime Minister's Offices

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—A dozen sticks of dynamite found this evening in the basement of the east block of the Dominion Public Buildings, caused a flutter of excitement among the Dominion Police, by whom the discovery was made. There was enough of the explosive, had it been placed there with hostile intent, to have wrecked the main portion of the building.

In the basement of the east block, near the west tower, and almost directly under the offices of the Governor-General and the Prime Minister, is a small room used as an office by a foreman of the Public Works Department, who attends to repair work in the Justice and neighboring departments. It was in this room that the dynamite was found by a Dominion policeman on his rounds at six o'clock. The explosive lay upon the desk, done up as an ordinary parcel in paper wrapping Above it was a card pencilled in what was intended to be conspicuous letters in which was the warning: "Dangerous; don't handle; dynamite," and beside the parcel lay a bill addressed to the Public Works Department for twelve sticks of dynamite from a well known hardware firm on Sussex street.

The usual occupant of the room had quit work for the day and there was no one about who had seen the package placed there. Neither had the police any immediate clue to the party who delivered the goods in this haphazard fashion, although for some time a strict scrutiny of all strangers entering or leaving the public buildings has been enjoined by Dominion police headquarters and only one door in each building is open for traffic after five o'clock in the afternoon.

Police officials express confidence that the "mystery" of the dynamite package will be cleared up easily.

Mrs. Grant's Retort.

The Grant administration brought a brilliant throng of military officers to the capital, and the young people of the president's family—he had a daughter and several sons—made the White House gay. Mrs. Grant was plain in appearance, unpretentious in manner, but genuinely hospitable and quicker witted than she was generally given credit for being.

"Ah!" said the bumptious foreigner, attempting to be facetious. "Madame does not speak French? How surprising! In Europe all the ladies of the upper class speak French and generally two or three other languages besides."

"I know," said Mrs. Grant dryly, "and can understand why this must be on a continent divided into so many small kingdoms, some of them smaller than our smallest states, each speaking a different language, but in our great, united country, one language only is spoken from end to end of it. We need no other."

The abashed foreigner retired.—Exchange.

The "Dominion" of Canada.

We are accustomed to take the expression of the "Dominion" of Canada for granted, but the original of that somewhat unusual word is known to very few. When at length the great scheme of Sir John Macdonald was realized, and the nine provinces grouped themselves together into one great confederation, a serious difficulty was presented by the choice of a suitable name. For a time almost a deadlock ensued.

At length one old member of parliament rose from his seat and told his colleagues that he had read in his Bible that very morning the words, "His dominion shall be from the one sea to the other." Accordingly he suggested that Canada should be known as the Dominion, or God's Land. The suggestion seized upon the hearts and imaginations of those present, and it was promptly acted upon.—Pall Mall Gazette.

What is meant by our neighbor we cannot doubt. It is every one with whom we are brought into contact, whosoever it be, whom we have any means of helping.—Dean Stanley.

Maple Trees for Langemarck.

A large supply of Canadian maple seeds has just reached London, Eng. Negotiations are proceeding with the British Red Cross in an endeavor to have these seeds planted around the graves and cemeteries where Canadian soldiers are buried in Flanders. The Overseas Club proposes later to plant an avenue at Langemarck as a memorial to the Canadian dead.

Dogs of War.

The "dogs of war" have been more than a figure of speech for thousands of years. They were used in Egypt 400 B. C. The Romans, the Teutons and other fighting nations of antiquity depended much on them for sentinel and defense purposes. In the middle ages they are said to have even worn armor. The Spanish discoverers used bloodhounds in tracking the Indians in this country.

MELVILLE.

Summer, with its golden sunshine, wealth of grain and odorous flowers is flitting past us as on wings. Soon vacation days will be but a memory and all too soon school-bells will resound with the call to renewed tasks and duties. Happy, care-free, summer days! would that we might stay thy rapid passing. But summer days, like days of youth, hasten on and we find ourselves, after youth's brief holiday, face to face with life's sterner duties.

A most interesting and beautifully impressive song-service was enjoyed by a large congregation at Melville on Sunday evening, when the ladies of the W.M.S. had charge of the public church service in the absence of the pastor, Rev. E. H. Harston, who is enjoying a brief holiday. The meeting was conducted by the president of the society, Mrs. J. Kinnear, ably assisted by Mr. F. Trimble, Toronto, who capably and efficiently conducted the musical part of the programme and presided at the organ. A vocal duet by Mr. G. Weeks and Mr. Trimble, another by Mr. Trimble and Mrs. C. H. French and vocal solos by Mr. Weeks and Miss Eva Locklin were all most inspiring. A vocal solo, "You in your Small corner and I in Mine," by little Kathleen French, is worthy of special mention. An address "The World's Whitened Harvest Fields" by Mrs. W. H. Anderson, was a strong appeal for increased missionary effort in foreign and home lands. The success of the meeting was largely due to the assistance rendered by Mr. F. Trimble, whose holiday visits to our little hamlet are pleasantly anticipated by the people of Melville, as Mr. Trimble, unlike most holiday seekers, most cheerfully assists in the musical part of any programme, excelling not only as a capable accompanist, but also as a vocalist of exceptional merit.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Welbanks Rednersville, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Vance.

Miss Elva Locklin, B.A., returned last week from Toronto where she has been spending several weeks of her holidays taking a course in art.

Miss Ada Kinnear, who is home from Calgary on a brief holiday, spent the week-end in Picton.

On Sunday morning, at the close of the Sunday school, Mr. Ralph Adams, gave an interesting account of the Boys' Camp at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching. Mr. Adams, having recently returned from spending several days at this resort was able to give a most complete account of the work, etc., accomplished at this summer camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Huff and children, and Mrs. M. Johnson, Mount Pleasant, spent a few days in Melville last week, Mrs. Johnson remaining to spend a few weeks at her summer home.

Mr. Gerald Morton, Belleville, is enjoying a pleasant outing at Consecon Lake.

Mr. Stewart Kinnear was the victim of a painful accident on Friday, when in heating creosote over a stone, he was badly burned about the face and hands, one side of the face being particularly injured and swollen. The wounds required medical attention, but at present no serious results are anticipated.

Mr. F. Trimble, Secretary Y.M.C.A. Toronto, came down on the Prince Edward Old Boys' excursion on Saturday and spent the week-end the guest of his sister, Mrs. G. Osborne. Mr. Trimble, who for the past two months has been a representative of the Y.M.C.A. at the Niagara Military Camp, gives a most encouraging report of the work done among the recruits by the Y.M.C.A., aided by ministers and evangelists. Three nights of each week are devoted to religious services, and as a result of one evening's effort alone, under an inspired evangelist, eighty recruits decided to enlist under the blood-stained banner of Christ, while in one week two hundred made a similar decision. The meetings are held in a large tent and other evenings are occupied in an effort to uplift socially and morally these brave Canadian boys who are enlisting to protect our homes from a despotic power. About 10,000 men are encamped at Niagara alone.

Blind Soldiers Win Boat Race

LONDON, Aug. 17.—On the Thames at Putney recently blind soldiers rowed against blind civilians, cheered on by a crowd of blind soldiers and civilians who accompanied the races in a steam launch.

The soldiers came from the Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Hostel at St. Dunstan's, Regent's Park, N.W., and they won two out of three races between them and past and present students of the Worcester College for the Higher Education of the Blind.

The soldier crew that won the fours were bronzed, magnificent-looking men, perfectly fit, and as cheery a crew as ever raced on the Thames. There was "Jock" Steel, of the Cameronians, the stroke, who got a bullet through his head in Flanders and is now making mats and baskets; Milligan of the Irish Guards; Bates, of the Royal Horse Artillery, who, like Milligan, has become an expert reader and writer in Braille; and Lance-Corporal Pettit, of the 1st King's Royal Rifles, now a good joiner.

They went away with the long, steady strokes of a crack Thames crew. The youthful blind crew from Worcester could not hold them at first. They made a fine spurt towards the finish of the three-quarters of a mile, but the soldiers finished quite fresh with three lengths to spare.

The unseeing soldiers in the steam launch, told of the progress of the race by friends, cheered till they could scarcely articulate. "It was bully beef and biscuits that did it," said Milligan afterwards. Steel said it was funny, not being able to see what was heppening, but they could hear the click of their rivals' rowlocks, and they felt they were leading well.

Private Cromwell, of the 5th Gloucesters, and Private Woolien, of the 2nd Wilts, won a great struggle in the doubles. Captain Owen, of the Cape Mounted Rifles just lost the singles by a quarter of a length to Mr. J. F. Tracey.

The captain lost his sight in the fighting in South-West Africa before General Botha arrived. He was in a force of 200 that was surrounded by 1,800 at Sandefontein. Wounded in the head, the jaw, and in the body, the Germans left him for dead.

CONSUMPTION OF EGGS.

The consumption of eggs in Canada is increasing to a wonderful extent. In past years Canada has imported more poultry and more eggs than she has exported. Yet her production has materially increased, but it has failed to keep pace with the consumption. In twenty years the egg production developed from 64,499,241 dozen to 123,071,034 dozen, but the consumption increased from 11.8 per capita to 17.39. That is to say the individual fondness for eggs had increased over fifty per cent. The population grew in those twenty years, or from 1891 to 1911, according to the census, from 4,833,239 to 7,204,838, an increase of 2,371,599, and the egg production mounted up 58,571,793 dozen. In spite of this fact, and although the exports fell about to zero, 2,378,640 dozen had to be imported. In the same time the number of poultry in Canada grew from 12,696,701 to 29,548,723. Here again, although the increase was close upon thirteen million, the imports exceeded the exports in value to the amount of $111,696.

Last year, the excess of imports of eggs over exports reached the virtually enormous total of 11,150,106 dozen, while of poultry in 1914 we exported in value $206,370, but we imported $406,366, a difference against us of $199,996. These figures, striking as they are, and almost impossible as they seem, are yet official, being taken from Pamphlet No. 7, of the Poultry Division, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, entitled, "The Egg and Poultry Situation in Canada, with notes upon the possible effect of the war upon the Development of the Industry," by W. A. Brown, B.S.A., M.S.

The statistics given in the pamphlet are both phenomenal and interesting. No other articles of food have shown such an increase in popularity. At the same time prices generally have increased and been well sustained. Mr. Brown does not undertake to explain the phenomena but contents himself with proving that it is so and that the increase in every particular is common to all the provinces. He also gives particulars of imports of poultry into Great Britain, which in 1913 amounted in value to $5,411,684, of which Russia supplied $1,640,923, the United States $999,890, Austria-Hungary $470,767, Italy $410,902, China $219,472, Egypt $130,300, Holland $121,739, Belgium $108,268, Norway $68,960, Germany $58,005 and Canada, seemingly, nil.

From the foregoing figures and the general condition of things in Europe, Mr. Brown arrives at the conclusion that Britain will this year be short of eggs and poultry to the amount of a million and a half dollars, or of eggs alone to the sum of one hundred million dozen. Every Canadian producer should endeavor, therefore, to produce this year more and better eggs and poultry than ever before.

THE BRITISH REGISTRATION SCHEME.

On Sunday last the gigantic registration scheme was put into force in Great Britain. The same method was adopted as is carried out in the case of the census, and Sunday was selected as the day when most people are at home. Everyone between the age of seventeen and sixty-five had to register his or her name, age, and occupation. The registration forms were distributed on Saturday and collected on Monday, when the Government were in possession of complete data concerning all the adult inhabitants of Great Britain. The extreme Radicals and Socialists—who have not a spark of patriotism in their nature—bitterly opposed the proposal in the House of Commons, and about thirty of these "patriots," who draw $40 a week salary as members of Parliament, voted against the measure when it came on for the third reading. The fear which took possession of their souls was that this revolutionary measure was but a prelude to conscription.

Twenty-seven million forms, duly filled out and signed, were handed to the volunteer collectors on Monday morning. All visiting aliens were compelled to register in the same manner as the British subjects. Forms were distributed and collected in all hotels, big and small boarding and lodging-houses. Women naturally objected to revealing personal information about themselves, such as their ages. The enumerators, on the other hand, gallantly volunteered to permit them to enclose the registration form in a sealed envelope.

While the forms were being collected, Radical newspapers continued their attack upon the registration measure, urging the Government to abandon the "roundabout scheme" and announce immediately its definite plans. Despite this continued outcry, however, it is certain that the information obtained by the registration will prove of great value to the Government, as it will be in a position to know definitely just how many men are available for army service, and how many persons can be called upon to do work of any description for the national cause. After this data has been compiled, the Government will be able to take a more definite—and possibly more drastic—step. Measures of a sweeping nature are expected when Parliament reopens. Although the collection of the registration forms at some places was attended by scenes of violence, the scheme, as a whole, proved entirely successful and little difficulty was encountered. The action of the Irish shirkers who went over the different districts in order to avoid registration did not hamper the enumerators to any serious extent. Loyal Irishmen gathered to demonstrate against the shirkers and they were overwhelmingly in the majority, so that little attention was paid to the opposition movement.

Great confidence is expressed by statesmen in the outcome of the measure. Lord Derby, in a speech in Liverpool, said he was convinced that when the returns come in they will show that thousands of men who have not come forward before because they did not realize the need for it are willing to come to the assistance of the country. The registration in many places caused a boom in recruiting. The opportunity for young men to defend their country voluntarily, rather than by compulsion, was seized upon by many of military age. Recruiting offices were kept open all day Sunday. The registration also will cause a great increase in the number of marriages. Many are eager to notify the Government that they are not without dependents.

Since the war began Canada has sent more of its population to England than it has received of immigrants. About 80,000 Canadian soldiers are overseas and 50,000 ready to go on completion of their training. After the war the balance will be restored and the newcomers must be prepared to go on the land. It is not quantity but quality of immigration that counts now.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Our foes ask themselves continuously How can we best get at Germany's vital parts? What are her most vulnerable points? The answer is, her humanity; her trustful honesty.

Hence we find the English sailing their ships under false colours, and arming their merchant steamers, and then, when they are about to be spared, villainously ramming the enemy boat with its humanely intentioned crew, even as the man of Jericho, who stabs to death the Samaritan who is pouring oil into his wounds.

It is the same English who, dressed in German uniforms, hoist the German flag, under the protection of which they storm the trenches of their German neighbours.

Old England remains true to herself, on land as on the water. These English are worthy of their chivalrous friends the French, who use German helmets and overcoats, and thus charge our men, in cowardly fashion.

It is the same spirit that seeks the protection of churches and cathedrals, so that under the aegis of the mild and humane German warfare the Anglo-French midnight assassins may perform their murderous work undisturbed. "And it is against such riffraff as this that I have to go to work!" as Frederick the Great once lamented.

But we have learned something since those days. We have learned that we have to do with murderers. This is no longer war, it is murder; the noble profession of the soldier has been degraded into the work of the midnight marauder.

The time has come for hardening our hearts. The assassin's place is not the prisoner's camp. He is condemned by God and man to be the booty of the hangman.

ALLEGED GERMAN SPY ARRESTED IN THE WEST

VERNON, B.C. Aug. 17.—A German who entered into the ranks of the 54th Regiment at Vancouver, by representing himself to be a Swiss reservist, anxious to fight on the side of the allies, has been arrested and will be made the subject of a courtmartial.

It is said that the authorities have evidence of the most incriminating nature to submit against the man, which will show not merely that he is a German, under an assumed name and nationality, but that since his arrival at Vernon he had been collecting military information and offering it for sale to Germany through the medium of a neutral mail.

German Officer Gives Opinion on Present War

Views of Officer in Captivity Given Out by English Press Bureau

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The press bureau issued a communication from Professor Pares, the authorized correspondent at Russian headquarters in which the professor gives an interesting account of a conversation with a captured German officer.

I have had an interesting talk with a German officer, Professor Pares writes, commander of a battery which was cut off by the Russians in a recent advance on our side. He comes from the Rhine and has lived long in Hamburg, and he inspired in his captors the greatest respect by his culture and good feeling. We talked first of Hamburg; he describes it as a town reduced to idleness trade and most of the profits remain in neutral countries. The short rations in Germany, he insists are simply a measure of precaution, and latterly prices had been lowered. He had a poor opinion of potato bread. Next, we talked of the Rhine universities, which are practically emptied of students by the war. There are in the army many volunteers from the age of 16 to that of 48, but this is no indication of the depletion of material for the army.

A Frank Discussion

We now got on to the main questions; he was very ready to discuss them and spoke perfectly frankly. I asked on what side Germany could hope for any deciding success. He admitted at once that no such point, of the kind that Napoleon used to look for, was to be found on any side, and he maintained that from the outset, both militarily and politically Germany was fighting a purely defensive war, of course by frequent counter-offensives In that case, Professor Pares pointed out, Germany could only have peace by the Allies offering it, that is, by their getting tired of the war; and surely it was unfortunate that she had every one against her at once. In reply he reminded me, Professor Pares continues of the German word Streber, which means a restless, pushing person who is always disturbing and annoying others. Economically, he said, the struggle in Germany has become almost impossible, of which he himself had seen many instances. Some outlet was essential, and this England and the other powers had united to prevent.

I said that for us English, the issue was whether Germany should have things which we at present possess, and that we were not likely to give them up without fighting. He quite accepted this. Germany, he said, was like the troublesome boy of the school who was dissatisfied and had a grievance, and was always making things unpleasant for all the rest, so that there was no wonder if he was not liked. I maintained that this went too far, if his own old allies, such as Italy turned against him. He expressed resentment against Italy, and said that anyhow right was on the side of Germany, who would continue to defend herself to the end. I answered that we might disagree as to the question of right, but that I could not understand how any successful issue could be hoped for under such conditions. He was of my opinion, and twice spoke of the war as a "catastrophe."

I asked then why Germany should persist in a policy which had obviously especially in the case of Italy, proved to be a misguided one; we all felt admiration for the magnificent fighting power of the German army, which might have dealt successfully with us separately; but it had been set an impossible task. He replied that England had a long experience and that policy with her was well thought out; Germany had only some 40 years of a united existence behind her, and the policy which had led to "the catastrophe" could not, as a policy be defended. I asked whether it was likely to be changed, and to this I neither expected nor got any answer. But it was interesting that, in spite of the great successes, Galicia, he described the present mood of the army as nothing like the first great outburst of enthusiasm at the beginning of the war.

I was later given an opportunity of examining a German private, a Hanoverian, captured because he was asleep when the Russians stormed his trenches. I was interested both in the readiness of his answers, which he gave with a smiling face, and in the answers themselves. The German heavy artillery was all beyond the San, and troops were being sent away to the Italian front. Food was poor in Galicia; all the soldiers were for peace, and there was the same refrain in all the letters received from home. He had been on the western front near Rheims and had made the railway journey to Neu Sandec in five days. He spoke with especial respect of the first English troops, of the Russian field artillery, and of the accuracy of the French heavy artillery.

I hear that we are going strong
Out there upon the Polish front.
But somehow, something's always wrong
About my own peculiar stunt;
Each single time I take a blob;
For just a solid year I've scored 'em;
And now this tedious Argonne job
Has turned me stiff with boredom.

Once more I'm told to hack my way
To Verdun by the nearest route,
This time allowing no delay
For women, wine or other loot;
Well, I have hacked and hacked and hacked
Day after day in dull succession,
And only made in point of fact
A very small impression.

I fear that Father takes it ill;
He taught me as a bud to sprout;
From him I learned the way to spill
My cannon-fodder's blood about;
He nursed my Hohenzollern brains
And showed my scabbard how to rattle,
And yet, for all his pious pains,
I cannot win a battle.

So now he cuts me. All this while
He's polishing up his orb and crown,
Rehearsing how to make in style
His entry into Warsaw town;
And there (with Mother, too, in tow)
He'll leave me outside in the chilly,
And never pause to care a blow
About his Little Willie.

PROGRESS WITH THE DASHEEN

Ever since the federal division of foreign seed and plant introduction began its experiments with the dasheen this West Indian crop has proved itself well worth care, says the Country Gentleman. In 1900 the department recorded a South Carolina planting of dasheens that yielded at the rate of 400 bushels to the acre. Since then from less than five acres on the department's testing grounds at Brooksville, Fla., 1,400 bushels of dasheens have been harvested. From other plantings in Florida and Louisiana as much as twenty-two pounds of dasheens have been harvested from single hills.

In addition to the Florida, Louisiana and Carolina crops, the dasheen has been successfully grown near Norfolk, Va.; in Southern California and near Ray, Ariz. It promises well for use in irrigated sections of the southwest.

It would seem that the department's success with dasheen plantings fits in admirably with the new southern campaign for crop diversification. Not only does the dasheen promise well as a market crop once the public generally has recognized its merits, but in the meantime it is capable of furnishing food for home consumption. Its food value is higher than that of the potato.

THE DASHEEN—TUBERS AND PLANTS.

Robert A. Young of the department says that in more ways than one the dasheen outdoes the potato.

"It can be grown as a summer crop in a region where the potato must be grown almost entirely as a spring crop," he argues, "for it ripens its tubers in October and furnishes them for the table at a season when northern grown potatoes have to be shipped in.

"The young leaves, properly cooked, can be substituted for spinach. The blanched shoots, obtained by forcing dasheen corms in the dark, constitute an entirely new product. The nutty flavor of the tubers gives them a peculiar palatability."

The larger tubers are ground into flour, which is used for soups and gruels and is mixed with wheat or rye flour to make griddle cakes, biscuits and bread.

At present the dasheen appears to be no more difficult to keep in storage than the sweet potato, but will usually keep well if stored in a dry place at a temperature of about 60 degrees F.

TIMELY BEE WISDOM.

July is the month for gathering the first surplus, whether it be comb or extracted honey. It should be taken from the colonies not later than the twentieth of the month, thus keeping it separate from the later dark honey from buckwheat, asters, goldenrod, etc. The light honey is not only lighter in color, but more delicate in its flavor and brings about 2 cents a pound more.

In extracting make certain that about two-thirds of the cells in the extracting comb are sealed over to insure ripeness in the honey, which not only adds to its flavor, but also prevents fermentation when stored for later sale.

In uncapping the combs for extraction employ two uncapping knives, and while using one the other should be kept immersed in a pan of hot water over an oil stove and the knives frequently changed, as a warm knife uncaps more readily than a cold one and the cappings do not stick to it so much.

No bee escape board is required in taking the extracting combs from the colonies, as it makes little difference if the bees do uncap some cells when smoked down from the combs, but in the case of comb honey the smoking would defeat the purpose, as all uncapped cells render the combs unsightly and unsalable as first grade.

For this reason and the further one of saving annoyance from the bees, the bee escape board should be used when taking the comb surplus from the colonies and toward evening slipped in between the hive body and all of the comb supers and left there all night. By morning most of the bees will have gone down into the brood nest and can be removed from the supers without bother.

THE MARKETS

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16.—Wheat declined 1¼c to 1⅝c today. The favorable weather conditions continue, for the most part, in the Canadian west; temperatures are somewhat lower, and showers have occurred at a number of points.

Wheat futures opened ¾c lower on October and December, and 1⅜c lower on May, following with a gradual decline. Oats opened ⅜c lower and declined 1c lower. Flax opened 2c lower and weakened further later.

There were practically no offerings on the cash market, and little or no enquiry for any of the grains, barring Nos. 3 and 4 wheat.

Wheat futures closed 1¼c to 1⅝c lower; cash wheat 1½c to 4c lower; oats 1⅜c lower, and flax 3¼c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—There was a fair enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, but owing to the demoralized state of the exchange market exporters were not disposed to do business. The local market for coarse grains is firm, but the demand for all lines was rather quiet. Some round lots of new crop No. 2 Canadian Western oats for September shipment were offered at 48c per bushel, c.i.f., without meeting with buyers. New crop spring wheat flour quiet. Locally flour is unchanged. Millfeed scarce and firm. Butter ½c per pound higher. Cheese quiet. Eggs steady.

The Manufacturers of Parisian Sage are making a very liberal proposition to the readers of this paper.

They know, they are absolutely certain, that they have the only real hair grower, beautifier and dandruff germ destroyer on the market to-day, and knowing this they have requested this paper to state to its readers that they guarantee Parisian Sage to remove every trace of dandruff, to stop falling hair and itching scalp, or money back.

Every one who reads this important announcement should know that Parisian Sage makes hair grow, not only abundantly, but gives it that lustrous appearance that all desire.

Women will find Parisian Sage a most refreshing and ideal hair dressing, free from stickiness or grease. Large bottle 50 cents at druggists. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package of Parisian Sage and this trade mark safeguards you against substitutes. Remember there is no other Hair Tonic nearly as good.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices, or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

Household Chatter

The Making of Pie.

The making of flaky pastry is an art not difficult to acquire. Success lies in the mixing and handling of the dough rather than in the proportions of materials used. Recipes for pastry may differ and produce equally good results. Proper manipulation of the dough is the knack that must be acquired.

A rule to be remembered in pastry making is that only light hands make good pastry. Fine white flour makes the lightest pastry, but this is not necessary except for puff paste. Ordinary household flour can be used.

All flours, with their raising, should be thoroughly sifted and aerated before mixing, butter and lard may be used in equal proportions and pure vegetable butters or fats are excellent. Heavily salted cooking butter should be avoided, as it is likely to have a strong taste. Time and trouble will be saved in the mixing if the fat, when at all hard, is first beaten to a cream.

All pastry should be mixed with very cold water. The board and pin should be floured lightly and the dough rolled out with short, sharp rolls; lift the pin constantly and never go over the edges. Pastry should be handled as little as possible, and the first that is rolled is the best. Bake in a hot oven, so that it may rise quickly; open the oven door only when necessary, and be careful not to bang it when closing.

Half a pound of flour, four ounces of butter or other fats, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift the flour and baking powder well together and add salt to taste. Cream the butter or fat on a plate and divide it into four parts. Rub one-quarter lightly into the flour. When fine pour a little water into the center, use a knife for mixing and make an elastic dough. Flour the board and pin and roll the paste into a long strip. Put on another portion of the fat in little dabs, sprinkle with flour, cut into three strips and lay one on top of the other, pound with the pin and roll out again. Repeat this performance until the fourth portion of butter is used.

The pastry then is ready for use. Roll it out again, cut it in the desired sizes and bake in a hot oven. Flaky pastry rises in layers, air being folded in at each turn.

This method will produce a delicious, light, flaky pastry if the directions be followed carefully.

The Garbage Bucket.

If the housewife, after buying a new garbage bucket, will paint the inside black and then shellac it she will find that it will last twice as long. It will hold none of the odors and will rinse out very easily, not requiring the scrubbing which is taken to keep the ordinary bucket clean and sanitary. Then, if she will fold a newspaper, opening it first to the fullest extent, in wide pleats from margin to margin, and, opening it again, pull it into a circle, she will have a perfect lining for the bucket, which will insure its emptying clean each time it is emptied.

Washing Summer Dresses.

In washing summer dresses of colored linen it is an excellent plan to get a package of dye and put it into boiling water, making just the shade of the dress (test it first). And as quickly as the dress is washed clean and rinse in salted water to set the color; dip it in the dye and let it stand two minutes. Then put it into the starch and hang it on the line in the shade without wringing and iron while it is still damp.

Egg Substitutes.

When eggs are high one hesitates to make white cake, especially if she does not care to use up the yolks for something else. It is not necessary to use egg whites at all. Simply use gelatine instead. One tablespoonful of the dry gelatine equals three eggs. Dissolve it in cold water and add enough boiling water to make a cupful. Beat with an egg beater and add to cake.

How to Treat the Sting.

To alleviate the stings given by summer insects first remove the sting with a needle if it is left in the wound; then press a key over the stung part tightly, thus forcing out the poison. Wash the wound and apply a liniment made of finely scraped chalk and olive oil mixed together to the thickness of cream.

Brass Cleaning.

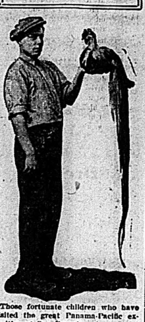
For brasses that have become tarnished an excellent method of cleaning is to use equal parts of vinegar and salt. Smear thoroughly with the mixture, then let it dry on, and when thoroughly dry wash it off with hot, soapy water and polish dry with a soft flannel cloth.

To Clean White Furniture.

To clean the fashionable white painted furniture, which often becomes spotted and dirty in appearance, use clear turpentine on a soft cloth. This will remove all of the dirt without taking off the gloss, as soap and water always are sure to do.

For Young Folks

Fancy Japan Chickens at Panama Exposition.



Those fortunate children who have visited the great Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco do not need to be told of its beauties and wonders; they have seen with their own eyes. Those who contemplate going to the fair have a great pleasure in store, for all beholders unite in declaring it the most gorgeous sight imaginable. Perhaps some who have been there saw the rare exhibits in the exposition's continuous live stock show. Notable among these are the long tailed Japanese chickens, which are bred especially for the emperor of Japan and whose valuation runs to as high as $2,000 for a single bird. These chickens are housed in glass, this precaution being necessary to preserve the fine quality and sheen of their feathers. The picture shows a keeper holding one of these remarkable birds in his hand. As can be seen, the tail feathers reach to the ground.

Boy Scout Baseball.

The scoutmaster takes a question from a list of questions and fires it at the batter. If the batter misses it completely it counts as three strikes, and a correct answer by the catcher puts out the batter. If the batter answers the question correctly another question goes to an outfielder, who makes a putout or allows a safe hit by answering correctly or by missing. If the batter's answer is partly right, he is considered to knock the ball to an infielder, who makes an error or a putout at first, depending on whether he misses or answers the next question. If a runner on a base wants to try to steal, a question is sent to the infielder on the next base, who does or does not put out the runner. If an infielder wants to catch a runner napping, he calls for a question, the missing of which allows each runner to proceed to the next base. Of course his correct answer puts out the napping runners.

To be impartial, it is best to take the questions in regular order—e. g., the seventh, seventeenth, twenty-seventh, etc., throughout the list. The list may easily be made by any scoutmaster, who may find it desirable to write the answer after each question. Here are some simple questions: What is the seventh scout law? Describe the flag used by Washington in January, 1776. Bad bruises are tested how? Give the letter K in some signal code. Give seven precautions against causing fires. Give the two most important things to do for dislocation of a bone.—Scouting.

Nests of Weaver Birds.

In India the baya weaver birds usually suspend their nests from branches of palms or other trees which overhang a stream and weight them with lumps of clay, which prevent them swaying about at the mercy of the wind. The natives say fireflies are fastened into the clay for the purpose of frightening away rats and snakes.

Overheard in the Kitchen.

"I hear you called on the refrigerator yesterday," said the woodbox to the pail. "Were you received pleasantly?"

"No; the refrigerator treated me with great coldness," said the pail.

Concealed Word Square.

Here's where the landslide came last week;
See where it filled the little creek!
The laborers shoveled with their might
And rescued all in sorry plight.
To see them grab as each appears,
And hear them give those hearty cheers!
No session for a candidate
E'er cheering heard at such a rate.
Each man is thankful that he lives,
And full redress employer gives.

Proper Kitchen Sanitation

Many housewives who think that they are particular about their houses would be surprised to have their so called clean kitchens overhauled by an expert in sanitation. Let us start with the washing of the dishes. In most cases we will find a dish mop or a dish rag that has been used for weeks that contains dirt and germs galore. These should be boiled in lye water at least once a week. The nose is one of the greatest aids to sanitation, and all should heed it. Most persons think that a bad smelling dish rag is to be expected. But not so. It should be as sweet smelling as the face towel.

Then there is the garbage can. It should be scalded and set out in the sun every day. This is most important, as the can is the receptacle for all refuse, which is apt to decompose and become a menace to health unless carefully attended to. A great help in keeping the can clean is to line it with newspaper in such a way that nothing touches the can, being held by the paper. To dump the can merely lift the paper out. This will also lengthen the life of the can by keeping it dry.

The refrigerator is another germ catcher, unless kept clean. Baking soda is excellent for cleaning the interior of the refrigerator, as it both cleanses and sweetens. For the top, where the ice is kept, a strong solution of lye water, boiling hot, is the best to use. Empty the whole refrigerator, throw the lye water against the walls of the upper part. It will run down through the waste pipe, carrying all the slime with it. Follow this bath with one of plain hot water, then wash the lower part with hot soapsuds and soda. This should be done once a week.

The laundry tubs should be kept corked when not in use to prevent the rise of obnoxious gases. They should be kept as clean as the sink, and once a week a disinfectant should be poured down all soil pipes.

Many cooks will taste the food to see that it is properly seasoned and will return the spoon to the food. This is a very insanitary thing to do. If it is necessary to taste the food the spoon should be washed before being put back into the food.

The towels used to wipe the dishes should never be used more than one day without being scalded and dried in the sun. Many housekeepers use dish towels until they are positively dirty, not realizing the danger that attends such an action.

The kitchen floor should be mopped every day. A very fine housekeeper, noted for her thought of sanitary conditions, never swept her kitchen. Every morning after her kitchen work was done she mopped the floor with hot soapsuds. Then when it was still damp she took up with a dustpan and brush any particles that had remained after the mopping. In this way she avoided raising any dust to settle on her cooking implements.

Last, but by no means least, the range should be considered. Too often this is not clean enough to be sanitary. Grease collects easily, and eternal vigilance is the price of sanitation here. If the range is wiped off after every washing of dishes there need be no "big job" of cleaning the range, which so many housekeepers hate. The trouble is they let it go from day to day until it becomes a real task to clean it. The solution of the whole thing is to do a little each day, and then the work will not pile up, and in consequence the health of the whole family will be better.

Value of White Oilcloth.

White oilcloth can work a transformation in the darkest, dingiest kitchen and add to the charm of the brightest. A yard will save you from facing the indifferent or worn out paint at the base of the dish closet shelving, and besides, make cleaning easy and gratifying. The inside window ledge of the kitchen and the bathroom treated in this way will be conducive to beauty and cleanliness.

A strip along the wall beside the sink will catch spattered drops of dish water or drainings and may be readily cleaned with a lightly soaped cloth rubbed over the surface.

A stretch of oilcloth above the japanning about the range will catch any spattering grease, the vapor of steam or the blackest of escaping smoke, which can then be washed off, though here one of the coarse cleansers may be necessary to restore the pristine whiteness.

A yard of white oilcloth will cover the top of a kitchen table, with some to spare. A length of a few inches more of the scalloped kind will render the tops of the washtubs sightly and convertible to table uses. The top of the refrigerator covered in this way will be taken as a pledge of the sweet, clean interior below.

Porch Rugs.

Rag rugs for your porch can be bought anywhere at from $1.50 to $10, depending on the size and style. These rag rugs are much the best for porch use, as they are washable.

Keep plenty of flowers on the porch table, also all the new magazines, arranging them neatly on the top. If afternoon tea is to be served there daily, the tea tray can be kept on the table, too. These alterations will cost you very little and will transform your porch.

more or less pass your store or office door every day. One per cent. of these people stop and buy; 99 per cent. do not stop—do not buy. Why?

ADVERTISE—Tell the people where you are and what you have to sell. Intelligencer Advertisements influence people to stop and buy.

In this way you can stop the crowds passing your store door and induce them to investigate and buy. If you stop two per cent. of the 500 people who pass your store—you thus increase the volume of your business to that extent.

A LONG LIFE

Sir Walter Scott, while travelling in Ireland was one day accosted by a begger. He felt in his pocket for a sixpence, but finding that he had nothing smaller than a shilling with him, gave it to the woman with the words:

"You must give me the change next time we meet."

"I will, sorr," replied the beggar; "and may yer honor live till ye get it."

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS

By

Rosa Nanchette Carey

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Dark Hour.

"I should go one evening, if I were you; it is easy to see that Mrs. Cheyne has taken a fancy to you," said Nan, who was much interested by the recital; but to this Phillis replied, with a very decided shake of the head,—

"I shall do nothing of the kind; I was not made to be a fine lady's protege. If she patronized me, I should grow savage and show my teeth; and as I have no desire to break the peace, we had better remain strangers. Dear Magdalene certainly has a temper!" finished Phillis, with a wicked little sneer.

Nan tried to combat this resolution, and used a great many arguments; she was anxious that Phillis should avail herself and perhaps all of them into society with their equals. Nan's good sense told her that though at present the novelty and excitement of their position prevented them from realizing the full extent of their isolation, in time it must weigh on them very heavily, and especially on Phillis, who was bright and clever and liked society; but all her words were powerless against Phillis' stubbornness; to the White House she could not and would not go.

But one evening she changed her mind very sudenly, when a note from Miss Mewlstone reached her. A gardener's boy brought it; "it was very particular, and was to be delivered immediate to the young lady," he observed, holding the missive between a very grimy finger and thumb.

'My Dear Young Lady:—Pride is all very well, but charity is often best in the long run, and a little kindness to a suffering human being is never out of place in a young creature like you.

"Poor Magdalene has been very sadly for days, and I have got into my stupid old head—that is always fancying things—that she has been watching for folks who have been too proud to come, though she would die sooner than tell me so; but that is her way, poor dear!

"It is ill- to wake at nights with nothing but sad thoughts for company, and it is ill wearing out the long days with only a silly old body to cheer one up; and when there is nothing fresh to say, and nothing to expect, and not a footstep or a voice to break the silence, then it seems to me that a young voice—that is, a kind voice—would be welcome. Take this hint, my dear, and keep my counsel, for I am only a silly old woman, as she often says.

"Yours,
"Bathssheba Mewlstone."

"Oh, I must go now!" observed Phillis, in an embarrassed voice, as she laid this singular note before Nan.

"Yes, dear; and you had better put on your hat at once, and Dulce and I will walk with you as far as the gate. It is sad for you to miss the scramble on the shore; but, when other people really want us, I feel as though it were a direct call," finished Nan, solemnly.

"I am afraid there is a storm coming up," replied Phillis, who had been oppressed all day by the heavy thundery atmosphere; she had looked so heated and weary that Nan had proposed a walk by the shore. Work was pouring upon them from all sides; the townspeople, envious of Mrs. Trimmings' stylish new dress, were besieging the Friary with orders, and the young dressmakers would have been literally overwhelmed with their labors, only that Nan, with admirable foresight, insisted on taking in no more work than they felt themselves able to complete.

"No," she would say to some disappointed customer, "our hands are full just now, and we cannot undertake any more orders at present; we will not promise more than we can perform. Come to me again in a fortnight's time, and we will willingly make your dress, but now it is impossible." And in most cases the dress was brought punctually at the time appointed.

Phillis used to grumble a little at this.

"You ought not to refuse orders, Nan," she said, rather fretfully, once. "Any other dressmaker would sit up half the night rather than disappoint a customer."

"My dear," Nan returned, in her elder-sisterly voice, which had always a great effect on Phillis, "I wonder what use Dulce and you would be if you sat up sewing half the night, and drinking strong tea to keep yourselves awake? No, there shall be no burning the candles at both ends in this fashion; please God we will keep our health, and our customers; and no one in their senses could call us idle. Why, we are quite the fashion! Mrs. Squails told me yesterday that every one in Hadleigh was wild to have a gown made by the 'lady dressmakers.' "

"Oh, I dare say!" replied Phillis, crossly, for the poor thing was so hot and tired that she could have cried from pure weariness and vexation of spirit; "but we shall not be the fashion long when the novelty wears off; people will call us independent, and get tired of us ;and no wonder, if they are to wait for their dresses in this way."

Nan's only answer was to look at Phillis' pale face in a pitying way; and then she took her hand, and led her to the corner, where her mother's Bible always lay, and then with ready fingers turned to the well known-passage, "Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor unto the evening.."

"Well, Nan, what then?"

"Evening is for rest—for refreshment of mind and body; I will not have it turned into a time of toil. I know you, Philis! you would work till your poor fingers got thin, and your spirits were all flattened out, and every nerve was jarring and set on edge; and you would call that duty! No, darling—never! Dulce shall keep her roses, and we will have battledore and shuttlecock every evening; but, if I have to keep the key of the workroom in my pocket, you and Dulce shall never enter it after tea." And Nan's good sense as usual carried the day.

" 'All ye who enter here, leave hope behind,' " she quoted, softly, as she waved her hand to Nan.

"His mistress was in her room," he believed, "and was far too unwell to see visitors. He would tell Miss Mewlstone, if the young lady liked to wait; but he was sure it was no use," —all very civilly said. And as Phillis persisted in her intention of seeing Mrs. Cheyne, if possible, he ushered her into the library, a gloomy looking room, with closed blinds, one of which he drew up, and then went in search of Miss Mewlstone.

Phillis did not find her surroundings particularly cheerful. The air was darkened by the approaching storm. A sullen cloud hung over the sky. The library windows opened upon the shrubberies. Here the trees were planted so thickly that their shade obscured much of the light. The room was so dark that she could only dimly discern the handsome bindings of the books in the carved book-cases. The whole of the furniture seemed sombre and massive. The chair that the footman had placed for her was covered with violet velvet, and was in harmony with the rest of the furniture.

Dreary as the room looked, it was nothing to the shrubbery walk. A narrow winding path seemed to vanish into utter darkness. In some places the trees met overhead, so closely had they grown.

"If I were the mistress of the White House," Phillis said to herself, "I would cut every one of those trees down. They must make this part of the house quite unhealthy. It really looks like a 'ghost walk' that one reads about." But scarcely had these thoughts passed through her mind when she uttered a faint cry of alarm. The dark room, the impending storm, and her own overwrought feelings were making her nervous; but actually, through the gloom, she could see a figure in white approaching.

In another moment she would have sought refuge in the hall, but contempt at her own cowardice kept her rooted to the spot.

"She was an utter goose to be startled! It was—yes, of course it was Mrs. Cheyne. She could see her more plainly now. She would step through the window and meet her."

Phillis' feelings of uneasiness had not quite vanished. The obscurity was confusing, and invested everything with an unnatural effect. Even Mrs. Cheyne's figure, coming out from the dark background, seemed strange and unfamiliar. Phillis had always before seen her in black; but now she wore a white gown, fashioned loosely, like a wrapper, and her hair, which at other times had been most carefully aranged, was now strained tightly and unbecomingly from her face, which looked pallid and drawn. She started violently when she saw Phillis coming towards her, and seemed inclined to draw back and retrace her steps. It evidently cost her a strong efort to recover herself. She seemed to conquer her reluctance with difficulty.

Her Gift

By F. A. MITCHEL

A girl was sitting on the porch of her home thinking. Five years before on that very day of the month she had refused Henry MacMillan. She was then eighteen years old, and the indirect method in love affairs appealed to her. If a man proposed to her and she refused him she expected him to return the next day and the next and so on till she accepted him. MacMillan had no conception of this sort of lovemaking. He never said anything he didn't mean and couldn't understand any one else doing so. But his experience with women was not extensive.

On this summer afternoon Luella Travers was thinking of Henry MacMillan. She had not intended to refuse him more than once. When he came back the second time—which she naturally expected he would do—she intended to accept him and at the same time show him how long she had loved him by giving him a smoking cap, on which she had embroidered a wreath. He had no use for a smoking cap and no ambition to wear a wreath about his head, but Luella couldn't think of anything else to do for him.

Henry was as stupid about some things as he was wise about others. If a dozen persons had witnessed the refusal he received every one of them would have known that Luella was refusing him with her tongue, while she was accepting him in her heart. Henry heard her words, but saw not their denial. He had received a business offer in a distant city and wished to learn if Luella would marry him. If so he would consult with her as to its acceptance; if not he would accept it without consulting her and go where he would not be near her and consequently the better able to recover from his desire for her.

Luella was a bit surprised that Henry should have taken her reply so seriously, should have bowed, though reluctantly, to what he considered the inevitable. He left her without a murmur, and she was somewhat fearful that he might not give her an opportunity to recall her refusal. She had half a mind to call him back. But half a mind is not a whole mind, and she let him go, expecting the next time she met him to draw him to another proposal by those winning ways she understood how to apply.

She did not see Henry for several days, then she was greatly shocked to hear that he had gone to another city to engage in business and make it his home. Why she did not write him to tell him that her refusal of him was only temporary does not appear. Perhaps it was for the same reason that the myriads of other temporary refusals are not recalled. A woman must wait for a first proposal, and it is equally obligatory for him to wait for a second.

And now Luella on the anniversary of her refusal—the date was as well fixed in her mind as her birthday—was sitting on the porch wondering—as she had wondered constantly since her lover's departure—what could have made him so stupid. And yet had he seen through her game what would have been the pleasure in her playing it? It had not occurred to her that she had better have refrained from the fun and acted on the principle that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Who is that tall figure coming up the road? There is something familiar in the walk, something in the outline, something intangible, indescribable about the whole. Luella's heart stood still. Yes, it is Henry. He is heavier than he was, his step is a trifle less quick than it used to be, but it is Henry, the man she refused five years ago, to her regret ever since.

Was he coming to renew his proposal?

Luella had had fits of anger against her lover for being so stupid. Now, instead of a hope springing in her heart that he was coming to tell her that he could not live without her, with a consequent throwing herself into his arms, she was seized with a desire to punish him. For what? For having taken her refusal seriously.

Henry came on. Luella, pretending she did not see him, looked up at the sky. He stopped before the house, then mounted the steps. Luella forced a smile. He looked as gloomy as the day he had left her.

"Why, Mr. MacMillan!" she exclaimed. "What a long time since I have seen you!"

"I've not been in this town since I saw you last," he said.

"Came back to see your mother, I suppose?"

"Yes; to see my mother, but to see you, too. I've passed an unsatisfied five years since I left here. I've come back to try to persuade you to recall what you said to me just before I left you."

There was something so miserable in his appearance and tone that her desire to punish him for his stupidity broke away. Asking him to "wait a bit," she went into the house and brought out the smoking cap she had kept so long.

"I had intended to recall what I said the next day, but you didn't give me an opportunity. I had been making this gift for you for months and expected to give it with my consent."

She spoke through tears.

Frank Hanged By Mob Which Storms Jail

Further Details of Lynching of Murderer in Georgia

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 17.—Leon M. Frank, serving a life term for the murder of Mary Phagan, the Atlanta factory girl, was taken from the prison farm at Milledgeville last night and was lynched two miles east of here to-day by the armed party which took him. He was hanged to a tree.

Frank was brought 100 miles from the prison farm to a point almost within sight of the former home of Mary Phagan. No shots were fired.

Frank's body, barefooted and clad only in prison trousers and shirt, was found at 8.30 o'clock this morning. It is believed he was lynched about daylight.

Several automobiles, well loaded, left here in the direction of Milledgeville last night. After the return of some of the machines to-day officers started out on the road which they believed the automobiles had travelled. They had gone only two miles when they saw the body of Frank not more than 160 yards from the roadside.

A few weeks ago an attempt was made by J. William Green, another life-term convict, to kill Frank by cutting his throat. Frank's condition was serious for some days, but it was announced recently that he practically had recovered.

Frank's body was cut down at 10.15 o'clock, but not until one of the crowd had advocated mutilation of the body. Newton Morris, former superior court judge here, pleaded with the throng to allow an inquest to take its proper course. A vote was suggested and taken. It was overwhelmingly in favor of allowing the coroner to take charge of the body. It was then cut down and the two-mile trip to Marietta started. An inquest was set for today.

Mob Attack Prison.

MILLEDGEILLE, Ga., Aug. 17.—A well organized party of armed men who came in five autombiles attacked the Georgia state penitentiary here last night took Frank from a dormitory and escaped with him.

For hours after the attack no trace of the automobiles bearing the party could be found but at about daylight newspapermen picked up the trail at a point on Little River, near Eatonton, Ga. J. K. Jackson, a white farmer, living near a bridge over Little River, said that shortly after midnight he heard several automobiles stop there. Soon afterward he said he heard loud talking and then many shots. He heard the automobiles leave in the direction of Eatonton after the firing. A huried search of the immediate vicinity failed to reveal anything that would indicate that Frank had met summary vengeance there.

Men Work Methodically.

The armed men arrived in the vicinity of the state prison farm practically unnoticed and proceeded methodically to its business. All means of wire communication from the institution to Milledgeville, three miles away, were destroyed and all wires, except one telephone line from Milledgeville, also were cut.

Five men went to the house of Warden J. T. Smith, awakened him and made him prisoner. At the same time a small squad of men went to the home of J. M. Burke, superintendent of the farm. Burke was forced to go with them to the gate nearest the dormitory, where it was believed Frank was kept. The two guards on duty there were ordered, while guns were levelled on them, to open the gates.

The party then rushed in, quickly got Frank, and hurried him to one of the waiting automobiles. He was forced down into the car, while a member of the party is said to have flourished a rope in front of him.

Without delay those who had been guarding Warden Smith left him and joined the party at the gate. The automobiles then started off swiftly in a northerly direction.

All Assassins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Former Governor Slaton of Georgia, who as chief executive of that state commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of Leon M. Frank, and who is here visiting the Panama-Pacific Exposition, was informed this morning that Frank had been lynched.

"The act was a consummate outrage," said Mr. Slaton, "and every man engaged in the lynching should be hanged, for he is an assassin. Such an act is contrary to the civilization of Georgia and one which every good citizen will condemn.

"I could use no language too condemnatory. I believe the governor of Georgia will use all the power of the state to punish the malefactors who disgraced the civilization of Georgia."

Can't See Parents.

NEW YORK, Aug 17.—When Rudolph Frank and his wife, parents of Leo. M. Frank, learned definitely today that their son had been hanged near Marietta, Ga., they drew the shades at all windows of their home in Brooklyn and refused to answer the door bell or telephone. Neighbors said the Frank family had begun an eight-day period of mourning, which was customary under the Jewish religion.

FAMOUS CHURCH BELLS OF RIGA HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO MOSCOW

PETROGRAD, Aug. 17.—Grand Duke Nicholas has accomplished his aim of holding the railways into the interior necessary for the orderly retirement of his troops before the advancing German hosts.

As the Russians retire they destroy the lines and wreck the roadbeds. Government railway officials estimated today that more than 5,000 miles of the lines built in Poland at enormouse cost had been wrecked. As the railway lines constitute the only route of advance in many parts of Poland, the Germans will be materially delayed if they have taken the second line of Russian defences. With the cities practically denuded of the civil inhabitants who were instructed to leave before the German onrush became a menace to the Russian positions in Poland, and the factories removed to the interior, the Kaiser's troops will be disappointed in their hopes of taking property of great value.

It was announced today that the evacuation of Bielstock was progressing favorably. The banks and other important institutions have been taken into the interior. The evacuation of Riga continues. The famous church bells of that city have been taken to Moscow.

Girls With Beautiful Faces or Graceful Figures

Canadian girls have a world-wide reputation for beauty, but, at the same time, there are girls in our cities who possess neither beauty of face nor form, because in these instances they suffer from nervousness, the result of disorders of the womanly organism. At regular intervals they suffer so much that their strength leaves them; they are so prostrated that it takes days for them to recover their strength Of course, such periodic distress has its bad effect on the nervous system. The withered and drawn faces, the dark circles and crow's feet about the eyes, the straight figure without those curves which lend so much to feminine beauty are the unmistakable signs of womanly disorders.

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, when women pass through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe disturbances.

At these critical times women are best fortified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, an old remedy of proved worth that keeps the entire system in excellent condition.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive confidential advice from a staff of specialists that's free.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

Canadian Lieut.-Colonel Wounded In Three Places

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Lieut.-Col. Odlum, whose name appeared some time ago in the casualty list, arrived at a London hospital suffering from the effects of a couple of bullet hits in the right arm and another in his right side. When seen yesterday he seemed to be in the best of spirits, chatting freely with a number of callers who had just discovered his whereabouts.

Lieut.-Col. Odlum, it will be remembered, succeeded the late Col. McHarg in the command of the 7th Battalion, British Columbia Regiment, and with that battalion went through the thick fighting at Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy. Out of each of those engagements he came without a scratch.

"But we were not in any particular engagements," the Lieut.-Col. said, "when I was wounded one night this month. For the past six weeks the regiment had been confined to the trenches which are less than fifty yards distance from those of our antagonists. Trench warfare even in this fine weather is anything but rosy and during the day our exchanges were comparatively few but regularly with approaching nightfall things would begin to hum and would continue lively until the following morning.

"Some time ago Lieut.-Col. Odlum went on, "we made it a rule amongst ourselves that two-thirds of whatever space lay between the trenches should be regarded as our own territory, and in spite of persistent and heroic efforts of the enemy to reach and storm our line, we have succeeded so far in holding them tight. The night I received my three wounds I was engaged on certain reconnaissance work when all at once one of the ever-vigilant snipers caught me twice in the arm, piercing it through each time. I fell to the ground, only to receive a third shot in the side. If all goes well I hope to be fit again in three months' time."

GALVESTON SAVED BY ITS SEA WALLS

GALVESTON, Aug. 17.—A severe tropical storm struck Galveston today and to the strength of the sea wall the city owes its safety. The sea was high but tonight the wall is unbroken and no apprehension is felt by residents of the city. At midnight the storm is still raging with the barometer registering 29. The wind throughout the afternoon and tonight blew at a velocity of 60 to 74 an hour, with occasional gusts which registered 90 miles an hour. The city is in darkness owing to the backwater from the bay, which in some places is three feet deep, and which has put the power plants out of commission. No telegraph line is working and the local telephone may fail at any moment. The only means of communication is a telephone line running to Houston.

A Caustic Lawyer.

"Mr. Carter, you are wasting the time of the court."

"Time of the court!" retorted the truculent veteran, glaring fiercely at the bench. "Your lordship means—your lordship's dinner!"

The same redoubtable advocate was on another occasion defending a man charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

"False pretenses!" said he, with fine scorn. "Why, we all make them every day, barristers and solicitors and judges—the whole lot of us! Talk about the purity of the judicial ermine!" Here he pointed derisively to the learned judge, who sat cowering on the bench. "Why, it's only rabbit skin!"

Shouts of laughter greeted this irreverent statement, which investigation would probably show to be literally true.—London Tit-Bits.

Spots on the Sun.

Strictly speaking, spots on the sun are not spots, because they are shifting in form and of changing duration in particular localities. Scientists do not account for them definitely, but they are supposed to be floating masses of gaseous matter, enough lighter than the main body of the sun to form obscuring shadows on its surface. Of whatever material they are composed they belong to the sun. They are never entirely stationary or quiescent, but form and reform continually. "The length of their life," says a scientist, "is difficult to assign, because there is some tendency for a new group to arise where an old one has disappeared, but one is recorded which appeared on the same place for eighteen months. The average is perhaps two months. They play some part in the magnetic action of the sun, but it is not known what."—Philadelphia Press.

A Hint to Golfers.

If there is one part of the game more than another that is likely to try the golfer's patience to the utmost it is putting. When we consider that half of the game of golf is on the putting green is not this a good reason why we should be proficient at it? But how are we to overcome this weakness on the greens?

The only real sound theory that is known for putting is to swing your putter on a dead straight line through the ball toward the hole. You can practice this method by putting the end of the putter head close up to a wall and practice swinging your putter back and forth. A pendulum movement is best, keeping the end of the putter close to the wall. Try it and see if it does not help your holing out.—Outing.

Yonkers.

Patroon Van der Donck, in the years after 1642, lived such a serene and robust life on his Hudson river estate that the Dutch villagers called his manor farm "De Jonkheer's landt"—the gentleman's land, later compressed by the frugal English into Yonkers.

A Mighty Splash.

When a 12-inch shell strikes the water it throws up a "splash" higher than a battleship's mast. This "splash" weighs about 2,000 tons, enough to drown a small ship.

Professional Jealousy.

"How so?"

Bank Amalgamation Has Crystalized

Royal and Hamilton Representatives See Minister of Finance

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 18.—The proposal to bring about an amalgamation of the Royal and Hamilton Banks was formerly laid before Hon. W. T. White Minister of Finance today at noon by Vice-President Pease of the Royal Bank, and Robert Hobson of Hamilton one of the leading directors of the Bank of Hamilton. Messrs. Pease and Hobson had a conference with the Minister, and it was stated on its conclusion that a further conference would be held this afternoon. It is understood that no formal application has been presented to the Minister, but that a tentative proposal was discussed with the Minister.

COL. LEE, M.P.'S CONVICTION

Only Compulsory National Service Can Give Victory

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Colonel Arthur Lee, member of Parliament for the Fareham Division of Hampshire, who is home on a short leave, told his constituents at a meeting this afternoon that nothing less than compulsory service would solve the difficulties which Great Britain is facing. This conviction, he said, had been burned in by his experiences at the front and was shared by nearly all who had been in contact with the realities of war.

"We need compulsory national service," he continued, "because nothing else can solve our difficulties with regard to men, money, munitions and exports. We need it to hearten our soldiers serving abroad. The present freedom to shirk and stay home while others give their lives to defend; and to turn a deaf ear to the urgent call of one's country is not what we understand by British freedom."

Colonel Lee said he never wavered in the certainty that Great Britain could win against Germany, "but only if we exert ourselves to the uttermost and throw into the sea vhyreelt zd. f-& and throw into the scale everything we've got.

"If we don't do that," he added, "we don't deserve to win and the best we can possibly hope for is a patched-up degrading peace, which will be merely the prelude to another war, wherein the whole power and pent-up hatred of Germany would be turned upon us alone."

BRITAIN TO TAKE OVER CANADA'S WHEAT CROP?

Imperial Government Asks Information as to Available Surplus

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—A request has been received from the imperial government for information as to the estimated available supply of grain for export from the coming harvest, and the tonnage of vessels, which will be required to move the grain from Canada to Great Britain.

In some quarters it has been stated that Sir Robert Borden is endeavoring to arrange with the British Government for the purchase by the imperial authorities of the complete export crop of the Dominion's wheat.

This year's wheat supply for export is now estimated at 175,000,000 bushels, as compared with 94,000,000 bushels last year.

NO CANADIANS ABOARD THE ROYAL EDWARD

Official Notification Was Received at Ottawa Today That There Were no Canadians on Board Royal Edward

(Canadian Press Special)

MONTREAL, Aug. 12.—In answer to a cable enquiring if any Canadians were aboard the Royal Edward, the British transport, sunk in the Aegean Sea Saturday, George Hadrill, Secretary of the Board of Trade received an answer from General Carson, in charge of the Canadian Records' Office in London, reading, "Cable received. No Canadians on board the Royal Edward."

Mr. Walter Alford of Belleville this morning received a cablegram from his son Newton, who is in England, in reference to Harry Alford, who left England enroute to the Dardanelles. Harry sailed on the steamer Astoria. It was known that Harry Alford was enroute to the Dardanelles and it was thought that he might have been on the Royal Edward, but fortunately was not the case.

French Repulse Enemy's Attacks and Make Gain Between Bethune and Arras

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 19.—(Afternoon official statement). There was much activity last night on the Artois front An attack by our forces made us masters of the junction on the high roads between Bethune and Arras and between Ablain and Angres, where the German position constituted a salient into our advance line. Several counter attacks on the part of the enemy were repulsed.

To the north of Carleul we were successful in repulsing certain attacks made with hand grenades and bombs. These attacks were preceded by a bombardment at close range, supported by infantry fire.

In the region of Berles and Adinfer, in the department of Pas-de-Calais, violent infantry firing was continued yesterday. There was also cannonading between the Oise and the Aisne in the section of Bailly, as well as on the plateaux of Quennivieres and Nouvron.

In the Argonne our artillery put an end to the activities of enemy bomb throwers and batteries in the vicinity of Fontaine aux Charmes, as well as in the direction of Marie Therese.

In the Vosges there was a violent and continued engagement on the summit of Mount Linge. We took possession of another German trench on the crest of the Schratzmannele and made several prisoners.

Italians Win Battle of Carso

The Enemy Attempted to Break Through Line but Were Put to Headlong Flight

ROME, Aug. 18.—(Special.)—The Italian troops fighting on the Carso front achieved a brilliant success today. While they were continuing their usual methodical advance, to quote the language of the official report the Austrians attempted a violent attack against the central part of the Italian front, concentrating on it the fire of numerous batteries and then launching an infantry attack. Prompt intervention by Italian artillery silenced the enemy's guns and the invading infantry dashed forward, putting the Austrians to headlong flight and enabling the attackers to gain fresh ground and to occupy an important position.

Further advances were made through the passes of the Alps and a brilliant bayonet charge captured a strong line of Austrian entrenchments in the Tolmino region.

Mountain troops, in squads joined by ropes, crossed high mountain passes and climbed and occupied the Turckett Spits and Hinter Madatasch Spitz each about 10,500 feet high. In the Tolmino section infantry attacks resulted in the capture of a line of strong entrenchments on the Santa Maria and Santa Lucia heights.

ROME, Aug. 18.—Special—An Austrian fleet of 21 vessels, aided by an aeroplane, has bombarded the Island of Pelagosa, in the Adriatic, midway between the promontory of Gargano and Dalmatia. The enemy were forced to retire after killing one Italian officer and three men and wounding three others, it was officially announced to-day.

The text of the announcement says:

" 'Twenty-one Austrian vessels and one aeroplane attacked the little Island of Pelagosa yesterday morning. The garrison endured a violent bombardment bravely, and the enemy retired without trying to disembark. We lost one officer and three men killed and three wounded. We do not know the enemy's losses.

Present statements now state that it is feared that a large number of passengers have been lost.. Telegrams to the Exchange Telegraph Company and Central News says the passengers were rescued. Germans Running Short of Funds

Government Making Special Efforts to Secure All Gold

ZURICH, Aug. 18.—The German ministers of the interior and finance have just sent circulars to all communal, scholastic and religious authorities, asking them to use every effort to obtain gold, which, the circular declares, is to arm against Germany's enemies. The Frankfurter Zeitung states the government will make a financial statement to the budget commission in secret session, and take most stringent measures to prevent the proceedings of the commission being divulged.

The requisition by the government of all cotton in the country, and the order that textile factories shall work exclusively for the army, has created consternation in the dressmaking and clothing trades. To many firms it means ruin.

RUSH TO RECRUIT AFTER ZEPP. RAIDS

LONDON, Aug. 19—(Special)—The Chronicle today says: "For reasons which will be perfectly well understood by everybody there was a spurt in the recruiting yesterday. It made itself felt in many quarters, and were it not for the loss of lives of helpless women and children we might welcome heartily the efforts of Count Zeppelin to swell the ranks of the British army. The scenes on the Horse Guards' Parade and at the central recruiting office in Scotland Yard, to say nothing about those in the more remote districts, might, if they were picked up by the German wireless, instruct the Kaiser in the knowledge that the murder of women and children is exactly not the way to break the spirit of the British people. The central recruiting office was crammed with men who had responded to the call.

"That voluntary recruiting is not played out was evident, indeed it was hinted that the recruiting offices were becoming slightly more particular about the standard of men they were enrolling, and it was said that as many men were being obtained as can be dealt with, so far as arms and clothing are concerned."

115 Years Old Brooklyn Woman

ALBANY, Aug. 18.—The state census enumeration has revealed a woman who lays claim to being 115 years of age. She is Mrs. Susan Gillis, colored, of 571 Classon avenue, Brooklyn. Moreover, she has a daughter 84 years of age, not to mention a great grandson of 18 years, and a great granddaughter of 17. Mrs. Gillis has the distinction of being the oldest person in the Empire state, for the first examination of all the field sheets used in the enumeration taken in June under the direction of Secretary of State Hugo has been completed.

While Mrs. Gillis carries off the honors in the longevity class, the census sheets show a Mrs. Nancy Sweet of Oswego, who is 102 years old. Miss Maria Hare of Johnstown observed her 101st birthday anniversary on December 10 last.

Up in Watertown there is a woman 98 years of age who strenuously objected to being enumerated as being "without occupation." "I have always done my own housework," said the woman, "and while I may not be as spry is in years past and now require a little help, I don't want to be listed as one without anything at which to busy their hands." Opposite the woman's name the census sheet gives the word "housework."

Gen. Carson Injured

Canadian Soldier Struck by Stone Thrown by Small Boy

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Major-General John Carson, of Montreal, who is in England, attached to the Canadian Record Office as the representative of the Minister of Militia, had a narrow escape today from serious injury to his eyes. While motoring in London he was struck in the face by a stone thrown by a small boy. The blow inflicted a cut within half an inch of the general's left eye. As the general wears glasses he would probably have suffered the loss of his sight had the stone landed half an inch nearer his eye.

Lieut.-Col. Rernle, of the Third Battalion (Queen's Own, Toronto), has arrived in England on a short leave of absence.

Britain's New 17-Inch Gun Will be Surprise

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Recent arrivals from England are able to afford some explanation of the delayed British advance, which, as much in England, as throughout the rest of the world, has caused considerable bewilderment.

Their explanation is that Lord Kitchener has been waiting to launch "his great surprise," and this surprise lies in the completion of new guns and a new type of shell, which it is believed will revolutionize artillery operations and make the path of the allies to Berlin more possible than hitherto.

Soon after the beginning of the war, when it became patent that high explosives were to be the dominating factor in the struggle for victory, the combined efforts of the British chemists and ordnance experts invented a shell unquestionably more powerful than any previously used.

SUPERSEDES ALL TYPES.

In destructive power it was without doubt superior to any previously known. A variation in explosive composition rendered it likely to supersede all types in use.

The government ordered experiments to be made with big guns then being manufactured at Woolwich arsenal These took place, with the result that every gun so used was either almost blown to pieces or rendered unfit for service for a considerable period. The only way out was to find guns suitable for the task.

As far back as last November government experts were at work on this problem. They experimented with various alloys of steel, trying to find one which would stand the strain of such a shell. Finally they succeeded. They produced a 17 inch gun that would suit this purpose. Various experiments have been made and are believed to have been entirely successful. It is stated that these shells will be carried 25 miles and will work havoc on a scale entirely unprecedented.

THE EXPLANATION.

Thus is answered the question why no advance was made when Warsaw was about to fall and the main bulk of the German troops were concentrated on that front. It also explains why after the movement of Kitchener's army to France early in July the troops were not used. Nothing was to be done until these guns, which the great armament factories of Britain have been working on for six months, had been delivered in sufficient quantities at the front.

THE FORD ADVERTISING

Interesting Facts as to How Newspapers Are Preferred and Why

Speaking before the St. Louis Advertising Club recently, C. A. Brownell, who has been advertising manager of the Ford Motor Company for nine years, said:

"Our advertising department, in buying advertising is absolutely devoid of sentiment as in any other merchadise. We figure that it is as much a part of the cost of producing an automobile as is the steering wheel or the carburetor, and we buy our advertising in as cold-blooded a way as we do the steering wheel. For our purpose we almost exclusively use the newspapers, because we find that through them we reach the people along the lines of the least resistance.

"One of our reasons for selecting the newspapers is that we have learned to follow the local advertisers' lead I would rather, 10 to 1, insert a moderate-sized copy in the Post-Dispatch (a St. Louis daily) with its 400,000 readers than in any of the national magazines, because I know that there it will come face to face with the man who is going to buy a car, alongside the intimate reading matter that is part of his daily reading. It is because of this possibility of getting close personal touch with them that we use newspapers."

ARE BUSY CLIPPING BEARDS OF RUSSIANS

(New York Times)

A dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung from Solingen tells of the unexpected recovery in the business of cutlery works in that place, whose normal business had been severely injured by the cutting off of export trade. "For some articles, however," the dispatch continues, "there is still a great demand; and these, aside from surgical instruments, are for the most part special scissors for which in great measure von Hindenburg furnishes a market.

"Four or five days after every big capture which our troops make in the East, there come to Solingen, to the central office which attends to the needs of the army, a demand for the immediate delivery of a great number of hair clippers. As soon as the prisoners leave the front and are shipped into the interior of the country, there begins a great shearing of the Russians."

The purpose of this, of course, is the Entlausing (getting rid of vermin) which is necessary to remove the danger of infection. So great was the demand for these scissors and clippers after the great victories in May and June that they had to be divided up among various factories.

"The demand," says the dispatch, "is for a machine which can be produced cheaply in great quantities, and which in view of the work it has to do can be equipped with new blades."

SEVERELY INJURED BY COAL OIL EXPLOSION

Residence at Madoc Destroyed by Fire—Explosion Cause of Fire

At the village of Madoc on Tuesday morning a fire occurred which resulted in the destruction of a double house and the severely burning of Mr. D. E. K. Stewart, solicitor, a well known and much esteemed resident of the municipality. It appears that Mr. Stewart was engaged in lighting a coal oil stove, when it exploded with the result that the premises were enveloped in flames and Mr. Stewart was severely burned, but fortunately not fatally. Not only were that portion of the double house occupied by Mr. Stewart destroyed but also the adjoining premises occupied by Mr. A. Coe. The building was destroyed and the greater portions of the contents were burned.

Whilst the injuries to Mr. Stewart are of a painful nature they will not of necessity prove alarming. The loss to building and contents is partially covered by insurance.

Grow Corns If You Will

But don't keep them

One can't well avoid corns in these days of dainty shoes. But it's folly to keep them, pare them and doctor them.

A chemist has invented a way to end corns quickly. It is known as Blue-jay. Attach it and the corn pain stops at once. Then a bit of wax—called B & B wax—loosens the corn very gently. In two days the whole corn disappears without any pain or soreness.

It seems magical. After a Blue-jay plaster is applied, the shoe can't hurt the corn. After 48 hours there is no corn to hurt.

Folks have proved this on some 70 million corns. They are removing in this way a million corns a month.

That's why corns are not so common as they used to be. Blue-jay plasters came—folks found them out—and half the corns that grow today are quickly ended by them.

St Michael's Church Annual Picnic

Held at Belleville—An Excellent Programme of Sports Carried Out

Under the most favorable auspices the 7th annual picnic in aid of St. Michael's church of this city, was held yesterday in what is known as Holton's grove, in Sidney Township, just west of the city limits. At an early hour in the morning many were conveyed to the grounds by vehicles of all descriptions and not a few walked. By noon there was a fair attendance and after the noon hour hundreds were conveyed to the beautiful grove. It proved to be one of the most pleasant picnics held under the auspices of the church. During the afternoon hundreds were upon the grounds and nothing was left undone by the committee to make every thing most pleasant. At noon hour and later, many avalied themselves of the privilege of partaking of dinner, which was provided by the ladies. The meal was all that could have been desired, and the service was first-class in every respect. At 1 o'clock the programme of sports was carried out, and each event was well contested. The winners in the various events were as follows:

Running high jump—J. Phelan, 5 ft. 1 in; M. Callaghan, 4 ft. 9 in.

200 yard dash—G. Ketcheson, J. Phelan, J. Alexander.

Tug of War.

This competition was open to all teams that entered before 4 o'clock. But two teams entered, namely a team representing the G.T.R. and a picked team. The result was a win for the G.T.R. team, who retains a handsome cup presented by the Knights of Columbus, as the team has won it twice in succession.

Baseball Match

This event was the chief feature of the afternoon, and attracted much attention. A team from Toronto, the St. Paul, which were heralded as the champion of the amateur league of that city, were present, to battle with the Ontario team of this city. The result was a win for the Ontarios by a score of 5 to 1. The visiting team was unable to hit F. Goyer, the pitcher for the Ontarios, who certainly twirled a fine game, and he was given able support by Mills as catcher, and the members of the team who were in the field. Goyer had no less than 18 strikes to his credit. Leigh, pitcher for the visiting team, struck out 5 men, and Campbell, who replaced him in the 7th innings, had 1 strike out to his credit. The members of the Ontario team played gilt edge ball. The members of St. Paul team were unable to solve Goyer's delivery. Mr. Morrison was umpire, and Mr. Simmons was base umpire. The line up of the teams were as follows:

Notes.

The booths scattered about the grove were in charge of ladies of the church, and all were well patronized.

During the afternoon an orchestra was present and furnished a fine programme of music for dancing which was indulged in by many.

A number of visiting priests were present upon the ground during the afternoon.

Rev. Father Killeen of St. Michael's church was present and was kept busy during the day. He was ever ready to do all in his power to make the picnic the success it proved to be.

The committee in charge of arrangements left nothing undone for the convenience and comfort of the guests.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Capt. Ferguson, paymaster of the 8th C.M.R., returned to the camp yesterday from Belleville where he paid the men of the reigment who were on the trek. His presence in Belleville on Saturday was appreciated and he was given a great welcome.

When the 8th were in Napanee on Thursday night last, it is said that some of the boys who were being shown the "coop" by Chief "Jim" Graham, locked the Napanee Chief Constable up in one of the cells for some time, just to see how he enjoyed lodging in his own hotel. While the Chief was locked up the boys quietly and systematically inspected the town to see that everything was all right and in good running order. On promise to behave himself during balance of the visit of the 8th the Chief was liberated.

Nine recruits for the 59th Battalion came in from Campbellford yesterday. This part of the Province is doing well in recruiting and a good number from here have been brought to camp already.

The 8th C.M.R., has added to its supply of mascots. Two dogs which have been with the regiment at Barriefield for some time, accompanied the regiment to Belleville. One of these was formerly "attached" to the 59th Battalion. At Napanee on Thursday, one of the men "pinched" a collar from a Napanee dog and put it on the 8th mascot. The peculiar part of the deal was that the dog from which the collar was taken became attached to the soldiers' method of living and the treatment he received, and he followed the regiment to Belleville. At Belleville a collar bearing a Belleville dog-tax was taken from an animal which was indiscreet enough to visit the Exhibition grounds where the regiment was camped and the collar was put on the Napanee dog.

Col. T. D. R. Hemming, Camp Commandant, returned on Tuesday afternoon from Lindsay where on Monday evening a big recruiting meeting was held under the auspices of the Speakers' Patriotic League. The meeting was a great success.

At 6.30 p.m. Tuesday, the 8th Regiment, Canadian Mounted Rifles, arrived at Barriefield camp after having been on a route march to Belleville since Thursday morning. The horses, despite the long ride were in splendid condition and appeared as fresh as if just taken from the lines.

One good feature of the trip was the splendid way in which the country residents used the travellers. At Shannonville on Monday at dinner time, the people for miles around came with eatables and at Napanee on Monday night the soldiers were served with ice-cream, cake and sandwiches beside the food supplied by the Army Service Corps. The band gave a concert Monday night at Napanee. At Morven, half way between Napanee and Kingston, on Tuesday dinner was served and this was also a chance for the farmers to show their sympathy with the Canadian soldiers.

BAR TOBACCO FROM MAILS

Supply for Soldiers in Trenches Cut off by French Government

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The French Government has advised the State Department that no practicable way exists of collecting duty on cigars, tobacco, cigarettes and other delicacies that are mailed from this country by friends of soldiers serving in the trenches along the battlefront in France and Belgium and, therefore, such articles should be barred from the mails.

Postmaster General Burleson, on receiving this information, sent out a general circular to all postmasters to warn the public that tobacco and cigars and similar articles cannot be sent through the mails to the French soldiers. The same prohibition applies to German prisoners of war held in France. A large number of packages of cigarettes and cigars have accumulated in the Post Offices in the large cities, and as far as practicable they will, on application, be returned to the senders. Postage prepaid on such packages will be returned.

IMMIGRATION, FINANCE AND DEFENCE.

Two facts connected with the much discussed but all too little practised question of immigration are generally overlooked. Firstly, that land is useless until it is cultivated. No corn, meat, fruit or dairy produce were exported from Canada a hundred years ago, and none is raised on three-fourths of its cultivable acres at present. Secondly, labor is capital in its raw state. In the creation of products labour is the predominant factor, although in the distribution capital is foremost. Much of the capital spent on the development of the country was first tilled from its soil by toil and labour. We do not want this great Dominion to remain comparatively empty with 1.9 to the square mile (or 5.7 if only one-third of Canada is regarded as cultivable), while England has 618 and the United States 30.9 on the same area respectively. The only way to avoid a war in the Pacific is to cease inviting other nations to occupy the empty areas of Canada by leaving them enticingly unpeopled. They must be settled; if with men who are trained soldiers the defence scheme will be greater. This is the only way to preserve a white population in the Dominion.

Not one-fourth of Canada's possible farming areas are yet occupied. There are two million quarter sections of land unproducing, and tempting alien invasion by their rich but undeveloped fertility. The time required and cost involved in placing troops on the battle-ground of Europe has shown what would be the case were troops to be sent to Canada from alien peoples. It is, however, very doubtful whether the working classes at home would agree to be taxed to keep large areas unpeopled by aliens which Canada might have filled up with British people if she had liked. Their earnings are not sufficient to provide themselves and their families with what should be the national minimum of food, air, clothes, house-room and recreation, and they argue that the money might better be spent on housing reform, wider roads, and other forms of social relief at home. Canada is a country of immigrants and their descendants, and it is incumbent on them not to withhold the same opportunities from others of their kith and kin. People in the Old Country recognise that it is due in a large measure to Canada and the other Dominions that we shall be successful in the war. At the same time we realise how much improved would have been our position had the immigration policy of Canada been more general, more sustained, and more comprehensive. Then both the food supplies and troops of the Dominion would have been larger, our Imperial wealth would have been greater, and the poverty in the Old Country would have been less. Most of those who are now supported on the poor rates in Great Britain would have made good settlers in their younger days. In Canada there would be no unemployment in the towns if the Governments of the past twenty years had settled more people on the land. The interests of labour would be advanced if, after local workers had all been placed, a number well within the balance of the remaining permanent situations were introduced. Otherwise goods have to be imported which could be made locally, and in many cases they are made under sweating conditions of labour in England. The purchasers are therefore employing sweated labour, however indirectly, whilst they themselves enjoy all the benefit of advanced labour legislation and regulations. Moreover, the spending capacity of the workers is thus lost to the Dominion.

Every worker is also an employer. His necessities make work for others. If a thousand more workers are permanently needed in the clothing factories, e.g., than are available, and seven hundred only are introduced, these will each spend two hundred dollars a head each year on food, housing and clothes for themselves, and to supply each will require another two hundred workers, and their needs will require other workers, and so on, until we find that the introduction, or exclusion, of the first party means the annual increase in the country's wealth or otherwise, to a figure which seven figures will scarcely represent.

It is Canada and the Empire at large which will have suffered most in population from the effects of the war, as the Old Country's losses in numbers are made good by the reduction in Imperial Migration during the period of the war.

Most students of labour supply and unemployment questions here are agreed that unemployment will be rampant after peace has been signed. Some are, however, doubtful as to this; but all are agreed that the number of ex-soldiers who will be anxious to come out and settle in the Empire as producers and defenders will be numbered in tens of thousands. They have lived in the fresh air and have eaten of the corn and farm produce of Canada, and do not wish to return to their former methods of existence. It is therefore the duty of the people of Canada to arrange for their reception and distribution, as they will have risked their lives to defend the Dominion.

CURRENT COMMENT

Pretty soon the world will know whether King Constantine of Greece or Premier Venizelos is the bigger man.

Recent Zeppelin raids on London and vicinity have caused the death and maiming of some scores of people but they have probably done much to stimulate recruiting.

It is now more than a week since the kaiser said he was willing to listen to overtures of peace from his enemies but there is no such luck for William.

How is it that men who will cheerfully subscribe to war funds kick at war taxes and devise schemes for saving the war postage and the war stamp on checks?—Toronto Star.

It is not surprising to learn that China is drifting back to monarchy. A Chinese republic in the real sense of the word is at present an impossibility and will be for generations to come—Hamilton Herald.

Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, wants American shipping to be not interfered with. Senator Smith is an expert on shipping—he's the gentleman, who at the Titanic inquiry asked a witness if watertight compartments on board ships were for passengers to crawl into in case of danger—Ottawa Journal.

To pass judgment upon individual Germans—to assume that we in their place could individually be better—might truly be presumptuous; but it is not presumptuous to declare that somehow or other a spirit evil and intolerable has gained such possession of those who control the destinies of Germany as to make her national conduct—in the large, and terribly often in detail—an abomination in the sight of all the nations—New York Evening Post.

Victory for the allies depends upon the continued supremacy of the British navy, and the struggle for that supremacy has yet to come. Should our command of the sea be lost, success on land will not avail. When the power of the navy goes, all goes. Napoleon realized this great fact of the vital importance of sea power when with his invading army encamped at Boulogne, he exclaimed: "Let us be masters of the Straits for six hours and we shall be masters of the world."—London Times.

I have to report that a year after the opening of the war leaves England under the almost universay impression that her positions are enormously stronger than at the beginning. Her unpreparedness in men and munitions is being gradually overtaken and while admitting that the war will be longer and more costly than was anticipated, she has confidence that her superiority with her allies, over Germany makes her exhaustion impossible, and Germany's certain—T. P. O'Connor, M.P., in Chicago Tribune.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

After ten months of war we have at length received some tidings of the British Fleet, the existence of which was fast becoming a mere tradition, a saga.

After all it appears that this "formidable ruler of the waves" has not entirely vanished from the earth's surface. Diligently have we sought, but we found not. The secret which so many of our battleships and submarines failed to discover has been laid bare by a harmless whaler named the Karsten.

Probably the secret of her discovery of the English Fleet lay in the fact that the latter felt that no danger could theaten from such a vessel. The whaler had the good fortune to get several views of the Fleet, which at one time was thirty battleships strong. The following day he observed twenty more. On both occasions the Fleet despatched torpedo-boats to inspect the whaler's papers.

These interesting encounters took place on June 12 and June 13 off Spitzbergen, and the captain of the Karsten says that the English were particularly interesting in her harpooning guns probably because they suspected that they concealed some mysterious new war weapon invented by the naughty Germans. When, however, they were convinced of her harmlessness they allowed the whaler to proceed—Berlin "Post."

The Poet's Corner

"COME OVER HERE, YOU'RE NEEDED."

The wind blows from the East.
Fast driven from its dripping wings
Fall tears of millions, shed
O'er death's most ghastly toll.
High pitched, then deep,
There also comes upon the wind
A loud insistent note.
I try to sleep, but sleep comes not;
Nor rest—not even with the day.
Amid the city's myriad sounds
I hear that note predominant—
Not musical, else it would soothe;
Not accidental, else I would forget.
Some meaning it must have for me.
Ah, now it fills my ear!
My senses more attuned become,
And I translate the sound
To meanings.
To me the tear-drenched wind
Bears on its wings
A patriot's call:
"Come!"
My being grows, expands.
My quickened senses
Now more fully played upon,
I hear the Eastern wind call out:
"Go whence I have come!"
Enfolded in its cry,
But loosed upon me
Like a sledge's blow,
The summons strikes again:
"Come! !"
And the rushing wind hesitates
As though for answer it would pause.
I leap and face the East
From whence the summons comes,
With soul exalted
And heart that feels no fear,
I answer:
"Stand by, you in the Flemish trench,
I come!
My blood is red as yours
And fit to spill, if that must be,
For sake of Right and Liberty
And all that makes life worth living.
This task is mine as well as yours;
And not in vain your wind-borne call:
Come! ! !"

War Notes

The official Serbian press bureau has issued a statement regretting the attacks made by Serbian newspapers, which said the U.S. consulate at Budapest had neglected to protect Serbians.

Official figures show that on June 1 about 5000 young women were employed at the Krupp works at Essen, as compared with 1320 on January 1. The whole number of employees on June 1 is not given. On January 1 the total was 46,925, exclusive of the employees in the associated industries—mining and shipbuilding—and in the ammunition works in other parts of Germany owned by the Krupps.

The Berlin Tageblatt, in an attack on the proposal for an autonomous Poland, says: "What interests have we, Germany and Austria, in creating an autonomous Poland which would pursue economic interests opposed to ours? A Poland which would pursue economic interests perhaps in accord with Russia or with only one of the allied German powers would not be a guarantee but a danger to future peace."

One hundred and twenty Cornish clay-workers went to London, England, and, headed by a band of pipers, marched from Paddington to Whitehall, where they enlisted in the Labor Section of the A.S.C. They are all middle-aged men and expect to be put to work at a base to release younger men for the front. They are the fourth lot of Cornishmen who have gone to London within a fortnight, and there are said to be others ready.

The Toronto recruiting depot dealt with between 500 and 600 recruits on Tuesday, and passed 142 of them on to the various regiments.

Canadian munitions manufacturers may look forward to receiving substantial orders from the French government in the near future.

Major B. H. Belson, commander of the 4th Battalion, C.E.F., who was wounded at S. Julien and is now on leave after undergoing an operation, was at St. Catharines yesterday and in speaking of the situation at the front, emphasized the need of more men and of the responsibility of the Canadians.

Lieut. Irwin, A.M.C. of Cobourg who has been appointed to the R. A. M. C. of the Imperial service, will leave on the 26th inst. for England to assume his duties.

Private Samuel Brown, of the 33rd Battalion, C.E.F., in training at London, says he has the names of six landlords who refused to rent a house to his wife and two children, solely because Brown was a soldier, although the rent was offered in advance.

The campaign at Brantford for $20,000 for the purchase of machine guns for the Canadian troops has been successful. Four hundred over the amount sought has been turned in with several lists yet to be received.

The machine gun campaign got a neat start in Stratford, when the city council at its regular session received an offer from Doctors J. A. and Lorne Robertson, prominent physicians, to issue a check for $1000 at the council's call to purchase a machine gun for Perth county soldiers. The offer was referred to the finance committee, with the council's thanks, and will undoubtedly be accepted.

About fifty recruits were obtained at Newmarket at a monster recruiting meeting.

LOAN RUMOR A CANARD

Canadian Govt's Finances Arranged for Far Ahead

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—There is no truth in the rumor published in New York that Canada is considering a domestic loan. It was ascertained today at the Finance Department that no loan, either domestic or foreign, is under consideration, or likely to be considered for some months to come.

On account of the recent New York flotation, the Dominion's finances are arranged well in advance.

German Spies Reveal Secrets

Capt. Horn Has Confessed to Acting Under Instructions—German Embassy Implicated

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 17.—The Providence Journal said this morning:—

Officials of the United States Government have been for some weeks investigating leaks in the State Department and Treasury Department, from both of which information is said to have gone to the German Embassy. At least two persons in the State Department are reported under suspicion, and at least four connected with the Treasury Department.

"'The Government has evidence indicating that valuable information, particularly in connection with investigations, has constantly found its way into the possession of Count von Bernstorff and Captain Boy Ed.'

"There have been numerous conferences among Cabinet officers with regard to these leaks for several weeks. Secretary McAdoo and Secretary Lansing have conferred constantly with secret service officials and every possible effort has been made to put a stop to this shameless traffic in State secrets.

"The Government has in its possession an affidavit signed by Captain Horn, who attempted to blow up the international bridge at Vanceboro. This affidavit not only tells the entire story of Horn's attempt, but declares that he was ordered to do what he did by his superior officer in this country in the employ of the German Government. The Secret Service authorities who have this document in their possession have proof that the individual referred to is Captain Franz von Papen, Military Attache of the German Embassy.

"Captain Horn's statement declares that he was brought here from South America to do either this work or work similar to it; that he came under orders from and in pay of his superior officer in this country. His confession goes into detail with regard to the method he employed in attempting to blow up the bridge. It sets forth that before starting from the village of Vanceboro with a satchel containing eighty pounds of dynamite, he pinned a German flag to each of his arms so that if captured he could say that he was in German uniform. He says the scheme did not contemplate the destruction of life, but that his superior had given him an incorrect time table of trains, with the result that just before he was to light the fuse he discovered a passenger train making for the bridge, and he had to abandon the attempt until it had passed. Then, in order to complete his work, instead of using a long fuse as intended, he made it very short and threw the rest of it off the bridge and on to the shore. The part he said he threw away was subsequently found by Secret Service officers.

"Horn's confession states that, acting under instructions, he bought a second-hand suit of clothes in New York to disguise himself as a laborer, and that he wore an old woollen undershirt and hob-nailed boots. In this disguise he travelled on a limited train between New York and Boston with the result that every man and woman who saw him remembered him. When asked by the Secret Service officers why, after making such elaborate preparations to disguise himself, he had made the mistake of travelling on a limited train, he replied:

BARES PASSPORT FRAUDS.

"'I am a gentleman and a German officer and travel no other way.' The confession was not obtained until Horn had been notified by the Secret Service officials that they had positive knowledge of his connection with the German Army. The facts that brought about this knowledge are said to reveal the connection of the German Embassy with passport frauds that have been perpetrated in this country.

"Secret Service men posing as the men conducting these frauds, met an Attache who had been sent from the German Embassy at Washington with a letter to the ringleader of the gang of forgers. Believing that he was dealing with these passport men, he handed a letter to one of them saying it was most important. When opened by the Secret Service officers the envelope was found to contain a list of thirty prominent German army officers in this country for whom fraudulent passports were desired by the German Embassy.

"At the head of this list was the name of Captain Horn. The Government has ascertained that the German Embassy's reason for attempting to obtain a passport for Captain Horn was its belief that he would be allowed out on bail and that he could be shipped away from this country before his trial came up. Since obtaining the list the Government has run down the name of every officer on it. All of them have been shadowed for several weeks, and are still under surveillance.

"The Government is convinced that before the sinking of the Lusitania, the German Embassy in Washington sent to the Admiralty in Berlin secret messages with regard to the position of that ship and her course.

GAVE LUSITANIA'S COURSE.

"Some weeks ago the Government, having received from the Providence Journal all the wireless material which went to and from Sayville during the period covering the week prior to the Lusitania's sailing and the day of her destination, discovered a number of code messages which it is believed contained direct information from Captain Boy-Ed of the German Embassy to the Germany Admiralty with regard to the route and daily position of the Lusitania. It is understood that this information came to the German Embassy through a spy, or spies, in the office of the Cunard Company, of New York City.

"Between April 30, the day before the Lusitania sailed, and the 7th of May, the day on which she was sunk, a great many wireless messages were sent to and from Sayville for and by the German Embassy and Captain Boy Ed personally. Several of these were in the code which the German Ambassador is permitted to use, and of which an alleged key has been given to the Navy Department. But a great many others, particularly to and from Captain Boy-Ed and the banks and business houses which have also been used to convey code, were most mysterious in their character.

"The Journal has many times made a very careful search of all its wireless messages between these dates, including those mentioned, but has been unable to discover what the Government has apparently discovered from the copies furnished it by the Journal—that some of these messages referred specifically to the destruction of the Lusitania and gave her exact route, as well as information with regard to her position from day to day.

MESSAGES ON SAILING DAY.

"On April 30, the day before the sailing of the Lusitania, a number of messages were sent from Nauen to the German Embassy and from the Embassy to the German Government with regard to certain ciphers alleged to have been sent by the Ambassador in previous messages, but which, as a matter of fact, had never been sent. The Journal's files fail to reveal any such numbers as these indicated, or any attempt to reply to such messages. In other words, the German Foreign Office, in asking for alleged repeats of previous messages, was really sending code messages in disguise.

"On May 4, a wireless message arrived at Sayville, signed 'Ernestine' and addressed to 'Nordmann, Room 802, 11 Broadway.' This message said, 'Has father received letter seventeen?' The 'Nordmann' referred to is the name Captain Boy-Ed uses in New York, and the address is his secret room in that city.

"On May 5 Nauen sent to Sayville a service message marked No. 84, purporting to give a list of messages received on the previous day. Among these appeared the following words: '275 Ambassador, 284 Bredow.' Ten minutes later a wireless message was received from the German Foreign Office addressed to the German Embassy saying: 'We will repeat wireless message No. 84 if still necessary.'

"To this last message no answer was sent. But the fact that message No. 84 posed as a service message is regarded as proof that the German Government was using this method of coding messages in order to evade the censors.

"On the evening of May 5th the German Admiralty sent a wireless message to the German Embassy as follows:

"'Boy-Ed and Moller awarded Iron Cross of Second Class. Inform Moller.'

"Why the Government decorated Boy-Ed with the Iron Cross two days before the sinking of the Lusitania is not known.

"On May 6 a mass of wireless material addressed to the German Embassy from the Foreign Office transmitted what purported to be several news messages with regard to the progress of the war. None of these were ever given to the newspapers, and the Government believes that all of them were code messages.

"At 2.10 on the morning of May 7, the day the Lusitania was sunk, Sayville, for some reason, went over the entire programme of the day before, but in doing so mixed up its messages in a most mysterious way, and sent no two of these in proper sequence. An hour before daylight not content with sending all the messages of the previous day, Sayvill also repeated in the same mysterious manner the messages of May 5 and part of May 4, none of which repetitions had ever been asked for by Nauen. In addition to the items quoted, a great many other code messages passed between the German Embassy and the German Government on the dates referred.

"It is interesting to note also that on May 10 Capt. Boy-Ed sent the following dispatch to the Chief of the Admiralty Staff at Berlin: 'The Lusitania had 5,400 cases of ammunition on board.'

"Two days later, on May 12, the German Foreign Office sent an order to the German Embassy in Berlin over the Sayville wireless:

"'Please communicate with State Department that the German Government knew that on present voyage Lusitania carried 5,400 cases of ammunition.'

"As a matter of fact, these wireless messages prove that the German Government did not know of this item of the Lusitania's cargo until it was notified of the fact by Captain Boy-Ed three days after the Lusitania was sunk.

"With regard to the plot to finance a strike of longshoremen, it is learned today that the Government has in its possession all the facts concerning this propaganda. The sum to be paid by the German Embassy for the creation of this strike was $1,700,000, and arrangements were made with the leaders of the longshoremen's union pledging to every striker $10 a week as long as the strike lasted. The attempt to tie up all freight work on the docks of New York, Boston, Galveston, New Orleans, and other Eastern ports and the ports of the great lakes and the Pacific Coast was part of the propaganda by which the shipment of munitions of war was to be prevented.

"All the material with relation to this matter, including the names of the men involved, is now in the possession of Secretary of Labor Wilson, who has been investigating the entire subject through the Secret Service for several weeks.

"The Secret Service has in its possession facts which prove beyond any question that a great part of the German propaganda at certain well-known meeting places on the streets of Ned York, is directly fomented and paid for by German interests. A number of these agitators, all of them Germans, and Austrians, have been traced directly to the offices of George Sylvester Viereck, editor of The Fatherland, where, Government officers state, they have received money for their services."

WHAT THIN FOLKS SHOULD DO TO GAIN WEIGHT

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinnes, weak nerves, and feeble stomachs who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow after years of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. J. S. McKeown and other leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

Divine Law of Retribution — Man's First Judgment Day—Death Sentence Pronounced Against the Race—Redemption Secured by the Death of Another Man—A New Trial for Mankind—Second Trial Individual, Not Racial—Messiah the Judge—Trial to Last 1,000 Years—Outcome Glorious

PASTOR RUSSELL

Portland, Me., Aug. 15.—Pastor Russell delivered a very interesting discourse here to-day on the text, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Corinthians 6: 2.) He spoke as follows:

Much confusion prevails through failure to understand the Divine application of justice in the world's affairs. Hitherto we have not studied our Bibles with sufficient care, but have jumped at conclusions and endeavored to make the Bible fit them. In every man there is some appreciation of justice, some realization that punishment ought to be inflicted for wrong-doing. Even those who practise wrong recognize this principle, and are ready to condemn others and to assist in punishing them, even though hoping to escape the fruit of their own sin.

The Bible clearly teaches that to some extent national judgments and punishments have been in progress for centuries, but that individual reckonings with Divine Justice are for the future—except as violations of Nature's laws continually bring retribution. It is in view of this fact that the Lord's judgment is future that Christians are exhorted, "Judge nothing before the time." Our incomplete knowledge renders even the most saintly liable to error of judgment. Christians have the promise that before their work as judges begins they will be qualified for it by a glorious change from earthly imperfection to Heavenly completeness in glory, honor, and immortality.

The Scriptures discriminate sharply between the judgment of the Church and the judgment of the world; and to read our Bibles intelligently we must thus discriminate. God has not ignored sin during the past six thousand years. He is punishing the whole world every day. The penalty specified in the Bible is death, and our race is dying at the rate of one hundred thousand daily—exclusive of the great mortality occasioned by the European war. This death penalty has concomitants of trouble leading up to it—sickness, sorrow, pain—all of which are really parts of the dying process, and therefore parts of the penalty.

This penalty is not graded according to moral differences amongst men. Divine Justice merely decided that Father Adam as a rebel against the Divine Law had forfeited his life, and that none of his children could be born under conditions that would be perfect and satisfactory to God. Therefore Adam's death sentence passed by heredity upon all of his children, irrespective of their degrees of sinfulness. None of them being perfect, none of them therefore being worthy of everlasting life, all of them must die, whether with much or little pain; whether by famine or pestilence or war or accident. Justice took no note of the method of the dying, but merely of the fact that they must die. Similarly, human laws provide certain penalties for crimes, irrespective of the different conditions of the culprits.

God might have allowed the race to perish under that death sentence, or "curse." If so, the accounts of Justice would have been squared, and every man at death would have gotten his share of the penalty. Then there would have been neither future life nor future judgments for him; for a death penalty is the extreme limit of Divine Law, as well as of human law.

But God purposed something better than annihilation for His human creatures. He purposed an exhibition of His mercy in combination with justice—the redemption of Adam and all of his family from the death sentence. The first step in this redemptive work was the death of Jesus as a corresponding price for the first man, who personally sinned and who was personally condemned. The redemption of the original sinner, through whom the whole difficulty came, would constitute a satisfaction to Justice on his account and that of all his family, who participated in his penalty.

Jesus' redemptive work was not with a view to getting people out of a fiery Hell of eternal torture; for there is no such place, according to the Bible. His death was to get mankind out of the Bible Hell—the tomb—the death state—Sheol in the Hebrew, Hades in the Greek. To bring Adam and his race back from the tomb signifies their resurrection. This is the promise of God's Word—that because Christ died for man's sin, therefore in due time "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."—Acts 24:15.

The theory that nobody is dead—that those who die merely change their form and live more fully—is in direct conflict with our observation as well as contradictory to the Bible, which declares that "the wages of sin is death," that "the soul that sinneth shall die," and that Christ died for man's sin in order to recover him out of this penalty of death and to make possible his re-living, his resurrection from the dead.—Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4; 1 Corinthians 15:21-23.

Having seen that God's judgment, or sentence against sin, went into effect six thousand years ago and is still in effect—that the whole world is dying—we ask properly, When will the new Judgment Day begin—the opportunity for Adam and his race to have another trial for life—secured by God's mercy through the death of Jesus?

St. Paul answers our query, saying, "God hath appointed a Day, in which He will judge the world in righteousness, by that Man whom He hath ordained, whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead." (Acts 17-31.) St. Paul does not say that this Judgment Day had begun in his time; but that it was future, according to God's appointment, and as a result of Christ's death. He clearly intimates also that Jesus is to be the great Judge.

In this view of matters, the appointed Judgment Day is not to be a time of punishment for Adam's sin; for mankind already have been punished in the dying processes of the race for six thousand years. Nor is the coming Judgment to punish Adam's race because of their inherited weaknesses; for all those weaknesses were included in the redemptive work which the Saviour accomplished when "He by the grace of God tasted death for every man."

The coming Judgment Day simply signifies a fresh trial for Adam and his race. In the first trial in Eden, Father Adam failed; and he and his race all lost the perfect life with which he had been originally endowed, as a son of God. The new Judgment Day is designed by the Creator for the benefit of Adam and his race. In other words, it will be a second great trial of the race, the difference being that the trial will be individual, and the rewards or punishments individual, not racial.

During the four thousand years from the time of Adam's sin and his coming under the death sentence down to the time of Christ, God merely left the world under its penalty and without any suggestion that well-doing or ill-doing would have any bearing upon their future destiny. The only exception to this rule was the little nation of Israel, Abraham's family. To Abraham, a man of faith and loyalty to God, came the first declaration of God's purpose to bless the world. (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.) Neither Abraham nor his children were delivered from the curse. He was merely informed that God had purposed another Judgment Day, in which all the families of the earth would be blessed and in which Abraham's Offspring would be the great Judge, through whom all the willing and obedient might be brought back to everlasting life and perfection.

God might have continued to deal with humanity exactly as He had done during the first two thousand years—might have left them in ignorance of His purpose to roll away the curse and to roll on a blessing. But another feature of the Divine Plan made it expedient to reveal certain features of the Divine purpose. He desired to select two classes from amongst mankind before He would begin the general work of giving a fresh judgment, or trial, for everlasting life to Adam and his race. In harmony with His Plan God revealed certain things to Abraham and his natural posterity, the Jews, up to the time of Christ. In His dealings with them He tested them and found certain noble, loyal, faithful characters, suitable to His future purposes. They are sometimes styled the Ancient Worthies, and are referred to by St. Paul in Hebrews 11.

In the closing verses of that chapter, however, the Apostle refers to the Church of the Gospel Age as constituting a different class of God's servants, as designed to receive at His hands still higher honors than the others. Note the Apostle's words of contrast. After speaking very highly of the faith of the Ancient Worthies, St. Paul explains that they died without having received the fulfilment of the promises made to them, all of which were earthly; and that they could not receive the fulfilment of their earthly promises until after the Church would have received and entered into her spiritual promises by the First Resurrection.—Hebrews 11:39, 40.

The Church, according to the Bible, is distinctly different from the world, and is to have a different kind of salvation from that provided for mankind in general. God's provision for humanity from the beginning was a perfect earth, suitable for perfect mankind; and all this was represented on a small scale by our first parents in Eden. God's Plan has not changed. The recovery of man from the death sentence will bring him to perfection and a world-wide earthly Eden, if he is obedient to the Divine arrangements. Otherwise he shall be destroyed utterly in the Second Death as the Scriptures repeatedly declare.—Acts 3:23.

As God prepared a worthy class during the Jewish Age to be His earthly representatives amongst mankind and samples of human perfection during the time of the world's judgment, or trial, similarly He has during this Gospel Age been selecting another class, spirit-begotten ones, who are to be perfected on the Heavenly or Spirit Plane, made like their Lord and Redeemer. (2 Peter 1:4; 1 John 3:2.) To Christ and His glorified Church God purposes to turn over the whole world of mankind, including those who have gone into the tomb.

This Messiah will be backed by all the Divine Power in His work of rescuing mankind from the fallen condition. Satan will be bound; all evil influences will thus be restrained. The darkness of ignorance and superstition will be scattered before the rising Sun of Righteousness. All mankind will be blessed—the living first, and afterwards the sleeping ones, "every man in his own order" or company—not all at once. For a thousand years a great work of judging will progress.

This judging will not be punishments on account of Adam's sin or of inherited imperfections and faults, results of that sin. So far as the wrong doings of the present life are traceable to inherited blemishes, they will be covered by the merit of the great Redeemer's sacrifice. The only accounts remaining unsettled will be for those misdeeds and pernicious words of the present life done or uttered contrary to knowledge. The degree of knowledge will determine the degree of sin.

Each individual then on judgment, on trial, will have in himself the record of his own violations of conscience. That is to say, the unforgivable sins, which must be punished, are those against the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Righteousness, the Spirit of Truth—done intelligently against it. Thus the civilized could sear their consciences in a manner that the uncivilized could not; and those having a knowledge of God and appreciation of the principles of His righteousness could injure themselves for the future in a manner that more ignorant people could not.

Jesus declared that in the Day of Judgment those who did evil without knowledge will be punished with fewer stripes than will those who did less evil with more light. He gives us as illustrations the Sodomites of old, who were accounted most wicked, and the people amongst whom He was preaching, who counted themselves holiness people—Scribes and Pharisees. (Matthew 10:15; 11:22.) It will be tolerable for all, but less tolerable for those who have had more knowledge, more light, in the present life, and who have failed to live accordingly.

The period since Jesus' day, beginning at Pentecost, has been the Church's Judgment Day — her trial time. Only those coming into the True Church on the Lord's terms are privileged to have this special trial, and, if victorious, its special reward of glory, honor, and immortality in the Kingdom. The entrance into the Church is through the begetting of the Holy Spirit; and this begetting to the new nature is granted only to those who turn from sin, accept the Redeemer as their Advocate with the Father, and make consecration to do God's will.

As New Creatures, these have much advantage, in that God guarantees that "all things shall work together for good to them"—as spirit beings. This means, however, that they will be subjected to trials, difficulties, testings, much more severe than come to mankind in general; for they are being chiseled, polished, qualified, for the glories of the Heavenly Kingdom. They must walk by faith, not by sight. They must make a noble fight, in their hearts at least, against sin and its allurements. They must prove themselves loyal to God, to His Truth and to His service, at the cost of even life itself.

The whole question we are discussing is summed up by the Lord in His Message through the Prophet Malachi (3:15-18). The Prophet declares that now we do not see evil-doers punished, even though they injure God's true people and blaspheme His name. But after God has made ready all the jewels of the Elect class and has set them in the gold of the Divine nature, there will be a change in prevailing conditions amongst men. Evil-doers will be chastised, with a view to their reformation. This failing, they "will be destroyed from amongst the people." Describing these Restitution conditions, the Prophet declares, "Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked."

What God purposes for the world through Messiah's Kingdom will be the grandest thing imaginable. Through this Kingdom, Divine judgments—justice—will be enforced everywhere — yet sympathetically. Each will be required to live up to the perfect standard of the Golden Rule, to the extent of ability; and the Royal Priesthood will be fully commissioned to remit penalties for unintentional transgressings resulting from inherited weaknesses. The reward to well-doers will be gradual growth in knowledge, in grace, in mental, moral, and physical strength.

Many find it difficult to understand how God's judgments could bring great blessings to the world. Hence we offer some suggestions: Suppose that the Kingdom were established, with Christ and the glorified Church in control, invisible to men, but all-powerful and all-wise. Suppose myriads of agents and agencies for the carrying out of the Divine will through this Royal Priesthood operating like the sound waves of the wireless telegraph. Suppose a contrite sinner earnest in his full surrender to the Lord, and imagine his acceptance to Divine favor indicated by a miraculous healing of some infirmity or by an enlightenment of mind permitting him to appreciate the Divine will. On the other hand, suppose a lover of sin attempting to commit wrong and receiving instant punishment—his hand paralyzed in the act of forging a signature or of taking the property of another—his tongue paralyzed in the act of uttering slander, profanity, or untruth.

How quickly the world would learn righteousness under such conditions! These very conditions we would now be naturally inclined to expect, but do not see; for God's great Plan has not yet reached completion.

Farragut's Way.

While preparations were being made for the attack on New Orleans, the navy department came into possession of a complete set of plans of the defenses of that city. Not only were the positions of the forts laid down, but, also, the submarine mines, as well as the system of torpedoes, and the reserve of war vessels which were to co-operate with the land batteries. No time was lost in sending it to Admiral Farragut, but no acknowledgment ever reached the navy department. Meanwhile the passage of the forts was effected. New Orleans captured, Admiral Farragut in due time went north. Proceeding to Washington, he at once called at the navy department, where he received hearty congratulations upon his brilliant successes. While he was in the department a prominent official referred to the plans of the defenses of New Orleans and asked the admiral if he had ever received them. "Yes," he replied, "I received the plans, but on examination I found out that, according to them, New Orleans could never be taken. So I tore them up and threw them into the waste basket."—Argonaut.

The Camel's Stomach.

The stomach of a camel is divided into four compartments, and the walls of these are lined with large cells, every one of which can be opened and closed at will by the means of powerful muscles. When a camel drinks it drinks for such a long time you really think it never meant to leave off. The fact is that it is not satisfying its thirst, but is filling up its cistern as well. One after another the cells of its stomach are filled with water, and as soon as each is quite full it is tightly closed. Then, when a few hours later the animal becomes thirsty, all it has to do is to open one of the cells and allow the water to flow out. Next day it opens one or two more cells, and so it goes on day after day until the whole supply is exhausted. In this curious way a camel can live five or even six days without drinking at all, and so is able to travel quite easily through the desert, where the wells are often hundreds of miles apart.—Exchange.

There are few persons outside of the navy who have ever seen a submarine's "fins" in action. The modern submersible craft built for the United States navy are all provided with these lateral rudders, but when the vessels are at the surface or moving in a level plane under water the fins are folded back into recesses in the sides of the hull. The purpose of these plans is to aid the submarine to rise or sink on an even keel. "Porpoising," or rising and diving at an angle, is avoided in submarine practice as much as possible. The lateral fins are attached to the hull by ball and socket joints, so that they may be rotated to give a planing effect either upward or downward at any angle and folded away when not in use.—Popular Mechanics.

Senseless Zeal.

CHAPTER XXVII—COTINUED

"So you have come at last, Miss Challoner," she said, fixing her eyes, which looked unnaturally bright, on Phillis. Her voice was cold, almost harsh, and her countenance expressed no pleasure. The hand she held out was so limp and cold that Phillis relinquished it hastily.

"You said that I should be welcome," she faltered, and trying not to appear alarmed. She was too young and healthy to understand the meaning of the word hysteria, or to guess at the existence of nervous maladies that make some people's lives a long torment to them. Nevertheless, Mrs. Cheyne's singular filled her with a vague fear. It did not enter into her mind to connect the coming storm with Mrs. Cheyne's condition, until she hinted at it herself.

"Oh yes you are welcome," she responded wearily. "I have looked for you evening after evening, but you choose to come with the storm. It is a pity, perhaps; but then you did not know!"

"What would you have me know?" asked Philllis, timidly.

Mrs. Cheyne shrugged her shoulders a little flightily.

"Oh, you are young!" she returned; "you do not understand what nerves mean; "you sleep sweetly of a night, and have no bad dreams; it does not matter to you happy people if the air is full of sunshine or surchanged with electricity. For me, when the sun ceases to shine I am in despair. Fogs find me brooding. An impending storm suffocates me, and yet tears me to pieces with restlessness; it drives me hither and thither like a fallen leaf. I tire myself that I may sleep, and yet I stare open-eyed for hours together into the darkness. I wonder sometimes I do not go mad. But there! let us walk—let us walk." And she made a movement to retrace her steps; but Phillis with a courage for which she commended herself afterwards pulled her back by her hanging sleeves.

"Oh not there! it is not good for any one who is sad to walk in that dark place. No wonder your thoughts are sombre. Look! the heavy raindrops are pattering among the leaves, I do not care to get wet; let us go back to the house."

"Pshaw! what does it matter getting wet?" she returned with a little scorn; but nevertheless she suffered Phillis to take her arm and draw her gently towards the house. Only as they came near the library window, she pointed to it indignantly. "Who has dared to enter that room, or open the window? Have I not forbidden over and over again that that room should be used? Do you think", she continued, in the same excited way, "that I would enter that room to-night of all nights. Why, I should hear his angry voice pealing in every corner! It was a good room for echoes; and he could speak loudly if he chose. Come away! there is a door I always use that leads to my privato apartments. I am no recluse; but in these moods I do not care to show myself to people. If you are not afraid, you may come with me, unless you prefer Miss Mewlstone's company.

"I would rather go with you," returned Phillis, gently. She could not in truth say she was not afraid; but the poor creature who was evidently all the same she must try and soothe the poor creature who was evidently enduring such torments of mind; so she followed in silence up the broad oak staircase.

A green-baize door admitted them into a long and somewhat narrow corridor, lighted up by a row of high narrow windows set prettily with flower-boxes. Here there were several doors. Mrs. Cheyne paused before one a moment.

"Look here! you shall see the mysteries of the west wing. This is my world; downstairs I am a different creature—taciturn, harsh, and prone to sarcasm. Ask Mr. Drummond what he thinks of me; but I never could endure a good young man—especially that delicious compound of the worldling and the saint—like the Reverend Archibald. See here, my dear! here I am never captious or say naughty things!"

She threw open the door, and softly beckoned to Phillis to enter. It was a large empty room—evidently a nursery. Some canaries were twittering faintly in a gilded cage. There were flowers in the two windows and in the vases on the table; evidently some loving hands had arranged them that very morning. A large rocking-horse ocupied the centre of the floor; a doll lay with its face downwards on the crimson carpet; a pile of wooden soldiers strutted on their zizag platform—one or two had fallen off; a torn picture-book had been flung beside them.

"That was my Janie's picture-books," said Mrs. Cheyne, mournfully; "she was teaching her doll out of it just before she was taken ill. Nothing was touched; by a sort of inspiration—a foreboding—I do not know what,—I bade nurse leave the toys as they were. 'It is only an interrupted game; let the darlings find their toys as they put them,' I said to her that morning. Look at the soldiers, Bertie was always for soldiers—bless him!"

Her manner had grown calmer; and she spoke with such touching tenderness that tears came to Phillis' eyes. But Mrs. Cheyne never once looked at the girl; she lingered by the table a moment, adjusting a leaf here and a bud there in the bouquets, and then she opened an inner door leading to the night-nursery. Here the associations were still more harrowing. The cots stood side by side under a muslin canopy, with an alabaster angel between them; the little night-dresses lay folded on the pillows; on each quilt were the scarlet dressing-gown and the pair of tiny slippers; the clothes were piled neatly on two chairs—a boy's velvet tunic on one, a girl's white frock, a little limp and discolored, hung over the rails of the other.

'Everything just the same;" murmured the poor mother. "Look here, my dear,"—with a faint smile—"these are Bertie's slippers; there is the hole he kicked in them when he was in his tempers, for my boy had the Cheyne temper. He was Herbert's image—his very image." She sighed, paused, and went on: "Every night I come and sit beside their beds, and then the darlings come to me. I can see their faces—oh, so plainly!—and hear their voices. 'Good-night, dear mamma!' they seem to say to me, only Bertie's voice is always the louder."

"I am so glad you come here every night," she said, in her sweet, serious voice, from which every trace of fear had gone. "I think that a beautiful idea, to come and say your prayers beside one of these little beds."

"To say my prayers!—I pray beside my darlings' beds!" exclaimed Mrs. Cheyne, in a startled voice. "Oh no! I never do that. God would not hear such prayers as mine,—never—never!"

"Dear Mrs. Cheyne, why not?" She moved restlessly away at the question and tried to disengage herself from Phillis' firm graps. "The Divine Father hears all prayers," whispered the girl.

"All?—but not mine,—not mine, or I should not be sitting here alone. Do you know my husband left me in anger,—that his last words to me were the bitterest he ever spoke? 'Good-bye, Magdalene; you have made my life so wretched that I do not care if I never live to set foot in this house again!' And that to me,—his wedded wife, and the mother of his children, who loved him so. Oh, Herbert! Herbert!" and, covering her face, the unhappy woman suddenly burst into a passion of tears.

Live Stock Was Cheap in 1194.

The high cost of living lends an interest to a volume issued by the London Pipe Roll society. From the introduction one gathers an idea of prices in 1194. Certain land was to be stocked and a price for each class of stock was fixed. Oxen figure at four shillings, cows a shilling less. Farm horses were also four shillings a head, pigs were a shilling, and sheep stood at sixpence. Incidentally, the book proves the antiquity of the familiar fine in London of 40 shillings, for it records its imposition as long ago as 1185 on one who had overthrown a pillory.

Good Reply.

The teacher was drilling the class in mental arithmetic.

"Now, boys," he said, "here is an easy one. A man desiring to go into business borrows $1,000,000 at 15 per cent for four years. What's the result? Quick!"

Fifteen hands shot up and fifteen voices shouted in chorus:

"The man goes broke."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Nature's Handiwork.

The down upon the peach or plum is so delicate and so thickly set that one cannot touch the fruit with a needle's point without breaking the tender stalk, and yet the dew of the night covers the whole surface of the fruit and disappears in the morning, leaving the gossamer growth more orderly and beautiful than before. The dew covers every leaf of the giant oak, and the mighty tree drinks in the refreshing moisture to its thirsty heart through millions of pores, and the iron trunk that has withstood a thousand storms is made stronger by the gentle strength of the dew. The silent fall of the dew is caused and controlled by agencies of the most tremendous power. The same power which shakes a whole continent with its subterranean thunder is the same as that which encircles the finest filament of thistledown with a coronet of dewy gems so small that they do not bend the delicate stalks with their weight.—London Globe.

WAR STORIES

A R.C.D. HERO'S DEATH

An officer of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, describing the Festubert fighting says:

"Outside our trench in front lay a poor Highlander, with both legs shattered badly. He had lain there three and a half days. One of our men (Sergt. Hollowell) together with Corporal Pym, decided to at least try and get him, and jumped over the parapet with a stretcher. Hollowell got sniped through the thigh just as he reached the man. Pym managed to get back. Hollowell gave his water bottle to the wounded man and tried to crawl back to the trench, but got three more shots, and finally shrapnel ended his misery.

"The trenches are full of men of this type. Thousands of men should get the V.C. who are never heard of. We did get the Highlander eventually—after dusk.

'We came out at midnight and came back to our billets—clothes torn and absolutely covered with mud and all kinds of equipment lost. I was tired, absolutely dead tired and fagged out—to tired to even wash the grime and blood off my face and hands—but not too tired to get on my knees and thanks my Heavenly Father for having brought me through safely."

THEIR LAST FIGHTING

A private from Vancouver in Princess Patricia's Regiment, in a letter to friends in England, describes one of the last fierce actions in wheih the regiment took part, and adds: "In the midst of the shelling the Germans tried to advance under cover of their fire, but they were beaten back again and again. Our fellows held on like lions, and although men were being mowed down, they held the line until relieved by another regiment. We lost most of our officers, killed and wounded. We were pretty well cut up when a certain British regiment came to support us. They were the proper sample of the British bulldog breed. They calmly jumped in among us, set their Maxim guns, and handed us cigarettes. They told us that they were a little out of wind, as they had had quite a run. You may be sure they won our admiration, and we gave them quite a cheer as they came up.

Deadly Shelling.

"Early next morning we were relieved, and rested that day. The following day we had to carry up ammunition in bread daylight under heavy shell fire, and the Germans seemed to have our range to a T, as we were going up an open road. We had to crawl like snakes along a drain by the side of the road, as we were open to Maxim and rifle fire as well. One of my friends was ahead of me at the time. He and I (with another young fellow who was killed a couple of days before had worked in Vancouver together, joined together, and had been together most of the time. My second friend as about ten feet ahead of me when a shell burst, and he got a cut in the head. After lying there for a couple of minutes he looked up and told me he was hit. I went up to him and started to take the field dressing out of his coat to bind up his wound when a shell burst—right in my face as it seemed—and struck my friend in the head, and he died in a few minutes. He never regained consciousness so I just crawled over his body and continued my journey as the troops must have ammunition at all costs. I was rather cut up at losing my two friends in a couple of days like that. Well I got safely back, and on the way buried my comrade along with another fellow. I just made a rough wooden cross for him, and one of the boys put his name, etc., on it, while another said a few words of prayer. So we departed."

SLEEPING IN GRAVEYARD

Sapper R. Logue, Canadian Engineer, writing to his sister in Scotland, says: "I have slept in some queer places since I came to this country, but this is the first time I have slept in a graveyard. Of course, the country all around this part is a huge graveyard, but where I have to sleep at present is a regular graveyard, with wooden crosses up. On one cross there are the simple words: 'Here lie the remains of three gallant British soldiers,' and no names."

JOHN A. LIDDELL.

Out of Hope's most highly respected residents passed away on August 3rd, in the person of John A. Liddell, after an illness of only two weeks. Mr. Liddell was born on the old homestead, Thurlow Township, near Belleville, now occupied by his brother, Mr. Chas. Liddell, where nearly thirty years of his life were spent. He then came to his farm near Campbellcroft where he died.

Mr. Liddell is survived by two brothers and four sisters: Robert in Flint, Mich., Charles in Thurlow; Mrs. Chas. Liddell, in Owen Sound, Mrs. E. McKenzie of Winnipeg, Mrs. E. Keirl of Regina, now of Campbellcroft, and Mrs. Chas. Osland of Campbellford. Deceased was a member of the Methodist church, a Conservative in politics and was for years connected with the L.O.L., No. 75, Perrytown, under whose directions the funeral took place last Thursday to Providence cemetery. A large circle of friends and relatives will feel that they have lost a friend in whom they could place every confidence, and who was worthy of their most sincere esteem.

JUSTICE MERRILL

Mr. Justice Merrill died last evening in Thurlow Township, at the advanced age of 90 years. Deceased had been ill for the past two years. Mr. Merrill was for a number of years a resident of Huntingdon Township. He was a widower, and is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Sweetman of Belleville, Mrs. Schriver of Toronto, and Mrs. J. H McCollough of Perth. Deceased belonged to the Quaker Church. The remains were today taken to Moira for interment.

JANE FROST

Miss Jane Frost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frost, residing on McDonald Avenue died last night, after being an invalid for some time. Deceased was 21 years of age and was a young lady much respected by all who knew her.

USIT

Advancing Years Need Not Bring Wrinkles

Why should any man or woman suffer from a wrinkled skin? The first sign of a wrinkle is a sure indication that the skin is not receiving sufficient nourishment and it is time to apply "Usit."

Until the discovery of the powers of certain Oriental Oils, as revealed to a Canadian traveller by an Arab, people were powerless to restore their fading beauty. Today there is no excuse for wrinkles for any man or woman who knows of the value of "Usit" as a skin food and wrinkle chaser.

The preparation, which is obtainable from all good druggists, brings back the blush of health to the cheek and will eradicate every wrinkle.

TO AID DESTITUTE CHILDREN

To the Editor of Intelligencer,—

Dear Sir,—I understand some people here have been saying a lot of silly and unpleasant things about my letter that was published in the Toronto News lately. Of course if they had any idea how little I care about that part of it, they would save their breath for a more worthy purpose. They only lower themselves, and I am only just glad of it for it gives me a new line of thought. Now, some of those talking are worth thousands of dollars, and they say (only in not quite so nice a way) that if I wanted to do anything there are any number of needy children here; that I didn't need to go to Toronto for any; that charity begins at home. Now, I know what I am talking about when I speak of the misery and want in the big cities, for I have seen it in a few of the biggest on this continent, and was powerless to relieve it, only in a very small way. But I never dreamed that in a small place like Belleville that such conditions of want could exist as I have heard of in the past week, where it is so easy to find out all these things and so many wealthy people living here. It is to the everlasting shame of those who are able to relieve it and don't do it. I am speaking plainly, for I have the courage of my convictions.

It is very easy to sit in your easy chair and laugh at my small efforts. But I would rather be the one who laughs last. Did you begrudge the little ones their summer outing, or what was it that got your goat? Were you afraid I was coming to you for something. Well, you were mistaken; it was simply a labor of love I suggested, and I know that God only loves a cheerful giver, and I wanted the little folks to be happy. I only called for volunteers and the demand for children is away ahead of the supply. If you would read some of the letters from people whose hearts were touched by that letter you would change your views somewhat. You would not sit quite so easy. If you looked a little more closely into the Gospel of Christ, that is, if you believe in Him at all. If you think a Christian's duty is done when he walks to church and back on Sundays and throws a few dollars in the collection, why there is not much can be said to you to any effect.

I don't pose as a christian, but I have enough love for Christ to want to do something practical to serve Him. I have no new fangled ideas whatever. I have gone away back to Calvary for them. I am not a Hornerite, and I have not had the opportunity yet to attend even one of their meetings here, and I never heart Ralph Horner in my life. I did not hear Pastor Russell, and never read but one of his sermons in my life. None of the new things impress me. Christ is enough for me. He has made the way so plain, that a warfaring man, though a fool need not err thereby. What more do we want. And we did not have a Hornerite prayer-meeting at our house, because a good christian woman, from a distance, was visiting us who was not afraid to pray if the doors were open. Of course we are just working people and are proud of it; toil is no disgrace.

Now the little children here can get plenty of fresh air and sunshine if they do lack other things, and if there is any blame deserved for wanting to help innocent little needy children from whatever quarter of the Globe they come, why, you can heap it right on to me for I am ready at any time to do anything I am able for them. And I have found lots of big hearts as I expected, and nearly all of moderate means.

I will tell you what I accomplished just last week with a seemingly small effect and without neglecting any of my regular duties. I found a home for a little girl from the shelter, where she she would be adopted I mean, and another place in a good home for another girl from there to work for wages; and a home for a widow with small children (who often go hungry) in a community of well-to-do farmers, who need a woman who can do plain sewing and mending and odd jobs, and who are willing to each spare something to make her comfortable and to keep her children together. This is only as an explanation to those who have been trying to hit me; missed their mark and have been pounding themselves accordingly. But why not advertise all these cases of misery and want? Names need not be mentioned; it would be money well spent. And I believe wonderful results would follow; help might come from unexpected quarters. These people who are able to do so, and who believe that charity begins at home, would have the opportunity of coming forward without any excuses and relieving them. I often wonder that wealthy people don't pay for the education of at least one child out of some poor family. If each one would do that what an uplift it would be. And must so much of the young manhood and womanhood of Canada, (that is so much needed) be brought up in conditions of poverty and misery? That letter was only a humble desire on my part to find the way to do my little share here below, and it is amusing to me, that so much was said about what was really my own affairs. It was time enough when I had touched people's purse strings.

(MRS.) P. A. MOFFATT

Mrs. Moffatt encloses a letter which she received from a woman at Port Anson, who offered to take a little girl of eight or nine and bring her up as her own.

Truth Persists.

The prejudices of one age are condemned even by the prejudiced of the succeeding ages. The truth haters of every future generation will call the truth haters of another generation by their true names—for even these the stream of time carries onwards. In fine, truth, considered in itself and in the effects natural to it, may be considered as a gentle spring or water course, warm from the genial earth and breathing up into the snowdrift that is piled up and around its outlet. It turns the obstacle into its own form and character and as it makes its way increases its stream. And should it be arrested in its course by a chilling season it suffers delay, not loss, and waits only for a change in the wind to awaken again and roll onward.—Taylor Coleridge.

Painting and Music.

Whereas, while polish, refinement, culture and breeding are in no way arguments for artistic result, it is also no reproach to the most finished scholar or greatest gentleman in the land that he be absolutely without eye for painting or ear for music—that in his heart he prefer the popular print to the scratch of Rembrandt's needle, or the songs of the hall to Beethoven's C minor symphony. — James MacNeill Whistler.

Badly Shrunk.

The loser of an election bet in Baltimore one time had to wheel the winner several miles in a wheelbarrow, with the provision that every time the man stopped to rest five inches were to be cut off the legs of his trousers. He stopped four times.

Gold in Saskatchewan.

A promising and alluring gold strike in the Canadian North-West is reported to the south-east of Lake Athabasca. The excitement dates back to a year ago, when a good deal was heard about the Beaver Lake deposits of rich, free gold. Beaver Lake is something over a hundred miles beyond Le Pas, from which point it is reached by steamer and portage. For a time men went in at the rate of a hundred a week, but the excitement wore down, partly because of the difficulty in getting the ore out to where it could be mailed. Assays of the Beaver Lake ore ran high, however, and there seems to be little doubt that in that district there is as genuine golden wealth as there is silver wealth around Lake Athabasca. Development is going on this summer on some of the claims staked out last year.

Vol. 48 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 20, 1915. No. 385

Lynching of Frank Will Go Unavenged

No Jury Could be Procured to Convict Murderers, It is Believed

MARIETTA, Ga., August 19.—The murder of Leod. M. Frank will go unavenged by the law if it is to be punished in the county where it was committed. No jury in Cobb County would convict the murderers, no grand jury would indict them, no official would undertake to prosecute them.

This is not to say that Cobb County is terrorized, for it is not; it is to say that the vast majority of its people, even those who deplore the lynching as a violation of law, believe that Frank got more than his deserts and the simply carried out the verdict of the law after it had been arbitrarily set aside by a governor who was a law partner of Frank's lawyer.

The word mob does not seem descriptive, although it is correct, for these men did not display the ordinary characteristics of a mob. There was no outburst of rage, no disorder; the whole thing was done with order, method and precision, and with a military attention to details. Lynching mobs are usually composed of riff-raff with a few leaders of a higher order; but this one consisted of leading citizens in the community, men prominent in business and social circles, and even in church. Liquor played no part in it, as it does in most lynchings. The lynching had been planned for months, and the plans of the conspirators contemplated its carrying cut on a night several weeks ago, but the authorities learned of it in some way, and it was postponed until last Monday.

These leading citizens are to-day taking their leading part in the city's business and social affairs, with no sign upon them of guilty conscience. Their consciences approve them and what they hear from their fellow citizens wherever they go adds to their self approval, for the city approves them.

Frank Died Bravely.

Marietta to-day is in a mood of braced purpose and resolve. Every stranger who come into town is under observation the moment he arrives. Its mood is one of determination to protect the men who in its eyes executed the law after it had been trampled upon. It is resolved that not a hair of their heads shall be harmed. Detectives or other persons who cannot give satisfactory account of themselves are not wanted in Marietta and it would be as well for them not to insist on knowing why. Marietta once came within an inch of lynching Detective William J. Burns for his visit there in the interests of Frank and Marietta then was only angry. To-day Marietta is in a mood of high resolve.

Leo Frank died bravely. He did not beg for his life; indeed, he did not say anything, except when he was spoken to and then he answered collectively. His abductors had little to say to him, as was in keeping with the character that they were in their own eyes—the character of officers of justice, sternly and silently executing a sentence, already decreed by a regular tribunal.

Western Campaign

Fighting With Hand Grenades and Bombs — German Losses Heavy

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 20.—(Afternoon official statement). There has been continued activity on the part of our artillery along the banks of the Oise to the north of the Aisne in the Champagne district, and along the front at Las Eille.

In the Argonne there has been fighting with mines in the region of Vienne le Chateau, and fighting with bombs and hand grenades, at close range, in the section of St. Hubert and near Marie Therese.

On the heights of the Linge and of Schrath Emannel the German losses have been very heavy. We found a large number of German soldiers dead in a trench 250 yards long, which we occupied.

THE ARABIC OUTRAGE AMERICANS MISSING

All the Passengers Except Eight Have Been Landed—Four Americans Supposed to be Drowned—Opinions of American Press

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The White Star Line announces that all but eight passengers of the Arabic have been safely landed at Queenstown. Four of the eight missing are Americans. United States consul Thompson, at Queenstown says there were twenty-one American passengers on the boat and sixteen have been accounted for.

Other reports say only two Americans are missing, Dr. Edmund Wood, of Janesville, and Mrs. Josephine Bruguire, who had been living abroad, but who is well known in New York, Newport and San Francisco.

AMERICAN PRESS OPINION.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The American press, as represented by editorials not only in New York papers, but in those of Washington, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore and Boston, unite in characterizing the sinking of the Arabic as (in President Wilson's words) "a deliberately unfriendly act."

NEAR LUSITANIA'S GRAVE.

The torpedo struck the liner on the starboard side about 100 feet from the stern. It tore a great gap in the ship's side, making the watertight compartments useless. The scene of the torpedoing was about forty miles from Old Head of Kinsale, the grave of the Lusitania.

"The liner Arabic was torpedoed at 9.15 a.m. today, 50 degrees 50 seconds north latitude, 8.32 west longitude. She had 423 passengers and crew.

"Two warships have arrived at Queenstown with, as far as can be ascertained, 375 survivors.

"The agents are unable to state if the above represents the total number of survivors, or to give the proportion of passengers and crew respectively.

"There were twenty-two American second-class and four American third-class passengers. First class passengers are not carried on the Arabic."

WASHINGTON IS SHOCKED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—News of the torpedoing of the British steamship Arabic, of the White Star Line, with Americans on board, came as a shock to officials of the United States Government, who had hoped since the despatch of the last American note there would be no further aggravation of an already tense situation between the United States and Germany.

Official information was meagre, and it was only through press despatches that it was heard here that the vessel was torpedoed without warning. While it was recognized that a canvass of the survivors might reveal that no American lives were lost, the torpedoing without warning of a vessel carrying Americans has in itself been pronounced by the United States Government, as a violation of its rights which, if repeated, would be regarded as "deliberately unfriendly."

What the course of the United States would be no official would predict, because of the absence of detailed information. It must be established authoritatively whether any warning was given, and whether the vessel attempted to escape. If no American lives were lost, it was thought in most quarters tonight that drastic steps were improbable, but in the event it is found Americans were drowned, a rupture in diplomatic relations was everywhere discussed as likely.

In some official quarters it is held that the President has no alternative but to recall Gerard and send Bernstorff home.

CANADIANS RESCUED

QUEENSTOWN Aug. 20.—George L. Money of Stratford, Ont., who with his daughter and brother were returning home by the Arabic, said in an interview that the passengers in large numbers were enjoying the beautiful weather about decks after breakfast. Their attention had just been attracted to the steamer Dunsley, the boats of which were being launched.

The censor here evidently has deleted the facts concerning the Dunsley, which was reported torpedoed.

The Arabic, Mr. Money added, was making toward the Dunsley when the streak of a torpedo fired from a submarine lying in the wake of the Dunsley was seen making for the Arabic. There were cries of alarm and all hands made for lifebelts and the lifeboats.

"Fortunately," continued Mr. Money, "all precautions had been taken, the life-belts being in readiness on deck and the boats in position for launching. The torpedo struck the ship and there was a terrible explosion. The ship began to settle immediately and sank in a few minutes.

"It was marvellous how so many boats were got afloat. It speaks well for the discipline of the crew. I was an hour and a half swimming."

A member of the crew of the Arabic said when the steamer was struck she was going at sixteen knots, making for the Dunsley. When the torpedo struck a portion of the ship was torn away and he saw the bodies of coal trimmers and of five engineers whose watch was below, blown to pieces and into the sea.

Although the steamer was torpedoed in the forenoon it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the last of the survivors were picked up by the Primrose and Mongolian. On board these boats all the rescued received the best of care and attention.

Charles Pringle of the Russell Motor Company, Ltd., of Toronto, said that most of the passengers on board the Arabic were Canadians. Discussing the work of rescue, Mr. Pringle said:

"It was really marvellous that so many persons were saved. All the life boats were crowded when they were launched and some persons were thrown into the water. There were some very panicky scenes, but the crew kept cool heads and rescued most of those struggling in the water. The floating rafts did good service, several passengers clinging to them for a considerable time."

"One woman, the mother of three children, had an arm broken and became separated from her children when the boats were lowered. She did not know their fate until she met them at the landing place. It was an affecting scene as she clasped them to her breast."

The assistant purser of the Arabic said:

"The torpedo hit near the engine-room and the boilers of the steamer exploded. This accounts for the rapidity of her sinking. The captain was the last man to leave the ship. The boats were rowed about for four and a half hours before they were picked up."

(Canadian Prfess Special)

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The Arabic incident caused an extreme weakness in war specialties at the opening of the stock market this morning.

German Spies in Russian Army

PARIS, Aug. 19—A special despatch from Petrograd to The France de Demain says:

"The discovery of a vast German plot in the Russian capital has led to several arrests in the Baltic provinces. The German nobility in these provinces appears to be greatly involved. Among those accused in the Island of Yezel is the Inspector of Navigation for the Gulf of Riga.

"All the suspects who have been arrested will be brought to Petrograd and confronted with their accomplices, several of whom hold commissions in the Russian army and some holding important posts in the Government arsenals. To these are attributed certain so-called 'accidents' which have occurred in the manufacture of munitions."

RUSSIAN BALTIC PORT MENACED BY GERMANS

PETROGRAD, Aug. 19.—That German warships again are menacing Riga, the big Russian port on the Baltic, is indicated by an official communication issued here to-night. The communication says:

"Our warships protecting the entrance to the Gulf of Riga yesterday drew closer in owing to the great superiority of the enemy's fleet."

Italy About to Attack Turkey

Unless Satisfaction is Received Within Next Few Hours Declaration of War is Expected

ROME, Aug. 19.—(Special)—The tension between Turkey and Italy is increasing every hour and the final rupture may come at any moment. The refusal of Turkey to allow 8,000 Italians inhabiting the Smyrna district to depart has caused boundless indignation throughout Italy. In spite of the strict press censorship, it is known that the situation at Tripoli is critical and that the revolt of Arabs is the undoubted work of emissaries of the Turkish Government. It is expected that after the Cabinet council tomorrow the Turkish Ambassador will be given his passports and war declared.

Brindisi advices say that five army corps concentrated at Apulia have been ordered to be prepared to leave for an unknown destination.

A Taranto despatch announces that a strong squadron of fast cruisers is being held in readiness to sail from there at a moment's notice. It is expected that the warships will be sent against Turkey if that country declines to satisfy Italy's demand for the release of Italian subjects held in the Ottoman Empire.

Sir Geo. Foster Speaks on War

Advocates Patronizing of Home Industries and Practise of Economy

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. Aug. 19.—Sir George E. Foster, in his address under the auspices of the Maritime Board of Trade, at a well-attended public meeting last night, said that the lessons we all should learn is that we are an utter dependent community and an utter dependant nation.

After dwelling on the idea that the element of public service is the uplifting element in trade and commerce Sir George proceeded to elaborate the statement that commerce is based on needs and wants, pointing out that there would be little to stimulate commerce if one small country supplied every need and want. He then dealt with the mighty mechanism of commerce, with the development of transportation and declared that there is no higher mysterious fascination in romance than the history of the genesis and the development of commerce.

"War as the born enemy of commerce," was next discussed. The present war has produced a greater disturbance of business and trade than any other war. It is taking away millions of productive workers, dissipating capital and diminishing the purchasing power of the people."

After speaking eloquently of the waste, ruin and bloodshed and of the principles for which the Allies are fighting, he took up Germany's loss, and so far as their sea-borne commerce is destroyed their colonies are lost, their home bases disorganized, their production largely interfered with their peaceful penetration of other countries where German influence was quietly extended is also destroyed. When peace comes the tariffs of the Allies will be used against her.

The concluding portions of Sir George's address dealt with Canada's duty in the war. We have already received four hundred millions in war contracts, he said, but this trade is only temporary. We should give preference to what is made and grown in Canada. Imported luxuries should be tabooed. Economy must be rigidly practiced. Keeping in mind Canada's expenditures on the war, we should forego a present advantage for the future and greater gain. Drop drink and tobacco. Save money for the day of rehabilitation.

"In still another instance, it is asserted that several score of men and women were tied together by chains and thrown into Lake Van."

BARRIE, Aug. 19.—Meta Clark, the young woman who thrice attempted to set fire to her father's house was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary. Her parents declared that they were absolutely unable to do anything with her, and as she had threatened to roast them in their beds, his Honor Judge Vance considered that it was unsafe to leave her at large. Apparently the woman did not realize the meaning of her sentence, as she simply smiled, and said she would sooner have that than return home. The evidence showed that she had been most kindly treated at home, notwithstanding her waywardness, and she had no good reason for resentment against her family.

Yuan Would Grab Crown

Resident of Chinese Republic May Proclaim Himself Emperor

PEKIN, Aug. 18.—The project of proclaiming himself emperor is being discussed by Yuan Shi-Kai president of the Chinese republic, with his immediate supporters and Professor Frank Johnson Goodnow of John Hopkins university, legal adviser to the Chinese government, who is spending the summer in Pekin.

Professor Goodnow, who secured the confidence of Yuan Shi-Kai by advice given during former critical times, has been consulted on this question since his arrival here a month ago, and it is learned that he approves the project.

The news became public by the deliberate publication in the morning newspapers here of accounts of the formation by several prominent men of an association to discuss whether a monarchy is not the better form of government for China. The published article telling of the formation of the society quotes Professor Goodnew as declaring that for China a monarchy is better form of government than a republic, and that: "Conditions are different in China and America, and it is impossible to transplant a system from one country to another."

It was learned from one of Yuan Shi-Kai's immediate supporters that if the project proved feasible the plan is to establish the monarchy within two years.

The news has created a sensation in Pekin and is being telegraphed throughout the country.

It is stated that Professor Goodnow was asked to come to Pekin and that soon after his arrival Yuan Shi-Kai consulted with him on the question of a permanent constitution and broached the question of a monarchy. The arguments of Yuan's supporters, it is declared, persuaded Professor Goodnow that a monarchy should be established if the people would accept it and Professor Goodnow drafted a document for Yuan advising him on the method of establishing a monarchy.

Armed Band Invades U.S.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 16.—Armed Mexicans in force crossed the Rio Grande near Mercedes to-night, attacking an outpost of half a dozen cavalry men at Saenz. Ranger Lieutenant Reynau at Mercedes telephoned to Adjutant General Hutchings here that Corporal Wilman of Troop C, Twelfth cavalry, was killed and Lieutenant Roy O. Henry of the same troop was wounded.

Reynau said he understood 270 Mexicans had crossed and that they were coming to attack Mercedes.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 16.—A detachment of United States cavalry patrol was fired on last night from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. The firing occurred at Progreso. The cavalrymen returned the fire and the shooting from the Mexican side stopped. There were no casualties among the American troops.

Reports of attempts by Mexican bandits to recognize their bands in the lower Rio Grande valley were brought here to-day by J. J. Sanders, captain of Texas rangers.

Captain Sanders said he had received reports that Mexicans are crossing into Texas, one or two at a time, and that they are attempting to gather again in Hidalgo county, west of Brownsville.

The 26th infantry, from Texas City, went on duty here to-day. About 75 men of the 26th were left at Kingsville, 115 miles north of Brownsville, and more than two companies went on patrol at Harlington, between here and Kingsville.

Rangers and peace officers are disarming all Mexicans outside of the larger towns throughout the Brownsville section.

Officers of Allies Inspect Air Craft

Representatives of Russia and Italy in Toronto Viewing Birdmen's Work

Two notable figures in the flying world in the persons of Lieut. Gregoire Piotrowsky of the Russian air service, and Mr. J. Lancing Callan, an aeroplane instructor in the Italian navy, paid a visit to Toronto yesterday to witness the performances of the "K" flying boat at the Island.

Lieut. Piotrowsky has been decorated for services at the front by both the Russian and Serbian Governments. The lieutenant is not at all pessimistic about the German onrush, and foresees the enemy in difficulties of the Napoleonic description. Russia has quite a number of flying boats of the "K" type, as well as aeroplanes of other kinds, but not yet as many as Germany; with the result that in many cases the Russians have had to retreat simply because of the lack of aerial scouts and aerial fighting men to tackle enemy scouts. To help remedy this inferiority is the mission of the Lieutenant to this country.

Mr. J. Lancing Callan has been chief instructor in the Italian navy for the past five months, and has crossed the ocean to advise Italy of the latest developments in flying machines, and will return to his post next week.

A biplane of 160 h.p. with which Pilot R. Morris broke the altitude record of the United States at Buffalo recently, rising to 8,300 feet, is expected in Toronto for further trials.

Britons Flocking To the Standard

LONDON, Aug. 19—Swollen columns of recruits are flowing through the streets of London today. Generally the men are sturdy looking civilians, lugging handbags or parcels as they march. Each column is headed by a brass band playing stirring airs. One sees in this Britain's seriousness of war. The ordeal of the ill-prepared Russians, the severity of the struggle at the Dardanelles, the difficulty of untying the Balkan knot, and the renewal of the Zeppelin raids on England are thoroughly arousing the British people. The last named feature of German warfare is filling the popular mind with astonishment, anger and scorn. Heretofore the patience and good temper of the average Briton in everything pertaining to the war have amazed observant strangers. Hate has been almost lacking, and even bereaved parents spoke of lost sons without bitterness; they merely had been killed in war. But the Zeppelin raids are arousing a different feeling. They are regarded not as war, but as a brutal, futile crime, and they are causing the iron to enter the British soul.

Safety of All Three Confirmed—Reported Loss of Canadian Nurses Without Foundation

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Surgeon-General Jones authorizes us to state that all three Canadian hospital units bound for the Dardanelles have arrived in safety. No Canadians were on the Royal Edward and rumors of the reported loss of some Canadian nurses are groundless.

The three units referred to, all of which went out on the Asturias, were No. 1 Stationary Hospital, in charge of Col. McKee; No. 3 Stationary Hospital, in charge of Col. Casgrain, and No. 5 Stationary Hospital at Cairo, in charge of Col Everington.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS

A meeting of the Police Commissioners of the city, composed of Judge Deroche, Police Magistrate Masson and Mayor Panter, was held this afternoon. The resignation of police officer Thompson, who resigned to enlist for overseas service, was accepted and Mr. Patrick Donovan, who has of late been engaged as G. T. R. police officer, was selected to take Officer Thompson's place. Mr. Donovan was formerly a member of the force, and was an efficient officer.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

A young man named Harger, a farm laborer, was yesterday committed for trial by Magistrate Masson on a charge of indecent assault upon a young girl. Some evidence was taken in the case. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney represented the Crown, and Mr. E. J. Butler appeared on behalf of the accused.

ASSAULT CASE

Samuel Dominico was this morning by Magistrate Masson convicted of a charge of common assault upon Mrs. McCarthy. The parties live in the city and the offence took place a few days ago. Owing to alleged provocation the defendant struck the woman in the face, but fortunately the blow was not very heavy. He was fined $2 and costs, which was paid. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr F. E. O'Flynn for the accused.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The following is taken from a letter received from Inspector Clarke by Sr. M. Teresa, of St. Michael's Academy: "This is to certify that Miss Stella Hanley ranked first among your pupils at the recent entrance to High School examinations. She also has the honor of being second in a class of 61 who were successful." Miss Stella Hanley is thus the winner of the five dolar gold piece donated by the Knights of Columbus.

How Bookworms Are Tracked.

To guard the million books in the New York public library against the ravages of bookworms and other insects which feed upon the paper, the glue on the backs and the cloth and leather bindings, a constant care is exercised, and a keen watch kept for any evidence of their activities. One woman is assigned exclusively to this work. When treating the books she wears a huge apron which completely covers her gown. A cheesecloth veil protects her face against the germs which lurk in the musty documents, and even the air she breathes is screened against contagion. Close touch is kept with the health department, and books which have been returned from infected areas are fumigated before being restored to circulation.—Exchange.

Myth of the Red Rose.

The Greeks held that the red rose derived its color from the blood of Venus when she trod on a thorn of the white rose while going to the assistance of the dying Adonis.

The Sextant.

The sextant, an instrument which has been so necessary to polar exploration, was used by Arabian astronomers as far back as 995. The Arabian instrument had a radius of fifty-nine feet nine inches. The modern instrument, which is small enough to be conveniently held in the hand, was invented in 1730 by Thomas Godfrey of Philadelphia and Captain Hadley of the British navy.

Squaring the Account.

The Central Law Journal says that a Philadelphia tailor was shocked over the size of the bill rendered by a lawyer he engaged to sue a customer, and later when the lawyer bought a suit of clothes the tailor retaliated by sending him a bill in the following legal terms: "To measuring and taking order for one suit, $4.50; warrant and instructions to foreman for executing same, $3.25; going twice to cloth merchant, $2.25; fees to cloth merchant, $25; cutting the cloth, $8.75; materials for working, $5.50; sundries for working, $9; trying on of the suit, $2.75; alterations and amendments, $4.50; entering transaction in day book, $2; posting same in ledger, $2; engrossing same, $2.50; writing to the button dealer, $1.25; filing his declaration—eight sheets, $8; fees to button merchant, $9.75; removing the suit by certiorari to your residence, $2.25; writing receipt, $1.75; filing same, $12.25; service of same, $1.50; ditto, $1.50; total, $100.25."

Climate Variety In Chile.

Chile has a coast line of 2,000 miles and the breadth of the country varies from only 100 to 250 miles. The crest of the Andes marks the eastern boundary and the Pacific ocean the western. The coast chain and the principal cordillera of the Andes traverse the country longitudinally. Betwen them lies the central valley, the great agricultural section of the country. In the north are the arid deserts which contain the nitrates. In the south is the Chilos archipelago and the mainland where the rains are frequent and constant. The long stretch of coast and the variations due to the mountain chains afford every variety of climate, but the greater section of the country may be said to have a temperate climate. The mineral resources are the natural wealth which furnish the major part of the purchasing power.—New York Sun.

Did She Say It?

The fair maid gnawed fiercely at the handle of her pen. Then she bent again over the sheet of note paper and wrote rapidly.

"You are no gentleman," the letter ran, "if you think I said such a thing as she said you said I said I had said."

Next day came the reply.

"Dear girl," wrote the man—"You must not think I think you think you must be that kind of girl I think you must be if you said such a thing as you said she said I said you said you had said."

It seems he knew she knew he knew she said just what she said she heard he had heard her friends had heard him say he had heard her say, but, with infinite feminine tact, she accepted his apology.—London Mail.

The Bore.

Some student of the relatively unimportant but nevertheless entertaining side lines of literary history has been investigating the origin of the term by which we characterize the man who habitually blockades the channels of agreeable human intercourse. He has decided that the word "bore" made its first appearance in the letters of Lord Carlisle and of Selwyn, but that they used it with reference not to a creature, but to a state or condition. Thus in 1767 Carlisle wrote: "I enclose a package of letters, which, if they are French, the Lord deliver you from the bore." It was not until the beginning of the last century that the word was applied to the person who wearies and worries.—Boston Herald.

Why Steam Casts a Shadow.

Why does water cast no shadow, while steam, which is invisible, does cast a shadow? Pure water in a state of rest is of uniform density, and the rays of light, although they may be refracted, pass through it almost unimpeded in parallel lines. Steam is composed of vapor of different degrees of density, intermingled usually with some air, so that the rays of light entering it are not uniformly refracted and therefore interfere with and neutralize each other to a considerable degree, as counter or cross waves strike each other down and tend to create a smooth sea.—Chicago Herald.

His Role.

"I suppose since the baby came your husband is no longer the hero of your domestic drama."

"Oh, no; he's merely the walking gentleman."—Baltimore American.

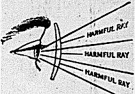
The Danger of Invisible Light



may sound fantastic—but it's very real. In all light, besides the rays that bring color to your eyes, there are harmful, invisible rays that often cause eye-strain. Sir William Crookes, the famous scientist, has invented a form of lens through which this injurious invisible light cannot pass. LAID TO REST

S. STOCKER

Yesterday afternoon many relatives and friends were in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mr. Samuel Stocker, who on Monday last lost his life by drowning in the Bay of Quinte. At the family residence, Charlotte street, an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. J. N. Clarry, Pastor of Holloway Street Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. A. Martin. The former officiated at the interment at Belleville cemetery. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket by relatives and friends. The bearers were Messrs. W. H. Melburn, C. Walters, G. T. Woodley, M. Sprague, A. E. Bailey and J. Hudgins.

COUNTRYCORRESPONDENCE

SHANNONVILLE.

On Monday when the 8th Mounted Rifles arrived at Shannonville they were greeted with a great surprise. Villagers and the farmers from the neighboring country gathered there to give them a "send-off" before they left for Kingston. Each family brought refreshments and a big dinner was prepared. Before leaving, each soldier was presented with a pair of socks. The soldiers stirred up the patriotism of the young men and secured two recruits. The soldiers very much appreciated these remembrances and were loud in their praise of the thoughtfulness of the residents of Shannonville and district.

TEUTON SPIES TAMPER WITH CANADIAN BIPLANES

An instance of the malevolent activities of German spies in Canada was made known to The Globe yesterday. A shipment of biplanes from a United States factory to the British Government while passing over a Canadian railway to the coast was tampered with by these light-fingered gentry, who broke the seals of the cases, opened them and wrought considerable damage to the machines enclosed. Thereafter they screwed down cases again and applied seals so skilfully forged that interference with the machines while in transit was never suspected. Luckily the airmen to whom the machines were consigned examined them thoroughly before attempting to make a flight. It was then that the discovery was made that serious damage had been done to the biplanes.

Within The Military Circle

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

The 8th C. M. R. are back again in camp after covering a trek of fully 100 miles. They returned with every man and horse in the pink of condition. In fact, the men felt so good over the trek that Lt.-Col. Munro thought he would give them another march yesterday afternoon. They went out of camp headed by their trumpet band and pipers, and spent a couple of hours in good hard marching, and were back again in camp in good time for tea, for which they all seemed to have an appetite.

The officers and men of the 8th are full of good stories about their trek to Belleville, and incidents that occurred on the way there and back. They are loud in their praise of the treatment accorded them in nearly every place they passed through, and are more than anxious for another trek to the same place. Already there is a big increase in the mail bag from Napanee and Belleville, and a vigorous correspondence has commenced which may terminate, in many cases in matrimonial conclusions. Several of the officers and men plead guilty to a lonely and longing feeling since coming back to camp, and this usually indicates serious disturbance of the heart and mind.

The trek to Belleville is bearing some real fruit, outside of the experience of the men and horses. About 25 recruits are expected in camp in a few days as one of the results, and the first batch of six have already reported. If treks of this kind can help recruiting, they should be indulged in frequently. The people from the country should be given a chance to see what a well-trained force of men looks like when in training for war. The appearance of the soldier has a strong influence on the mind of the man in the country who is not as accustomed to troops as men in the city and should influence them to enlist.—Kingston Standard.

Canadians are Well Praised by British Officer

"I had the pleasure the other day in London of handing to Major Edgar, of the 13th Light Horse of Canada, a shield on behalf of the 16th Lancers, with which they are affiliated, and I can assure you that the admiration of the British Army for the Canadian troops is no surface thing—it is deep and sincere, and no words can give adequate expression to the splendid, magnificent work they have been doing."

Col. C. J. Eccles, D.S.O., the commanding officer of the 16th Lancers, said this to a Star representative this morning at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, adding that he had seen the Canadians in action, and no commander could wish for better troops.

Col. Eccles won his D.S.O. for the part he played in the heroic retreat from Mons, when the little British force held back the hordes of Germany and when every man was a hero. But he could not talk of that beyond remarking that it was a wonderful action on the part of the British. The 16th Lancers are fighting as infantrymen, forming part of the 3rd Cavalry Brigade, and Colonel Eccles and his men went up to reinforce the Canadian troops in those terrible days at St. Julien, when the Germans used their gas and the Canadians "saved the day."

Twice Wounded

Col. Eccles has been twice wounded—in November a bullet smashed a bone in his right foot and he was invalided home to London. Going back to his command, he was wounded again in May, receiving shrapnel bullets in his hip and back. He was again sent back to England and nursed back to health in the splendidly equipped hospital for officers managed by Mrs. Arnold, a Canadian, who transformed her home in South Kensington into a hospital, and has been running it ever since.

"All our cavalry are now dismounted and they are working like navies. At Neuve Chapelle we were ready waiting for three days to dash through if they had made the gap, but it didn't come off.

The cavalry soldier is proving himself a splendid fellow in his new job—always cheery and willing.

"And we shall come out on top all right, there is no doubt about that. The spirit of the whole army is splendid and cheerful, and while we don't know what Lord Kitchener, Gen. Joffre and Gen. French are preparing, everyone from top to bottom of the army is confident that we shall win out."

Col. Eccles came out on the Corsicar to benefit his health by the voyage, and is returning to the battlefront soon.

Anonymous Gift Swells Sum for War Aeroplane

An Unknown Person Hands Over $1,000 to be Added to the Board of Trade's Subscription

"Here is $1,000 for the aeroplane fund," remarked a gentleman to Mr. George Hadrill, secretary of the Board of Trade, as he handed over a thousand dollars in Canadian currency. "Never mind mentioning my name," he said: "I want to help this fund, not to get publicity."

Mr. Hadrill at once took the money in hand and a receipt marked "Anonymous" was made out and given to the generous donor, who at once withdrew. This is the largest subscription yet received for the Aeroplane Fund, and there was rejoicing at the Board of Trade when it came in, especially in view of the many heavy demands that have been made upon the members of the board during the past year.

With the new subscriptions received today the total funds for aeroplanes now amounts to $4,193. This includes $550 donated by two members who made their subscriptions of $500 and $50 respectively conditional upon sufficient being collected to purchase a modern war airship for service with the Imperial Flying Squadron. Mr. Hadrill stated yesterday that there was no longer any doubt of this being done. There is ample evidence that the members of the Board of Trade have decided to take a personal interest in the fund, and see to it that when the Overseas Club sends in its contributions from Canada for the British aircraft the sky will at least be dotted with one biplane tagged "Montreal Board of Trade."

Abduction Charged Bail Is Refused

Michel Scanzano Arraigned Before Judge Lanctot This Morning to be Heard Next Tuesday

Michael Scanzano, charged with the abduction of a 14-year-old girl named Theresa Musco, was up before Judge Lancroft in the Arraignment Court Montreal. He pleaded not guilty and the enquete was fixed for next Tuesday. At the request of Detective Nassa bail was refused.

Mr. J. Wilfrid Pilon, who defended the accused, protested strongly against Detective Nassa's behavior in going to the judge's bench and whispering to the president of the tribunal.

"The bar cannot stand for this kind of thing," said Mr. Pilon. "At any rate I will not. If the detective has anything to say, why the accused should not be admitted to bail, let him say so openly and before the accused's attorney. Besides, a detective is not a member of the bar and he should not interefere into the affairs of those whose duty it is to defend an accused. In he present case the charge made against my client is being magnified so as to allow the police to make a case. It is against all principals of British fair play and of the elements of justice."

—a palatable, nourishing food-drink, made of wheat, which rebuilds in Nature's own way.

The morning cup will be hot, snappy and just as satisfying with no hurt following if you have Postum in place of tea or coffee.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—requires thorough boiling to bring out its flavour and food value. 15c. and 25c. packages.

Instant Postum—the soluble form—is prepared in the cup instantly with hot water. 30c. and 50c. tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious—cost per cup about the same—sold by grocers everywhere.

KNIFED
Old Soldier's Story of Coffee

An old soldier, released from coffee at 72, recovered his health and tells about it as follows:

"I stuck to coffee for years although it knifed me again and again." (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee.)

"About eight years ago I was taken with a very severe attack of malarial fever. I would apparently recover and start about my usual work only to suffer a relapse. After this had been repeated several times during the year I was again violently ill.

"The Doctor said he had carefully studied my case and it was either 'quit coffee or die,' advising me to take Postum in its place.

"I had always thought coffee one of my dearest friends, and especially when sick, and I was very much taken back by the doctor's decision for I hadn't suspected the coffee I drank could possibly cause my troubles.

"I thought it over a few minutes and finally told the Doctor I would make the change. Postum was procured for me the same day and made according to directions. Well, I liked it and stuck to it and since then I have been a new man.

"The change in health began in a few days and surprised me, and now, although I am seventy-two years of age, I do lots of hard work and for the past month have been teaming, driving sixteen miles a day besides loading and unloading the wagon. That's what Postum in place of coffee has done for me. I now like the Postum as well as I did coffee."

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

We have recently witnessed the accomplishment of three events in the field of warfare which are calculated to dampen the ardour of the patriot and to increase the gloom of the pessimist. But if one looks a little more closely into the situation, it will be seen that there is more reason to be hopeful and cheerful than depressed and disheartened. It is as if a man opened his street door at midnight and looked out into the black and starless night. "Watchman, what of the night?"

Let him close the door and wait patiently for the dawn, and he will learn the truth of that grand old motto, "The darkest cloud has a silvery gleam." Soon the rising sun will tip the hills with gladsome gold and the night's fears will be dissipated by the noonday sunshine. True, our hearts almost stood still when we heard that a British transport had been sent to the bottom. But although we deeply grieved at the loss of so many brave Jack Tars, we recognised that—unlike the Lusitania outrage—it was a perfectly legitimate act of war. We knew that—according to the law of averages—we could not expect to be bringing soldiers across the seas, from all parts of the Empire, and to forever evade the watches of the wily German submarines. Rather do we rejoice in the knowledge that while a million men have been conveyed in British ships this is practically the first occasion upon which the German navy has done anything that can be described as an effective piece of naval warfare.

But the news which reached Belleville yesterday afternoon is of an entirely different nature. The Arabic was a White Star liner, a passenger vessel passing from Liverpool to New York, having on board, as far as we know, both women and children. To torpedo such a vessel was an act of murder, to rank with the sinking of the Lusitania. That the victims fortunately numbered only a few—according to the latest information—is due to the fact that another British vessel came to the aid of the Arabic, and that the total number of passengers only numbered a little over 400. But the principle remains the same, whether the victims were eight or a thousand. They were deliberately murdered on the high seas by a German submarine, against all recognised rules of international warfare.

The third recent event which has caused disappointment in the breasts of all patriotic Canadians is the fall of the Russian fortress of Kovno, the capital of the Province of that name. It was not evacuated, like Warsaw, but captured after a stout resistance. The Russian line has been broken, for the fall of Kovno means that the Germans will be able to cross the Niemen, and threaten the exposed right of the Russian army. It also separates central Russian army from the one operating in the north. The outlook for the Allies is not so cheerful as it might be; but there is no cause for despondency. The Russians claim a victory at Brest-Litovsk, and the Germans are said to have lost nearly 33,000 recently in three days' fighting. The Russian army has never been broken up, and it will yet render a good account of itself.

With regard to the Western front, everything points to the early commencement of the great drive, for which we have all been waiting with almost feverish impatience. Lord Kitchener is not the man to start before he is ready. His new army has been in France for at least a month; but it is evident that he would not make a start until he had such an ample supply of artillery and ammunition that he could follow up any advance that might be made. The British army is stated to be supplied with a new 17-inch gun, from which much is expected. Artillery will play an important part in the new phase of the war which is about to open out. The Germans may put up a very stout resistance, and our losses may be severe; but the British will undoubtedly advance. The night of doubt and gloom is passing away, and the dawn of a brighter day is opening.

CURRENT COMMENT

Henri Bourassa and George Bernard Shaw ought to be exchanged for a couple of good British prisoners.—London Advertiser.

This city will have something big to boast about when the Hamilton machine gun battalion is organized—the first in the British Empire.—Hamilton Herald.

Perhaps the shirkers of military age seeing the legend "Safety First" displayed in places of danger conclude that it is a warning against enlistment.

Montreal boasts of a bigger civic debt, per capita, than any other city on this continent. The worst of it is that there is so little to show for this big debt.—Hamilton Herald.

The fact that scores of English ladies of title and high social position are working long hours as ordinary operatives in munition factories is pretty good evidence that at last Britain is thoroughly aroused.

A despatch from Athens says that the British envoy has been received in audience by King Constantine, and it is expected that Greece will soon declare in favor of the allies. It is to be hoped that these two statements are not linked together as cause and effect.

Anyhow, the recent exposures of German secret machinations in the United States should have one good effect. They should kill any chance there may have been that the pro-German agitators could compel the U. S. congress to declare in favor of an embargo on war supplies.

Lissauer, the author of the German "Hymn of Hate," has deprecated the huge popularity which the exploit brought him. He need not repeat. Mere expressions of malevolence do no harm. The real German hymn of hate was the murder and outrage of women and children in Belgium and France.—New York Sun.

Even George Bernard Shaw's big subscription to the national patriotic fund is not sufficient proof that Shaw is really patriotic. It may be evidence that the general contempt which he has earned by his unpatriotic utterances has pierced even his thick hide, and he desires to make amends.—Hamilton Herald.

For the lasting good of Germany it might well be doubted whether a peace concluded now would be a boon. The supreme need of Germany is to rid herself of Prussian militarism, of the imperial rule. There are hopeful signs that the people, in increasing numbers, see and feel this truth, but an immediate peace would leave the German people wearing all their fetters, which would become more galling than ever. The imperial and militaristic spirit would be intolerable in its arrogance. The thrall would be unbreakable, and the German people, deluded by the exultant feeling of victory, would be less inclined than ever to attempt to break it.—New York Times.

All over Europe, and even beyond Europe, a glorious national impulse has moved the world. It is felt in every part of the British Empire. We have our own disputes about autonomy and decentralization, but we all say that we will never accept Prussianism. Botha fighting on our side is a marvellous spectacle. He has fought against us. He is a Teuton. But he will fight to the death against the pedantic tyranny of Prussia. Canada, Australia, India, are on the same side. We have our own problems to solve. But everyone of us says he will never bow the knee to Prussian pedantry.—Toronto Star.

It is no mere rhetoric or sentiment which speaks of the nations as finding their souls in this struggle; nor are we doing the Germans an injustice if we say that the leading characteristic of German conduct is the repudiation in public relations of everything that belongs to the soul in private relations. There is no concealment about this, and it cannot be called a malevolent inference of their enemies, for it is an avowed part of their philosophy of life that there is no law which binds their own state or can limit its action in war or peace.—Westminster Gazette.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Our submarine war is in the highest degree popular in Germany. Hence it is certain that any restriction of its effects on England would be productive of a profound discouragement, an exasperation that would extend to the limits of our empire.

The German people are conscious that in this warfare we possess an unrivalled means for wounding and lacerating England in her most vulnerable parts. Therefore, all recriminations concerning the cruelty of such a weapon, or howls about the poor innocents who may be made to suffer through it, are but so many silly songs to which no sensible person pays attention.

We are aware that of late a movement has sprung up in certain circles in favour of stopping this means of fighting, which, it is said, might bring us into armed conflict with America. We are willing to run the risk rather than give ourselves over bound and gagged to the knife of the English butcher.—Hamburger Nachrichten.

The Poet's Corner

TO "THE DAY."

Watchman, what of the night?
War clouds low on the sky;
Thunder of cannon and mine;
Blood of the battle; a cry
Of innocents tortured and slain,
While earth breathes hard in her pain.

Watchman, what of the night?
Cities wasted and worn;
Village and hamlet and hall
Dark 'neath an infinite fall
Of Death and Sorrow; forlorn
Children, and widows that mourn.

Watchman, what of the night?
Behold a tumult of tears!
Ask of the passionless years—
Have they witnessed a sight more fell,
Fashioned of human tears,
Grim with the glare of Hell?

Watchman, what of the night?
Trampling of countless feet
In the long, deserted street;
Feet of the hosts of war,
Coming from lands afar,
Where the armed millions meet.

Watchman, what of the night?
Somewhere beyond the sea,
Faint, hesitatingly,
Quivers a bar of light,
Tipping the hills with gray,
Watchman, what of the DAY?

KITCHENER AT THE FRONT

Visits Battle Line and Has Message for France

PARIS, Aug. 19.—A joint inspection of parts of the western battle line was made Monday by Lord Kitchener, Great Britain's secretary of war, and Alexandre Millerand, the French war minister. They were accompanied part of the time by General Joffre and Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the French and British armies. The military leaders paid particular attention to conditions in the Champagne and the Wovre.

Speaking at the close of a dinner Tuesday evening, M. Millerand declared he felt highly honored by Lord Kitchener's visit to France and was glad to learn from the British Field Marshal's own lips of the complete accord uniting the two nations. Addressing the British war minister directly, he said:

"Yours is not the only voice which praises our soldiers, for the enemy also gives them their due. After a year of war the enemy no longer has illusions of winning. He predicts internal dissensions among his enemies which he hopes will occur. Already he is endeavoring to incite neutrals and places before belligerent veiled innuendos of peace.

"Let me assure you France is united. People, Parliament and Government never have been more firmly determined, in close accord with our heroic and faithful allies, never to lay down our arms until the day arrives when we shall have attained our goal, and if the road to Tipperary is long the price is sufficiently high to justify us, because the price is the liberation of the world."

Lord Kitchener, speaking in French, thanked M. Millerand for his kindness in extending an invitation to visit the French front, and said that after seeing the splendid troops of General Joffre he could understand the French victories. He closed by declaring that Great Britain was resolved to make the great possible effort to aid France and to carry the war to a finish.

War Munitions Made in Canada

British Orders Reach Huge Total of $230,000,000

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Astonishment is expressed at the Ottawa statement that the British Government orders in Canada for war supplies have now reached the enormous total of $230,000,000. The English public little realize the importance of the aid Canadian industrialism is capable of rendering in the present war.

The Pall Mall Gazette says General Bertram's figures are "a remarkable demonstration of the capacity and vitality of Canada as a manufacturing centre. The more we can depend on Canada and the other Dominions in this respect the better it will be. Hats off to our Lady of the Snows."

Financial authorities here estimate that this enormous Canadian exportation of war supplies, added to the confident expectation of greatly increased breadstuff exports, will be of the greatest assistance in easing the Anglo-Canadian economic situation. It is estimated that allowing for increased acreage and yield per acre the Canadian total export to the British market for the current year may reach the enormous total of $500,000,000 as compared with $225,000,000 in the year before the war.

An Interpretation To Suit His Ends

Von Bethmann-Hollweg Attributes a Year-Old Statement to Sir Edward Grey

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, in a sensational statement in the Reichstak today quoted the words which he declared Sir Edward Grey spoke to the German ambassador in London when the latter took leave of the British Foreign Minister after the beginning of the war in August, 1914.

"Sir Edward Grey," said the Chancellor, "emphasizing his words, said that war between the two countries would make it possible that at the conclusion of peace he could render us more valuable services than had England remained neutral.

The Chancellor explained that he interpreted these words to mean that England desired the friendship of a beaten and weakened Germany as a counter-influence against powerful Russia. England would be ready to use such a Germany—a weak country without industry and without a navy.

The Chancellor's report of this scene in London caused a profound sensation in the Reichstag.

Important Arrest Made at Montreal

Supposed Ringleader in Plot to Get Enemies out of Canada

A real war-time arrest was made yesterday afternoon on St. Lawrence street, Montreal, when Frank Chevinsky, alias John Miro, was taken in charge by men from the Provost Marshal's office, and by this arrest it was believed that the ringleader of the plot for the sending of enemy aliens from this district to the United States had been captured.

Chevinsky was walking along St. Lawrence street, when Capt. Griffith, with two soldiers from the Provost Marshal's guard, and one of the alien prisoners spotted him. The Austrian prisoner at once recognized Chevinsky as the man to whom he had paid $20 to get him out of Canada.

One of the soldiers, who were all in ordinary clothes, moved in front of Chevinsky. It was believed that the Austrian was armed, and the soldiers took no chances. He gently pressed a revolver to Chevinsky's side, and intimated that he was under military arrest. Before Chevinsky could say a word the soldier in front had dropped back, and the Austrian was handcuffed.

Chevinsky was at once taken to the office of the Provost Marshal on St. Antoine street, where he was identified by three other Austrians whom he had agreed to smuggle across the border. With this and other identification it was decided to intern him. Later on he will be sent to either Spirit Lake or Valcartier, and kept out of mischief until the war is over.

This arrest of Chevinsky, or Miro, marked the successful termination of a long chase by the Provost Marshal's officers for the man supposed to be sending enemy aliens across the border. It was found Chevinsky was an enemy alien, living at 14½ St. Justin street, that he had never registered as such, and that he had even joined a city battalion.

MRS. G. A. COX PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Geo. A. Cox, widow of the late Senator Cox, died at her residence, 467 Sherbourne street, Toronto, Wednesday night. The late Mrs. Cox retired to rest Wednesday evening, enjoying apparent good health, but was found unconscious in her room yesterday morning. Her medical attendant was called, but efforts to revive her were without avail, and she passed away twelve hours later. As most of her relatives are out of town the funeral arrangements will not be made until today.

The late Mrs. Cox was the daughter of Mr. Walter Sterling, City Auditor. She was married to the late Senator Cox on April 8, 1908, and since his death has resided at 467 Sherbourne street. She was an influential member of Sherbourne Street Methodist Church, and took an interest in charitable work.

A Gramophone Trick.

The neatest thing in gramophone tricks is to offer a bet to any member of the company that you can play a record without the machine. It is a perfectly straightforward matter, says the Strand Magazine. Take a lead pencil and a piece of note paper and explain that this is all you are going to use. Then fix the lead pencil into the hole of the disk so that it can be set spinning on the point like a child's teetotum. Fold a piece of paper, which should be thin and crisp, and hold the sharp point of the paper in the groove of the record very lightly, so as not to disturb the equilibrium of the spinning disk. The record will be distinctly played, only very faintly, of course, as you are substituting a somewhat primitive "producer" instead of the patent sound box.

Frohman's Generosity.

Mr. Heyman said to Charles Frohman one day:

"Do you know you are not doing right in sending money to all the people who write and tell you they are in hard luck? They may be imposing on you."

"There may be some that are imposing," Frohman answered, "but I know that there are others in want, so I can't afford to make a mistake."—New York World.

Patriotic James.

In some school not located—locate it to please yourself—the teacher was hearing the history lesson. Turning to one of the scholars, she asked:

"James, what was Washington's farewell address?"

"Heaven, ma'am," he said.—Current Opinion.

Old English Customs.

The ladies of Edward IV.'s time dined at 11 in the morning and were in bed shortly after 8 at night. Perhaps none of the old English customs has undergone such a change as the number of meals taken a day and the times of retiring to rest.

Oil Locomotives on G. T. P.

Mr. Morley Donaldson, Vice-President of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, announces that the installation of oil-burning locomotives on the mountain section of the line has now been completed. These locomotives are of the most modern type, and were placed in service for passenger traffic for the first time July 24. They are operating from Jasper to Prince Rupert, over [illegible] miles of main line.

Especial interest attaches to the installation of this class of motive power, as it marks the first use of oil-burners on an extensive scale in Canada. Great oil storage tanks have been erected at various points along the line for supplying locomotives with the necessary fuel.

Further Information Wanted.

"Did you tell that man at the door that I was not at home?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"What did he say?"

"He asked me when you would be."

"And what did you say then?"

"I told him to wait and I'd come up and ask you."—Detroit Free Press.

Curbing the Kicker.

"I find one useful at the complaint desk, anyhow," replied the merchant. "A pair of fine eyes will go a long ways toward making a man think that his complaint was badly founded."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Modesty.

Peter's Version.

On the last day of school prizes were distributed at Peter's school. When the little boy returned home the mother was entertaining callers.

"Well, Peter," asked one of the callers, "did you get a prize?"

"No," replied Peter, "but I got horrible mention."—New York Times.

Fathoms Deep.

The boy yawned over his geography.

"How deep is the ocean?" he inquired, pointing to the center of the Pacific.

"Thousands of fathoms, my son—thousands."

"Well, how much is a fathom?"

"A fathom is—er—er—are you looking at the Pacific? Well, your Uncle Karl years ago was shipwrecked in the Pacific, and the pirates came out after him, and the cannibals—but I'm too busy now to tell you the story. Run along to bed." — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Oldest Bridge In England.

Harold's bridge, said to be the oldest bridge in England, is near Waltham Abbey, which the Saxon King Harold founded. It consists of a single arch of sandstone surmounting stone foundations and spans a little stream, the river Lea. Across this bridge King Harold is said to have been borne to his grave in the abbey churchyard after having been slain by an arrow at the battle of Hastings in 1066. The sides of the arch have crumbled away, but the central portion is intact and seemingly as secure as it was when constructed, more than 850 years ago.

The bridge is not in use today, but stands in a pasture adjoining the grounds of the ancient abbey, of which the chapel, now used as the parish church, and portions of the brick wall surrounding the grounds alone remain.—Springfield Republican.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

BLACK FOXES.

How the Little Animals Have Brought Wealth to P. E. Island.

Angus McTavish's hens clucked and scratched contentedly in their yard. It was a pleasant place. There was soft loam, a little patch of gravel and a dusty expanse for dry baths. The lord of the harem flapped his way to a stump in a corner of the low fence and posed there, the spring sun of Prince Edward Island waking his iridescent feathers to a jewellike blaze. His wives looked at him proudly. And then calamity descended.

Little need for the last word of advice. "Black fox" on Prince Edward Island means wealth. McTavish and his wife joined in an earnest attempt to capture the marauder. A gun was barred, for that would have meant injury to the glossy pelt. Maybe Reynard knew it, for he waited until his pursuers were close by and then with a defiant flirt of his brush skipped into the underbrush. And with him went a vision of thousands of dollars.

Thousands? you may say with an incredulous lift of the eyebrows. That's absolutely right, for the royal black fox has brought a vast income to this smallest of the Canadian provinces. Canny Scotch farmers didn't need a second hint with such a chance for gathering in good dollars, and the result is what might have been expected. The black fox has been commercialized. It was a speculation at first, but to-day fox ranching has assumed the proportions of a communal industry. The mere hunting down of a black fox for his pelt has been relegated to the dark ages. Now the fur farmers have kennels and a pair of live foxes for breeding purposes that have been capitalized at $30,000.

Properly are these Prince Edward Island foxes known as "royal" silvers or "royal" blacks! Their pelts are catalogued at prices ranging from $500 to $4,000 each at winter fur auctions in London. Twenty skins from one island ranch three years ago averaged nearly $1,400 each. Since that time the fine bred foxes have been saved for reproductive purposes, but a test pelt put on the market in 1914 brought approximately $2,000, and in the Paris shops the current quotations (before the war) ranged around $3,000.

When one vixen, or female fox, bears from twenty-five to thirty-five fox pups in the course of her ten years of "motherhood" it is little wonder that she is worth literally from two to four times her weight in gold. A normal black fox weighs from nine to eleven pounds and is now selling, alive, at from $6,000 to $18,000; while an equal weight of refined gold is valued at but from $2,975 to $3,637!

The largest source of wild black fox pelts at present is north-western Canada. Recent Edmonton despatches state that a considerable number of this season's take are valued at from $500 to $1,500. But just as indubitably as the black fox skin has usurped foremost position in the fur market so surely has the Prince Edward Island pelt won first place among black fox furs.

The first black foxes were captured and bred successfully on Prince Edward Island in 1892, no less than three different individuals claiming the credit for the achievement.

Last of the Blewetts.

A cablegram which has been received recently from France by Jean Blewett, the celebrated Canadian author, announces that her nephew, Private D. Blewett, has been seriously wounded in the recent fighting in France. He is 19 years of age and is a son of William Blewett, of Kamsack, Sask.

Private Blewett is the last of a long and distinguished line of soldiers in the Blewett family history. The founder of the family came to Cornwall, Eng., from Normandy, France, with Edward the Conqueror, and all down the centuries the name of Blewett has been closely associated with Great Britain's army and navy. One of the Blewetts was an English admiral in the long ago, and two great-granduncles of Private Blewett, the subject of this sketch, were captains and two more lieutenants in the royal navy. Col. Blewett was killed leading his company in the assault at Fort Picuvena, the day of Badajoz, in 1812. Both of Private Blewett's great-grandfathers were officers in the British army. The sword of Admiral Blewett given him by his sovereign, has descended to the young Canadian, who has already proved himself a worthy descendant of those old world heroes of the Blewett family.

Weak on the Classics.

One of the latest stories of the Canadian navy being told at Ottawa betrays a healthy disregard of ancient lore on the part of the men behind the guns on our steel walls. It concerns an electrician who was among those volunteering to make up the crew of the "Niobe" at the opening of the war. He was leaving behind him in Ottawa a wife, and that wife was expectant. Just before starting for the post of duty the stalwart sailor told his good wife that if the child should prove a boy he should be named Niobe. Evidently the father had never heard of the sorrowful lady after whom his ship was named. The mother, in all simplicity, told the mistress of a home in which she was temporarily employed the charge which the husband and father had laid on her. It was necessary to explain to her as gently as possible that that particular name did not belong to the boy sex. Niobe, according to the legend, was the mother of twelve children.

DAINTY DANCE DRESS.

FOR THE SUMMER GIRL.

A dainty dance dress of pussy willow taffeta in maize color with pastel flowered figure is shown in the illustration. A lace trimmed drop peeps from under the circular skirt while a suggestion of a bodice with draped satin girdle and streamer ends afford a charming combination. Silk net in soft folds and plaited sleeve caps with dainty flowers supply all that is necessary to the bodice.

THE SUNNY SIDE.

Do Not Envy Your Neighbor; He Has Troubles of His Own.

Don't allow yourself to fall into the way of thinking that you have all the troubles there are in the world. Don't for a moment think that life is unfair, that the scales are unevenly balanced by an unjust fate; that you have all the sorrows and cares while some one else has all the joys. You will be in a bad way when you begin to follow such a train of thought.

Life is, after all, very square, very even. If we have sorrows we also have joys. If we have shadows we also have sunshine. But neither you nor any one of us can have a monopoly of either the shadows or the sunbeams; we each have an equal share of both. And if any one of us seems to have more than his share of shadows, if he seems to have been given the lion's share of care and trouble, it is only because he does not make the most of the sunshine while it is with him. He is too busy worrying about the sorrow he has had and the care he may have in the future to enjoy the happiness of the present.

Don't envy your neighbor who rolls about in a high priced automobile, while you have to walk. He has his share of troubles, even though poverty may not be among them. Don't wish you were in his place just because he seems to have every luxury. If you were in his place you might give anything to be back home again in your own home.

Our happiness is such as we make it. It is lying ready within hand's reach. We have only to stretch out our arms and take it. The difficulty is that most of us are too busy looking for trouble to see the happiness at our door. Most of us are no sooner through with the problems of today than we begin anticipating the difficulties of tomorrow. Is it any wonder that we find so much trouble in life when we are looking for it so unceasingly?

Let us reverse our usual mental processes and begin looking for happiness. If we keep thinking of the pleasures of life we will surely find them. "Search and ye will find." This being so, why not search for the beautiful, the happy and the bright instead of the dark and gloomy? Let us forget about trouble for awhile and look only for joy. You will be surprised to see how much of it you will find.

Don't let the shadows which fall on every path spoil your enjoyment of the sunshine. Far better to fill your mind so full of the subeams that when the shadows fall you will not notice them for the brightness in your heart.

Timely Tips.

Here is a description of an outside coat that one can wear through an entire day, say, if one comes to town from the country home, goes shopping in the morning, to tea in the afternoon and stays in town to dine and the theater. For this suede cloth or a first class duvetyn is just right. Taube, dull green or one of the dull orange or golden brown shades can be had in these materials. A king's blue, futurist or Roman striped lining gives life to such a garment and lends it individuality when it is thrown back over the chair.

RECORDS BROKEN.

Rogers Pass Tunnel Now Caps All Previous Achievements.

Rapid progress is being made by the Canadian Pacific Railway in driving the Rogers Pass tunnel in British Columbia. In November last the record for this tunnel was 817 feet and during January it had advanced to 932 feet.

This remarkable progress, made in a pioneer heading, driven through a mica schist, is accounted for by the steady improvement in the air drills and drill steel used, as well as in the system employed.

As recently as January, 1908, the record for Europe and the world was still held by the Simplon tunnel with a monthly average of 685 feet, and in January, 1908, the record for the American continent of 449 feet was made by the Gunnison tunnel of Colorado, in a heading 8½ by 12 feet, which ultimately reached 824 feet a month when driving through very soft shale.

The Loetschberg tunnel in Switzerland was well under way in January, 1908, but the maximum for one heading by then was only 558 feet. This was, however, far eclipsed later on by the remarkable advance of 1,013 lineal feet in a 31-day month in the same tunnel through limestone.

It is true that in 1906 one shield of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad reached 965 feet per month, doing as much as 308 feet in one week, but as this was in very soft Hudson silt and not more than 33 per cent. of the excavation was admitted to the tunnel, the remainder being pushed up into the river bed by the shield, it is not considered a fair comparison with the solid rock records.

Nothing approaching the Simplon record was reached in hard rock in America until the Wallkill tunnel, of the New York city aqueduct, advanced 523 feet in Hudson shale in September, 1910, but this record was broken three times by the Elizabeth tunnel of Los Angeles aqueduct, with 604 feet in 30 days, and the Jawbone tunnel advanced 1,061 feet in very soft rock on the same undertaking.

It remained for Canada to lead the way on the American continent in hard rock tunnels, and the Mt. Royal tunnel, in Montreal, for the Canadian Northern Railway, reached the satisfactory record of 810 feet for June, 1913, in Trenton limestone with dikes of hard rock. Now this record is outdistanced.

In these recent records on the American continent the European system of mounting the drills on a horizontal bar, with or without a drill carriage, has been adopted, and as this permits the drills being set up before the muck pile is removed, it is possible for at least two shots to be fired in an eight-hour shift. A large amount of high percentage powder per cubic yard is required to break the rock into small fragments and scatter it well along the heading floor to give time for two rounds of drilling in eight hours, especially as each round pulls an average of five feet.

OTHER PLACES AND MANNERS.

Hon. Pierre Leblanc Knew Electioneering in the Old Days.

Hon. Pierre Evariste Leblanc, the new Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, re-enters the public life of his Province after a retirement of six years, following his defeat as M.L.A. for Laval County, which he had represented continuously for twenty-four years, the final four as leader of the small Conservative minority in the Quebec Legislature In the good old primitive days, the standard rate for votes among the habitants was one dollar, cash in hand, with a drink of gin to bind the bargain, and there is no case on record where a voter was so lost to all sense of honor as to fail to fulfil a compact thus made. Mr. Leblanc, well versed in the simple, innocent ways of the French-Canadian voters, was accounted one of the most skilful of campaigners, but he found that he had something to learn when he was called upon by his party to do some electioneering in the Eastern Townships, which are largely settled by the descendants of English and Scotch pioneers. At the first house which he visited he found the men folk away, and a buxom housewife in possession. Explaining his mission in courtly and persuasive fashion, he ventured the hope that the local Conservative candidate might count upon receiving the vote of the master of the house. The lady, for answer, extended a broad and work-worn palm, and, slapping it vigorously with the other hand, exclaimed: "John Jones votes for the man who first puts a ten-dollar bill in that hand, and he doesn't vote at all unless I get it!"

Must Compete With U. S.

A recent report on the lumber situation in British Columbia, after discussing the effect of American competition on the Canadian lumberman, says:

The same necessity for expansion of markets exists in the Northwestern States as in British Columbia. British Columbia, therefore, in striving for sufficient markets to keep her mills operating, will be forced to meet the keen competition of the American mills. The nature of that competition may be judged from the fact that, although the market in the Canadian Prairie has never been great enough to take more than three-fifths of our ouput, the Americans have in nearly every year of the past five supplied at least one-fifth of it. Although there is now free lumber into the United States, only 40,000,000 feet were shipped from British Columbia to the United States in 1914, as compared with the 77,000,000 feet imported into the Canadian Prairie from the United States during the same period. To find and hold a wider lumber market will tax every resource of both manufacturers and Government through years of effort. There can, however, be no argument about the necessity of making an attempt."

Speed of Waterfowl.

Waterfowl have great powers of flight. The canvasback duck covers from 130 to 160 feet a second. The blue winged teal and the green winged teal, the bluebill and the redheads are only a little slower. Mallards, pintails, wood ducks, black ducks and others can easily fly faster than a mile a minute. Even such large birds as cranes, swans, pelicans and geese can fly at a speed of more than 100 feet a second.

The speed of waterfowl has often been measured with great accuracy. Two men take positions on a duck pass a measured distance apart. The first man carries a stop watch and a gun, the second a gun only. As the fowl pass the first blind the timer shoots in order to frighten the birds into full speed and starts his watch. As the ducks pass the second blind the man there fires a shot, and the timer stops his watch. The usual length of the course is a quarter of a mile, although a mile "track" is sometimes used.—Youth's Companion.

A Lasting Window Polish.

There is an art in washing windows, and if they are properly polished the operation need not be repeated for a long time. A really good polish will survive several rainstorms and will only require the dust to be removed occasionally with a dry cloth. The inside of the windows should be washed with tepid water, without soap or powder of any kind, rubbed dry with chamois and polished with cheesecloth. A solution for cleaning the outside should be made from one ounce of pulverized whiting, one ounce of grain alcohol, one of liquid ammonia and a pint of water. Spray the window with clear water to remove surface dirt, and apply the solution with a soft cloth. Let this dry on. Afterward polish with cheesecloth or tissue paper. If the glass has been badly scratched a filling may be applied. This consists of an ounce of white wax dissolved in turpentine. It should be applied before the polishing.—Washington Star.

Questions.

There are many different kinds of questions, but, roughly speaking, they all may be included in the following three divisions; first, those which can be answered; second, those which may be answered; third, those which should not be answered. Illustrating the first division are those questions which others never ask of you and those which you never care to hear others answer; the second includes questions which are pointed, private, public, perplexing and political; in fact, any questions which simpletons assert cannot be answered; the third division, questions which should not be answered, includes what? Well, that is a question which should not be asked.

Some people ask questions because they wish to know more; some ask them because they desire to show what they already know, and some ask them because they want to show what others do not know.—Life.

A Matter of Temperature.

Hospitality is a good deal a matter of latitude, I suspect. The shade of a palm tree serves an African for a hut. His dwelling is all door and no walls. Everybody can come in. To make a morning call on an Eskimo acquaintance one must creep through a long tunnel. His house is all walls and no door except such a one as an apple with a worm hole has. One might very probably trace a regular gradation between these two extremes. In cities where the evenings are generally hot the people have porches at their doors, where they sit, and this is, of course, a provocative to the interchange of civilities. A good deal which in colder climates is ascribed to mean dispositions belongs really to mean temperature.—Holmes

Soap Substitutes In Japan.

Soap is a comparatively recent importation into Japan. However, what the Japanese lacked in substance for loosening the dirt they made up in "elbow grease." Most often they used a powder or flour, among the most common cleansers being the bean, rice and bran. The women of old Japan used a kind of seaweed for shampooing the hair. They gathered it from the rocks and dissolved it in warm water.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Mysterious Stranger

Phillis kept a sad silence; not for worlds would she have checked the flow of tears that must have been so healing to the tortured brain. Besides what was there that she so young and inexperienced, could say in the presence of a grief so terrible, so overpowering? The whole thing was inexplicable to Phillis. Why were the outworks of conventionality so suddenly thrown down? Why was she, a stranger, permitted to be a witness of such a revelation As she sat there speechless and sympathizing, a faint sound reached her ear—the rustle of a dress in the adjoining room—footsteps that approached warily, and then paused; a moment afterwards the door closed softly behind them. Phillis looked round quickly, but could see nothing; and the same instant a peal of thunder rolled over their heads.

Mrs. Cheyne started up with a hysterical scream, and caught hold of Phillis. "Come," she said, almost wildly, "we will not stay here. The children will not come to-nightt, for who could hear their voices in such a storm? My little angels!—but they shall not see me like this. Come! come!" And, taking the girl by the arm, she almost dragged her from the room, and led the way with rapid and disordered footsteps to a large luxurious chamber, furnished evidently as a dressing-room, and only divided from the sleeping-room by a curtained archway.

As Mrs. Cheyne threw herself down in an arm-chair and hid her face in her hands, the curtain was drawn back, and Miss Mewlstone came in with an anxious; almost frightened expression on her good-natured countenance. She hurried up to Mrs. Cheyne and took her in her arms as though she were a child.

"Now, Magdalene, now, my dear," she said, coaxingly, "you will try to be good and command yourself before this young lady. Look at her; she is not a bit afraid of the storm—are you, Miss Challoner? No, just so. you are far too sensible."

"Oh, that is what you always tell me," returned Mrs. Cheyne, wrenching herself free with some violence. "Be sensible,—be good—when I am nearly mad with the oppression and suffocation, here, and here," pointing to her head and breast. "Common places, commonplaces; as well stop a deluge with a teacup. Oh, you are an old fool, Barby; you will never learn wisdom."

"My poor lamb! Barby never minds one word you say when you are like this."

"Oh, I will beg your pardon tomorrow, or when the thunder stops. Hark! there it is again," cowering down in her chair. "Can't you pray for it to cease, Barby? Oh, it is too horrible! Don't you recollect the night he rode away—right into the storm, into the very teeth of the storm? 'Good-bye, Magdalene; who knows when we may meet again?' and I never looked at him, never kissed him, never broke the silence by one word, and the thunder came, and he was gone," beating the air with her hands.

"Oh, hush, my dear, hush! Let me read to you a little, and the fever will soon pass. You are frightening the poor young lady with your wild talk, and no wonder!"

"Pshaw! who minds the girl? Let her go or stop; what do I care? What is the whole world to me, when I am tormented like this? Three years, four years—more than a thousand days—of this misery! Oh, Barby! do you think I have been punished enough? do you think here he is, up in heaven with the children, that he forgives and pities me, who was such a bad wife to him?"

As Miss Mewlstone paused a moment to wipe tears that were flowing over her cheeks, Phillis' voice came to her relief.

"Oh, can you doubt it?" she said, in much agitation. "Dear Mrs. Cheyne, can you have an instant's doubt? Do you think the dead carry all these paltry earthly feelings into the bright place yonder? Forgive you—oh, there is no need of forgiveness there; he will only be loving you—he and the children, too."

"God bless you!" whispered Miss Mewlstone. "Hush, that is enough! Go, my dear, go, and I will come to you presently. Magdalene, put your poor head down here. I have thought of something that will do you good." She waved Phillis away almost impatiently, and laid the poor sufferer's head on her bosom, shielding it from the flashes that darted through the room. Phillis could see her bending over her, and her voice was as tender as though she were soothing a sick infant.

Phillis was trembling with agitation as she stole down the dark corridor. Never in her happy young life had she witnessed or imagined such a scene. The wild words, the half-maddened gestures, the look of agony stamped on the pale, almost distorted features, would haunt her for many a day. Oh, how the poor soul must have suffered before she lost self-control and balance like this!

It was not the death of her children that had so utterly unnerved her. It must have been that bitter parting with her husband, and the remembrance of angry words never to be atoned for in this life, that was cankering the root of her peace, and that brought about these moods of despair.

Phillis thought of Coleridge's lines—

"And to be wroth with one we love Doth work like madness on the brain,—"

as she took refuge in the dim drawing room. Here, at least, there were signs of human life and occupation. A little tea-table had been set in one window, though the tea was cold. The greyhounds came and laid their slender noses on her gown, and one small Italion one coiled himself up on her lap. Miss Mewlstone's work-basket stood open, and a tortoise shell kitten had helped itself to a ball of wool and was busily unwinding it. The dogs were evidently frightened at the storm, for they all gathered round Phillis, shivering and whining, as though missing their mistress; and she had much ado to comfort them, though she loved animals and understod their dumb language better than most people.

It was not so very long, and yet it seemed hours before Miss Mewlstone came down to her.

"Are you here, my dear?" she asked, in a loud whisper, for the room was dark. "Ah, just so. We must have lights, and I must give you a glass of wine or a nice hot cup of coffee." And, notwithstanding Phillis' protest that she never took wine and was not in need of anything, Miss Mewlstone rang the bell, and desired the footman to bring in the lamp. "And tell Bishop to send up some nice hot coffee and sandwiches as soon as possible. For young people never know what they want, and you are just worried and tired to death with all you have gone through— not being an old woman and seasoned to it like me," went on the good creature and she patted Phillis's cheek encouragingly as she spoke.

"But how is she? Oh, thank God, the storm has lulled at last!" exclaimed the girl, breathlessly.

"Oh, yes; the storm is over. We have reason to dread storms in this house," returned Miss Mewlstone, gravely. "She was quite exhausted, and let Charlotte and me help her to bed. Now she has had her composing-draught, and Charlotte will sit by her till I go up. I always watch by her all night after one of these attacks."

"Is it a nervous attack?" asked Phillis, timidly, for she felt she was treading on delicate ground.

"I believe Dr. Parkes calls it hysteria," replied Miss Mewlstone, hesitating a little. "Ah, we have sad times with her. You heard what she said, poor dear; she has been sorely tried."

"Was not her husband good to her, then?"

"I am sure he meant to be kind," returned Miss Mewlstone, sorrowfully, "for he loved her dearly; but he was passionate and masterful, and was one that would have his way. As long as it was only courtship, he worshipped the ground she walked upon, as the saying is. But poor Magdalene was not a good wife. She was cold when she ought to have been caressing, stubborn when she might have yielded; and sarcasm never yet healed a wound. Ah, here comes your coffee Thank you, Evans. Now, my dear, you must just eat and drink, and put some color into those pale cheeks. Scenes like these are not good for young creatures like you. But when Magdalene is in these moods, she would not care if the whole world listened to her. To-morrow she will be herself, and remember and be ashamed; and then you must not mind if she be harder and colder than ever. She will say bitter things all the more, because she is angered at her own want of self-ontrol."

"I can understand that; that is just as I should feel," returned Phillis, shuddering a little at the idea of encountering Mrs. Cheyne's keen-edged sarcasms. "She will not like to see me any more; she will think I had no right to witness such a scene."

"It is certainly a pity that I wrote that note," returned Mrs. Mewlstone, reflectively. "I hoped that you would turn her thoughts, and that we might avert the usual nervous paroxysm. When I opened the door and saw you sitting together so peacefully beside the children's beds, I expected a milder mood; but it was the thunder. Poor Magdalene She has never been able to control herself in a storm since the evening Herbert left her, and we went in and found her lying insensible in the library, in the midst of one of the worst storms I have ever witnessed."

"That was when he said those cruel words to her!" ejaculated Phillis.

PRECIOUS ORES FOUND

Western Canada Has Had an Epidemic of Strikes.

Smaller Forms of the Famous Ninety-Eight" Are Under Way in Various Parts of the Western Section of the Dominion—Saskatchewan Leads in the Reports of Deposits of Valuable Metals.

Even war time is opportune for gold strikes, and out West we have been varying the slow and uncertain excitement of field fights in Europe by occasional flurries of old-time mining fever, to say nothing at all of oil strikes. It would be a very good time to find a yellow paystreak, west, north, or anywhere, for several thousand people are greatly desiring something of that substantial kind since town lots dropped to nothing. There are those who would be willing even to repeat the trail of '98, and, as a matter of fact, an abridged edition of that historic gold hunt is now under way, says Aubrey Fullerton in Toronto Star Weekly.

Everybody knows that there is gold somewhere in this Western North. So, too, there are silver, nickel, copper, and perhaps a dozen other minerals; but the thing is to get at them.

Last fall there was a renewal of the gold-washing industry on the Saskatchewan River, at Edmonton. For several years a little work of this kind has been done, from which enough gold has been produced to supply the local souvenir jewelry trade, and sometimes to turn in fairly good-sized bricks to the banks. How the gold got there is, of course, a question for geologists to answer, but according to the most likely theories it came down from the gold-bearing mountains of the far West before the Rockies were reared to block the way. At any rate, it is there in the river now, in such minute particles of well-worn dust that to get an ounce of it one must dig up and wash a great many yards of gravel. Yet a gravel company paid its running expenses a few years ago with the gold that was collected in its dredge merely as a side-line.

It therefore seemed quite feasible, when the hard times began to settle down, to put some of the out-of-works on the river at gold washing. Demonstrations in the handling of the "grizzly," the machine in which the washing is done, were given by some of the old-timers, and a goodly number of otherwise unemployed took the hint and turned to gold hunting in the gravel beds of the Saskatchewan. No one struck it rich, but some made wages at it. Then winter came, and the grizzlies were laid by. A few of them have now come out again, and their patient operators are still courting favor with fortune in terms of gravel.

But a much more pretentious strike was noised abroad through the winter, and it is as a result of that that there has been this spring a repetition on a small scale of the famous Klondike stampede. Only it's silver, instead of gold. Silver is good though, in these barren days, and men to whom wheat-growing does not greatly appeal have gone in quest of it. The find was made away up in the northland, at the eastern end of Lake Athabasca, which the map shows to be within the bounds of Saskatchewan. The trail thereto, however, is via Edmonton, like that of '98.

Lake Athabasca is in a region that nature loaded with underground wealth. Its potentialities have been prophesied many times, and are constantly being added to. Twenty years ago, when J. B. Tyrrell made a map of the district, he said that it was a most interesting field for a mining man and that in due time rich discoveries would be made thereabouts. He was well within the mark. The discovery that has led to the present interest was made by some British Columbia prospectors, and later investigations have shown their find to be a real one, and one that is likely to hasten the industrial development of the country.

Fond du Lac is the name of this newest silver camp. It is on the north shore of the lake, where it begins to narrow down from the proportions of an inland sea to those of an elongated waterway, and from Edmonton, by way of the Athabasca River, the distance is very nearly seven hundred miles. The ore that was found there is a combination of silver and nickel, of a grade that mining experts declare "looks good." The general appearance of the country is not unlike that of northern Ontario, and the strike is expected to be a second Cobalt. Geologically the rock is pre-Cambrian strata, with its mineral ore right on the surface.

The first prospector to return from his winter's visit to Fond du Lac reported that two hundred claims had already been staked in April, and on his way down, while the northland was still in the grip of winter, he met some eighteen or twenty parties going in. It is not unlikely that by next fall there will be a thousand men in the silver camps of Lake Athabasca. The Hudson's Bay Company, awake to the opportunity, is putting on a steamboat service by the Peace River route that is intended to cater especially to the prospectors and miners who want to get to Fond du Lac. All this does not quite make a stampede, but it approximates sufficiently near to that point to develop into full maturity at almost any moment.

Canadians Subscribed to Loan.

The recent British war loan was canvassed among the troops at the front and the success it attained in the trenches may be gauged by the fact that over $3,0[illegible] was subscribed by the Toronto Field Company.

The Primary Fact About War.

We sometimes think that the distinguishing characteristic of war is the killing and maiming of men, but it is evident that this is not the real distinction, for men are killed and maimed in time of peace. The essential and the one marked difference is this, that during war a nation is a society, whereas in peace it is an aggregate of individuals. So true is this, indeed, that if a denizen from some other world acquainted with our normal activities during peace should visit us when we are at war he would have difficulty in recognizing in this smoothly moving, harmonious unit the disorganized welter of yesterday. Compared with the spirit that animates a society at war, the disintegration that inevitably ensues when the sword is laid aside is in all practical respects like the dissolution which sets in in the body of a man when the spirit has taken its flight.—"The World Storm—and Beyond," by Edwin Davies Schoonmaker, in Century Magazine.

The Black Hole of Calcutta.

If the prisoners in the famous "black hole" had been as well informed as modern scientists there would have been no such death rate as actually occurred. The men died of suffocation and panic. Modern discovery has shown that air can support life if it be kept in motion, even though it has but a small amount of oxygen in it.

If the prisoners in the notorious dungeon had therefore formed a mass and revolved around and around at a pace that would have been easy to keep up not only would the contained air have been stirred up, but each man on the outside of the revolving mass would have had his face presented periodically to the small window.

In fact, in the light of recent discovery the same incarceration could now take place without the loss of a single life—that is, provided the men were reasonably strong and healthy.—Every Week.

Thackeray's Twopenny Tart.

This Thackeray story is told by the late Charles Brookfield in his "Random Reminiscences." "Early in their married life," he writes, "my father and mother lived in lodgings in Jermyn street (he was curate at St. James' church at the time). One evening he unexpectedly brought home Thackeray for dinner and introduced him to my mother. She was rather overwhelmed by the knowledge that there was nothing in the house but a cold shoulder of mutton. It was too late to contrive anything more elaborate, so to 'give an air' to the table she sent her maid to a neighboring pastry cook's for a dozen tartlets of various kinds. 'Which of these may I give you?' she inquired in due course of Thackeray. 'Thank you, Mrs. Brookfield,' said he; 'I'll have a twopenny one.'"

The Listener.

Years ago some one said that "a good listener is preferred to a poor talker." And every one who has observed good listeners or listened to poor talkers have come to the conclusion that the fellow knew what he was saying.

There is quite as much art in listening as there is in talking. Simply to remain quiet does not signify that one is listening. To listen means to pay attention. It implies that one is learning something. It is in line with the words of the wag concerning the owl, which runs something like this:

The more he heard the less he spoke;
The less he spoke the more he heard.
Why are we not like that wise old bird?

83RD NOW UNDER CANVAS

Col. Reg. Pellat's Men Arrive At Niagara Camp

Niagara-on-the Lake, Ont., Aug. 19. —This huge camp still grows. Another battalion was added this afternoon when Col. Reg. Pellatt, in command of the 83rd Battalion, arrived on the Chicora from Toronto. This makes 8 battalions under canvas, and when Col. G. T. Chisholm arrives with the 92nd there will be over 13,000 soldiers including other army units, encamped on these historic grounds. A large portion of the citizens turned out to welcome Pellatt's battalion, and they warmly applauded the soldiery appearance of the men, every one of them completely outfitted. Many of the recruits from other battalions who still wear mufti and peace uniforms envied the 83rd.

Lieut.-Col S. C. Mewburn, assistant adjutant-general, Major Henry C. Osborne, deputy A. A. G. and Q. M. G., and Lieut. W. O. Morris, A.D.C., of staff headquarters, met the battalion at the boat and reviewed them as they marched by. An advance party of staff engineers had their camp on Mississauga commons, opposite the 84th, at the mouth of the river, ready for the men.

SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

Sunburn, blistering, and irritation are the commonest form of summer skin troubles, and Zam-Buk ends these very quickly. It works in two ways. As soon as applied, its antiseptic powers get to work and kill all the poison in a wound, a sting or a sore. This generally ends the smarting and the pain. Then Zam-Buk begins the healing process, and fresh healthy tissue is built up. For sore, blistered feet, sore hands, heat rashes, baby's heat spots, sore places due to perspiration, etc., you can't equal Zam-Buk. It also cures cuts, ulcers, abscesses, piles, and all inflammed and diseased conditions of skin and subjacent tissue. Druggists and stores everywhere sell Zam-Buk. 50c. box. Hamilton To Have Battalion Located

That Hamilton will be the headquarters of at least one active service battalion during the coming winter Col. Logie, officer commanding the second division stated yesterday morning. The colonel came up from Camp Niagara to attend to some personal business and incidentally to make an informal inspection of the Hamilton depot battalion, and see how recruiting was getting along. He was more than pleased with the manner in which the affairs of the depot battallan are being looked after by the chief recruiting officer and his staff, and paid them a high compliment. He also expressed himself as being well satisfied with the results of the recruiting here, giving much of the credit to the Hamilton Recruiting league for the good work it had done and was still doing.

"How could I possibly be other than pleased when Hamilton is, its size considered, doing as well or better than any other center of population in the Dominion," answered the colonel when asked for a statement regarding local recruiting. "I am proud of my home city. It has done nobly, and I only hope the good work will continue.

"What are the chances of an active service battalion being located in Hamilton this winter?" the colonel was asked.

"There will almost certainly be one here," replied the colonel, "if for no other reason than that I don't know where else I can place them all."

"What battalion will it likely be?" was next asked.

"By all means the Eighty-Sixth, or as you prefer to call it, the Hamilton Machine Gun battalion. It's Hamilton's idea and Hamilton's battalion to all intents and purposes, and, as far as is possible, it will be trained right here in Hamilton unless my superiors at Ottawa will otherwise."

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,

Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Port Arthur's Downfall.

One of the most dramatic surrenders in military history was that of Port Arthur during the Russo-Japanese war. For five months the Russians, under General Stoessel, defended the city into which they had been forced by the fierce onslaughts of the Japanese. It was expected that the czar's troops, 25,000 strong and well provisioned, would safely hold Port Arthur until relief came. After twenty weeks of siege, however, Stoessel raised the white flag and the Japanese marched into the city. General Stoessel was tried for treason in connection with the surrender, and he was sentenced to death, for it was stated that the Russians had sufficient food and ammunition in Port Arthur to have continued their defense for some time. The czar commuted the sentence on Stoessel to one of 'ten years' imprisonment, but the disgrace broke his health and he died, paralyzed and dumb.

An Unimposing Genius.

Those who imagine there is some necessary connection between literary genius and inches will have to explain away the case of Alexander Pope. Pope was exactly four feet six inches high. He was humpbacked and deformed. According to one of Lord Oxford's servants, he was "so weak as to stand in perpetual need of female attendance; extremely sensible of cold, so that he wore a kind of fur doublet under a skirt of very coarse, warm linen, with fine sleeves. When he rose he was invested in a bodice made of stiff canvas, being hardly able to stand erect till it was laced, and he then put on a flannel waistcoat. One side was contracted. His legs were so slender that he enlarged their bulk with three pairs of stockings, which were drawn on and off by the maid, for he was not able to dress or undress himself."—London Chronicle.

An Easy Choice.

Bishop Sanford Olmsted said at a dinner party in Denver:

"The charge that the church is governed by mercenary motives is an insidious one. I think this charge was best answered by the prison chaplain.

"A chaplain was addressing a congregation of prisoners, many of whom had given more than one proof that they were profiting by his visits. But there was a certain rough, brutal looking fellow, who always scoffed and sneered. And today this fellow, when the chaplain greeted him, said:

"'No, I don't want to shake hands with you, parson. You only preach for money.'

"'Very good, my friend; have it so,' the chaplain answered. 'I preach for money. You steal for money. Let God choose between us.'" — Washington Star.

No Sunset For Five Days.

At the head of the gulf of Bothnia there is a mountain on the summit of which the sun shines perpetually during the five days of June 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23. Every six hours during this season of continual sunshine a steamer leaves Stockholm crowded with visitors anxious to witness the phenomenon. At the same place during winter the sun disappears and is not seen for weeks. Then it comes in sight again for ten, fifteen or twenty minutes, gradually lengthening its stay until finally it stays in sight continuously for upward of 120 hours.

Goats In Switzerland.

In Switzerland if a boy plagues a goat he may be fined and sent to jail. If a person meets a goat on a path and drives the animal aside he may be arrested. If a goat enters the yard of a person not its owner and is hit with a club or stone the person guilty of the offense must pay 30 cents. If the engineer of a railroad train sees a goat on the track he must stop the train until the animal can be coaxed away.

Ten Millions in Securities Gone

Vast Sum Sinks With Arabic, Probably No Loss to Bankers

LONDON, Aug. 20.—It is understood that the Arabic carried between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 worth of American securities for New York. These were all insured, but the underwriters at Lloyds and the various financial institutions were busy this morning looking up the details and arranging claims.

One firm alone had $1,250,000 worth of securities on the sunken vessel. It is understood that some stocks are being purchased in America to cover these.

These securities will probably not involve any loss to the owners or the underwriters as details would be registered and duplicates issued upon receipt of a bond guaranteeing the issuing concerns against loss by any future presentation of the securities in question. The whole question depends on whether or not the issues were registered. If loss can be proved in the case of registered securities duplicates will be issued.

Startling Events Near in Balkans

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 20.—General Filcheff, Bulgarian Minister of War, has resigned on account of ill-health. He is succeeded by Gen. Jecoff.

The Balkan Situation.

ROME, Aug. 19.—The Entente Powers, according to a positive statement made by the Sofia correspondent of The Giornale D'Italia, have offered to Bulgaria that part of Macedonia given to her by the Serbo-Bulgarian treaty of 1912, with the right or imemdiate occupation. The controversy over the part of Macedonia contested by Serbia and the cause of the second Balkan war will be settled after the present war ends.

Proportionate compensation is to be given to Serbia, including the city of Kavala and Seres, with the right of immediate occupation.

Bulgaria, on her side, renounces forever pretensions to Saloniki, Vodina and Uskub. She promises also to declare war imediately upon Turkey, aided by funds of the four Allies. Bulgaria, the correspondent declares, will receive further territorial concessions in Turkey.

It is believed that Serbia and Greece will give way under pressure by the Entente Powers, but negotiations will be lengthened by the reluctance of the King of Greece to consent to any cession of territory.

CONFIRMED FROM BERNE.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Berne says: "According to information from semi-official Serbian sources here, Serbia has accepted the conditions of the Allies and will consent to the occupation of the Macedonia by the Allies in exchange for a section of the Dalmatian coast and adjacent islands and the participation of Albania with Greece, except Allona which will remain Italian. When this is accomplished the Allies will transfer Macedonia to Bulgaria. The plan only awaits the adhesion of Italy."

MUST PAY THE PRICE.

MILAN, Italy, Aug. 20.—Commenting on the Balkan situation, the Secolo says:

"The only way to prevent the threatened Austro-German march through Serbia and Bulgaria with the consent of the latter, who thus would be enabled to conquer by force the territories she claims, is to return Macedonia to the Bulgarians.

"Bulgaria has behaved well in not augmenting her pretensions, although she holds in her hands the key to the Dardanelles. Greece should be satisfied, inasmuch as Bulgaria claims less than was granted to her after the first Balkan war, but if Greece still resists the quadruple entente cannot protect her interests against her will. They must abandon her to a Bulgarian attack."

ARABIC WAS NOT BEING CONVOYED

Only Two American Passengers Missing—Brave Attempt to Save His Mother Was Made by Young Bruguiere

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The British Government today authorized the statement that the steamship Arabic was not being convoyed when she was torpedoed by a German submarine.

(Canadian Press Special)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Vice-Consul Thompson's latest despatch from Queenstown confirm's the White Star Line's statement that only two Americans of the Arabic's passengers are unaccounted for—Mrs. Bruguiere, of New York, and Dr. Edmund Woods, of Janesville, Wisconsin.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Dr. Edmund Woods, of Janesville, Wis., who was believed to have lost his life on the Arabic was returning to his home from three months' service with the American Ambulance at Neuilly, France.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The following statement was given out today at the offices of the White Star Line: We are in a position to state that the following passengers, reported missing, did not embark on the Arabic: Maurice Davis, Mrs. Fisher, and Mr. Sand.

BERLIN QUAKING

"News of the sinking of the Arabic caused great nervousness, the Foreign Office fearing it would lead to serious difficulties with Washington.

MOTHER AND SON IN WATER

Queenstown, Aug. 20.—Louis Bruguiere, a New York lad, this afternoon confirmed the story that his mother, Mrs. Josephine Bruguiere, perished when the Arabic sank and told a heart-rending story of his vain efforts to save her.

"Mother and I were the last to leave the promenade deck," said Bruguiere. "We were too late, the last boat had left. I threw two of my bulldogs into one of the boats and mother and I jumped, but missed the boat.

"When we came up mother was near me. I threw my arm around her and swam for several minutes. A heavy piece of wreckage, tossed by a wave struck me in the head and sent me under.. When I came up my mother was gone. I dove severel times and shouted for her, but it was no use. I think the same mass of wreckage struck her and carried her down."

Young Bruguiere, who has given up hopes of recovering his mother's body immediately, will leave here tonight to join some of his friends living in Warwick Castle.

Mrs. Josephine Sathier Bruguiere, of New York, one of the Americans on the Arabic and believed to have been lost, was prominent in New York, Newport, and Paris society. Her father was a Frenchman and her mother a Spanish Countess. Before her marriage she was Miss Josephine Sather of San Francisco. Her stepmother who was wealthy, left $700,000 to the University of California. Her father who was for many years connected with the Drexel and Company banking firm of Philadelphia, founded the first bank in San Francisco, now known as the San Francisco National Bank.

MOTHER AND BABY SAVED

Among the Toronto people who were saved from the "Arabic," were the wife and baby of Mr. Alex Hill, 16 Westwood avenue, Todmordon.

Mr. Hill, who is employed at the Parliament street gas works, did not know that his wife was on the 'Arabic,' as he expected her to return by another steamer. He was still in bed this morning when a messenger brought him the seven-word cablegram from Queenstown: "Baby and self safe and well—Sarah."

"This is the second fortunate escape my wife has had," said Mr. Hill to a press representative, who was congratulating him on the good news. "She was to have gone to England on the Empress of Ireland on the trip when the Empress went down, with nearly all the passengers. She didn't go that time, but waited until the next month. I didn't expect her to come home on the Arabic either. Probably she meant to give me a pleasant little surprise when she walked in unexpectedly. I was very glad to hear this morning that she was safe. It was a dirty, mean trick to sink that boat.

"The White Star people telephoned that the St. Louis may call at Queenstown to bring the survivors across."

The baby, who had such a narrow escape, was born while Mrs. Hill was in England, and Mr. Hill hasn't seen it yet.

ARABIC WAS GOING TO HELP DUNSLEY

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 20.—Captain Finch gave the Associated Press a detailed account of the loss of the liner Arabic.

"We were forty-seven miles south of Galley Heat at 9.30 o'clock Thursday morning," he said, "when I perceived the steamer Dunsley in difficulties.

"Going towards her, I observed a torpedo coming for my ship, but could not discern a submarine. The torpedo struck one hundred feet from the stern, making terrible havoc of the hull The vessel began to settle immediately, and sank in about eight minutes.

"My order from the bridge about getting the boats launched was promptly obeyed. Fourteen were quickly filled and lowered. Two capsized. We had taken every precaution while in the danger zone. There were plenty of life-belts on deck, and the boats were ready for immediate launching. The officers and crew all behaved excellently and did everything possible in the circumstances, getting people into the boats and picking up those in the sea.

Captain Was Last to Leave.

"I was the last to leave. I remained on the bridge until the water was lapping at my feet, and then dove off. When I came up my head struck some wreckage and I was slightly injured. I swam to a nearby raft,, but was unable to draw myself upon it. Two women with a baby were clinging to one side. I helped them to clamber on the raft, and then hung on. We were rescued about twenty minutes later."

Capt. Finch paid special tribute to the heroic conduct of several engineers and firemen who remained at their posts to the last, and sacrificed their lives to execute orders from the bridge, thus ensuring the safety of the passengers. Among those lost was the captain's nephew.

The Arabic's commander spoke appreciatively of the kind treatment received by passengers and crew aboard rescuing vessels and likewise the arrangements made for their comfort at Queenstown. His chief regret was that he was not able to save the lives of everyone on board.

"If I had been given a little more time by the submarine," he said regretfully, "I am satisfied I could have saved everybody.

"When I saw the white wake of the torpedo it was 300 yards away said the captain. "It struck about at right angles.

D'Annunzio and Puccini at Front

They Will Write Libretto and Music of Opera Dealing With War

VENICE, Aug. 20.—Giacomo Puccini, the Italian composed, arrived in Venice today from a visit to the front. During his trip he met Gabriele D'Annunizo, the peot, who is serving as a lieutenant in the army. D'Annunizo has agreed to write the libretto of an opera dealing with the European war in an allegorical manner. Puccini is to compose the score.

Twelve Thousand Miles of Wheat

Cars to Draw Harvest Will Reach Four Times Across Canada

If all the box cars necessary to handle this year's wheat crop were extended in one line it would reach from Montreal to Vancouver four and a half times.

This will give some idea of the vast movement necessary to carry the wheat from the Prairie Provinces to the seaboard. These figures are based on an estimate of 200,000,000 bushels. The crop is estimated to go higher than this, but allowance has been made for the wheat that will remain in the West for seeding purposes.

Taking the 200,000,000 bushels as a basis to work on and allowing 1,000 bushels to the car, it gives 1,818,182 as the number of cars needed. On an average the cars will take up 40 feet of room, so that the cars will stretch 13,774 miles, and this will reach across Canada, from Montreal to Vancouver, four and a half times.

Taking last year's estimate of the crop handled by the different railways in the West, it is found that the Canadian Pacific cars will go across two and a quarter times, the Canadian Northern Railway one and a half, and the Grand Trunk Pacific three-quarter times.

Dr. Beland Has Cell to Himself

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 20.—A letter received by members of his family, gives interesting, though saddening news, of Dr. H. S. Beland, M.P., for Beauce county in the House of Commons, who is now a captive in a German fortress, after having been interned from Belgium where in his castle at Capellan, he was treating wounded soldiers.

The doctors says that recently, he has been better treated by the German authorities and that in his cell instead of being quartered with four other prisoners he is now allowed to stay alone.

"I am getting old," he says, "through all this suffering and harrowing scenes, and there is a lot of gray in the dark hair of your affected friend. However, I have indications that I will be freed soon. I was told by a responsible official that steps were being taken to fix the necessary matetrs that will bring me back to hospital work, and now I live with the hope of this day.

HYDRO COMMISSION APPLIES FOR FUNDS

The application of the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission for a grant of $1,375,000 for extension work, has been approved by City Treasurer Patterson and City Auditor Sterling, and was discussed by the Treasury Board yesterday. No decision was reached, but the application will probably be approved and be sent on to Council.

Of the amount asked, $1 000,000 is for general extensions; $850,000 for extraordinary expenditures on work to be completed in 1916, and $20,000, the amount assumed by the System under agreement with the old towns of East and North Toronto. This totals $1,870,000, but as $695,621 has already been received or is due from the city under a former by-law, the net amount to be raised for construction is $1,274,379, to which is added $100,621 to cover the cost of the sale of debentures, making the $1,375,000 applied for. The money will be raised by debenture, as soon as the money market warrants placing the issue, provided Council approves.

The DeLevy sank in shallow water three miles west of Point Citronville. All on board, including six women, escaped in scanty clothing, and were taken to Three Rivers. The Hon. Robert Rogers was aboard the Sir Hugh Allan.

ITALIANS ARE NOT NEEDED AT GALLIPOLI

Declaration of War Against Turkey Delayed—Would Not Hasten Solution in Dardanelles

ROME, Aug. 20.—A rupture of relations between Turkey and Italy is considered imminent. Delay in action on Italy's part is ascribed to her desire to do her utmost to conserve the interests of Italians who still remain in the Otteman Empire, who are now estimated at 12,000 in number.

Italian newspapers in commenting on the situation express the opinion that an Italian declaration of war against Turkey would not hasten a solution in the Dardanelles favorable to the Entente Allies, because military experts seem to believe that a new army on the Gallipoli Peninsula would be superfluous.

Serious Crisis Now Admitted At Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The tension was increased in official quarters here tonight when consular messages forwarding affidavits of American passengers on the British liner Arabic brought definite information that the vessel was torpedoed without warning, and that at least some Americans had been lost.

It seemed that but one point remained to be cleared up—whether the Arabic attempted to ram the submarine or whether a change of the liner's course to assist the already sinking British steamer Dunsley, nearby, was misinterpreted by the German submarine commander as a hostile approach.

STORM HIT ST. LOUIS RAINFALL WAS HEAVY

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—The storm that devastated the Texas Gulf coast last Monday and Tuesday, sweeping northward, struck St. Louis with diminished fury last night and to-day, bringing with it the heaviest downpour in the history of the city, and causing a flood that drove hundreds of city and suburban residents from their homes.

SLAV GARRISON TAKEN WITH A BIG FORTRESS

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Special—The garrison of the fortress of Novo Georievsk, which was left behind by Grand Duke Nicholas when he commenced the evacuation of Poland to delay the advance of the German invaders, after accomplishing its task for just a fortnight, has succumbed to the heavy siege artillery of the Germans, which throughout the war has made every fort attacked by it untenable.

Berlin was able to-day to announce the capture of the fortress with seven hundred guns and a large quantity of war material. The spoils have not yet been estimated, but they probably are large, as it had been hoped by the Russians that the earthworks around the fortified camp would enable it to hold out much longer than it has done. It is now expected by the military observers that the other Russian fortresses, such as Brest-Litowsk, Grodno and Ossowetz, either will be captured of given up. Brest-Litowsk, the chief military depot of the Russians, is, in fact, reported tonight to be virtually enveloped.

HAITIEN CHEATS EXECUTIONERS BY FEIGNING HE IS DEAD

Drops as if Shot When Led Out With 169 Political Prisoners—Hides Among Dead Till Friend Comes

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The Dutch steamer Prinz Der Nederlanden, the first vessel to sail for New York from Haiti since the revolt there, arrived her to-day. Passengers said the situation in Haiti was most serious until the American marines arrived and restored order.

Among the arrivals was Antonio Vittiello, who had been in business in Haiti. He said he was the only one of 169 political prisoners to escape execution in the recent uprising.

"I had been arrested five months before for carrying messages to Bobo", said Vittiello. "The first man to leave my cell compartment in the jail was beheaded with a machete. I followed and fell as though I had been shot. The man who followed me was shot and instantly killed and fell on top of me. There were 168 men killed in the prison. I lay among the dead for several hours until a friend chanced to enter the jail. I was then smuggled aboard the ship.

(Canadian Press Special)

Caught a Spy

German Had Enlisted and Wanted to Blow up Transport

An interesting letter has been received by W. G. E. Boyd from his son, Mascall Boyd, who recently left with one of the Canadian contingents for England. He describes life aboard the transport and relates the capture of a German spy, who was a sergeant in one of the Canadian companies. In writing of this incident, which created something of a sensation on board ship, he says: "Last night there was a row, as one of the sergeants was caught by the guard. He was down in the hold, where all the big ammunition is stored, and when we asked him what he was doing, he said, 'walking in my sleep.' Well, that didn't go. They put him in irons and we were all itchy to shoot him. I hope they show him no mercy, as he has been under suspicion for quite awhile. He is a German."

THE BEEHIVE CHAS. N. SULMAN

Patriotic Speaker Keeps His Word

His Wife Was Killed in Air Raid, Friends Tried to Detain Him

Few of the people who heard Arthur Private address a meeting of the patriotic women of Hamilton in the interests of the British overseas tobacco fund had any idea of the great sorrow under which he was laboring, or the sacrifices he made to reach Hamilton in time to keep the engagement. Mr. Private has been making a tour of Canada for the purpose of raising funds to supply tobacco to the overseas forces, and some time ago made an appointment to come to Hamilton to address a meeting. While in Montreal a few days ago he received word that his wife was one of the victims of a recent German air raid on the east coast of England. Naturally he was overcome with grief, but so strong was duty's call that he refused to cancel his engagement here.

Mr. Private had arranged to leave Montreal for Hamilton on the International Limited yesterday morning, but his friends feeling that, owing to the irreparrable loss he had suffered he should be excused, succeeded in causing him to miss the train. Even that, however, did not suffice to turn him aside from what he considered to be his duty. Finding that there was not a later regular train that would land him in Hamilton in time for the meeting he got into communication with the Grand Trunk authorities, with the result that he was provided with a special train, on which he was the only passenger, and given a guarantee that it would land him in Hamilton before 8 o'clock in the evening.

The train consisted of an engine baggage coach and one passenger coach, and a record run was made, an average speed of 48 miles an hour being maintained. The run from Montreal to Hamilton, a distance of something over 373 miles was made in a trifle over eight hours, only three stops being made en route, these being at Cornwall, Belleville and Hamilton. Even Toronto was given the go-by, the train passing right through the Union station as though Toronto were not on the map.

Mr. Private reached Hamilton shortly before 8 o'clock, arriving at the meeting in time to keep his appointment, and just about the time the ladies who had arranged for the gathering were beginning to wonder what had happened to delay his coming.

German Pirates Had Glorious Day

German submarines yesterday claimed a greater toll than on any other day since the war began.

Nine steamers were sent to the bottom, with a loss of 34, and possibly more non-combatant lives. The Leyland liner Nicosian is limping into port, damaged by submarine attack. An unconfirmed report reached Belleville yesterday afternoon that the 6,583 ton White Star steamer Bovic had been sunk by German torpedoes.

The Bovic is a 6,583-ton steel twin screw steamer, built in 1892 at Belfast. She is 470 feet in length with 3-58 beam. She was registered at the port of Liverpool.

The Bovic is not a passenger vessel but is the smallest of the White Star fleet of merchant vessels and one of the oldest. She was capable of making only thirteen knots an hour.

Mr. Elmer Luck Married at Barrie

Lieut. Newton Young, Who Was Wounded at Langemarck, was Best Man

A marriage of unusual interest took place at Barrie recently, when Mr. E. L. Luck, formerly of Edmonton, and Miss Mary Flint, of Montreal, were wedded. The ceremony was made possible at the present time by the escape of Mr. Luck from Germany. The best man, Lieut. Newton Young a cousin of the groom, has also figured prominently in the great war, having received several wounds in the battle of Langemarck. He was sent home to recuperate. The bridesmaid was Miss Gladys Flint, sister of the bride, and a resident of Barrie. The romance began when Mr. Luck and his bride were studying in German universities before the war and the groom was promptly interned when hostilities commenced.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

British Columbia is at present conducting a whirlwind Red Cross campaign, for the purpose of equipping No. 5 Overseas General Hospital which will be British Columbia's contribution to the Canadian Red Cross hospital organization. The amount aimed at is $25,000 and the St. John Ambulance Association, and other patriotic organizations, such as the Daughters of the Empire, the Kings Daughters, the Women's Forum are co-operating with the B.C. Red Cross. The Dominion Government has sanctioned the formation of this hospital corps and Major E. C. Hart of Vancouver has been appointed commanding officer.

Trained nurses have been selected from British Columbia hospitals and the necessary number of non-commissioned officers and orderlies are now being trained. The Government equips the hospital and pays all expenses of maintainance, but the numerous surgical instruments, motor ambulances, x-ray and other apparatus will be provided by the Red Cross. It has been found that this extra equipment has been instrumental in saving many lives and preventing many amputations. British Columbia is determined to make a notable gift and the three weeks campaign will cover the whole province and end with a monster tag day.

Mr. Alex Miller the Red Cross organizer for Ontario has been meeting with great success in a great number of towns which the Red Cross campaign has so far scarcely touched. The village of Cremore with a population of 643 raised $2,500. Orangeville set out to raise $5,000 and made the amount $7,000. He is at present organizing a branch in Alliston and the new society aims to collect $3,000, an average of $3 per head of population.

The motor ambulances being made for the Red Cross by Canadian firms represent the last word in Canadian motor car construction. The cars have powerful silent engines and an electric self starting and lighting equipment. They possess the approved style of ambulance body with electric light inside, four stretchers, an extra water tank, commodious lockers, non-skid tires, demountable rims, two spare tires and rims, a speedometer and a clock. With regard to the importance of motor ambulances the Rev. William Barton at present attached to the 2nd Canadian Field Ambulance writes: "Motor ambulances are really the great and constantly growing need. Nothing is so important as to remove the wounded with rapidity from the firing line. Every gain in speed of transit is a gain in life saving.

Very little publicity has been given to the Red Cross activities of the Masonic Order in Canada, but Masonic benefactions constitute no small part of the total of the Red Cross contributions. The Craft have given generously although for the most part silently. It has been stated by Grand Master Sir John Gibson that 10,000 Canadian members are at the front.

"RUM-JAR" NOW MOST FEARED FRENCH MORTAR

The so-called "Rum-jar" is perhaps the most feared of the new German trench mortars. It is so named by the British soldiers from the resemblance of its missiles to the gallon stone jars in which the army rations of rum are carried. The projectile is slightly more than twice the size of the army rum-jar, however. It is generally first sighted when approaching the top of its flight. In descent it turns over and over, its size and slowness of fight enabling the soldier to follow it easily even from a distance. It is exploded either by a time or delayed percussion fuse, and is constructed of a thin steel case, filled with tri-nitro-toluol. The damage it causes is due entirely to its detonating quality—it does not rely on metal or bullets for its effect. The explosion seems more instantaneous than that of any other projectile; and there is therefore a concentrated fury to the noise of its bursting that distinguishes it from all other projectiles.

The "Sausage" is another variety of missile fired probably from compressed air guns, inasmuch as the discharge makes so little noise as to be practically inaudible.

The "Percy" is a five inch shell which explodes in the air with an extraordinary "crack," while the less dreaded "Pip-squeaks" are missiles of similar kind but much smaller size. The so-called "Whizz-bang" is a bomb exploded by means of a time fuse, but thrown by hand.

VILLA'S MONTE CARLO ON MEXICAN BORDER

Great Gambling Hall Conducted on Commercial Basis

The biggest wide-open gambling hall on the North American continent is that at Juarez, Mexico, across the river from El Paso, Tex. It is a commercial venture of General Francisco Villa and has, since its opening ten days after the northern leader took the town in a night surprise attack, proved highly profitable. It is conducted by his brother, Hippolito, who now drives about Juarez in a high priced car, though five years ago he was content to mount a burro and dangle his legs down beside an array of milk cans.

Rumor has it in Juarez that each night the winnings are counted, divided into two equal piles and then made up into neat bundles, one of which is despatched by a trusted messenger to Gen. Villa, the messenger being instructed to deliver the package to the General, no matter to what spot the exigencies of war may have driven him.

A half dozen stores were confiscated for a site for the gambling hall. Partitions have been knocked out, and the place now has a floor space of half a city block, with additions constantly being made. The fittings, except for the apparatus actually employed in the games are of the cheapest.

As at the crap tables, huge piles of silver dollars are displayed at the tables, the dollars being neatly arranged in stacks of twenty each, totalling about $1,000. Players are given checks to play with, so that the count can be kept straight. Mexicans are allowed to play with the Villa currency, which is now selling at 3 cents on the peso.

The heaviest play is Saturday and Sunday nights, when the huge hall is jammed and players at the roulette table reach over one another's shoulders to take their money. Some winnings running up to about $1,000 are recorded but they are few and far between.

The nightly "take in," according to the best reports, is between four and five thousand dollars, only once has the roulette bank been broken, and that feat was performed by Gen. Rudolfo Fierra, nicknamed "the butcher," who with Gen. Villa was in the room at the time that William S. Benton, the British subject, was murdered On the occasion of his breaking the bank Fierra is credited with having taken with him 1,400 silver dollars and a whole bale of Villa currency.

On his trips to the border Gen. Villa always makes it a point to appear in the gambling hall and occasionally make a small bet. Not understanding the intricacies of the roulette game he prefers to hazard his bet on the more simple turn of the card in the faro game.

When jealousy gets busy love takes a vacation.

Occasionally a young man who takes part in amateur theatricals manages to live it down.

On behalf of the machine gun campaign very active work was recently commenced by the Red Cross society of Banner and Dickson's Corners. So well did the ladies succeed in their work that already the sum of $765 has been raised.

The clever women of Canada have learned that Parisian Sage possesses the peculiar power to turn dull, lifeless-looking hair into lustrous, fascinating hair.

Parisian Sage not only beautifies the hair, but it makes hair grow abundantly, stops it from falling out, and removes every trace of dandruff.

It is the ideal hair dressing for the whole family, because it is not sticky or greasy, and possesses a refreshing and invigorating quality not found in ordinary hair preparations.

It makes the scalp feel splendid the minute you put it on the head. Sold by druggists everywhere for 50c. a large bottle.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

GERMAN SPIES IN U.S.

The New York World is doing a good service by publishing what it alleges to be secret correspondence between certain German agents in the United States, describing their efforts to control public opinion and particularly to stop the exportation of arms and ammunition. It shows how utterly hollow is the pretence of Germany that America is not maintaining the strict neutrality she professes. All the time these protests were being made Germany had secret agents at work in her interests.

The letters indicate that German agents fomented strikes in various munition factories in this country and were behind a proposed strike to tie up all the shipping along the Atlantic seaboard. They tell of a plan that German agents worked on for grabbing up all the chlorine gas manufactured in this country and thus preventing any shipment to the Allies. A plan for getting control of the Wright patents for the manufacture of aeroplanes is set forth and the work being done to arouse public influence to demand the passage of an embargo act by congress forbidding the export of various sinews of war is described. Finally the letters set forth that Germans were behind the movement in the South to demand an embargo on munitions unless the British Government should permit the shipment of cotton to Germany. There are letters which exhibit Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, Chancellor of the German Empire, as participating in a plan for spreading German propaganda throughout the United States. The letters indicate that money from the German government founded the Fatherland, a weekly publication edited by George Sylvester Viereck in behalf of the German cause; that a plan was formulated to buy the American Press Association and devote it to the spreading of German news; that plans were developed for starting a nation-wide press bureau to sell German news and pictures, and finally that Germans sought to buy the New York Evening Mail.

The World's own editorial explanation of what this correspondence shows is given in the following words: "The German propaganda in the United States has become a political conspiracy against the government and people of the United States. Documents in the possession of the World clearly prove that there is no other word for it. This conspiracy is directed from Berlin and is financed by the German government. It has been organized with all the amazing thoroughness and efficiency which characterizes all German military activity, and it is as much a part of the German campaign as the operation of armies in the field. In order to further the military needs of the empire, the German government is subsidizing sedition throughout the United States. An official reptile press has been transplanted in American soil to incite citizens of the United States against their government. No agency of publicity or service has been overlooked by the keen intelligence that instigates these plots against the American nation."

The patience and forbearance shown by the U. S. Government seems about to have become exhausted. According to the Washington correspondent of the Times, "The government has reached the point in its accumulation of evidence of pro-German activities in the United States where it is considering prosecutions for violating the neutrality laws and other statutes. Information obtained today indicates that arrests may be made soon.." The deliberate sinking of the Arabic, with the drowning of several American citizens, must bring the relations of the two countries to a breaking point. As the World remarks: "While Germany's agents plot against our peace, our politics and our industries upon our own soil, German ships of war assail and sink the merchant ships that bear our fellow countrymen upon the seas." It would seem, judging by the strong expressions of opinion by the American Press, that war between Germany and United States cannot be averted.

CURRENT COMMENT

Germany is playing with the Balkan hornets' nest, and she is in a fair way to get stung.

German sailors interned at New York will be taught the English language well meaning Americans. A good crop of spies should be the result.

The Young Turks propose to appoint a regent, since the Sultan is incapable of attending to affairs of state. The Sultan might replace the Young Turks for the same reason.

An Austrian Archduke may be crowned King of Poland, but, if His Majesty is wise, he will not go out amongst his subjects much at night.

Norway is angry with Germany because the Huns have maltreated Norwegian mails. Also, in their submarine campaign, the Huns have maltreated Norwegian males.

To conserve the metal supply the Kaiser has called in all the buttons, hooks and eyes in Germany. Thus the war becomes an intolerable burden to German women.

It is claimed that an Italian engineer has invented a deviso to deflect torpedoes from their course and explode them. That sounds like the most effective defense against submarines that has yet been described.

Emperor Francis Joseph writes in answer to the Pope's peace appeal: "I also pray God that we may have an early peace." Does this mean a quarrel between the Emperor and the Kaiser?

An indication of how essential his beer is to a German is shown in the government's threat to confiscate part of the output of the German breweries unless the brewers are willing to turn over twenty per cent. of their product to the army.

Lord Charles Beresford tells, in his memoirs, the story of an old Irish gamekeeper who always agreed with everything that was said to him. Meeting the old man one day when the wind was blowing a gale, Lord Charles said to him: "It's a fine, calm day today." "You may well say that, Lord Charles," replied the gamekeeper, with hearty acquiescence, "but what little wind there is is terrible strong."

In spite of all, the Anglo-French armies remain in a state of relative immobility, waiting with impassable calm the order to march. Why is the order not given? Evidently not without good reason. It is because the Allies, profiting by the lessons learned since the commencement of hostilities, and enlightened by checks that have followed many offensive movements, are preparing at leisure a drive before which all obstacles will fail. So much the better if the great movement, which is awaited with natural impatience, is on the point of being realized, as is announced by the New York Tribune.—La Patrie.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

We are giving utterance to the heartfelt wishes of everyone of our people when we appeal, with all the force at our command, to our philologists, our teachers, and university professors to purge German life of the foreign stain that disfigures it in every section.

How deeply that foreigner-worship has entered into all our personal and social relations is shown by the great host of outlandish words which we employ from our birth to the day of our death.

The German makes his entry in the world as "Baby," and if he is the child of wealthy people, grows up under the care of a "gouvernante." His education he receives in an "Elementarschule," an "Institut," "Pensionar," or "Lycee."

His school days over, the youth shows a tendency to become a "bon vivant," and indulges in the "Flirt." Then, by means of an "Inserat" in the papers, he looks about for a good "Partie," offering a chance for an agreeable existence.

Now his life is divided between the "Bureau" and the "Salon," and hers between the discussion of questions of the "Toilette" and the "Club," and for her everything must be "chic" or "smart" and "elegant."

In the "Saison" both take a trip to a "Resort."

Enough of this. We must be re-Germanised, otherwise we can never hope to Germanise our enemies when we are transformed into their teachers, their mentors, their guides, and their rulers.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABIES

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrohoea, cholera infantum, dysentry and colic are most prevalent. Any one of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mothers best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RANDOM NOTES

("From Grave to Gay, From Lively to Severe.")

What a week this has been of tragic events! Certainly we are living in exciting times. We never know what a day will bring forth. We are getting so accustomed to these tragedies that terrible occurrences, which in ordinary times would have been the topic of conversation for months, are not even a "nine days' wonder". We forget them before that period has passed because we have some other horror to take its place.

It is generally Germany who causes these tragedies, and she may well be described as the villain in the play.

:: ::

There was every indication at first to make us believe that the sinking of the Arabic was going to be a repetition of the Lusitania disaster. But this, fortunately, was not the case, partly owing to the fact that the number of passengers was about a third less than those on the ill-fated Lusitania, and partly because of the timely assistance rendered by another vessel.

But the sinking of the Arabic was not without its pathetic incidents. I cannot imagine anything more touching than the drowning of Mrs. Josephine Bruguiere and the heroic effort to save her life made by her son, who appears to be quite a lad. They both jumped from the sinking vessel to a boat, but missed it, and down, down, down they went in the water, not a great way from the grave of the Lusitania. They came to the surface close together, and the son, who was a swimmer, put his arm around his mother and swam for several minutes. He would probably have saved her life and his own, but she was struck by a piece of wreckage, which caused him to release his hold of his precious burden and threw him under the water. When he came up again his mother was not to be seen, and although he dived several times he never saw her again. Can anything more pitiable than this be imagined? That brave lad deserves our deepest sympathy.

Capt. Dick Ponton, who is home from the front on sick leave, has many interesting stories to tell. Here is one which goes to show the modesty of heroes. In a town in England the ladies had formed a league for recruiting purposes, and the eligible young men who were slack in enlisting were given a warm time. These young ladies had induced all the fit young men to enlist save two. One in particular claimed their attention as he was remarkably well built, his only blemish being that he walked with a limp.

Whenever he was spoken to on the subject he always put off his questioners with some good-natured remark. It was decided to "show him up" on a particular day. On this very day he went to London, and returned wreathed in smiles. When the small company had gathered together one young lady stepped forward and presented him with a white feather, remarking that she was sure he would see the significance of the act. "Well," he said, as he tenderly took the feather, "it is really wonderful to think that on the very day I have received a white feather from a lady I have also been presented with the Victoria Cross by the King." Saying this he opened his coat and displayed the coveted little bronze medal on his breast, to the amazement and discomfiture of the bystanders.

When we are talking so much of the sacrifice of mothers in sending their sons to the front, what can we say of Mrs. Hover, of Crundale, a village between Ashford and Canterbury, Kent, England, who has six sons serving with the colors. But she does not look upon it as a sacrifice; she only wishes that she had more sons to send. In an interview with a newspaper representative she remarked, "I only wish that I had more sons, because I am sure that they would have been anxious to do their bit in this great war. All my eight sons went to offer their services, and six passed the doctor. One of the remaining two was disappointed when refused for munition work, although he is a cripple."

Mrs. Hover is the wife of a working man, a woodreeve, and they have a family of twenty-four, all of whom were born singly. It is a still more remarkable fact that the grandmother of this large family (the mother of Mrs. Hover) had no fewer than twenty-one children, making a total of forty-five for the two families. The father of Mr. Hover, who was twice married, had twenty, so that the three families reached the aggregate of sixty-five. This instance of progeny is believed to be a record for the country. Mrs. Hover, who has been married nearly fifty years, observed that some times their weekly wage did not come to 12s ($3.00), but, she added, with some satisfaction, I am pleased to say that we never had to get parish relief for them, although it was often a hard struggle.

are promptly relieved by applying Absorbine, Jr., the antiseptic liniment. It is soothing, healing, and invigorating—puts vim and energy into jaded muscles. One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr., all right and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk without limping, something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $1.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I am a living witness.

Social Service Council Decide Upon the Macdonald Bill.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 20.—The special committee appointed by the executive of the Social Service Council of Manitoba to draft a prohibition bill to be submitted to the people in the form of referendum, in accordance with the request of the Government, unanimously decided in favor of the Hugh John Macdonald bill. The factor which influenced the committee in its decision was the knowledge that the Macdonald bill was good law, and if passed it would be enacted without it being subjected to legal contest by the liquor men.

The venerable couple were former residents of Prince Edward County, removing to Toronto six years ago. Both came of United Empire Loyalist stock, their forbears settling near Picton. HANDSOME CRUISER BURNED

The Dianthe, a glass cabin cruiser, was burned to the water's edge at Burritt's Rapids yesterday morning and is a total loss. Horace C. Dier, the owner of the yacht, with his wife and little son were on their way back to Ottawa from the Bay of Quinte after a month's cruise, and had stopped at Burritt's Rapids to do some fishing in their dinghy. While they were away fire broke out, probably at the stove, and before they could get back the fire was beyond control. Mr. and Mrs. Dier for some years had made the Dianthe their summer home, and on board were all their wearing apparel, Mrs. Dier's jewellery and many of their valuables, as well as cutlery, dishes, etc. Everything was burnt from a toothbrush to a Victrola, and the loss, which amounts to $4,000 is only partially covered by insurance.

The Dianthe was one of the best known yachts on the Ottawa and Rideau rivers. She was beautifully finished inside in mahogany and was powered with a Sterling engine.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying powers of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal, and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—E.J.T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co. Box 1240 Montreal, Can.

Market Letter

ROBERT E. KEMERER
108 BAY Street,
TORONTO.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—The past week has witnessed a continuation of the exceptional activity which has been prevalent for some time past in the stock markets and material advances have been recorded in many directions, particularly in those industrials which are, either directly or indirectly, affected by munition contracts. Railroad stocks have been inclined to lag somewhat, although a reconsideration of the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission revealed much more than was favorable than the Street was inclined to consider at first blush. The selling which followed the unfavorable interpretation which was placed upon the commission's decisions had, however, only a very temporary effect, and the market fully demonstrated its inherent strength by recovering such losses as were sustained in very short order.

JUST ONE ROAD OPEN TO WILSON

German Ambassador at Washington Should be Handed Pass and Gerard Recalled Says the Tribune—Unheeded, Indescribable, Humiliation, Sun's View

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Discussing editorially the sinking of the Arabic, New York's leading papers said this morning:—

The Tribune: "In every detail the German attack upon the Arabic fulfills President Wilson's definition of an act, 'deliberately unfriendly to the United States.' Since this is the case only one road remains open to Mr. Wilson. There is only one course that he can follow with dignity and honor. Without delay, further protest, any diplomatic exchange whatsoever, the German ambassador in Washington should receive his passports. The American ambassador in Berlin should be recalled. We do not know whether more American lives have been lost or not. But what difference can this make? All that the butcher has to do to make a massacre complete was done. If chance spared Americans, it was chance alone. It is for Congress, not for the President, to decide the question of peace or war with Germany, but it is the duty of Mr. Wilson to preserve national honor and protect national dignity. There is left to him no choice, no alternative. Count von Bersntorff should go. Mr. Gerard should come home. The time has come now to act. To talk further is to encourage, not avoid murder. It is to compound with infamy and continue relations with savagery. It is to write ourselves down willing victims, as consenting to the continued slaughter of Americans. In the crime of the Arabic the last thin disguise has slipped from the German beast and we see the fact as it is—but we see it unafraid."

U. S. PATIENCE EXHAUSTED.

The Times says: "The British steamship Arabic, bound from Liverpool for New York with American passengers on board, was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine. It was the purpose of the German commander to destroy the ship and the lives of all her company. It was an act, as we have repeatedly protested to Germany, in violation of the laws of civilized warfare. We have told her that it would be difficult to regard such acts—perpetrated against the rights of American citizens and endangering their lives—in any other light than as evidence of an unfriendly disposition. We need not inquire whether they were deliberately unfriendly, perpetrated with intent to exhaust our patience and sunder the amicable relations of the two nations, or whether they proceeded from a rough and brutal disregard alike of our rights and other warnings. It is hard to accept either theory. But facts and theories confront us. The sinking of the Arabic will have the most serious consideration of the Government at Washington. The sending of notes in the friendly tone which has characterized all our despatches to Berlin has proved futile. We reason, we appeal, we protest, we remonstrate. The written answer is evasive and irrelevant; the actual answer is a defiant persistence in the provocation. While Germany's agents plot against our peace, our politics and our industries, upon our own soil, German ships of war assail and sink the merchant ships that bear our fellow countrymen upon the seas. It should be plain, even to the warned Germans, that friendly relations between the two countries cannot be maintained if these intolerable wrongs continue to be perpetrated."

SITUATION SERIOUS.

The World says: "There were 21 Americans on board the Arabic, which was bound from Liverpool to New York. A passenger ship on the way from Liverpool to New York carries no munitions of war, no contraband of any kind; therefore the Arabic case cannot be complicated by questions of arms and ammunition such as were raised in connection with the Lusitania massacre.

The Sun says: "There were more than two dozen Americans on the Arabic, according to last night's despatches. Supposing the worst—and heaven grant that the worst be not true!—we have Germany's answer, not in words but in a frightful deed, to the note of warning signed by Secretary Lansing just thirty days ago this day.

"It has come in the form which President Wilson and Secretary Lansing plainly characterized on July 21 as 'an unpardonable offense against the sovereignity of the neutral nation affected,' and again, as an act 'deliberately unfriendly.' The Government of the United States then notified the German Government that it would continue to contend for the right of its neutral citizens who sail on the neutral seas unassassinated 'without compromise and at any cost.'

"No Government worthy of the respect of its equals on earth could let that definite promise go unredeemed without immersing itself and its people in indescribable humiliation. The warning of a month ago was not a threat of war. The power to declare war is solely in Congress. But it is within the power of the President, in the failure of apology and reparation immediately and voluntarily rendered, to recall its representatives at the capital of the deliberately unfriendly government, to break off all diplomatic relations and official intercourse with that unfriendly government, and to dismiss preemptorily the representatives which that unfriendly government has accredited to us by handing them their passports.

HUMPBACKS VANISH WITHIN FEW YEARS

Osteopaths Believe That Prompt Treatment Will Prevent This Deformity

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 20.—The world is to be rid of humpbacks. This statement was made at the closing session of the international osteopathic convention by Dr. Harry W. Forbes, President of the Los Angeles College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons. Dr. Forbes declared that the next generation would witness the disappearance of humpbacks from the face of the earth, and, as a result of modern methods of diagnosis and treatment, a humpback will become a curiosity of medical history instead of the frequent spectacle which it is today, although there has been a rapid decrease in the last few years.

Humpback is a deformity, explained Dr. Forbes, which is a sequel to Pott's disease or tuberculosis of the spine. Early diagnosis of this condition, with prompt treatment permits a tubercular area to heal with a stiff, straight spine instead of with a hump which is the result of the pull of gravity of the diseased vertebrae which buckle under the weight when they are unseparated. tions, together with proper support tions, together with proper suppor, spells a new era of hope for the victims of this disease.

10,000,000 JEWS IN WAR

Israel Zangwill, historian of the Jewish race, points out that only the Jews who are in America have escaped the war. Ten million Jews are engaged in the war, three million of them in Poland alone.

Twenty thousand Jews are fighting for England, 50,000 for Germany, 170,000 for Austria, 350,000 for Russia, and 2,500 for Serbia.

The French Zouaves are twenty per cent. Jews. Jewish soldiers and sailors also come from Morocco and Tripoli, Australia, New Zealand, Canada and South Africa.

In England the Lord Chief Justice, who saved the financial situation for the allies, is a Jew, and the late Lord Rothschild presided over the Red Cross fund.

The racially Jewish Enver Bey is Turkey's man of the hour. Baron Sormino, the son of a Jew, helped to persuade Italy to join the allies.

SANITARY REFORMS IN MILITARY CAMPS

Canadian Woman Doctor en Route to Serbia to Carry Them Out

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Dr. Ella Scarlett-Synge, of Vancouver, organizer of the Women's Volunteer Reserve, has arrived in London en route to Serbia, where she will carry out sanitary reforms in military camps under the auspices of the Red Cross Society. During the Boer War she was so engaged in the concentration camps at Bloemfontein. To a press representative she expressed a desire for the spread of the Women's Volunteer. Reserve movement throughout Canada. Dr. Synge sails via Marseilles on Monday for Nish, taking with her $300 contributed in Canada and a ship.

Lieut.-Col. Marshall, 48th Highlanders; Col. Rennie, of the Queen's Own; Lieut.-Col. Munro, 90th battalion, Winnipeg, and Major Swift of Quebec are all on leave here.

The Minister of Militia has spent the day at Bisley inspecting the manufacture of machine guns.

Among the wounded who arrived in England is Lieut. W. Walker, of Victoria, who came over with Elliott's Horse, but joined the Canadian Dragoons. He is injured in the left arm.

RECORDS BROKEN

Rapid progress is being made by the Canadian Pacific Railway in driving the Rogers Pass tunnel in British Columbia. In November last the record for this tunnel was 817 feet and during January it had advanced to 932 ft.

This remarkable progress, made in a pioneer heading, driven through a mica schist, is accounted for by the steady improvement in the air drills and drill steel used, as well as in the system employed.

As recently as January, 1908, the record for Europe and the world was still held by the Simplon tunnel with a monthly average of 685 feet, and in January, 1908, the record for the American continent of 449 feet was made by the Gunnison tunnel of Colorado, in a heading 8½ by 12 feet, which ultimately reached 824 feet a month when driving through very soft shale.

The Loetschberg tunnel in Switzerland was well under way in January, 1908, but the maximum for one heading by then was only 558 feet. This was, however, far eclipsed later on by the remarkable advance of 1,013 lineal feet in a 31-day month in the same tunnel through limestone.

It is true that in 1906 one shield of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad reached 965 feet per month, doing as much as 308 feet in one week, but this was in very soft Hudson silt and not more than 33 per cent. of the excavation was admitted to the tunnel, the remainder being pushed up into the river bed by the shield, it is not considered a fair comparison with the solid rock records.

Nothing approaching the Simplon record was reached in hard rock in America until the Wallkill tunnel, of the New York city aqueduct, advanced 523 feet in Hudson saale in September 1910, but this record was broken three times by the Elizabeth tunnel of Los Angeles aqueduct, with 604 feet in 30 days and the Jawbone tunnel advanced 1,061 feet in very soft rock on the same undertaking.

It remained for Canada to lead the way on the American continent in hard rock tunnels, and the Mt. Royal tunnel, in Montreal, for the Canadian Northern Railway, reached the satisfactory record of 810 feet for June, 1913, in Trenton limestone with dikes of hard rock. Now this record is outdistanced.

In these recent records on the American continent the European system of mounting the drills on a horizontal bar, with or without a drill carriage, has been adopted, and as this permits the drills being set up before the muck pile is removed, it is possible for at least two shots to be fired in an eight-hour shift. A large amount of high percentage powder per cubic yard is required to break the rock into small fragments and scatter it well along the heading floor to give time for two rounds of drilling in eight hours, especially as each round pulls an average of five feet.

Germans Brag Of the Future

Chancellor Claims that They Have Strong Armies Free

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—"Proudly and without fear we look into the future," was the emphatic assertion made by Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in his address opening the Reichstag today.

In reviewing the military operations of the first year of the war, the Chancellor claimed victory for Germany and her allies on every front, and added:

"We ourselves have strong armies free and at our disposal for new enterprises."

The Chancellor further discussed Poland's future, declaring that the previous German-Polish antagonism would be ended.

"Our present occupation of the Polish east frontier," said the Chancellor is the beginning of an evolution which leads the country, freed from the Russian yoke toward a brighter future in which she will be able to develop and cultivate a national character.'

Reviewing the present military situation, the Chancellor said:

"Again all French attempts to shatter our west front have failed, in spite of their contempt for death and their waste of human lives.

"Italy, our new enemy, who thought she could easily take her neighbor's goods, has been splendidly repulsed, in spite of her numerical superiority and the immense sacrifice of human lives.

"Unshaken and unshakeable stands our Dardanelles front."

In the first part of his speech the Chancellor retraced the history of European events leading up to the present war, and charged that attempts had been made by the enemies of Germany to conceal the whole truth from the nations at large and from their own people.

Best Peaches In Many Years

Quantity Not so Great but Quality Is Excellent

Reports from the peach growing districts are distinctly favourable. The wet weather that has prevailed during the latter half of July and the middle of August has retarded ripening. The fruit will not be ready for market as early as in former years, but the quality has been improved rather than impaired by the unusual amount of moisture in the soil. Peaches grow best on sandy soil, and in this kind of land the natural drainage is good. There is, therefore, little or no danger of the tree having "wet feet." A few days of bright, warm sunshine will perfect the peaches, and every indication points to the juiciest, best developed fruit we have had in years. It is perhaps unfortunate that the trees are not carrying the quantity of peaches that they have in former years. From the standpoint of the housewife, however, this is not a misfortune. It simply means that with less peaches to the tree, the size and quality will be above the standard.

This will be an unusually good year to can, preserve and jam peaches. With so much uncertainty about the crop from year to year, it would pay the thrifty to put down an extra supply this season. It is certain that there will not be any improvement in quality, and the price promises to be moderate. Plums are also in fine condition. The Burbanks and other good varieties are already on the market. Bradshaws and Gages will follow and everybody knows how good they are.

FIND THE REMAINS OF FRA ANGLICO

Painter Who Prayed as He Worked Was Beatified After Death

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The remains of the famous Florentine painter Fra Angelico, who died in 1455 are believed to have been found in the church of Santa Maria at Florence, according to a Rome despatch to La Liberte.

Fra Anglico, whose most notable work is the series of frescos in San Marco (national museum) Florence entered the Dominican Order in 1408, and after death was beatified for his saintly life. It is said of him that "he believed in the inspiration of his work, prayed when he painted and rarely retouched—a method that resulted in many technical weaknesses, but conserved the freshness of spontaniety." His paintings are considered to have an extra ordinary purity of feeling and devotional repose.

German Cheers For the British

Teutons Showed Their Gratitude When Squadron Did Not Sink Trawler

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 20.—German cheers for men in the British navy is an unusual wartime incident reported from the North Sea by the captain and crew of the German trawler Gudrun, belonging to Altona, which has just arrived at Eshjeig.

The captain, relating the experiences of the trawler, said that the Gud-run was stopped in the North Sea by a British squadron. He promptly got his boats ready and distributed life belts, believeing his ship was certain to be sunk.

When the British seamen reached the trawler the captain begged for time to take to the boats and admits that he was staggered at the short and pointed reply:

"You can take the whole ship; we shall not harm you."

Canadians Exports Still Expanding

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.—The total Canadian trade for the month of July reached $160,000,000, according to the statement issued to-day by the Hon. J. D. Reid, minister of customs. For the corresponding month of 1914 the total trade amounted to $93,000,000.

The feature of the statement is the large increase in the domestic and foreign exports. During the month of July domestic exports reached $45,600,000, and foreign goods exported from Canada $16,000,000, compared with $41,000,000 domestic and $8,000,000 foreign for the corresponding month of 1914. Eleven million dollars worth of animals and their produce was exported during July, being a substantial increase over the corresponding month last year. Manufactured goods also show a good increase, the exports being $12,500,000, against $5,800,000 for July, 1914.

While the exports are soaring, there is a decrease in the merchandise entered for consumption. During July $36,000,000 worth of goods were imported, made up of $20,000,000 dutiable and $15,000,000 free goods. This is a falling off for the corresponding month of 1914, when the imports amounted to $42,000,000, made up of $26,000,000 dutiable and $16,000,000 free goods.

For the four months of the present fiscal year, ending July 31st last, the total Canadian trade was $371,000,000 compared with $306,000,000 for the four months of the corresponding period last year. Last July $13,000,000 worth of coin and bullion was exported.

ITALY READY TO RUSH MEN TO FIGHT TURKS

Five Army Corps Under Orders—Strong Cruiser Squadron is Prepared to Sail—Ultimatum Sent Following Disregard of Protests

BRINDISI, Italy, August 20.—Five army corps concentrated at Apulia have been ordered to be prepared to leave for an unknown destination.

TARANTO, Italy, August 19.—A strong squadron of fast cruisers is being held in readiness to sail from here at a moment's notice. It is expected that the warships will be sent against Turkey if that country declines to satisfy Italy's demand for the release of Italian subjects held in the Ottoman Empire.

LONDON, Augsut 19.—The forces of the Ottoman Empire, besides being closely pressed by the Anglo-French allies on the Gallipoli peninsula where a new British contingent has obtained a firm footing in the vicinity of Suvla Bay and by the Russians in the Causcasus, are threatened by a new enemy—Italy. The Italian Government, angered by the desregard by the Porte of protests against the treatment of Italians subjects in Turkey, is reported to have issued an ultimatum demanding that Italians be allowed to leave the country how, when and where they desire, a privilege heretofore denied them.

WAR STORIES

Thrilling Experiences of Battlefield as Told by the Soldiers Themselves

FAITHFUL HORSES

I had driven them for three years. I tell you I could talk to them just as I am talking to you. There was not a word I said that they didn't understand. Early in the retreat from Mons, a shell crashed right into the midst of the section with which I was moving. A driver in front of me was blown to bits. My gun was wrecked. As I munted the fresh horse to continue the retreat, I saw my two horses struggling and kicking on the ground themselves. I could not go back to them. I tell you it hurt me. Suddenly a French chaceeur dashed up to them, cut the traces, and set them free. I was a good way ahead of them by that time; but I kept looking back to them and I could tell that they saw me as soon as they were on their feet.

Those horses followed me for four days. We stopped for hardly five minutes, and I could not get back to them. There was no work for them, but they kept their place in the line like trained soldiers. They were following me to the very end, and the thought occurred a thousand times: "What do they think of me upon another horse?" Whenever I looked for them, they wer in the line, watching me so anxiously and sorrowfully as to make me feel guilty of deserting them. Whenever the word "Halt" ran down the column, I held my head up to them. They saw it every time and stopped instantly

Whether they got anything to eat I do not know. I wonder if they dropped out from sheer exhaustion? I hope to heaven it was not that. At any rate, one morning, when the retreat was all but over, I missed them. I suppose I shall never see them again. That's the sort of thing that hurts a soldier in war!

Houses In Buenos Aires.

No building in Buenos Aires is permitted to be higher than the width of the street upon which it is erected; hence the skyscraper will never become popular there, despite the splendid growth and wideawakeness of the city. Much as this metropolis is known, it is not generally thought of in the light of age. However, it is one of the oldest cities in the new world. The first white settlement was made just forty-two years after the discovery of America by Columbus, and the first buildings were mud huts thatched with straw. Then a brick kiln was made and later tiles and bricks were imported from Spain. The first city was of Spanish architecture, and that style prevailed for more than 300 years. Despite the many great changes which have come through the passage of time and the general building advance in the world, four-fifths of the houses of Buenos Aires are still of one story, although there are streets lined with six-story palaces.—Exchange.

A Unique Lightship.

Off the island of Islay, on the west coast of Scotland, there is stationed at the Otter rock a unique lightship. It is unmanned, yet it can be relied on to display the warning light to guide the mariner on this dangerous coast. It is a most ingeniously constructed vessel and the only one of its kind. In its two steel tanks a sufficient quantity of gas can be stored to supply the lantern for several months. Experiments have shown that the light may be depended upon to burn continuously for months at a time. The approximate duration of the light can be predetermined, and there is no danger whatever of its being extinguished by wind or spray. The light is visible at a distance of from eight to twelve miles. The lightship also has a bell, which is made to ring automatically by means of an ingenious device that utilizes the gas as it passes from the tanks to the lantern to work the bell clapper.—Every Week.

Wonder of Stonehenge.

Everyone has heard of Stonehenge, a prehistoric monument in England which is almost as much of a puzzle as the sphinx in Egypt or the mounds erected by the mound builders in America. Stonehenge is about ten miles north of Salisbury. The name comes from two Saxon words meaning "hanging stones."

The earlier Celtic name was Cor Gawr, or giants' temple. There are in many localities in the northwest of Europe prehistoric remains in the form of huge stone monuments or "tumuli" or "barrows"—that is, bowl shaped mounds or hills of earth. In the neighborhood of Stonehenge there are hundreds of these mounds. Coins, etc., found in them seem to date them back about three centuries before Christ.

It must have taken an immense amount of work to make them, and there must have been some profound and serious purpose behind them.—Pathfinder.

Convince Yourself!

We do not ask anyone to make an investment through us unless they see clearly for themselves that the security behind such an investment is, beyond all question, more than sufficient.

The bonds we specialize in have, on the average, five times as much security as conservative first mortgages or corporation or industrial bonds.

The record of municipal bonds in Canada is particularly satisfactory to the investing public.

There is no class of security outside of Government bonds, which have so good a history.

CHAPTER XXVIII—CONTINUED

"Yes. Did she repeat them? How often I have begged her to forget them, and to believe that he repented of them before an hour was over! Ah, well! the sting of death lies in this; if she had had one word, one little word, she would be a different woman, in spite of the children's death. God's strokes are less cruel than men's strokes; the reed may be bruised by them, but it is not broken. She had a long illness after the children were gone, it was too much—too much for any woman's heart to bear. You see, she wanted her husband to comfort her. Dr. Parkes feared for her brain, but we pulled her through. Ah, just so, my dear; we pulled her through!" finished Miss Mewlstone, with a sigh.

"Oh, how good you are to her! she is happy to have such a friend!" observed Phillis, enthusiastically.

Miss Mewlstone shook her head, and a tear rolled down her face.

"Oh, my dear, I am only an old fool, as she said just now. And, after all, the company of a stupid old woman is not much to a proud bonnie creature like that. Sometimes for days together she hardly opens her lips to me; we sit together, eat together, and not a word for Barby. But sometimes, poor dear! she will cling to me and cry, and say her heart is breaking. And Solomon was right; but it was not only a brother that is good for adversity. When she wants me, I am here, and there is nothing I will not do for her, and she knows it;—and that it about the long and short of it," finished Miss Mewlstone, dismissing the subject with another sigh. And then she bade Phillis finish her coffee and put on her hat. "For your mother will be expecting you; and Phillips or Evans must walk with you, for it is past nine nine o'clock, and such a pretty young lady must not go unattended," concluded the simple woman.

Phillis laughed and kissed her at this; but, though she said nothing of her intentions, she determined to dismiss the servant as soon as possible, and run on alone to the Friary. She had not forgoteln her encounter with Mr. Drummond on her last visit to the White House; but to-night the storm would keep him in-doors.

Evans, the new footman, was desired to escort her; but in the middle of the avenue Phillis civilly dismissed him.

"There is no need for two of us to get wet; and the rain is coming on very heavily," she said.

The young man hesitated; but he was slow-witted and new to his duty, and the young lady had a peremptory way with her, so he touched his hat, and went back to the house.

"Such a nonsense, having a liveried servant at my heels, when I am only a dressmaker!" thought Phillis scurrying down the avenue like a chased rabbit.

Hitherto, the trees had sheltered her; but a glance at the open road and the driving rain made her resolve to take refuge in the porch of the cottage that stood opposite the gate. It was the place where Nan and her mother had once lodged;! and, though all the lights were extinguished, and the people had retired to bed, she felt a comfortable sense of safety as she unlached the little gate. Not even Mr. Drummond would discover her there.

But Phillis's satisfaction was of short duration; the foolish girl was soon to repent of her foolhardiness in dismissing her escort. She little knew that her words to Evans had been overheard, and that behind the dripping shrubbery she had been watched and followed. Scarcely had she taken refuge under the green porch, and placed her wet umbrella to dry, before she heard the latch of the little gate unclosed, and a tall dark figure came up the gravel-walk. It was not Isaac Williams's portly form—she could discern that in the darkness—and for the moment, a thrill of deadly terror came upon the incautious girl; but the next minute her natural courage returned to her aid. The porch was just underneath the room where Isaac slept; a call of 'help' would reach him at once; there was no reason for this alarm at all. Nevertheless, she shrunk back a little as the stranger came directly towards her, then paused as though in some embarrassment:

"Pardon me, but you have poor shelter here. I am Mrs. William's lodger. I could easily let you into the cottage. I am afraid the rain comes through the trellis-work."

Phillis's heart gave a great thump of relief. In the first place, Mrs. Williams" lodger must be a respectable person, and no dangerous loafer or pickpocket; in the second place the refined cultured tones of the stranger pleased her ear. Phillis had a craze on this point. "You may be deceived in a face, but in a voice, never!" she would say; and, as she told Nan afterwards, the moment that voice greeted her in the darkness she felt no further fear.

"I have a dry corner here," she returned, quietly; "it is only a thunder-shower, and I am close to home—only down the road, and just round the corner, past the vicarage."

"Past the vicarage!" in a tone of surprise; "why, there are no houses there!"

"There is a very small one called the Friary," returned Phillis, feeling herself color in the darkness, as she mentioned their humble abode. There was no answer for a moment and then her mysterious neighbor continued:

"My good landlord seems to retire early; the whole place looks deserted. They are very early risers, and perhaps that is the reason. If you will allow me to pass, I will open the door and light a lamp in my little parlor. Even if you prefer to reamin in the porch, it will look more cheerful." And, without waiting for her reply, he took a key from his pocket, and let himself into the house.

Their voices had disturbed the owners of the cottage, and Phillis overheard the following colloquy:

"Dear sakes alive! what a frightful storm! Is there anything you want, Mr. Dancy?" in Mrs. Williams' shrill tones.

"Not for myself, Mrs. Williams; but there is a young lady sheltering in the porch. I should be glad if you could come down and make her a little comfortable. The floodgates of heaven seem open to-night."

"Dear dear!" in a still more perplexed voice; "a young lady at this time of night—why it must be half-after nine. Very well, Mr. Dancy; beg her to come in and sit in your parlor a moment, and I will be down."

But Phillis absolutely refused to comply with the invitation.

"I am not tired, and I am not a bit wet, and I like watching the rain. This is a nice little porch, and I have taken refuge here before. We all know Mrs. Williams very well."

"She is a good creature, if she were not always in a bustle," returned Mr. Dancy. "There, the lamp is lighted; that looks more comfortable." And as he spoke he came out into the little hall.

Phillis stole a curious glance at him.

He was a tall man, and was dressed somewhat strangely. A long foreign-looking cloak and a broad-brimmed felt hat, which he had not yet removed, gave him the look of an artist; but, except that he had a beard and moustache, and wore blue spectacles, she could not gain the slightest clue to his features. But his voice,—it pleased Phillis's sensitive ear more every moment; it was pleasant—rather foreign, too— and had a sad ring in it.

He leaned against the wall opposite to her, and looked out thoughtfully at the driving rain.

"I think I saw you coming out from the White House," he observed presently. "Are you a friend of Mrs. Cheyne? I hope," hesitating a little, "that she is very well."

"Do you know her?" asked Phillis, in surprise.

"That is a very Irish way of answering my question; but you shall have your turn first. Yes; I used to know her many years ago, and Herbert Cheyne, too."

"Her poor husband. Oh! and did you like him?" rather breathlessly.

"Pretty fairly," was the indifferent reply. "People used to call him a pleasant fellow, but I never thought much of him myself—not but what he was more sinned again than sinning, poor devil. Anyhow, he paid dearly enough for his faults."

"Yes, indeed; and one must always speak leniently of the dead."

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

"Ah, that is what they say—that he is dead. I supose his widow put on mourning, and made lamentation. She is well, you say, and cheerful?"

"Oh, no! neither the one nor the other. I am not her friend; I only know her just little; but she strikes me as very sad. She has lost her children, and——"

"Ah!" Phillis thought she heard a strange sound, almost like a groan; but of course it was fancy; and just then good Mrs. Williams came bustling downstairs.

"Dear heart! why, if it is not Miss Challoner! To think of you, my dear miss, being out so late, and alone. Oh, what ever will your ma say?"

"My mother will scold me, of course,' returned Phillis, laughing; "but you must not scold me too, Mrs. Williams, though I deserve all I get. Mrs. Mewlstone sent Evans with me, but I made him go back. Country girls are fearless and it is only a step to the Friary."

"The rain is stopping now, if you will permit me to escort you. Mrs. Williams will be the voucher for my respectability," observed Mr. Dancy, very gravely and without a smile; and, as Phillis seemd inclined to put him off with an excuse, he continued more seriously: "Pardon me, but it far too late and the road far too lonely, for a young lady to go unattended. If you prefer it, I will go to the White House, and bring out the recreant Evans by force."

"Oh, no; there is no need for that," observed Phillis, hastily; and Mrs. Williams interposed volubly:

"Goodness' sakes, Miss Challoner, you have no call to be afraid of Mr. Dancy. Why, Mr. Frank Blunt, that nice young gentleman who lodged with me ever so many years, recommended him to me as one of his best and oldest friends. Your ma knew Mr. Blunt, for he was here with her, and a nicer-spoken young gentleman she said she never saw:"

"That will do, Mrs. Williams, returned Mr. Dancy, in rather a peremptory tone: and then, turning to Phillis, he said, more civizry, but still a little abruptly, as though he were displeased.—

"Well, Miss Challoner, do you feel inclined to trust yourself with me for a few hundreds yards, or shall I fetch Evans?" And Phillis, feeling herself rebuked, surfurksi her umbrella at once, and bade Mrs. Williams goodnight by way of answer.

HISTORIC HALL PASSES

Toronto to Sell Landmark of old Yorkville—St. Paul's Hall

It is now probable that the City of Toronto will sell the property on Yonge street, a short distance north of Bloor street, known as St. Paul's Hall.

St. Paul's Hall came into the possession of the city on the annexation of the old village of Yorkville in 1883. It was erected in 1860 by the Yorkville Council, incorporated six or seven years before. Two smaller buildings, one to the north, occupied for years as a hotel, and one to the south, used ever since its erection as a post-office, were originally wings to the town hall. The lock-up and police station occupied apartments on the ground floor, the municipal offices and Council chamber were on the floor above, while a large assembly room took up the greater part of the building, and was designed for use for public meetings and functions of a general character.

Upon the absorption of Yorkville by the city the use of the building for municipal purposes was no longer required.

From 1884 until 1907 the Public Library used the old Council chamber for the Yorkville branch, and the ground floor was for some years used as a stable for horses and car barns by the old Toronto Street Railway Company previous to the acquisition of the franchise by the present company in 1891, and the installation of the trolley system. In recent years a portion of the building has been occupied as No. 5 Police Station, and apart from its use for a few days in each year by a sub-collector of taxes, the hall has been of little value to the citizens other than for an occasional public meeting or party convention which might be held in the big, cheerless assembly here during a municipal or political campaign. During the past few months the 12th York Rangers have been using the hall as regimental headquarters.

AN INTERESTING RELIC.

But the most interesting thing about the building, which is not altogether devoid of architectural pretensions, is the singular coat-of-arms which surmounts the large circular window high up in the gable of the front elevation. This unique armorial shield, made of durable stone, and of a size to be easily distinguished from the street, was designed to perpetuate the memory and work of the first Council of the village of Yorkville. The device consists of a shield of arms divided into five panels and crowned by a Canadian beaver. On each of the five panels are symbols representing the name and occupation of each of the five councillors of the day. A beer barrel above the letter S keeps fresh the memory of John Severn, the brewer, whose place of business was just across the street from the town hall; a brick mould with the letter A stands for Thomas Atkinson, a brickmaker; an anvil with a W recalls James Wallis, the blacksmith; a jack-plane with D. below was for James Dobson, the carpenter, who for many years was postmaster in the south wing of the building, and whose daughter is the present postmistress; while the centre panel of honor contained a representation of a sheep's head, with the letter H, in memory of Peter Hutty, a butcher, and first reeve of Yorkville 60 years ago.

With the prospective sale of the property it is likely that the old building will soon give place to a modern structure of greater commercial value to a busy thoroughfare; but some of those who are interesting in the marking of places of interest in the city's history venture to hope that the purchasers will see that in the new building that will take its place, some position may be found in the front wall to preserve this unusual and interesting memorial of historic significance and personal vanity. An explanatory tablet might also be attached to it, recalling its origin and its significance.

In Quebec, a stone emblem, known as Le Chien d'Or, of local historic interest, has been preserved in the wall of the post-office building, which stands on the site of the original place of business, where the Golden Dog for so long occupied an ominous place over the doorway of a French merchant. In like manner the old stone arms of Yorkville should be preserved as an object of historic interest.

CARING FOR FOXES

Since the early summer of 1913 over a million dollars has been withdrawn from the Charlottetown branch of the Dominion Government saving banks for use in the fox industry. The methods of caring for foxes are now generally known, but no person who has no lifelong familiarity with animals should attempt to put them into practice. There have been instances where highly intelligent town bred men have failed after earnest efforts to handle foxes. The females are in the highest degree capricious and sensitive especially during the mating and rearing season. If they have the slightest suspicion that their little ones are in danger they carry them ceasely from place to place or even bury them alive in the snow with the insane idea of protecting them. On the other hand there are captive foxes which become quite tame and make fairly tractable pets.

The young ordinarily mature sufficiently to propagate during their first year. During the early summer all foxes except the spring pups shed the long "guard hair" which projects out beyond the soft body fur. In the autumn this hair appears once more at the approach of cold weather, restoring the beauty of the fox's coat. The fur is usually taken late in December. The animal is killed with chloroform and the skin is moved with solicitous care, incisions being confined, if possible, to the backs of the hind legs.

The ranch is usually located in a piece of underwood on sloping ground near the owner's dwelling and in surrounded by an outer stockade or a fence of fourteen gauge galvanized fox wire. (similar to chicken wire) manufactured especially for the purpose in England, Canada and the United States. The fence is ten feet high and an overhang of two feet at the top prevents the fox from climbing out, while a deep foundation, of an extension of the wire underground precludes escape by burrowing. The inner enclosures or paddock, each devoted to one pair, are also fenced as just described and are ordinarily about thirty-five feet square. Each contains a wooden kennel or fox house, divided into a nesting compartment bedded with seaweed or straw and an outer cleaning compartment. Some quarters for four pairs of foxes are built, though separate, in one central house, with spouts debouching from each corner into corresponding paddocks.

The foxes are fed very sparingly with scrap meat, clean offal, fish, special bannock cakes prepared with tallow, or with manufactured dog biscuits. They will consume berries and small fruit to a limited extent, and they seem to relish green grass or other herbage—this appetite apparently being nature's provision for the regulation of their alimentary system. To females during the winter and spring are fed milk, eggs, gruel, and other nutritious and easily assimilable foods. To foxes about to be killed for their pelts are fed molasses, honey, and various patent stock foods with the purpose of enhancing the brilliancy of the fur.

The most elaborate and extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent the loss or theft of the high grade blacks. Man traps and uninsulated wires of high voltage are in use on several ranches; although since the fox pens are not an integral legal part of the owner's dwelling the measures are not strictly within the law. Small shanties are often built at the gates of the enclosures and armed caretakers who sleep in these huts are warned by electric gongs of any attempt to break into the ranch.

During July and August the business office of The Intelligencer will close at five o'clock on Saturdays. Subscribers who obtain their paper at the office will govern themselves accordingly and call before the above hour.

Retard the Fire and Save the House!

A fire is small when it starts, and easily extinguished, if you can keep it from spreading beyond the room in which it originates. The first ten or fifteen minutes are vital—to give you time to call assistance.

Fire can't burn through the sheets of

with which your walls and ceilings can be lined as easily as with ordinary lath and plaster. Linabestos Building Board is made of asbestos fibre and Portland cement, combined under tremendous pressure to make a building board that combines strength, lightness and attractive appearance, with the fireproof qualities of asbestos and cement.

Saw, Hammer and Nails are all the Tools you need.

Linabestos is very easy to apply. You can build your own fireproof partitions, or fireproof your present walls, making your house warmer in winter, cooler in summer, and practically fireproof at all times.

The same reasons that make Linabestos best for inside walls and ceilings, make Asbestoslate the most satisfactory of all roof coverings. Lighter and stronger than slate, cheaper to apply than wood, fireproof, weather-proof, attractive in appearance, and as everlasting as a stone monument; they also make the most economical roof known, because there is no expense for repairs, painting or maintenance.

The Americans in England Are in Bitter Mood

Declare Germany Scorns the United States and Has Only Contempt for Her

LONDON, Aug. 20.—"Something will happen" describes the opinion of every American one meets in London today.

This "something," of course, relates to the German-American situation resulting from the sinking of the Arabic yesterday. Two views are expressed: The first is that Germany, realizing that in spite of recent military triumphs, the allies finally will win wishes to draw America into the war to more easily sue for peace and have America exercise on the other belligerents a moderating influence.

Germany Hypnotised Itself

The second view is that Germany is hypnotised by the conviction of its power and duty to conquer the world and thus replace decadent moral and institutions of other nations with its own sound benificent "kultur." The latter view is the one more generally entertained, especially by those with personal knowledge of the German temper.

"The condition at present is not in agreement with the notion that the Germans realize the magnitude of the resources accumulating against them," said Harry Gordon Selfridge, a former Chicago merchant, who recently spent some time in Germany. "On the contrary I am convinced they feel not only aboundingly buoyant and Imperialistic, but abundantly able to deal with any consequences that may arise from their doing exactly what they please as regards the whole or any part of the rest of the world.

Submit Or Release.

"For several weeks I have felt certain that all who are not willing to submit to Germany should prepare to resist her. Indeed I am sure it is the duty of Americans and every other nation that believes in freedom not only to prepare to defend itself, but strike now with those great civilized powers which are striving to defeat the latest menace to the free development of mankind."

Mr. Selfridge's language compared with that of most Americans here is restrained. Interviews with foremost Americans accessible show the deepest anger. One of the ablest financiers of America, a man enjoying highly confidential relations with officials dealing with international relations, said to me:

Germans Scorns U.S.

"Germany regards us as weaklings, a prominent man in Berlin told me we had no friends in Europe and deserved none. A man in a high position under the Kaiser said America's only passion was for money, and he said we would not take the risk of going to war on either side, but would coin dollars out of blood, tears, and ruin. As this official talked his exasperation and contempt mastered him and I got the startling idea, what would happen to us if Germany gets a chance to launch her war machine against us.

A Town of Distinction.

"Where can one find a more filthy, hot, sweltering, odorous town than Hodeidah?" asks a recent traveler regarding that Arabian port. A filthier town it would indeed be difficult to discover, even in Asiatic Turkey, and the character of its inhabitants may be judged from the fact that the Akhdam Arabs, who are treated as outcasts by all the other tribes, have been allowed to establish themselves in Hodeidah. Nevertheless the port is the gateway to one of the most beautiful, fertile and populous regions of Arabia and had a flourishing trade in days prior to Turkish misrule.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Invisible Ink Known to Romans.

Invisible ink appears to have been known since the early days of writing, says the London Chronicle, for both Ovid and Pliny give recipes for the preparation of such a fluid, the one from milk, the other from various vegetable juices. In the middle ages many writers mention "magnetic" and "magic" inks, the action of which some of them averred to be miraculous. Today such fluids are technically known as "sympathetic inks," and there are numerous patents for their manufacture.

Vol. 48 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, AUGUST 23, 1915. No.388

HOW CANADIANS SAVED THE DAY

85,000 Against 12,000

Capt. R. D. Ponton, son of Col. W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, who is invalided home from the front, has not been seen about the town since his arrival home. His knee is giving him some trouble, and he spends most of his time resting or journeying into the country in an automobile. He was not wounded, but twisted his knee in the trench, and had a sunstroke while riding in to the hospital. He is also suffering from the effects of poisonous gas, which keeps him from sleeping properly. He is to report in England on Oct. 2, if the Medical Board at Kingston consider him fit.

A representative of The Intelligencer had the pleasure of an interview with the young officer the other day, and heard an interesting story concerning the life and doings of the Belleville boys at the front. But he heard very little about Capt. Ponton himself. Modesty is evidently one of the many good qualities possessed by this Belleville boy; and in the course of a long conversation, that little personal pronoun "I"—which becomes objectionable when too often used—was scarcely once heard.

Capt. Ponton has brought home with him many souvenirs from the battlefield, in the form of portions of shells and bullets. One of the German bullets—a Mauser—has a sad history, for it went through the head of Private Geo. Craig, of Oshawa, and caused the first death in the company to which Capt. Ponton was attached.

In the course of his conversation, which, at one point turned on the army boots, Capt. Ponton remarked, "They may say what they like about those boots, but they were the best ever issued." He mentioned that the Canadians used the Lee-Enfield rifle, but he would not be drawn into a statement as to the respective merits of the Lee-Enfield and Ross. For sniping purposes he said there was no rifle to equal the Ross. To show the exemplary conduct of the Belleville boys, Capt. Ponton said not one of them ever came before the Colonel in France for an offence. He described the Army Service Corps and the Army Medical Corps as wonderful organizations.

HIS BAPTISM OF FIRE

Capt. Ponton, who was formerly a lieutenant in the 15th Regt. left Canada with the first contingent. The First Canadian Division, under command of Lt.-Gen. Alderson left England on Feb. 5th, and reached the firing line on Feb. 13th. "In our first experience in the trenches," said Capt. Ponton, "we were very fortunate in having a British Brigade with us, for instructional purposes, and of course being with these British regulars we at once felt at home with them."

"What is your opinion of the British Tommy?" he was asked.

"The British soldier is the most wonderful man in the world," said the young officer with enthusiasm. "I have never seen any one to equal him. When I say that I don't want in any way to disparage the French, because they admit it themselves. And when I say British I include the Canadians. There is no difference between the British and Canadians and we make no distinction between them. We might have shone because we were in most of the fighting." "We did so well in the first fight," added the captain, with a little pardonable pride, "and I think that is why they kept us on."

Describing their first advance to the trenches he remarked, "If there is any fear at all we are sure to have it then, for the Germans throw up 'very' lights—nearly a hundred will go up at once—and if you don't stop and drop to the ground you are sure to be hit. Machine guns opened on Capt. O'Flynn's men, but he got his men behind stumps and in ditches, and saved them. We were facing Saxons—we knew they were Saxons, because they are the best fighters. The British Brigade we were with were the Rifle Brigade, the Honorable Artillery Company, and the Royal Fusiliers."

"We remained in the trenches five days and five nights. Not much happened beyond the ordinary sniping. Two of the German trenches were only 175 yards from us. We had all sorts of dreams as to what it would be like in the trenches; but not a rifle could be fired for some time, owing to the fog, and we spent the time in fixing wires. The fog lifted suddenly and exposed a whole German working party. 'That was the first target we had.' We know we wounded a lot, but they got them off that night. We did not lose a man."

Capt. Ponton went on to say that the First Canadian Brigade was taken out of the trenches on the night of Feb. 18-19, to allow the 2nd Canadian Brigade to go in for the same instruction. The 1st Brigade went into ———, five miles behind the line, for billets. During the period before they again went into the trenches their whole time was occupied in lectures and practical experiences with bombs and hand grenades, and the construction of wire entanglements. "We were not a trained Division such as the first line regiments. We had not been trained even as much as the Territorials. We went into the firing line on the strength of our musketry, which we learned at Salisbury and Valcartier. We went to France with every man a marksman."

CAPT. R. D. PONTON.

"CANADIANS NEVER BUDGE"

"On Feb. 27 the 1st Division took over the lines at Bois Grenier, which was held by the 7th Division (the flying Division of the British army). We were taken 15 miles in London motor 'buses. Our battalion (the 2nd) relieved the 1st battalion of Royal Warwicks. Just before going in General Alderson addressed us, and what impressed us the most was that he wanted it said by all the British regiments that 'Canadians never budge.' Everyone remembered that at Ypres. The relief was completed without any casualties. The enemy were about 200 yards from us. The trench was in a terrible condition—filled with water and mud. There were no dug-outs and very few sand bags."

"The next morning I had my first casualty. Geo. Craig, of Oshawa, was shot through the head and he was the first Canadian we buried in the new Canadian Cemetery. We worked night and day to fix the trench and to make it bullet-proof and as dry as possible."

"Just before we were relieved on March 5th, Ross Herman, of Frankford of the 49th, was killed by a trench mortar and seven others were wounded. After five days we had asked to be allowed to stay to complete the trench. We were relieved by the 4th battalion. We were sent back to billets at Saille, in the Divisional reserve. Here we found our first Canadian mail bags awaiting us."

The first day in billets, Capt. Ponton pointed out, was always given over to rest; the other days were spent in bathing, cleaning rifles, equipment, &c., and generally preparing for the next session in the trenches.

NEUVE CHAPELLE

"We went back to the trenches on March 9, as the battle of Neuve Chapelle was to be started on the 10th. The Germans used huge electric search lights, but we suffered no casualties.

Trenton Bridge Reported Unsafe

New Bridge to be Constructed at Once, At Cost of $127,183

At a meeting of members of the Town Council and Board of Trade, held in the Town Hall on Thursday last, the new bridge proposition was discussed thoroughly. During the couse of the meeting several gentlemen, qualified in every way to give an opinion, made the positive statement that the bridge was unsafe. It was finally decided to ask the Council to submit a bylaw at once to the people for the purpose of authorizing the Corporation to issue debentures for $40,000 to cover the Town's share of cost of the new structure. The Dominion Government, we are given to understand has agreed to pay $87,183, it proportion of the cost; and it is anticipated that at a later date, the local legislature will contribute, perhaps $10,000 or $15,000. Mr. Loomis, chairman of the bridge committee, stated that the condition of the bridge was so dangerous that he did not feel like taking further responsibility is connection with it, and had instructed the Town Engineer to make an inspection and report to him at once. Work, it is expected will commence about Sept. 1st. The bridge will be placed on the same site but will be wider. The roadway will be 24 feet wide and the foot passenger will be five feet on each side. The approaches will, we are told be about 70 feet in width. While some people will regret the passing of the old bridge from a sentimental standpoint, there will be many who will rejoice at the prospect of crossing the river without having to inhale the vitiated air of the present covered structure. The bylaw is being brought to a vote at earliest possible date.

The total cost of the new bridge will be $127,183—Trenton Advocate.

Has Failed to Rejoin Regiment

Allowed out on Suspended Sentence is Heard of Through Finger-Print Bureau

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 21.—Chief of Police Thompson has received the following communication from Police Commissioner Sherwood of Ottawa. It refers to Russell Powell, who on Thursday last was allowed out on suspended sentence after having pleaded guilty to the theft of a watch and razor from an East City residence. Powell, who appeared in Court in uniform agreed to rejoin his regiment, which the Chief learn he has failed to do.

The communication reads at follows:

"I beg to inform you that Russell Powell, who received a suspended sentence at Peterborough, August 19th for theft, is according to his finger impressions identical with one Richard B. Powell, whose criminal record is as follows:

Bulgaria has 150,000 on Turkish Frontier

Concentration of Troops May Presage Her Entry Into War

NAPLES, Aug. 21.—A despatch to the Matitno from Salonki says that Bulgaria has concentrated 150,000 troops on the Turkish frontier.

Recent news despatches from Sofia have agreed that Bulgaria is satisfied with the territorial concessions offered her by the entente powers as the price of her aid in the war. The consent of Serbia and Greece to these terms is awaited before the allies can bring their negotiations with Bulgaria to a successful conclusion. If Bulgaria declares war upon Turkey it is understood that she will receive general financial assistance from the entente powers.

ROME, Aug. 22.—Italy nas declared war against Turkey and the Italian Ambassador (Marquis Di Garroni) has left Constantinople. The United States Embassy will protect Italians in Turkey.

Auto Ran Into Marsh

Kingston Party of Seven Were Stranded

KINGSTON, Aug. 21.—I'm dead, I'm dead," were the cries that greeted several motorists who were out on the Gananoque road about eleven o'clock on Thursday night. The cries came from one of a party of seven men who were standing in a marsh about a mile outside of Gananoque. The seven were pretty well "loaded," and the word "drunk" might well have been added to the cry.

The party were all Kingstonians who left the city about nine o'clock. The driver was in as bad a condition as the rest of the party, and did not have a very secure control of his car. At a turn just west of the marsh he forgot to slow up and as a result went two car-lengths into the marsh. The car broke through the hard surface into the water and sunk over two feet.

The men had to stay in the car until morning when farmers helped them by throwing boards for them to walk on. The car is still in the marsh.

No More Machine Guns Required

Government Has Placed Order for all Guns at Present Available

OTTAWA, Aug. 2.—The following official statement regarding the new fund to aid disabled soldiers was made by Senator J. A. Lougheed, acting Minister of Militia:

"Donations for machine guns already received the expectations of the government. The government has placed an order for all the machine guns at present available, and further donations would not result in furnishing any additional equipment of guns to our troops.

"In the event of you desiring to consider where in you might otherwise exercise your generosity, may I commend the following to your consideration?

Outline of Scheme.

"The government has appointed a commission, called the Military Hospitals Comission, of which a member of the government is the president, to administer out of the public funds the maintenance of Military Hospitals and Convalescent Homes for our sick and wounded soldiers. Upon discharge from these Hospitals and Homes, the disabled with receive pensions at fixed rates.

"These pensions, while being larger, per man, than those allowed to thse British soldier, will in numerous instances be insufficient to meet the needs of the recipient, and to end of further assisting them in the making of their livlihood, we are, in response to many suggestions, organizing a fund to be known as the "Disablement Fund."

"The plan of administering this fund by the above mentioned commission would depend upon its amount. If a sum is obtained which will produce from investments a sufficiently large revenue, this income would be expended, but if not large enough to enable this to be done, both capital and income would be distributed upon well-defined lines.

Each Case on Merits.

"Each case would be treated upon its merits and assistance given in many ways. For instance, a totally disabled man could have his pension augmented by a sum to enable him to obtain additional physical comforts, while a partially disabled man, if unable to follow his former employment, would be assisted to take up some new occupation within the scope of his crippled ability. These men having offered their services to their country thus placed their lives in jeopardy, and in so doing have suffered partial or total disablement. This should appeal to the public as deserving most favorable recognition.

"Communications as to this fund should be directed to Mr. E. H. Scammell, secretary, Military Hospitals Commission, 22 Vittoria street, Ottawa —Ottawa Free Press.

GERMAN NAVAL DISASTER ELEVEN SHIPS DESTROYED IN THE RIGA GULF FIGHT

Great Russian Victory—Dreadnought Moltke, Three Cruisers and Seven Torpedo Boats Sunk—Attempted Landing Frustrated and Force Annihilated—British Submarines Aided in the Victory

LONDON, Aug. 23. 2.55 a.m.—A despatch to The Times from Petrograd confirms the announcement of M. Rodziankoff the President of the Duma, of a naval victory in the Gulf of Riga, and the sinking of the German battle cruiser Moltke. British submarines aided in the victory.

The German Dreadnought battle cruiser Moltke, three cruisers and seven torpedo boats were sunk during the battle in the Gulf of Riga, according to an announcement made by the President of the Duma and cabled here by the Petrograd correspondent of The Central News last night. The Moltke is the first ship of the Dreadnought class lost by Germany in the war. The text of the statement follows:—

"In the Riga battle the Germans lost one Superdreadnought, the Molke, three cruisers and seven torpedo boats.

"The German fleet has withdrawn from Riga Bay.

"The Germans tried to make a descent near Pernvin (Pernigel) on the east shore of the Gulf of Riga, some 35 miles north of Riga?). Four barges crammed with soldiers took part in the descent. They were repulsed by the Russian troops without the co-operation of artillery, the Germans being exterminated and the barges captured. "Our destroyers in the Black Sea have sunk over one hundred Turkish boats."

An earlier message said that the Germans had attempted a landing near Pernau Bay in the Gulf of Riga, and referred to "barques" crammed with soldiers as attempting a landing. The Times' Petrograd correspondent also speaks of Pernau as the attempted landing place.

News Enthusiastically Received

PETROGRAD, Aug. 22.—The statement made in the Duma tonight by the President of the Chamber, M. Rodzianko, that the German fleet had been defeated at Riga with the loss of the battle cruiser Moltke and three other cruisers and seven torpedo boats, elicited unbounded enthusiasm and was accompanied by touching scenes. The deputies of all factions mutally congratulated one another.

The Turning of the Tide

The news spread through the city and the people gathered at the newspaper offices awaiting the hanging out of the official bulletin concerning the battle. The people regarded the reported victory as the turning of the tide in favor of Russia.

The effect of the destruction of a German vessel of the Dreadnought class by a British submarine will, it is expected here, have a beneficial political result and tend to dissipate largely the cloud of discontent over the apparent inaction of the western allies. While he Russian Government and the military and naval authorities have a complete understanding with those in authority in the allied countries, it has been and still is impossible to take the people entirely into their confidence.

One unofficial despatch says that the Moltke was sunk by a British submarine.

The Navy Congratulated

After confirming the announcement in the Duma, the correspondent appended to his dispatch the following official communication:

"Confirmation of the naval victory in the Gulf of Riga was conveyed to the Duma committees today by M. Radzianko to congratulate the navy on its splendid achievement and to convey to the Minister of War their compliments on the defeat of the German invaders at Pernau by local levies.

"Among the German warships sunk is the battle cruiser Moltke. Four huge barges filled with soldiers were captured and the invaders surrounded and taken prisoners.

"Petrograd indulged in pardonable rejoicings this afternoon. The desperate efforts of the Germans to upset our military plans by creating a diversion on the Esthonian coast have signally failed. According to the news received today, they sustained heavy losses during the operations connected with the forcing of the Gulf of Riga.

British Submarines Aided

"Aided by British submarines, we were able from the shelter of the great and little sounds to harass and cripple and finally to drive the enemy out of the gulf.

"The losses of the gallant Baltic fleet were extremely small, in no way impairing its efficiency, and so long as this is preserved no serious danger can immediately threaten Petrograd.

It was officially announced in Petrograd on Saturday night that a British submarine had seunk a German cruiser in the Baltic. No details were given. This may refer to the Moltke or to another vessel.

Canadian Prisoners Will be Treated More Severely

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 23—The German authorities are contemplating treating Canadian prisoners in Germany—civil and military—more severely, in retaliation for treatment accorded German prisoners at Amherst, Nova Scotia, where seven hundred are interned.

Complaints have reached here that the Amherst detention prison is an unventilated, unsanitary factory, and the prisoners, for attempting to escape, and for less serious infractions of the rules, were confined in a brick oven.

(Canadian Press Special)

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.—It is officially stated here that the Berlin story of ill-treatment of Germans at Amherst internment camp is without the slightest foundation. There were 627 men interned there, most of them from German cruisers sunk early in the war. They were comfortably housed, fed with Canadian military rations, and given no work or duties. On objection of some of the naval officers being quartered with ordinary seamen, the former were removed to Halifax. "The basest of fabrications," is the way the reports of ill-treatment are characterized.

In the Argonne there were short engagements with bombs and hand grenades, on the western outskirts of Fontaine, Madame, and in the forest of Bolante.

In the Vosges, on the crests of the Linge River and the Barrenkopf, following a spirited fight which took place after a preparatory fire of particular severity, we were successful in gaining possession of some of the enemy's trenches. On the remainder of the front last night passed without incident.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Harry Lauder is enroute to the British trenches in Flanders to sing for nothing. He volunteered his services to the British Red Cross and that organization made the arrangements. I'll sing them songs they know so they can take up the chorus."

COTTON IS DECLARED ABSOLUTE CONTRABAND

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Cotton has been declared absolute contraband by Great Britain, according to a statement issued by the Foreign Office last evening. The statement declares that the Government proposes to initiate measures to relieve the depression which might temporarily disturb the cotton market because of the contraband order.

It was learned upon enquiry at the Foreign Office that the French Government issued a similar notice today.

The announcement follows:

"His Majesty's Government have declared cotton absolute contraband. While the circumstances might have justified such action at an earlier period his Majesty's Government are glad to think that local conditions of American interests likely to be effected are more favorable for such a step than they were a year ago, and moreover, his Majesty's Government contemplate initiation of measures to relieve as far as possible any abnormal depression which might temporarily disturb market conditions."

Letters From Belleville Boys At The Front

GUNNER H. W. DILLNUTT

The following letter has been received by Mr. C. J. Bowell:—

Aug. 8, 1915.

Dear Sir.—I am taking the liberty of making a suggestion re honor roll, and an enclosing copy illustrating my idea.

There has been a slight change made in our address, it now being as follows: Gunner H. W. Dillnutt, 40293 Ammunition Col. 1st Canadian Artillery Brigade, B.E.F.

As you perhaps already know there are six of the Bellevillians in the Ammunition Column and like myself are in the best of health and spirits.

We had a very nice concert last night, the band of the 10th Batt., obliging us with a few selections and one fellow sang a parody on the "Little grey home in the west." I can only remember one verse which went something like this:

There are spiders that welcome you in,
There are beetles that stand up and hiss,
There are ants in a line and star-lights that shine,
And other things all of you miss.
It's a corner of trench-wall itself,
But to me its a haven of rest.
When the guns blaze on top its a very safe sport,
In my little dug-out on the East.

This was very much appreciated as it describes our usual conditions in a humorous manner and helps to cheer up those who have not heard from home.

I must now close, as we are about to fall in for stables, wishing your paper and Belleville all prosperity.

Yours sincerely,
H. W. DILLNUTT.

PRESENTATION AT BAPTIST CHURCH

At the close of the morning service in the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church yesterday, the congregation were asked to remain for the purpose of saying good-bye to their esteemed organist, Miss Wanda Riggs, who is taking up the profession of nursing at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto. She left the city on the "flyer" Sunday afternoon.

Miss Riggs has been organist at this church for some time, and her faithful services have been greatly appreciated by the congregation. The following address was read by Mr. C. A. Hart, and Mr. A. Blackburn made the presentation.

Victoria Ave. Baptist Church,
Sunday, August 22nd, 1915.

To Miss Wanda Riggs.

Dear Friend,—The brilliant and witty dramatist, William Congreve, once said:

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast,
To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak,"

and we all know instinctively that this is true, provided it is good music. In the worship of Almighty God music has always had a prominent place, and Dr. Jowett has truly said that music is one of the allies of the Divine Spirit to life men closer to God and to lead human souls into the secret places of the Most High. And so it follows that a good organist, who is also a good Christian, is one of the greatest blessings to any church and a great power for spiritual helpfulness.

As members and friends of this Church we consider ourselves highly favored in having had your services as our organist since we installed our new pipe organ, as well as for some years previous. You have been faithful and efficient and painstaking in all your duties from Sabbath to Sabbath, and you have given to us music that has been not only of the very choicest in technique and tunes, but also helpful, soulful and understandable to those of us who lay no claims to the technical knowledge of such a fine art.

We deeply regret that we are called upon to part with your services, but we sincerely trust that you will continue to prove a blessing in the new sphere that you are about to enter. May the "musical touch" that you will carry at your fingers' ends prove to be a great asset to you in healing the sick and in cheering away the gloom of the night watches and the virus of microbes.

As a slight token of our esteem, we ask your acceptance of this accompanying coffee percolator and china, from the members and friends of this Church, and may the blessing of God abundantly rest upon you.

"GOD SAVE THE KING"

THE NEW FRANCE

Sermon at Belleville Baptist Church by Rev. C. G. Smith

An interested audience assembled at the Baptist Church last night, when Rev. Chas. Geo. Smith continued his series of special sermons on "Present Blessings from the Great War." The subject of last evening's discourse was "The New France: From Atheism Back to God." The text of scripture chosen was Isaiah 1:9—"Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah." Mr. Smith said in part:—

Such a text as this should terrify us, and "stab our spirits broad awake." The prophet Isaiah was addressing a religious nation—the most religious nation in the world. And yet they were making a fearful mistake and falling into an awful danger. Isaiah told those Jews that their worship and ritual, Sabbaths and appointed feasts, were a weariness and an abomination to God. Why? Because as a nation they had forgotten God and sunk into formality and idolatry. It was a terrible, yet truthful arraignment—and they knew it. The prophet also tells them the blessed truth that it was the "very small remnant" of faithful souls who refused to go with the crowd, or "be in the swim," but remained faithful to their God, who stood between Israel and the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, the cities of the plain that were wiped off the earth because they were unspeakably and altogether vile. And it was because of that faithful remnant of true men of God in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation that Israel's lamp was kept burning, and the Messiah came, and the redemption of the world was made possible, and we are here, and our great Empire, today. This is encouraging to every true Christian. How often it seems that we are pitifully small, and we say, "is it really worth while going on?" The answer is decidedly "Yes!" It is not only worth while, but it is a first condition of our very civilization that we should go on being as we are. Christianity now, as in Isaiah's day, has not only a function of world-evangelisation, but also of world-preservation. The good must be aggressive, it must unsheath its sword against every insolent insurgence of evil. But good—like salt—has a passive mission, namely, to check disease, and prevent putrefaction, and control rampant evil. We are told that we can't make men moral by act of parliament; but we can, in a great measure, prevent them from making other people immoral. And that is why men of faith, in every age, are the greatest power in the world, even as a "very small remnant." Evil men may poke jibes at our empty churches; but empty or full, they fear them, for they know the power of the remnant. Now this text I have selected tonight may not sound very complimentary to our gallant ally, and loyal neighbour just across the English Channel, noble France. But it is the truth; and if we take care of the truth, compliments will take care of themselves. To know La Belle France is to love her. The charms of her land are rich and varied and perennial, both as to scenery and climate and history. I count myself happy in having a close friend, Dr. Donald Duncan Munro, of Kansas City, who is learned in French lore and literature, and has travelled that charming country from the North Sea to the Pyrenees, and from Brittany to the Vosges Mountains, many times over. France is only half the size of Ontario, and you could throw it over your shoulder between Port Arthur and Quebec and lose it. But in that veritable Garden of Eden reside nearly 40,000,000 of the brightest and brainiest people on God's earth. Macauley wrote of this joyous land:—

"Now let there be the merry sound of music and of dance,
Through they cornfields green and sunny vines,
O pleasant land of France."

France is an endless study, and an endless delight. She is gay, yet mournful, flower-strewn and vine-clad, yet blood stained and chastened sore. She is the home of the peaceful arts and sciences and belles lettres, and yet she has been the scene of the bloodiest revolutions and massacres—religious, polithical and military—through the long ages past. Every foot of her soil and every street of her great cities and towns has a history, and every history has a moral.

With such a history France ought to be a great Christian nation, and a missionary stronghold. But alas! she has been so God-forgetting and sin-loving that she is called "the little atheist of Europe," and but for the faithful remnant of true Christians she would have been as Sodom of old. For years France has been drifting—as a nation—to bold infidelity. There has always been some Christian work carried on in France by little groups of Godly men and women, but it has been very small, almost nothing in comparison with the size of the population and the life of her people. M. Fouillee, an eminent French moralist and statistician, has recently declared that during the last half century crime has trebled in France, though the population has remained stationary. She has cast out religion, erased the name of God from her school-books and coins, and made it a punishable offence for a public school teacher to make any reference to religion or God, the Bible or Christ. She is a living reputation of the secularist assertion that education is as good—or better—a bulwark of national morality as Christianity. Apart from God and Christianity no nation can guarantee to preserve a sound moral order for two generations. The sad thing is that France started on her drifting towards infidelity because of the greed and inefficiency of a state-religion controlled by a foreign heirarchy, and an indifferent, selfish, and political priesthood.

For many years the great majority of the French people opposed this incubus of state religion, which had no spiritual influence over the people, and no Gospel message for them, but was a political menace, trading on the superstition of the people, and putting a premium on ignorance and grovelling obedience to the Vatican. By a law of Dec. 9, 1905, the concordat of 1901, which had cursed the people of France for over a century, was abolished, and the people are now as free from a state-controlled religion as we are here in Canada, thank God. But those years of religious oppression, and that galling papal foreign yoke, had long since done their deadly work, and it seemed, until this awful war came, that France would never take kindly to a purely spiritual form of free Christianity, divorced from the machinations of papal emissaries, and the intrigues of political cardinals and priests. But what has happened today? Why, recently in Notre Dame Cathedral, and throughout all France, tens of thousands of people have assembled weekly for nothing but a prayer-meeting, to confess their sins, to seek God, and commit their cause and their comrades to His almighty car and eternal love! Some cynic may say, "This is purely emotional, and the result of fear." Well, suppose it is? There is something deeper, namely, that France is turning from Atheism and seeking God with all her heart. And this will be the dawn of a new and better day for our noble ally, so bright and winsome, and so mighty in so many ways, in heart and soul. And I believe that out of all this horrible war will come a transformed and Christianised France, that will be not only our ally in battle, but our ally in Christ!

At last France is returning to that rare dictum of Voltaire's, namely, that if there was really not a God, humanity would have to create one. For it is the longing of the human heart and the sure token that God has made us for himself, and to be the recients of His love and grace in Jesus Christ.

Count Roederer, the eminent French moralist and friend of Napoleon, once asked the Emperor "How shall we get morality back to France?" Napoleon replied, "There is only one way, and that is to re-establish religion in the hearts of the people." And Napoleon was a good judge of human nature, and French nature, at that.

"Talk they of morals, O thou dying Lamb?
The true morality is love of Thee."

The next morning, at 7 o'clock the artillery bombardment started the battle. At 8 o'clock rifle firing was opened all along the line, and rapid firing was kept up all day, while the battle on our right was progressing. This was done in order to keep the Germans in front occupied. The bigger demonstration we kept up the better. Neuve Chapelle was a mile and a half off, and our orders were that when the line was broken by the British Division we were to go forward, as the cavalry broke through. We had enormous numbers of cavalry ready to break through.

"We suffered very heavily from shell firing, a number of Cobourg, Oshawa and Ottawa boys being killed. Artillery fire was kept up all night long. The next morning rifle fire opened at 7 o'clock, and continued until the evening, when a heavy fog came on—you could not see your hand in front of you."

"On March 12 the same procedure took place, and we heard that it would not be necessary for the Canadians to advance. Capt. Abell, of Cobourg, was wounded this day. There was no sleep for us day or night, because after each battle we expected a counter-attack. On March 13 our battalion was taken out and the 4th battalion relieved us again. We went into the brigade reserve, just in the rear of the trenches."

Capt. Ponton said they relieved and were relieved during the next fortnight and had a strenuous time, and lost a lot of men by trench mortars. They stayed in those trenches until April 6th, when they were taken to ———, a 28 mile march—where they received their first draft from England to replace the casualties.

ORDERED TO HILL 60

"On April 10 General Alderson inspected us," proceeded Capt. Ponton, "and told us we were under General Smith Dorrien. On April 12 General Smith-Dorrien himself inspected us. Col. Watson was informed that the 2nd Battalion, had been chosen to go with the British Brigade to Hill 60. We were delighted to have been selected."

"On April 18 we left ——— for Poperinge, which was about two and a half miles behind the line, west of Ypres. The attack on Hill 60 having been postponed we were not to join the British Brigade until noon of April 22, and by the morning of that day we had been moved up further to Vlamertinghe. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when we were getting ready to move to Hill 60 we got word of the attack on the French Colonials, the Algerians, and were at once caried out to give relief.

THE GREAT BATTLE CHARGE OF THE CANADIANS.

Capt. Ponton had now come to the great battle of Ypres (generally called the battle of Langemarck) in which Canadian troops gained an imperishable name by "saving the day."

"On April 22, the battalion fell in at 6 o'clock in the afternoon," he said, "and immediately moved off to the Yser Canal. Quite a number of Canadians were overcome by the gas fumes as they reached us during our march. There was one pontoon bridge left—the others having been blown up—and the battalion got across with a few casualties. Fleeing Frenchmen were coming down one side of the road while we were going up the other. After crossing the canal we joined up with the 16th Canadian battalion and ascertained where the advance line of the Germans was."

"We proceeded up the road towards St. Julien, and at 11 p.m. we opened into attack formation for the charge. These minutes, waiting for the order to charge, seemed like hours. As soon as the order to charge was given the line advanced

WITH GREAT CHEERING.

"It was a very impressive sight, for at this time the moon shone out and enabled us to see our enemy. It seemed the work of Providence for the moon to come out just at that minute. Never were bayonets fixed quicker—not a man was lacking. The 16th Battalion ran into the German first line in the centre, and we (the 2nd Battalion) got them on the left, and every man had an opportunity to carry out what he knew of bayonet fighting.

"The Germans, however, used good judgment and did not hesitate long to retire through the wood where the artillery guns had been left by the British Division. The casualties in the German ranks were extremely heavy. Unfortunately our No. 1 Company (under the late Major Bennett, of Peterborough) was enfiladed by German machine guns, to the north of the wood. Every officer and only a few men left to tell the terrible tale. It was impossible for us to advance any further, and we only had 25 minutes before daylight to dig ourselves in. And we had no connection with the troops on our left. While this work was going on the artillery and machine gun fire was tremendous, and many casualties occurred in our ranks.

"When daylight came we were below the level of the ground. Our dispositions were completed and we were ready in case the Germans should attack. Daylight revealed a ghastly sight. The field in front and behind, for hundreds of yards, was strewn with Germans and Canadians.

"At 7 a.m. the Germans attacked in mass, to the right of the woods; but we repulsed that and three more attacks during the day. There was one brigade in this attack. Their casualties would be easily six to our one. They came eight abreast, and it was the easiest target imaginable. In the whole fight there were which made it develop into a general engagement. Their artillery bombarded us during the day from all angles. We were back to back with the British Division. They had pushed one way and we had pushed the other. The gas of the night before was in the air, and during the day the Germans gave the Canadians another taste of it."

"Through these grueiling moments the men stuck to it and would not budge. The Germans soon found out that they were up against the real thing, for each time they charged we could see they were half-hearted. Sometimes they would come out 12 or 15 yards and then retire—they could not stand it."

"Messages of encouragement from the Brigade and Battalion Headquarters were passed along the line, which assisted greatly in keeping up the spirits of the men. Every hour great gaps were made in our ranks. But this was

NO TIME FOR MOURNING.

It was necessary to stick until reinforcements arrived.

"Our emergency rations had all been consumed, and even the emergency rations off the 'casualties,' and the water supply was all gone! Many wounded remained out all day between the two lines. Some of the lines were only 50 yards apart, and the wounded could only be brought in at night.

"Just before darkness fell the Germans made another attack, but we nipped it in the bud. Although the rifle fire quieted down the artillery kept it up all night. We were getting better artillery support from our guns by this time. At midnight were brought to us by the transports, who deserve the greatest possible praise. They drove right up to our lines.

BISCUITS, WATER

"Lack of sleep was beginning to tell on many of the men, who were worn out, but no grumbling was heard on the whole line. Many officers had been killed during the day, and our only hope of surviving was that reinforcements would come before daylight. We had no sleep for 48 hours. During the night our trenches were made more perfect, and many wounded were taken away to the dressing stations. The dead could not be buried, as other and more important work had to be done.

GERMANS SUSTAIN
HEAVY LOSSES.

"Saturday morning brought an early attack from the Germans, but with our new supply of ammunition we drove them back with heavy losses. All the morning long we made them keep their heads down. We kept firing away until the stocks of our rifles were burning. The spirit of the men, with all their hardships, was wonderful. Each of them remembered General Alderson's message—

'CANADIANS NEVER BUDGE.'

At 11 a.m. we heard that the battalion on our right was retiring through St. Julien to a new line, about 300 yards to the south of that village, built by Engineers under heavy artillery firing.

"This left our position very dangerous. At last, with our right and left exposed, we received orders —at three o'clock in the afternoon—to retire. Such a sight will never be forgotten by those who have survived. We knew we could have held this position until darkness, and we also realised that in retiring our losses would be deplorable. The ——— Division had and were going to attack to protect our retirement. It was necessary to leave many in the trenches, to be cared for by the Germans, and the dead officers and men remained unburied.

"The retirement was an orderly one, but how any of the battalion escaped is a miracle. The Germans came out of their trenches in a horde. Their machine guns seemed to play on every foot of ground, and the artillery simply rolled shells all around. Many of the poor fellows were cut down and had to be left behind.

COL. WATSON'S GALLANTRY.

"Col. Watson's gallantry, in remaining in that exposed position until every man had retired, will never be forgotten. It seemed ages in gaining a new trench. Everyone was simply excited. The new line was made by the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders and the Royal Warwicks, and they immediately went into the attack to meet the Germans.

"Our men were mixed up with other regiments in the new line, and it was impossible to find what officers or men had escaped the terrible ordeal. I was in No. 4 Company under Major Bolster, of Cobourg, who was killed on Friday morning. We were ordered to man a reserve trench, a couple of hundred yards behind the front line, and we were able now to get our first five minutes' breathing spell.

COMRADES GREET EACH OTHER.

"No one will forget the greetings of one man to another as we struggled into the support trench. The enquiries about the missing ones, and the remarks of sympathy for those who had given their lives will always be remembered."

"On Saturday night we were subjected to heavy artillery fire, but could not retaliate, being in the support trench. The remaining days were full of excitement in learning that Col. Watson, Capt. O'Flynn, Capt. Ackerman and Capt. Richardson had survived. It was necessary the next three days to support the French, who were waiting for reinforcements from Alsace and Lorraine. During these days we did not suffer any casualties, although the exposure was beginning to tell upon everybody. We were shelled heavily all along the Yser Canal, but the men did splendid work in protecting the pontoon erected by the Engineers."

Capt. Ponton, in describing the further movements of the battalion, said they were ordered to return to billets at Vlamerintinghe, on May 6, and then sent to rest billets at ———, where they remained for ten days.

THE GREAT ORCHARD BATTLE.

"Having been partly reorganized," continued the Captain, "we were ordered down to the right of the British lines to assist a Division in the attack upon Festebert. The 3rd Brigade (Canadians) bore the brunt of this fight, known as the great Orchard Battle. The 1st and 2nd Brigades did excellent work in taking up new advanced positions, and connecting up the flanks to the right and left. The gallantry and daring of the troops at this time—so soon afer the terrific fighting at Ypres—showed the fighting qualities and the splendid spirit of every officer and man. It was very trying for the new reinforcements, but they worked splendidly with those who had survived our last fight."

"On June 2 we were relieved by the ——— Division, and took over the line on the La Bassee canal, near the village of Givenchy, relieving the famous Guards Brigade, to which the Prince of Wales is attached. At this point our battalion was only 35 yards from the German line, and during the eight days and nights we occupied this line it was a continuous battle of hand grenades and bombs, which did not make it pleasant fighting.

19 OFFICERS KILLED.

"On June 15 the 1st Battalion, who were in reserve, came through us to attack, after our mine had exploded and buried 260 Germans. The gallantry of the 1st Battalion in their charge was wonderful, but their losses were terrific, 19 officers being killed and wounded out of 21, and many casualties among the men. The attack was successful in many ways, and yet unsuccessful, owing to the fact that the Division on the left were held up at German first line. The 1st Battalion succeeded in penetrating the third line of the German trenches."

"After the 1st Battalion had retired to the reserves that night it was our sad duty to bury 200 between night fall and dawn, and to send back nearly 400 wounded. The casualties in the 2nd Battalion during these days were very heavy, but the work done by them was of the highest order.

"During all this fighting the Belleville boys had been extremely fortunate as far as casualties were concerned. Capt. O'Flynn and myself came through it all without a scratch. Unfortunately I twisted my knee in the trench and had received too much of the gas fumes. I was sent to a base hospital, and then invalided to England.

ENGLISH HOSPITALITY.

"The hospitality shown to all wounded and invalids in England cannot be spoken of too highly. There is nothing like English hospitality, in my estimation. The Medical Board told me I could not go back to the front for ten weeks."

The interview with Capt. Ponton was now at an end, and he was asked his opinion as to conditions at the front. "The conditions at the front are excellent," he said; "in fact they never have been better, and a dirty time is coming for the Bosches."

MISCHIEF MAKER

Now Strong and Robust.

An adult's food that can save a baby proves itself to be nourishing and easily digested and good for big and little folks. An Eastern man says:

"When our baby was about eleven months old he began to grow thin and pale. This was attributed to the heat and the fact that his teeth were coming, but in reality, the poor little thing was starving, his mother's milk not being sufficient nourishment.

"One day after he had cried bitterly for an hour, I suggested that my wife try him on Grape-Nuts. She soaked two teaspoonfuls in half a cup of warm water for 5 or 6 minutes. Then poured off the liquid and to it added a like amount of rich milk and a little sugar. This baby ate ravenously.

"It was not many days before he forgot all about being nursed, and has since lived almost exclusively on Grape-Nuts. Today the boy is strong and robust, and as cute a mischief-maker as a thirteen months old baby is expected to be.

"Use this letter any way you wish, for my wife and I can never praise Grape-Nuts enough after the brightness it has brought to our household."

Grape-Nuts is not made for a baby food, but experience with thousands of babies shows it to be among the best, if not entirely the best in us. Being a scientific preparation of Nature's grains, it is equally effective as a body and brain builder for grown-ups. "There's a Reason."

LANGEMARCK RETOLD.

A good story can be told more than once. And especially is this the case when it refers to acts of heroism like those performed on the battlefield of Flanders, when the Canadian troops "saved the day." The glory of that story will never grow dim, and an additional interest is imparted to its narration when it comes from the lips of a popular Belleville officer who took part in that famous charge. In our columns today will be found a graphic description of that memorable fight told to a representative of The Intelligencer by Capt. R. D. Ponton.

It was with undisguised sincerity that this young officer was welcomed home a little over a week ago, although the enthusiasm was tempered with regret that it was illness which caused Capt. Ponton to relinquish for a time the work to which he had voluntarily put his hands at the call of his country. It is a matter for sincere congratulation that both he and Capt. O'Flynn came through that great battle unscathed. With artillery and machine guns ploughing almost every foot of the ground their escape was a Providential one. From the first we were led by the reports to speak of this fight as the battle of Langemarck, but it is officially known as the battle of Ypres. Langemarck is some five miles in the German lines.

Captain Ponton has given a plain and simple description of that sanguinary fight, without any attempt at florid rhetoric or fulsome adulation of those who took part. It is a modest recital of heroic deeds by one who played his part equally well with the others. Incidentally Capt. Ponton's story emphasises one point about which there has been some doubt. A Montreal paper not long ago stated that the people of that city were asking why the artillery did not support the infantry. We pointed out at the time that it had been shown by letters from our correspondent, Sergt. Spafford, that the Canadian artillery was in the thickest of the fight, and rendered good service. Capt. Ponton says (referring to the second night) "We were getting better support from our guns by this time."

Another point about which there has been some misapprehension is with regard to the commissariat arrangements. The assertion has been made that the Canadians were kept three days without food. It is true they were in a tight corner and that all their emergency rations had been consumed; but that they were not kept three days without food is proved by Capt. Ponton's statement. The 2nd Battalion commenced the attack at 11 p.m. on April 22nd, and at midnight on the 23rd biscuits, water and ammunition were brought to them. "The transports deserve the greatest praise," says Capt. Ponton; "they drove right up to our lines."

Capt. Ponton says: "We were back to back with the British Division; they had pushed one way and we were pushing the other." The British have been very generous in their praise of the Canadians; but it is evident that British troops must share the glory of the day with the Canadians. We have General French's statement that the Canadians "saved the day," the interpretation of which must be that they charged just at the critical moment, and that without their valuable aid the situation would have been lost. It is to be deplored that so many valuable lives were sacrificed; but the relatives of those who fell on that memorable day have the consolation of knowing that they died for their country and Empire in a truly noble cause.

"Peace to each manly soul that sleepeth;
Rest to each weary eye that weepeth;
Long may the fair and brave
Sigh o'er the hero's grave."

CURRENT COMMENT

Can't somebody convince the Italian organ-grinders that their king and country need them—now?

Good luck to the Toronto trades and labor council in its war against the tipping nuisance.

A business man is reported by a local contemporary to have said that if the Bank of Hamilton-Royal bank merger is effected there will be another Bank of Hamilton started. Well, perhaps—indeed, very likely, some day. But not for quite a while. Conditions are not likely to be propitious for new financial ventures for some years to come—Hamilton Spectator.

The Frye was sunk before the British orders-in-council were issued. If the sinking of the Frye was a legitimate act of war, Germany can have no grievance against the British orders-in-council, which carry out the principle that Germany defends in the Frye case The German government cannot have its cake and eat it. It cannot successfully maintain that it is proper for Germany to cut off food supplies, consigned in neural ships to Great Britain, and "war without mercy" for Great Britain to cut off food supplies consigned in neutral ships to Germany—New York World.

Probably not one German in ten actually acts as a spy, but the plain fact is that public opinion has been so shocked and outraged by the disclosures of the past twelve months that it is not disposed to discrimnate. In fact, it is not in a position to do so. The mere fact that Germany has a law whereby its citizens who take up foreign citizenship do not forfeit their birthright as German citizens is itself indefensible, and its cancellation should be insisted upon in the terms of peace. Otherwise, all Germans should be repatriated, at any rate from the territories of the allied nations.—Montreal Mail.

The revelation that Germany was a customer of ours as well as the allies fails to arouse any cordial feeling. The element of bad faith enters into the situation as it has so lamentably in German dealings in all directions ever since the war began. We were not sought as a neutral and well disposed people offering a fair market for the filling of German needs. We were exploited as a country toward which Germany had no obligations, as a people to be tricked, deceived and used in all ways as a tool for German purposes. It is just one more instance of the total absence of moral perception in the contemporary German mind—New York Sun.

The Poet's Corner

"THE KAISER AND GOD."

Led by Wilhelm, as you tell,
God has done extremely well;
You with patronising nod
Show that you approve of God.
Kaiser, face a question new—
This—does God approve of you?

Kaiser, when you'd kneel in prayer
Look upon your hands, and there
Let that deep and awful stain
From the blood of children slain
Burn your very soul with shame,
Till you dare not breathe that Name
That now you glibly advertise—
God as one of your allies.

Impious braggart, you forget;
God is not your conscript yet;
You shall learn in dumb amaze
That His ways are not your ways,
That the mire thro' which you trod
Is not the high white road of God.

To Whom, whichever way the combat rolls,
We, fighting to the end, commend our souls.

RAISE THINGS.

It was no trouble for our forefathers in this country to raise things. They had a new and opulent soil on which to raise them. The crudest preparation of that soil, the most careless treatment of the plants, could not prevent a harvest. Things are different now. The old methods were all right then, but today they mean poverty—still poorer soil and impoverished tillers of it. But there are ways by which the soils reduced by generations ahead of us can be restored to usefulness. And there are ways by which this restoration can be accomplished while the land pays for it. Before we give up any land that was once fertile let us look into these things to see whether it cannot be made productive again and at the same time raise things to pay the cost.—National Stockman and Farmer.

WAR FARMING.

Women Work In Fields In the British Isles.

The shortage of farm labor in England is causing increasing unrest in agricultural circles.

In some cases the scarcity of farm hands is not so serious as the lack of horses. The lack of male labor is being filled so far as possible by the use of female and child labor.

In the dairy and in the care of small stock it is likely that male labor will be almost entirely dispensed with. Much of the lighter field work also is being done by women, and in the market gardening districts they may be seen in large numbers at such tasks as weeding and setting plants. On some of the smaller holdings they have even undertaken the rougher work of plowing and cultivating.

Some of the agricultural colleges have organized short courses of instruction for women who are willing to enter farm work. The course of instruction includes milking, dairy work, live stock, poultry, preparation of land, use of tools, planting and cultivation. The course reviews eight hours' work daily for fourteen days.

Wages throughout the farming districts have advanced sharply, the average increase being about $1 weekly.

A Cleanly Currycomb.

At first glance the accompanying cut might be mistaken for a nest of cake pans, but it is designed for use in the stable instead of the kitchen, for it is the latest thing in currycombs, recently patented by an Iowa genius. It consists of a series of flexible loops of corrugated metal strips, one fitting inside the other, and all joined at one side by a metal binder, which also acts as a handle. The greatest advantage claimed for this idea is that there are no lodging places for the germ laden dust which it extracts from the animal's hair, and any such accumulation must pass right through it, and for the particular horse owner it offers opportunities for further precautions against contamination by washing in water. This device soused around in some soapy water would be thoroughly cleansed.

GROWING LATE CABBAGE.

Many farmers do not have a supply of late cabbage for winter because they neglect starting plants in midsummer for the fall crop. Cabbage is one of the easiest vegetables to grow in the garden. A large patch should be set out late each summer, and the surplus may be sold or used for winter green poultry food. It is also very easy to keep through the winter.

Cabbage seed for the late crop may be sown any time in July, sowing in a rather moist and shady place. By mixing some sand with the soil inclined to be heavy the young plants will come out of the soil in a better shape for transplanting. The crop may be planted in the truck patch where an early crop of beans or peas has been growing. Replow the ground before planting and fertilize well with decomposed cow or other stable manure. Work the soil down with a harrow and disk to a very fine and firm seed bed. Have the rows from three to four feet apart to admit of cultivation with horse tools. As soon as a rain comes after the soil has been prepared set the young plants in rows about two feet apart, watering for the first two or three days, or until the roots begin to take hold of the new soil. Begin cultivation almost as soon as the crop is set out and continue during the growing period.

CANADA AT WAR

DOMINION HAS HAD FEW LABOR TROUBLES SINCE WAR OUTBREAK

Appeal of Minister of Labor Brings Good Results.

None More Loyal Than the Workingmen of Canada.

At the outbreak of the war, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, publicly appealed to both employers and workers to make more than ordinary efforts to secure amicable settlement of such differences as must inevitably occur from time to time. The Minister's appeal for co-operation has met with a splendid response, as the records of the Department of Labor show that during the past twelve months the number of strikes has been much less than during any equal period since such statistics have been compiled in this country.

Soon Were Settled.

The few strikes reported have been comparatively unimportant and were quickly ended. The coal-mining industry in Canada has always been prolific in strikes, but since the outbreak of the war has been practically free of this trouble.

HON. T. W. CROTHERS.
Sketch by McConnell.

On Vancouver Island a coal strike had been waged for a long period, but this was formally called off at the outbreak of the war. In March last the agreement between the Western Coal Operators' Association and the United Mine Workers of America in the Fernie-Lethbridge district terminated and for the first time on record was renewed without any interruption of work.

A Unique Situation.

The situation in Canada in these matters is the more remarkable and the more satisfactory when it is realized that in countries where, as in Great Britain and Germany for instance, war conditions are more acute than in Canada, disputes of the gravest nature have from time to time flamed up. The United States, too, although free from the evil of actual war, has been profoundly affected by the situation in Europe. Press reports do not indicate that the strenuous times through which we are passing have materially eased the tension between capital and labor, and the past few months have seen many dangerous and difficult strikes, with violent disturbances in not a few cases. Canada seems in fact fortunately unique in its comparative freedom from strikes.

Co-operation of Unions.

The officials of the Labor Department bear cordial witness to the generous and energetic co-operation of officials of labor unions in preventing and settling labour troubles. Without departing from the principles of trades unionism they have given an excellent support to the Labor Department in preventing industrial disruption during the war. The returns also show that besides reservists of different countries, the trades unions have furnished thousands of enlisted men, and in every case the man who has gone on active service has been exempted from penalties in the way of dues or insurance.

LIMITED BOUNTY IS PUT ON REFINED ZINC

Government Takes Steps to Ensure Supply in Canada.

An important step has been taken by the Government which will give an impetus to the refinement of zinc in Canada and serve the purpose of ensuring a supply to the Canadian Shell Committee for the manufacture of shells. The Government has decided to grant a limited bounty not exceeding two cents per pound and not payable until the end of the war. The total amount of the bounty will not exceed four hundred thousand dollars.

It has been the policy of the Borden Government to abolish the bounty system of the previous administration by which millions of dollars were paid out to the big steel and other manufacturers. The situation in connection with the production of zinc, however, has been extraordinary, and special measures have been taken by the Government to meet an urgent situation which seriously affected the manufacture of ammunition in Canada.

Supply Endangered.

Before the outbreak of the war zinc sold at about eight cents per pound. Since that time the price has risen steadily until now it is forty cents and grave fears were entertained that the supply might be cut off, as at present the sources of supply lie outside of Canada. It was therefore necessary that there should be a Canadian supply, but Canadian producers were unwilling to go to the large expense of installing refineries unless insured against the fall of zinc prices, which is inevitable after the close of the war. A committee of the Government, under the chairmanship of Hon. W. T. White, has been working on the subject and has decided to offer a limited bounty as follows:

Bounties on a sliding scale not exceeding two cents per pound will be granted upon production in Canada from Canadian ores of zinc containing not more than 2 per cent. impurities, when the standard price of zinc in London, England, falls below £33 per ton of 2,000 pounds, provided that bounties shall not be payable on zinc produced before the expiration of the war or after the 31st day of July, 1917, or on zinc contracted for the Shell Committee at a price of 8 cents or over per pound. Total amount of bounty to be paid not to exceed $400,000.

CANADIAN PENSION RATES THE HIGHEST

Generous Treatment Assured Our Returning Soldiers.

Some critics of the Government have been complaining that the rates of pay and the pensions for Canadian soldiers are not higher. To these critics it may be pointed out that the rates granted to Canadian soldiers are higher than those of any other country except Australia, and equal to those of that country. For a married soldier and his wife the total monthly rate for a Canadian private is $50; in Australia, $52.50. For the unmarried private or the private without dependents the Australian rates are a little more generous, but with this exception the Canadian rates compare very favorably with them. Rates of pay for the rank and file of the British Army are only about one-half that of the Canadian, while in European armies where there is compulsory service the rates are but a mere pittance.

Pensions the Highest.

The pension rates paid by Canada are easily the highest in the world. They are higher than the Australian and a third and more higher than the English rate, and higher also than those paid in the United States army. In addition it is pointed out that the pension does not represent all that will be done for the men. The pension is merely a minimum allowance that will prevent a man from experiencing hardship. The Government, however, provides convalescent homes, or if the invalided or incapacitated soldier goes to his own home it provides an attendant to wheel him about or take care of him. After the war it is expected that in various ways assistance will be given to incapacitated men, according to their need, over and above the pension.

NO OCCASION FOR DRASTIC ACTION

Increase in Prices Does Not Justify Government Control.

While information collected shows that prices are still slowly advancing, there has been no violent upward movement and no occasion for any drastic action on the part of the authorities to control prices. It is interesting to note in this connection that the Australian Commonwealth, as well as most of the states of the Commonwealth, following different lines, took steps immediately on the outbreak of war for the actual control of prices, and many laws were passed on the subject. Much confusion resulted without improving the situation, and after efforts for several months in the way of price fixation, such attempts were abandoned as impracticable or fruitless; the latest Australian advices indicate that price conditions there were normal.

Swallowed and Climbed.

A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of fowl and salad this woman noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess' eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe. The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and swallowed it calmly. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

"Did you think," said Mrs. Newlyrich to her daughter afterward, "that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

Where Shell Bracelets Come From.

Though Dacca has lost its trade in fine muslins, it is still the chief center of the manufacture of the shell bracelets everywhere worn among the Hindus. These are cut by women, using a very primitive saw, from what is popularly known as the chank shell of the East Indian seas, and into the sunk portion of the design colored lac is melted. Except the rare specimens with reversed opening, which have fetched as much as £70, chanks are not costly. But the shell is sacred to Vishnu, and the bangles and anklets made from it are frequently left on the body at burial. Thus these sankha are not entirely subject to fluctuations of taste, and the demand for them remains steady.—London Chronicle.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

Food Value of Cheese.

Cheese is wholesome and a very valuable food. It is rich in proteid and can be used as a substitute for meat. One pound of cheese is equal in proteid to two pounds of beef. Cheese is indigestible if eaten raw. This may be somewhat overcome by cooking it and adding a small amount of bicarbonate of sodium. An admirable way of eating cheese is by combining it with macaroni. It is enjoyable served in the form of Welsh rabbit. To prepare Welsh rabbit use the following ingredients: One tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, half a cupful of thin cream, half a pound of sharp or mild cheese (as may be preferred) cut in small pieces, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, a few grains of cayenne and toast. Melt the butter, add the cornstarch, stir until well mixed, then add the cream gradually, cook slowly for ten minutes, season and serve poured over toasted bread.

Ancient Diamonds.

The discoverer of diamonds is unknown. From references in Exodus it is apparent that the diamond was a precious stone in Egypt in those early times, and even before that it was known in India, where probably it was first obtained. The name is derived from the Greek word "adamas," meaning "unsubduable."

From Pliny, a writer of the first century, we learn that the diamond was regarded as the most valuable of all things and only a few kings ever could afford to buy them. But as no means of artificial polishing had been discovered the stone depreciated in value, so that the ruby and the emerald became more precious. The discovery by Ludwig van Berquen in 1476 of a mode of polishing and cutting it at once returned this gem to the first place among precious stones.—Chicago Herald.

A Curious Beetle.

The little bombardier beetle because preyed upon by larger beetles of its own family has been armed by nature with what is practically a miniature cannon. When attacked the bombardier beetle turns and makes off, but if overtaken by the larger insect—bang!—and an acid fluid is shot from glands situated in the tip of its tail onto the enemy beetle. The acid when ejected vaporizes upon reaching the air and thus gives the effect of a puff of smoke from a gun, while at the same time a small but distinct report, like a tiny cannon, is heard. The bombardier beetle is a rapid firer, too, for the discharge can be repeated in quick succession, and thus the little insect keeps off his larger foes until he can scurry into a convenient hole in the soil or find shelter under a stone.—Atlanta Journal.

This Happened In New York.

"No spik English," gesticulated Hafiz with rising excitement, looking rather wildly about for an interpreter, down at the Seamen's Church Institute on South street. Arab translators are not frequent about the institute, and the man behind the desk down in the savings department was distinctly mystified, says the Lookout.

"He won't take this money; it's interest on the gold he deposited with us a year ago," he explained at last to a glittering eyed man from Bagdad who finally came to the rescue.

"On, no, he can't; Mohammedans—they can't—any of them. It is against their religion to take interest. Hafiz, he very good, very devout," protested the interpreter. And Hafiz went away, virtuously content.

Antimony.

The use of antimony is to harden the softer metals, such as tin and lead, in the manufacture of shrapnel shells, babbitt for machinery bearings, type metal and castings of all kinds. In its pure state it cannot be employed for any useful purpose, owing to its extreme brittleness. Its value in alloying, however, is great, not only because it hardens metal, but because of its low melting point.

Granite and Lime.

Granite is the lowest rock in the earth's crust. It is the bedrock of the world and shows no evidence of animal or vegetable life. It is the parent rock from which all the other rocks have been either directly or indirectly derived. It is claimed by scientists that all the lime in the world has at some time no doubt been a portion of many different animals and possibly of human beings also.

MANY USES FOR POTATO.

To clean a vinegar cruet fill the cruet with finely chopped potato skin, cork tightly and let stand in a warm place three days, then turn the skins out and rinse the cruet with warm water and borax.

To clean rusty knives use a raw potato dipped in brick dust.

To kindle fires potato parings dried in the oven are good, as they light easily.

To clean carpets grate a raw potato and rub over the surface of the carpet and finish off with a clean cloth wrung out in warm water.

To clean dresses grate two raw potatoes into a pint of cold water, strain through a sieve, add another pint of water and let it settle. Dip a sponge into the water and rub the soiled garment carefully, afterward rinsing with clear water.

To clarify drippings slice a raw potato into the fat while rendering. It will absorb all impurities.

To clean silk from mud spots, after washing thoroughly rub soiled places with a raw potato.

When a fern turns yellow slice a raw potato and put it on top of the soil. This will draw out the worms.

PAINTED FURNITURE.

Black Picked Out In White Makes Charming Bedroom Furniture.

The fad for black and white has penetrated to the bedroom and many pieces of old, castoff furniture are being rejuvenated by the handy little paint pot. The dresser shown in the illustration is one which had been discarded, but is now a pretty and useful piece of furniture.

Care of Babies In Summer

Many thousands of babies die every summer, and many thousands more suffer from illness because of the excessive heat. Bottle fed babies form the greater part of the number, owing to the great difficulty of keeping cows' milk sweet in summer, but even breast fed babies need very particular care during July and August.

The first and most important thing in the care of the baby through the hot weather is to give him the right food. The value of breast milk to babies has been brought out in an earlier article. The next most important thing to do for the baby is to make him as comfortable as possible by plenty of baths, sleep, fresh air and light clothing.

The baby should have a constant supply of clean air to breathe, summer and winter, day and night. Do not be afraid to take him out of doors. In the country it is very little trouble to give the baby plenty of out of door life. A screened porch on the shady side of the house is an invaluable aid to the mother in the care of the baby. It makes a safe place for him to stay, awake or asleep, protects him from his enemies, the fly and mosquito, and at the same time affords him the fresh air he needs.

The poorest place in the house for the baby to stay in is the kitchen, which is necessarily the hottest one. When the mother has to be busy in her kitchen the baby should be kept out of doors as much as possible, and during the warmer weather, when the out of door air is hotter than that indoors, the baby should be kept in the coolest room in the house. A play pen will be a great help in confining a runabout baby within safe bounds. It may be used indoors or out, with a rug or blanket in the bottom.

The baby should be kept clean and cool by frequent baths. He ought to have at least one full tub bath every day, and when he is restless and the weather very hot he may have one or two sponge baths in addition. For a young baby the water should be slightly warm or tepid. The mother may test it by dipping her elbow into the water. If it feels just pleasantly warm it will be right for the baby. After he is a year old the water may be cooler, but should never be cold enough to shock or frighten him, for a baby should find his bath a great delight.

BATHING THE BABY.

Use only a mild soap like castile and very little of it, rinsing the skin thoroughly afterward. A baby's skin is very sensitive and may be made sore by a harsh soap. If any redness or chafing appears use no soap at all, but try a bran bath.

Make a little bag of thin cheesecloth and partly fill it with ordinary bran. Sew or tie the open side and put in the bath water, squeezing it until the water is milky.

When the baby has prickly heat he may be sponged with a bath made by dissolving a tablespoonful of ordinary baking soda in two quarts of water.

It is important to keep not only the skin clean, but the clothing also. The diaper should be changed as soon as it is wet, for a wet or soiled diaper is quite sure to make the baby's skin sore if worn for any length of time. The country mother has the advantage in being able to dry the diapers in the sunshine after they have been washed or to spread them on the grass to bleach and sweeten. Every soiled diaper should be placed at once in a covered pail until it can be washed.

The baby needs very little clothing in hot weather. On the hottest days he may go with nothing on but his diaper, and, possibly one other thin garment. The mother will, of course, be ready to dress him as necessary to prevent him from chill when the weather cools. Clothe the baby in as few soft, clean, simple garments as will serve to make him comfortable and happy.

Plenty of cool drinking water is essential. Babies and young children often suffer for lack of this. It may be given from a nursing bottle before the baby is old enough to drink from a cup. The water for the baby should be boiled and cooled, as even clean looking water may contain germs of disease which are killed by the boiling process.

Give the baby a drink several times a day between meals and at night when he wakens.

LAND FIGHTING NOT CLEAN.

The Naval Captain Preferred His Battles on the Open Sea.

When Vera Cruz was besieged in the Mexican war Captain Robert E. Lee, afterward the commander in chief of the Confederate army, was ordered to throw up breastworks to defend a battery manned by the jackies of a man-of-war. Lee put the tars into the trenches and soon had the dirt flying, but the sailors did not labor cheerfully. They resented having to shovel dirt, and their captain remonstrated openly with Lee.

"My men," he said, "do not want mud banks to hide behind; just let them get out and at the enemy."

But Lee would not listen, and the tars sweated away at the shoveling. Presently the Mexicans opened fire at the very point thus protected, and the sailors were glad to seek the shelter of the despised dirt. The ship's captain felt that he owed Lee an apology and made a handsome one.

"Well, Captain Lee," he stammered, "I reckon you were right. I suppose the dirt did save some of my boys from being killed or wounded, but you know we sailors have no use for dirt banks on shipboard. All we want is a clear deck and an open sea. The fact is, captain, I don't like this land fighting, anyway. It isn't clean."—Youth's Companion.

PACKING FOR A JOURNEY.

Here Is a Scheme That May or May Not Be of Help.

Jerome K. Jerome recalled with reverence a habit of his methodical uncle, who was a great traveler and who, before packing for a journey, always "made a list." This was the system which he followed, gathered from his uncle's own lips:

Take a piece of paper and put down on it everything you can possibly require. Then go over it and see that it contains nothing you can possibly do without.

Imagine yourself in bed. What have you got on? Very well; put it down, together with a change. You get up. What do you do? Wash yourself. What do you wash yourself with? Soap. Put down soap. Go on till you have finished. Then take your clothes. Begin at your feet. What do you wear on your feet? Boots, shoes, socks. Put them down. Work up till you get to your head. What do you want besides clothes? Put down everything.

This is the plan the old gentleman always pursued. The list made, he would go over it carefully to see that he had forgotten nothing. Then he would go over it again and strike out everything it was possible to dispense with. Then he would lose the list.

Turner's Little Afterthought.

An English critic's reference to Turner's fine picture "The Wreck Buoy" reminds a faithful newspaper reader of a curious anecdote in connection with it. When Turner first sent this picture to the Royal academy it was hung among several brilliantly colored pictures. On varnishing day Turner found the effect of his dull gray rendering of a stormy sea altogether spoiled by its bright surroundings. Without a moment's hesitation he painted in the lighted buoy in the foreground, and its dab of crimson light showed so brilliantly in its gloomy setting that Turner's picture became the prominent one, and its rivals on each side were cast into the shade. It is curious, if true, that the most noticeable feature of the picture should have been an afterthought.

Eskimo Courtship.

If European death scenes astonish, the consenting "Yes" of a bride at marriage shocks an Eskimo woman. Not only must a bride show herself unconsenting; she must, if she respects herself and tribal traditions, scream and struggle with all her might when her wooer or his envoy enters her family residence and, laying hold upon her, drags her, usually by the topknot, to her new home. She may be presented with a new lamp and water pail by her bridegroom, and she is as a general thing mightily pleased at her change of estate. But she is far too circumspect to show her pleasure or affection and keeps up a noisy demonstration until she feels that she has done all that a well bred maiden should do.

In a Braid.

A youthful bride had undertaken to keep house. She went to the municipal markets of course. One day the man at the vegetable stall displayed, for her admiration, a bunch of fine asparagus, "picked not three hours ago," he said.

The new housekeeper gazed upon the asparagus with unaffected amazement. "Does it grow like that?" she asked. "I always supposed the cook braided the ends of it."—New York Post.

Hard Hearted.

According to a hard hearted Chicagoan, the time will come when a sickly man will not be able to borrow money, or get commercial credit.

Shades of Poe, Carlyle and Stevenson, what's to become of the anemic poets?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aroused His Curiosity.

"I'm sorry I told the boss that he couldn't get along without me. I just aroused his curiosity."

"Aroused his curiosity?"

"Yes. He was curious to know if what I said was so and decided to make the experiment."—Detroit Free Press.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Mrs. Williams's Lodger.

Phillis felt rather shy and uncomfoctable as she picked her way warily among the rain-pools in the semi-darkness. Her companion was inclined to be silent; most likely he considered her churlish in repelling his civil offers of help; so, to make amends, and set herself at her ease, she began to talk to him with an attempt at her old sprighttliness.

"Do you know this neighborhood well, Mr. Dancy? Have you been long at Ivy Cottage?"

"Only a few days; but I know the place well enough", he responded quietly. "It depends upon circumstances how long I remain here."

"Hadleigh is very quiet," returned Phillis, quickly. "It does not offer many attractions to strangers, unless they have moderate views of enjoyment. It is select, and the bathing is good, and the country tolerable; but when you have said that, you have said all in its favor."

"I have always liked the place," with a checked sigh. "Quiet,—that is what I want, and rest also. I have been rathre a wanderer over the face of the earth, and one wants a little breathing-time occasionally, to recruit one's exhausted energies. I like Ivy Cottage, anl I like Mrs. Williams; both suit me for the present. Are you a visitor to Hadleigh—a mere bird of passage like myself, Miss Challoner?"

"Oh, dear no; we have come here to live."

"And—and you are intimate with Mrs. Cheyne?" coming a little closer to her side in the darkness.

"Nothing of the kind," retorted Phillis; "we are mere acquaintances. I do not feel to know her at all; she is not a person with whom one could get intimate all at once; she is a little difficult. Besides in our position ——" And here she pulled herself up suddenly.

"Pardon me", returned Mr. Dancy, in an interested voice, "perhaps I have no right to inquire, but your words are a little mysterious. Why should you not be intimate with Mrs. Cheyne?"

Phillis grew hot in the darkness. What right had he, a perfect stranger, to question her so closely? And yet, if he were interested in his old friends, perhaps he meant to call at the White House, and then he would hear all about them; and after all, perfect frankness always answered best in the long run. Phillis hesitated so long over her rejoinder that Mr. Dancy said, rather apologetically,—

"I see, I have been incautious; but you must not attribute my question to impertinent curiosity. I am anxious to learn all I can about a very old friend, of whom I have long lost sight, and I hoped that you might have been able to satisfy me."

"Miss Middleton would tell you far more than I."

"What! Elizabeth Middleton? Oh, no; she is far too much of a saint for me."

"You know her, too!" exclaimed Phillis, in surprise. "No, I do not think you are curious, Mr. Dancy; it was a little awkward for me to tell you about our acquaintance with Mrs. Cheyne. My sister and I rendered her a trifling service, and she took a fancy to us, and wished to be friends; but in our present position any close intimacy would be impossible, as we are only dressmakers."

"Dressmakers!" It is impossible to describe the genuine astonishment, almost dismay, in Mr. Dancy's voice. "Dressmakers! Pardon me, Miss Challoner but when one has seen and spoken to a lady like yourself it is almost incredible."

This put Phillis on her mettle at once and in a moment she laid by all her reserve.

"You have been a traveller Mr. Dancy and must have seen strange things by this time; it surely cannot be such a matter of surprise that when gentlepeople are poor they must work for their bread. When one has ten clever fingers it is better to use them than to starve. I am not ashamed of my position; my sisters and I are very independent; but as we do not like to cause other people embarrassment we prefer to lead hermit lives."

Phillis' silvery tones were rather fierce but it was well that she did not see her companion's expression of suppressed amusement; there was a little smothered laugh, too, that was turned into a cough.

"Are your sisters young like yourself he asked rather abruptly.

"Oh, yes, we ars alumch of an age."

"And you have parents?"

"Only one parent," she corrected—a mother. Ah, here wa are at the Friary! Many thanks for your escort, Mr. Dancy."

"Many thanks for allowing me to escort," he returned pointedly; "after what you have told me, I esteem it an honor, Mis Challoner. No, you have no need to be ashamed of your position; I wish more English ladies would follow such a noble example. Good-night. I trust we shall meet again." And lifting his felt hat he withdrew, just as Nan appeared on the threshold holding a lamp in her hand.

"You naughty girl, what has kept you so late?' she saked, as Phillis came slowly and meditatively up the flagged path.

"Hush, Nannie! Have they all gone to bed? Let me come into your room and talk to you. Oh, I have had such an evening!" And thereupon she poured into her sister's astonished ears the recital of her adventure—the storm, the figure in the shrubbery, the scene in the west corridor, the porch at Ivy Cottage and the arrival of Mrs. Williams' mysterious lodger.

"Oh Philis, I shall never trust you out of my sight again! How can you be so reckless—so incautious? Mother would be dreadfully shocked if she knew it."

"Mother must not know a single word; promise, Nan. You know how nervous she is. I will tell her, if you like, that I took refuge from the rain in Mrs. William' porch and that her lodger walked home with me; but I think it would be better to suppress the scene at the White House."

Nan thought over this a moment and then she agreed.

"It would make mother feel uneasy and timid in Mrs. Cheyne's presence," she observed. "She never likes that sort of hysterical attacks. We could not make her understand Poor thing! I hope she is asleep by this time. Shall you go to-morrow, Phil, and ask after her?"

Phillis made a wry face at this, and owned she had had enough adventures to last her for a long time. But she admitted, too, that she would be anxious to know how Mrs. Cheyne would be.

"Yes, I suppose I must go and just ask after her," she said, as she rose rather wearily and lighted her candle. "There is not the least chance of seeing her. Good-night, Nannie! Don't let all this keep you awake; but I do not expect to sleep a wink myself.'

Which dismal prophecy was not fulfilled, as Phillis dropped into a heavy slumber the moment her head touched the pillow.

But her dreams were hardly pleasant. She thought she was walking down the "ghost's alk,' between the yes and cypresses, with Mr. Dancy and thit in the darkest part he threw off his cloak and felt hat, and showed the grinning skull of a skeleton, while a bony arm tried to seize her. She woke moaning with fright, to fiind Dulce's long hair streaming over her face, and the birds singing in the sweet breezy dawn; after which she fell into a dreamless, refreshing sleep.

Phillis had to submit to rather a severe reproof from her mother, in return for her frankness. Mrs. Challoner's prudery was up in arms in the moemnt she heard of Mrs. Williams'e lodger.

"Mrs. Wiliams ought to have come with you herself; but a strange man a that time of night!—what would Mr. Drummond have said to you?"

"Whatever Mr. Drummond liked to say!" returned Phillis pettishly, for this was stroking her already ruffled feelings decidedly the wrong way.

"Phillis always turned captious whenever Mr. Drummond was mentioned; but she subsided into meekness sagain when her mother fell to srying and bemoaning her hard fate and her darlings' unprotected position.

"Oh what would you dear father have said?" she cried, in such utter misery of tone that Phillis began kissing her and promising that she would never, never be out so late again, and that on no account would she walk up the Braidwood Road in the evening with a strange man who ore an outlandish cloak and a felt hat that only wanted a feather to remind her of Guy Fawkes, only Guy Fawkes did not wear blue spectacles.

Clothing In Asia Minor.

There is a belief prevalent among the natives of Asia Minor that the thicker the clothing worn at all seasons of the year the better it is for the human body, protecting it alike from the winter cold and the summer heat. In Caucasia it is not uncommon to see people wearing huge bearskin coats in the midst of summer, with the thermometer standing at 100 degrees.

An Apology For the Play.

"From your continued applause I take it that you wish the creator of this play to appear," said the theatrical manager before the curtain.

"But he has a bad cold; he could only apologize."

"That's all we want him to do."—Yonkers Statesman.

ADVERTISING FOR THRIFT.

Big Campaign Against Bad Times Is in Prospect.

Advertising, good, big, square-faced advertising, sold Canada's apple crop last fall. Advertising of an indirect sort, by means of daily, insistent and heart-breaking articles in all our newsppaers, blundered us safely over the unemployment crisis of last winter. In the present recruiting campaign, more widespread advertising, not only in the newspapers, but on posters and placards, a means so splendidly applied by Kitchener, has brought forward all the recruits asked for by the authorities.

To-day Britain is frankly advertising for thrift. Here newspapers, supported by the advertising of the stores, are harping, day in and day out, on the necessity of shunning the stores. And the merchants, instead of cancelling their ads, are shortening stock, sending their clerks to France, and directing the manufacturers into the making of munitions.

According to five successful manufacturers and merchants interviewed on this question in regard to this country, Canada is due to have just such demands made on it by September. By that month, unless the war is over, Britain, who has thrown herself far over in the direction of munitions, will have to recover her balance in attending the needs of her people at home, and the munitions traffic, already well under way in Canada, will be required to lift off some of the weight on Britain's shoulders.

"Just now," said one manufacturer with a head for statistics, "Britain is under a 100 per cent. pressure of munitions. Canada is under a less than 5 per cent. pressure. The average man does not know, for instance, except on rumor, that Canada is making shells for the guns in Flanders. Vague rumor tells him, thanks to the casual but perfectly effective voluntary censorship of the Canadian newspapers, that certain well-known works, formerly devoted to making wagons or engines, or bath-tubs, are now making shells. He sees no evidences of it around him.

"Presently," concluded this man, Britain will have to swing back to more balanced production—say, to a 60 per cent. munitions pressure. Then Canada will have to come up to at least 20 per cent. munitions pressure. Then there will be advertising of the need of thrift. We will know munitions makers who live on our street. The machinist whom we see with his kiddies in the evenings pass our house will be known to us as an expert fuse-maker, or cap-fitter, or shell assembler. To-day we have the consciousness of helping Britain with men as soldiers. In a month or two we must have the consciousness of helping with our labor."

It was predicted last winter, at the height of the unemployment crisis, that Canada would have to undergo an industrial readjustment, that the builders and all the allied trades would have to be made over into manufacturers, producers, and the allied industries.

All this spring and summer just that readjustment has been under way, quietly and without strain. Indeed, we will not know of its success until next winter. But many thousands of builders, laborers, teamsters, and construction workers have joined the army. Many more thousands of laborers have gone out to the farms or to the gardens, to the army of production. All laborers of the skilled sorts formerly demanded for construction have been adapted as skilled factory men. And the army is still calling and will call for some time for those still "at the loose end," unadjustable or unadjusted.

Plum Culture in Ontario.

Plum culture in Ontario is described in a very full and suggestive manner by F. M. Clement, Director of the Ontario Fruit Experiment Station, in Bulletin 226, just issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

This treatise is most timely. During the decade between the census of 1901 and 1911 the number of plum trees in Ontario decreased by over a million. In 1911 the number of trees reported was 1,124,022, of which a little more than two-thirds were in bearing, the value of the crop being estimated at $374,675, or about half a dollar per bearing tree. In the bulletin the cost of production is very fully gone into.

The three chief drawbacks to successful plum growing in this Province, according to the author, are:

Too many varieties.—He gives a list of varieties best suited for certain districts, also a general list of varieties with description of qualities. Mr. Clement, however, notes with satisfaction the tendency to drop many of the much-vaunted Japanese varieties and some of the earlier domestic sorts.

Lack of careful cultivation and handling of the product.—The questions of soil, propagation, planting, pruning, picking, and packing are thoroughly dealt with by the author.

Terminology.

Grubbs—Don't you like Biffkins any longer? Stubbs—Yes, indeed, I like him much longer—if you let the word refer to distance and mean away.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

BIG FINANCIERS MUST DEFEND SUIT

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Counsel for some of the stockholders of the International Mercantile Marine Company stated today that they had made a demand upon P. A. S. Franklin as receiver of that company to bring suit against fourteen of its directors for $10,000,000. This amount is alleged by Loucks and Alexander the attorneys for stockholders, to have been lost by the shattering of the company's credit.

The directors named in the demand include Lord Pirrie, J. Bruce Ismay, J. P. Morgan, E. J. Berwind, of this city and P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia.

It is alleged that defaults in interest paymnts on the bonds of the company, which have been made in five instances were unwarranted and that there was enough cash available on each occasion to have met the interest payments on the bonds of the company mand for a suit that in permitting the company to become insolvent the directors were guilty of "gross negligence at least, if no actual misfeasance in office."

JAPANESE UMBRELLA TRICK.

It Was a Street Incident That Led Up to the Clever Feat.

Feats with an umbrella—of the Japanese kind—are very common. The juggler throws up a ball, catches it on the top of an open umbrella and, by twisting the handle rapidly, causes the ball to run round the edge of the umbrella. A similar feat is performed with curtain rings and with coins. The smaller and lighter the coin the more difficult the feat.

All these feats were originated by a street performer in Japan. One day while passing under the walls of a castle a small audience collected on the top of the wall and playfuly dropped some tangerines on to the comedian of the company of struggling jugglers. (No such company is complete without a comedian.) The next day the comedian was treated in the same manner, and so he put up a paper umbrella to shield himself. The shower of tangerines broke through the umbrella.

Then the leading juggler of the company saw his opportunity. He took the umbrella, twisted it quickly and by making it revolve caused the tangeries to fly off. While he was doing this he was helped by a lucky accident. One of the tangerines rolled round the umbrella once before dropping on the ground. The juggler picked up the tangerine and caught it once more on his revolving umbrella, and thus the feat was invented.

The hardest feat of all with the umbrella is done with a Japanese coin which is lighter than an American cent.—London Strand Magazine.

GEORGE'S BAD SPELL.

Washington Never Could Learn to Write Some Words Correctly.

Whoever heard that the great George Washington never could learn to spell correctly?

You see, it happened this way. When George was quite a young boy he came across a copy of an English book called the "Young Man's Companion," written in a "plain and easy style," as the title stated, which taught one how to write letters, wills, deeds, to survey, to navigate, to build houses, to make ink and cider, how to doctor the sick and how to conduct oneself in society, "all without the aid of a tutor."

Washington studied this book from cover to cover and from it acquired two qualities that clung to him through life. His handwriting, easy, flowing and legible, was modeled from the engraved "copy" sheet, and certain forms of spelling were learned that he never could correct.

To the end of his life Washington wrote lie, lye; liar, lyar; ceiling, cieling; oil, oyl, and blue, blew, as in his boyhood he had learned to do from this old book. Struggle as he did in trying to spell as the others of his day did, he never could be sure of certain words.—St. Louis Republic.

STREAKED WALLS.

Cold Surfaces Always Catch More Dust Than Hot Ones.

The reason that lath and plaster walls become streaked is explained by John Aitken, in Nature, as due to the tendency of hot air to deposit its dust on cold surfaces, and the colder the surface the weaker the power of resistance. So where the laths protect the plaster from the cold outside the plaster receives less deposit of dust than where it is between the laths.

Wherever a hot steam or water pipe comes through a wall a vertical streak of dust may be seen above it, due to the hot air driving the dust against the cold wall. Rooms that are heated by open grates are much less dusty than those heated by radiators because in the former the furniture is heated principally by radiation, and, being warmer than the air, it repels the particles of dust instead of catching them, while in the latter the air heats the furniture and in so doing deposits its dust on it.

Rooms lighted by electricity keep clean longer than those heated by gas simply because the light is almost cold.

Mr. Aitken sums it up as follows: "Any surface hotter than the air keeps free from dust."

Joy of Obliviousness.

"How did you like my turning off the gas at 10 while you and that young fool were in the parlor last night?" asked her father.

"Did you?" she responded innocently, and father knew the true meaning of the word failure.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"This is the Getemquick hospital. A woman who was taken ill on the street has been brought here and we think she is your wife."

ELECTRIC PLOWING.

In Use In Germany, Where It Is Beyond the Experimental Stage.

By FRANK KOESTER.

[Author of "Electricity For the Farm and Home."]

Plowing is the father of industries, the indispensable primary operation upon which civilization has depended from the earliest ages, and the plow is thus the most useful and necessary implement which has ever been designed by mankind for its own advancement. Without the plow agriculture is impossible, and without agriculture no industry can exist. Yet in spite of all the progress which has been made in mechanical arts and in the sciences the plow of today remains the same in principle as the plow of dozens of centuries ago. The furrow is still turned in the old way, and modern science has added nothing in principle to the plow except different means of drawing it across the field.

Farmers in Germany, where during the past fifteen years the steam plow has been used to a great extent, have made increasing use of the electrically operated plow, which is now far beyond the experimental stage and is in many respects superior to that drawn by steam or gasoline tractors, saving both time and money.

MOTOR WAGON OF A SINGLE MOTOR PLOW SYSTEM.

The electric plow, plowing four furrows at a time, is drawn rapidly back and forth across the field by cables operated by the motors. An average equipment of this kind will plow an acre in thirty minutes at a cost of 20 cents for the power consumed. A plowman following the single furrow behind his horses will be eight or ten times as long finishing the same field, with day after day of physical exhaustion for himself and his team. Yet up to the present time no electric plow has turned a furrow in the United States.

In the far west gasoline driven plows, often turning twenty furrows at once, are in use, but they are capable of being utilized only over immense tracts of land, while the electric plow is equally suited to large and small farms.

Electric plowing has been carried on in Germany for fifteen years, and great strides have been made, particularly in the last five years. Of the several systems employed the one and two motor systems are most extensively used. In both these systems the plow is pulled across the field by a cable wound on a drum.

In the single motor system on one side of the field the motor is mounted on a self propelled wagon, which automatically travels forward parallel with the motor wagon with each new furrow. The two motor system has two motors, one on each of two self propelled wagons, one of these replacing the anchor wagon. The one motor system is lower in first cost, but the other can be more readily adapted to the cultivation of any form of field.

Electric plowing has great advantages over that by gasoline or steam engines. With a steam plow, for instance, a great amount of coal and water must be taken to the field by teams and drivers which must be paid for. Electric plowing can be carried on in practically every kind of weather, even in the winter, when steam operated plows would freeze, and the electric plow can be used in soft or loamy soil where horses cannot work and on hilly ground.

As far as the cost of electric plowing is concerned, experience shows that it can be done cheaper per acre than by horses or steam. The field of electric plowing of today is found principally in Germany. It is an established fact that American agricultural machinery in its wide practical application is in most respects far superior to that of any foreign make, and should the domestic manufacturers devote themselves with the same skill to contriving apparatus for electric plowing it will be only a short time until our farmers recognize the advantages of the systems. Electric plowing is not confined to farms of large acreage, but may be carried on to good advantage on farms of small size.

Value of Corn Stalks.

More than two-thirds of the value of corn is on the ear and one-third in the stalk and blades, says the Farm and Fireside. The silo will save the third, which is usually as good as wasted. Why save only two-thirds of the crop?

Low Rations For Idle Horses.

Lop off the ration of all kinds when the horses are doing little or nothing. They are too much like a man to stand heavy food while lying still.

Montreal Lawyer Had Close Shave When Arabic Sank

Joseph de Lorimer Rushed for Cabin After Sighting Wake of Torpedo

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Joseph De Lorimer, advocate of Montreal, interviewed before leaving Dublin tonight, said he underwent great hardship in the water being saved by a cruiser after a long struggle.

"After breakfast, about 8.30 a.m." he said, "I went on deck. Suddenly I noticed in front of me a BriBtish steamer that had a great list. I immediately went below and called my friend Pringle, of Toronto. We stood side by side on the promenade deck. There we saw a white line in the water which proved to be a torpedo. I rushed down to my cabin for a lifebelt and my suitcase that had many personal documents, and is now at the bottom of the ocean. I embarked in the last boat that left the ship before she took her final plunge. She listed tremendously and turned turtle. The lifeboat was struck by the starboard quarter of the Arabic and sent into a whirlpool as great as the ship which sank.

"I was knocked out of the boat but I emerged above the water and grasped what I thought to be a chair and from that I swam to the raft not far distant. I clung to the raft until a lifeboat came. The men in it threw me a hawser, and I was too weak to catch it. They subsequently succeeded in placing a hawser around me and dragged me into a boat, where I lay down on the bottom boards, almost unconscious from over-exhaustion.

"While we were floating about the lifeboat came in close touch with another raft to which a woman clung screaming for help. She evidently had not strength to raise herself from the water on to the raft. A sailor from the Arabic whose name was Hughes, jumped from the lifeboat and swam among chairs and floating debris until he reached the raft. He grasped the woman by her two hands and tried his level best to raise her out of the water, but could not do so. Then he called to our boat for help. Another man jumped from the boat and swam to the raft, and by their combined efforts the unconscious woman was taken out of the water and placed on the raft.

"I must say that in all my life I have never seen such bravery. These two men, I consider, are worthy of a British V.C."

March Past Of 5,000 Men

There will be approximately 5,000 men in the march past before the Duke of Connaught at the Canadian National Exhibition on Military Day, Thursday September 2, including the 35th and 37th Battalions, who will be over from Niagara for the day, the men from the Model Camp who will be established at the grounds for the two weeks of the Fair, and a number of units now training in and about Toronto. It will be the largest contingent of overseas men seen on parade in Ontaria at any one time since the war opened.

The Fair this year will establish a new record both in exhibits and attractions and so far as attendance goes there is every appearance that for the second time in the history of the big institution the million mark will be passed. The war demonstrations and patriotic nature of the programme has made an exceptionally strong appeal all over the province and Ontario promises to turn out as never before.

As near as possible the management are producing life as experiencer by the boys in Flanders and by the men of the feelt at the Dardanelles, the difficulties of the latter being vividly pictured on the waterfront where miniatuer battleships will be destroyed by aerial bombs and mines. Armoured cars of the new type just approved by the war office will battle each day with rapid fire guns; there will be trench defence and atack at the Model Camp and other methods of modern warfare exemplified.

The spectacle at night has never been surpassed in Fair history, nor have the fireworks been excelled. Altogether one of the most successful Exhibitons is promised for the crowds who will visit Toronto.

The freedom of the grounds and grand stand has been extended to all Overseas men who may be in Toronto at any time during the Fair. Their passes from their camps will entitle them to free admission both at the entrance and the grand stand.

TO THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION VIA THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to the modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Most Hated, Most Feared

Stephen Pichon Tells Why Germany Has Made No Overtures to England

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Stephen Pichon, who was once French Minister of Foreign Affairs, in an article to the Sunday Times remarks upon the absence of peace overtures from Germany to England.

"This," he says, "amounts to saying that Great Britain remains in the eyes of the Germans the most hated and most feared of her enemies, and they consider it useless to attempt to seduce her since any such manoeuvre is foredoomed to failure.

"I regret that France has not been so well treated, and that certain of the compatriots of Bethmann-Hollweg insult her by supposing her to be capable of being duped by their machinations. This, however, proves nothing against France, but only against the judgment of the subjects of William II. The idea that France could separate themselves from their Allies, sign their own death warrant, dishonor themselves and the violators of Belgium neutrality have done, betray their brothers in arms, place their necks under the yoke of Germanism—this idea is so insensate that it can only enter into the heads of those who have lost their own common sense.

"One of the most colossal stupidities of which Germans could be the dupes is to suppose that they can succeed in sowing distrust between London and Paris by belittling in their talk the merits of the British army by repeating their ponderous jokes about 'British egotism' and by renewing in their own way the history of our ancient rivalries."

Enemy Make Futile Efforts to Recover Lost Trenches

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 24.—(Afternoon official statement). "Last night saw some artillery engagements in the sections to the north of Arras, between the Somme and the Oise, and also in the Argonne district.

In the Vosges there were yesterday some very violent encounters on the heights situated to the east of the River Fecht and to the north of the Schratzmanele. In spite of several counter attacks the enemy found it impossible to reconquer the ground they had lost.

On Barrenkopf we retained the advantages won during the evening of August 22nd.

The Germans delivered another attack against our trenches on the crest of the Soudernach, but they were repulsed.

BIG BRITISH FLEET BOMBARDS ZEEBRUGGE

Forty Ships Take Part in Most Important Naval Movemnt In North Sea This Year—Harbor Works Damaged—Guns Put Out of Action

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Rotterdam reports that at daybreak yesterday morning a British squadron, consisting of forty cruisers and destroyers, bombarded Zeebrugge and the rest of the Belgian coast. He continues:

"As soon as twilight revealed the chimneys of the Solvay works at Zeebrugge the cruisers opened fire from a distance of nine miles. Shells burst on the mole and among the works which supply the German submarines with electrical energy. As the light increased the cruisers steamed along the coast, well beyond the mine area.

"They bombarded the coast from Oster to Knocke, shells bursting in the dunes, where the German 16-inch guns defending Zeebrugge are concealed. The firing was most violent at Knocke and Zeebrugge, where the new big guns recently were laid on concrete emplacements.

"The garrison of Zeebrugge remained in specially prepared shelters, but the marines at Knocke assembled behind the Grand Hotel, the officers fearing a British attempt at landing.

"A German aeroplane ascended. We directed our fire upon the enemy's batteries during the bombardment, which lasted three hours. Eye-witnesses declare that the British shells were fired with great accuracy and rapidity. The German batteries at Knocke were hit, while the shore batteries seemed to make no impression upon the ships, most of their shells falling short.

"The German batteries stopped firing at 7 o'clock, as the ships were out of their range. Beyond the West Capelle Lighthouse the batteries fired only at great intervals, being apparently afraid to disclose their position.

"The bombardment equalled in force and duration the first shelling on November 14. The harbor works were extensively damaged, and several guns were put out of action."

"Between 8 and 9 o'clock the squadron sailed northward, leaving four ships to keep guard over Zeebrugge."

Couldn't Kill Himself

Chicago Man Shot Himself in Head and Woke Up Hungry

CHICAGO, August 22.—John C. Burnell, 66 years old, advertising manager of the Brewers' Review, had been in ill health recently, suffering from insomnia. On Thursday last he decided to kill himself. He stood in front of a mirror, pointed a revolver at his head and pulled the triger. Twice the weapon missed fire. The third time Burnell was successful and a bullet lodged in his head. Then he fired two more bullets into his skull to make sure of death. He removed his clothing, donned his pyjamas and a bathrobe and waited.

After waiting for a time, Mr. Burnell got up and adjusted his fourteen clocks. His hobby is collecting clocks. After he had wound all the clocks, Mr. Burnell went to bed again and fell asleep for the first time in many days. Then he discovered that he was angry. He arose, went to his kitchenette and prepared a light meal. Later he smoked his big pipe for a while and then found he was sleepy. He returned to his bed and slept until late Friday morning. Much refreshed he bathed, had breakfast and resumed reading.

Mr. Burnell's stenographer, Mrs. Effie New, went to the apartment at four o'clock in the afternoon to see if he had any dictation for her. She had been his stenographer for 22 years and knew his ways. He had given her a key to his apartment and she was accustomed to let herself in on days when Mr. Burnell did not appear at the office.

Mrs. New found Mr. Burnell in his library, reading a volume on philosophy and smoking a pipe. "What's happened," she asked. "I could not sleep or eat,' he said, "so I just put three bullets in my skull. You'd be surprised, Mrs. New, how it feels. I am a new man, really."

Mr. Burnell was removed to a hospital, where the physicians say he has a chance of recovery.

BIGGEST SEA VICTORY OF THE GREAT WAR

Moltke Is First of Dreadnought Class to Be Lost

LONDON, Aug. 23—The Daily News' naval expert commenting on the defeat of the German fleet at Riga, says:

"The work of the Russian fleet in the war, fighting against odds of at least ten to one, has already compelled our admiration, but latest piece of news far surpasses anything we had any right to expect. The German navy has suffered no more serious reverse than that now recorded from Petrograd.

"The Moltke was a 22,640-ton battle-cruiser, a sister ship to the Goeben, armed with ten 11-inch guns and she is the first of the dreadnaughts officially stated to have been lost in the war. The three cruisers lost were in all probability modern vessels, for old craft would hardly have been used in conjunction with such a vessel as the Moltke.

"In view of the lack of details, it would be unprofitable to speculate as to the manner of the destruction of the ships. It is sufficient for the moment to know that they have gone. When fuller details come to hand it may be also explained how our allies managed to exterminate the men on board the four huge barges that were attempting to land them at Pernigel and to capture the ships.

"The destruction of the German ships and men is the most satisfactory feature from a material point of view, especially as the Russians do not seem to have suffered in the process. But morally and strategically, nothing could be more satisfactory than the forced abandonment of the Gulf of Riga by the Germans. From available information it is known that they had brought large forces to bear there, and the Russians have told us that the defence was left to mines and minor ships of war.

"The Russian triumph is, therefore enormous, and no one will rejoice in their success more than the officers and men of the British navy."

GERMANY'S GREAT NAVAL REVERSE

Fatal to Her Plans on Land—Sivutch Gunboat Fought to the Bitter End Against Strong German Ships

LONDON, Aug. 23.—An official Russian statement issued today gives the German losses in the battle in Riga Gulf as one Dreadnought, two cruisers and eight torpedo boats. Although the President of the Duma has stated that the Moltke, there is a belief that it might have been another German warship. A British submarine is given credit for the sinking of the Dreadnaught.

Unofficial despatches state that in addition to the other vessels mentioned a German submarine ran ashore and is no doubt a loss, and also that a German auxiliary cruiser was sunk.

The Captain and crew of the gunboat Sivutch, the only Russian loss acknowleged in the battle, are highly praised for their courageous stand.

The Gallant Sivutch.

The attack on the Sivutch by the German cruiser and torpedo boats began, it is stated at 1,500 yards. The little gunboat, with a crew of 148 men, was commanded by Commander Tcherkassey, who distinguished himself at Port Arthur at the age of 21. The ship returned the fire and stubbornly held her position in the unequal combat that sealed her doom as it progressed. At the close of the encounter the opponents were within 400 yards of each other, and the Sivutch, enveloped in flames, her decks red hot, returned shot after shot up to the very instant of her sinking.

Almost he last shot from the gunboat sank a German torpedo boat. It is not known if any of the crew of the Sivutch survived.

Aside from the loss of the German ships, the naval engagement is regarded chiefly important for the strategic effect upon the land operations in the German sweep eastward toward Petrograd which military observers now consider as having been checked and possibly irreparably defeated.

The German squadron managed to destroy some houses with their long range guns. During the attempt to land at Pernoff the Germans also descended on Canasar, to the south of Pernoff. Two lighters filled with troops on attempting to reach the beach at Ganasas were sunk by the Russian shells.

Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says that a semi official statement issued in the Russian capital adds another auxiliary cruiser to the previous list of the German losses in the Gulf of Riga.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL STORY.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 23.—The recent naval battle in the Gulf of Riga is described as follows in a statement from navy headquarters:

"The German fleet on August 16 renewed with large forces its attacks on our positions at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga. Our ships during the 16th and 17th repulsed the attacks of the enemy, whose secret preparations for entering the gulf had been favored singularly by misty weather.

"Taking advantage of a thick fog, hostile forces of considerable size entered the gulf on the 18th and our vessels retired at the same time, continuing to resist the enemy without losing touch with him.

"On the 19th and 20th the enemy reconnoitred in different directions, at the same time keeping up a fight with our ships, in which their torpedo flotilla suffered material losses. On our side, we lost the gunboat Sivutch, which perished gloriously in an unequal fight with an enemy cruiser, which was escorting torpedo craft and came up to a distance of 400 yards from her. The Sivutch, enveloped in flames, continued to reply shot for shot until she sank, having previously sunk enemy torpedo boats.

"In view of the losses suffered and the futility of his efforts, the enemy appears to have evacuated the Gulf of Riga on the 21st

"Between the 16th and the 21st two enemy cruisers and no fewer than eight torpedo boats were placed hors de combat. Simultaneously our gallant allies succeeded in torpedoing one of the most powerful Dreadnoughts of the German fleet."

The little Russian gunboat Sivutch, with a crew of 748 men, is said by the Petrograd newspapers to be the only Russian warship to have been lost in the battle in the Gulf of Riga. Commander Tcherkassov, who distinguished himself at Port Arthur, was in command of the Sivutch. The number of survivors has not been announced.

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SUNK.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 24.—From details of the attempted German landing in the Gulf of Riga last Saturday, published in the Novoe-Vremya, it appears, says a despatch from Petrograd to the Central News Agency, that three large transports, filled with troops, approached the shore under cover of the German squadron. The German ships were allowed to come close to land before a terrific artillery fire was opened by the Russians.

The duel between the cruisers and shore batteries continued for two hours, when the last transport was sunk. Only a few crowded boats then remained and these were soon smashed to pieces by the Russian fire.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The definiteness of the official Russian report on the sinking of the German battle cruiser Moltke, two other cruisers and eight torpedo boats has sent a wave of enthusiasm throughout the country and dispelled the depression over the Russian retreat on land. Aside from the loss of German ships, the naval engagement is regarded chiefly important for the strategic effect upon the land operations in the German sweep eastward toward Petrograd, which military observers now consider as having been checked and possibly irreparably defeated.

The German centre has pressed forward steadily, until Prince Leopold of Bavaria is near the Russian new line of defence, but the military observers say that the entire campaign hinged on the vast enveloping movement of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's forces in the north. They had succeeded in pushing far beyond Riga, to Jacobstadt, on the Dvina, but the Russians' hold on the Gulf of Riga and of the great naval base of Riga was a continual menace in von Hindenburg's rear.

This, the military observers say, led to the shifting of a number of German capital ships, including the Moltke, from the North Sea to the Baltic, with the purpose of controlling Riga and thus protecting a German land advance on Petrograd. The result of the naval battle appears definitely to have defeated the German objective, according to the observers, who say that aside from the loss of the ships the gulf and the naval base of Riga are still in Russian hands and menace von Hindenburg's further advance toward Petrograd.

A despatch to the Morning Post from Petrograd says:

"In addition to the German losses previously reported in the Riga battle a German submarine was run ashore on the coast of Dago Island (in the Baltic Sea just outside the Gulf of Riga and doubtless also is lost."

Liner Fights Two Submarines

Captain, Quartermaster and Steward Killed by Shells During Pursuit

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Lamport & Holt liner Diomed has been sunk by a German submarine. Her Captain, quartermaster and steward were killed by shells fired by the submarine during a pursuit of four hours.

An officer of the Diomed, who landed at Queenstown today with other survivors, says that two submarines were sighted. According to his report they were rigged up with dummy funnels. One of them, this officer asserts, subjected the Diomed to a heavy shell fire.

The liner attempted to escape, but surrendered after being pursued for four hours. Two boats were lowered and 49 members of the crew got away, landing with them the body of the Captain.

Shortly afterwards one boat was swamped. Two Englishmen and five Chinese were drowned. The others were picked up by the second boat.

The steamship Diomed was a freighter of 4,672 tons gross. She was 219 feet long and was built in 1895. She was owned by the Ocean Steamship Company of Liverpool. She was last reported as having arrived at Swansea on July 24 from Amsterdam, on a voyage to New York.

FIERCE BATTLE RAGING ON BREST-LITOWSK FRONT

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 23.—A special despatch from Berlin says that a fierce battle is raging on the whole front of Brest-Litowsks. The Russians are constantly sending great forces under fire to prevent the encompassing of the fortress.

The Germans are encountering stubborn resistance and their advance has been delayed.

The German centre has pressed forward steadily until Prince Leopold junction at Landvaroro, where the Vilna-Grodno line is joined by that from Kovno.

The Germans in this zone have an enormous mass of artillery. The refugees from Kovno who watched the attack from the outskirts of the town say that 600 guns concentrated their fire on one fort, which the Germans succeeded in destroying. The German batteries poured an unceasing rain of shells from an unbroken semi-circle with several rows of guns.

The Germans suffered very severely from the fire if the forts, and entire batteries were swept away by the blast of Russian projectiles. Altogether, the Germans' losses are said to have exceeded by many times those of the Russians.

A great deal of damage was done to Kovno itself. One big shell completely wrecked the facade of the cathedral.

While the attack was in progress 30 German aeroplanes and three dirigibles circled continually above the town, dropping bombs.

For many years deceased had been a consistent member of the Methodist church. Her illness was of short duration, having on Friday last been taken ill. In addition to the husband, three sons, John of New Yohk, Wm. of Winnipeg, and Wesley of Tyendinaga, and two daughters, Misses Ethelind and Margaret, survive.

INJURED BY BICYCLISTS

Willie Vantassel, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Vantassel, residing on Albert street, was yesterday afternoon the victim of an accident which fortunately was not of a serious nature. The lad was upon the sidewalk when two boys upon bicycles were racing upon the walk. The result was that one of the bicycles struck the child and threw it violently to the walk, inflicting injuries of such a nature as to require medical attendance. The affair was reported to the police and a police court case will no doubt follow. The sidewalk is by no means a proper avenue for bicyclists to try their ability of speed

BELLEVILLE PUPIL RECEIVES HIGH HONOR

Miss Bessie Shannon of this city, has been awarded great honor on the splendid work accomplished by herself on the Entrance examinations this year. This young lady has a very skilful hand. Her writing this year on the examinations has been the best on record among the pupils in a great number of years. Her papers have been sent to all the Educational Departments throughout the Dominion. On her writing examination she made the whole total, which hardly one pupil out of a hundred makes.

Miss Shannon attended St. Michael's Academy for two months and a half this year. In this short period she accomplished two years hard work and she was highly esteemed by the pupils and all who knew her while she was in attendance there.

We do not think the record of this young lady could be beat. She has also completed a full course at Ontario Business College, and has her diplomas to show for the work which has been accomplished by her. She is only fifteen years of age. Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and Mr. I. L. Moore, Principals of the above college, highly recommend this young lady. We are now encouraging her to attend High School and take a teacher's course, which we know she will be capable of.

MEXICANS IN SUIT FOR 1,000,000 PECOS

Injunction Ties Up Argumede's Deposits in Royal Bank of Canada

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Manuel R. Yrigoyen, who says he was Secretary of State for Yucatan, Mexico, until ousted recently by a Carranza agent, obtained an injunction from Supreme Court Justice Shearn restraining the New York branch of the Royal Bank of Canada from making any payments to Abel Ortiz Argumedo. Argumedo was Governor General of Yucatan by "popular acclaim" until he fled with 1,100,000 pesos, according to Lara's affidavit.

The restraining order is made effective until September 5, when the case comes up for argument in Special Term. The suit brought by the Secretary asks that Argumedo render an accounting of the funds, amounting to about $42,000 in American currency.

Lara, who says he is suing in behalf of the State of Yucatan, recites the fast shifting manner in which power and authority are bandied about in the turbulent States of Mexico. He first recites that Argumedo is living at 101 West Eigthy-fifth street with his family, and has an office in the Times Building where he sets himself up as an importer and exporter. The Secretary says that Jose Cruz Valado, former paymaster of Yucatan, and friend of Argumedo, lives at 2 Farragut Circle, New Rochelle.

He says Argumedo is living here in an extravagant manner, as is witnessed by his purchase of an automobile for $3,260, on which he has his monogram, "A.O.A." Argumedo, while in Yucatan, never possessed any such sums of money as he is expending here, the secretary says.

Sues Officials and the Bank

Argumedo, the Paymaster, and the Royal Bank of Canada are made the defendants in the suit.

Lara's affidavit sets forth that there is now [illegible] in Yucatan, but that authority in that State has been usurped by a Carranza agent, and that it is impossible to prosecute criminal proceeding there against Argumedo, who, he alleges, has taken the funds from the war chest of the State. The affidavit says that on January 31, 1915, an agent of Carranza, one Toribio B. de Los Santos, was sent to Yucatan, and seized the reins of Government at Merida, the capital of the State. The affidavit says the Constitution of the State required that only a citizen be appointed Governor, and that Carranza's agent was not a citizen.

"Then, according to Lara, Argumedo, being a man of keen political sagacity, took opportunity by the hand, went about making speeches and although no election was held, had himself made Governor "by popular acclaim." Argumedo forthwith removed Los Santos and all his attendants. On March 1, 1915, the affidavit continues, Argumedo discovered that it would be a good thing to buy arms and ammunition in the United States with which to keep the peace in Yucatan. Accordingly the Governor, so runs the affidavit, drew from the war chest 1,100,000 pesos, the equivalent of $442,000 in American currency. Simultaneously the Governor impressed upon the Secretary of State the necessity of hurrying to the United States and arranging for the purchase of munitions, and gave Lara the commission to do so.

Met Governor at Seaport

Lara then said that before he left Yucatan, he met Governor Argumedo at El Cuio, a seaport town, and that the Governor had along with him a number of boxes which suggested that there might be money inside them. Then, says Lara, came Edward M. Thompson, now of Waverley, Mass., but who had been for twenty years United States Consul at Yucatan, but whose term expired in 1911. Thompson, with characteristic Yankee curiosity, peeped into the boxes and spied Mexican gold coins, the affidavit says, and so informed Lara.

Lara then said to Argumedo:

"You are sure you'll be here when I get back?"

"If all the people here should desert me, I will remain here like Robinson Crusoe on his island," was the reply.

Lara says Argumedo sailed away from El Cuio on the Yucatan Navy, consisting of a small sailing vessel with a few guards aboard. Lara was compelled to find his way to the port of San Felipe, where he finally boarded a ship for Havana, Cuba, his wife and son having preceded him on another ship.

Revelation That Came To An Old British Soldier

A retired Major-General writes as follows to a London paper:

"I was present at the review yesterday, when Mr. Bonar Law and General Sam Hughes saw the Canadian troops march past. As an old soldier I can say that I have never seen finer troops than the thousands who passed in review under the command of Major-General Steele. It was a revelation. Among them was a regiment of French Canadians. The men had stood in the deluge over an hour and a half, but they went by like old soldiers. Not one of them had been a soldier ten months ago. There were enough six-footers among them to make a Guards brigade Does England know?"

31,000,000 Drop In C.P.R. Earnings

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—While the working expenses of the Canadian Pacific Railway have been materially reduced, the net earnings were $8,851,000 less than last year according to the annual report Sir Thomas Shaughnessy the president which was issued today. This decrease left a margin barely sufficient to meet the customary distribution to shareholders. Against this the special income was $2,381,461 greater than last year, making it possible to leave the rate of dividend unchanged.

The working expenses for the year amounted to 66.04 per cent. of the gross earnings and the net earnings to 33.96 per cent., as compared with 67.32 and 32.68 per cent., respectively in1914.

The four per cent. consolidated debenture stock to the amount of £611,797 was created and sold, and the proceeds were applied to the acquisition of the sureties of other railway companies whose lines constitute a portion of the system, the interest on which has been guaranteed by the company.

Four per cent. preference stock to the maunt of £504,914 was created and sold for the purpose of meeting capital expenditures.

During the year 231,297 acres of agricultural land were sold for $3,742,115, being an average of $16.17 per acre.

The total earnings to June 30, 1915, were $98,865,209, compared with $129,814,823 for the year ending June 30 1914.

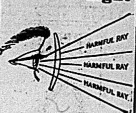
The Danger of Invisible Light



may sound fantastic—but it's very real. In all light, besides the rays that bring color to your eyes, there are harmful, invisible rays that often cause eye-strain. We can fit these restful Sir William Crookes lenses to either eyeglasses or spectacles.

Belgium At War

What the People Do and How They Live

(By Sergt. G. N. Spafford.)

Sergt. Spafford sends us the following article, in which he describes the peaceful life of the Belgian people:—

I herewith present for the readers of The Intelligencer a brief sketch of the life carried on, as presented to the observer, in this country, ravaged by the war which has now been in progress a year today. No doubt many at home have given the subject a passing thought therefore I trust my humble effort to present my impressions will prove interesting to those who read this.

If I were an artist the scene that greets my eye as I look toward the south would be an ideal subject for my canvas. From my dugout, which faces in the direction mentioned, and which is dug in the side of a hill, I have an excellent view of the surrounding country, which is rich with interest and beauty at this season of the year. Below me is a stretch of level country, every acre of which is under cultivation—wheat fields now ready for the reaper, the yellow golden tops blending with the green of the potato fields, and pastures in which are quietly grazing the fine fat cattle and sleek French plow horses of the nearby farmer; the once smooth macadamized roads, bordered by rows of ivy-clad trees, among which we find the ash, oak, elm, black and white thorn and the walnut, which are familiar in England and Canada; the picturesque cottages of the peasants, with their white-washed plaster walls, thatched roofs and quaint tile chimneys, surrounded by a pretty garden which is enclosed by a well-kept, carefully trimmed hedge. In the garden nearby, always in front of the house, one finds a beautiful variety of sweet-smelling roses of every color, bordering the path to the cottage, which is generally paved with tile or brick. There are well cultivated beds of lettuce and garden vegetables. We enter the open door. (You will find at this season of the year, like at home, every door and window open.) We take a peep inside. The first thing that will greet your eye is the typical fireplace, in which is placed a stove. The stove, too, is worthy of mention, because, since my coming, I have not found any variation in the type of stove used here by the peasants or farmers. You are all familiar with the little pug stove at home. Well, just add a top about four feet long, two feet wide and four inches deep, stovepipe attached to back, two holes and lids to fit, two slender iron rods attached to rear for legs, a nickeled rod on each side, on which hangs the lid-lifter and miscellaneous utensils. Behind the stove in one corner of the fireplace you will find the coal box filled with a soggy mass of soft coal, which is kept damp, for fuel. On the stove—no matter where you go—you will always find a fresh-brewed pot of coffee. As you enter you will see near the old fashioned, long double window, with its numerous panes of glass, which swing in from the centre, seated, perhaps in a "grandpa" chair, with its great skin cushion fastened to the back and covering the seat, the patroness of the cottage, sewing or knitting. She greets you with a hospitable smile—especially if you are English, and capable of addressing her with the familiar "Bon jour, Madame." She replies "Entree vous, Monsieur." You enter, and after requesting you to be seated, her first thought is the refreshment that is dear to the heart of every Belgian—the coffee-cup. She asks: "Monsieur voulez vous prendre un tasse de cafe?" You sip the usually delicious coffee and goat's milk with a lump of sugar in your mouth—as do all the Flemish. This is a kind of taffy-drop made from cane sugar, and is largely used in preference to loaf sugar. They seldom put it in the coffee as we are accustomed to do at home, but let it dissolve in the mouth as they sip the beverage.

Now that you are more refreshed, you glance around and note the surrounding in the home of these simple, peace-loving, hard-working people. You will find the floor neatly tiled throughout. Against the wall opposite the fireplace stands an old-fashioned chest of drawers—beneath a cupboard, on top and in the centre you will always find (as is the custom both in Belgium and France) a beautiful crucifix of gold or brass, enclosed in a glass case; on either side are the patron saints of the district, or the images of the Virgin Mary or St. Joseph. This is the family altar. Glancing over the mantel of the fireplace you will see another large crucifix on the wall above, and on either side pictures of the Sacred Heart and other treasures associated with their religions. A table and a few chairs comprise the furnishing of the room which is in general kitchen, sitting room, dining room and nursery combined. A small bed room or two adjoin the one described.

These homes are within range of the guns of the enemy who has wrought destruction in their land, brought misery to their lives, outraged their daughters, pillaged their homes, razed their houses, tortured and murdered their loved ones. In the face of these conditions, in spite of the constant danger they are in, they cling to their homes, for all they have in the world is wrapped up within the precincts of the little cottage and patch of soil around it.

Since I have been in Belgium we have traversed it from Nieffe to Ypres by road, seeking billets as we have changed positions from one point to another, perhaps resting after a march of twenty-five or thirty miles, for a few days, or after being in action we have been billeted in pastures and enjoyed the simple hospitality of what these peasant folk had to offer, with all the generosity their frugal means afforded. Ofttimes the motherly patronesses, at the midnight hour, when we arrived, saddle-sore and weary, have made us coffee and cooked us whatever she had in store to satisfy our empty stomachs, and allowed us to dry our soggy clothing by the fireplace. Not only have these people served us, but thousands of troops have thus been served since the beginning of the war, without a murmur or complaint, always ready, smiling and anxious to render you any service, great or small, with their cheery "Avec pleasure, Monsieur."

Since coming to France and Belgium I have been greatly interested in the people and have spent many idle hours in their company. I have acquired a fair knowledge of their language—French and Flemish, and can converse with them at present with ease and pleasure. At the beginning, with my sparse knowledge of French—and never having heard Flemish, or the patois spoken on the frontier of the two countries—I had many ludicrous experiences. So did my comrades in making known our wants by means of a combination of "Avez vous le soso" and a series of gestures which are almost indescribable. The native would watch our performance with a glassy stare and puzzled, helpless expression on his face, while he scratched his head in a vain endeavor to "savvy" the purport of our "vocab." and gymnastic evolutions. Finally, by a supreme stretch of his imagination or by luck itself, he would grasp our meaning, and greatly to our relief his wrinkled visage would break into a knowing smile, delighted with himself, no doubt, because he understood "les soldat Angleterre."

The stories of these hospitable people are full of thrilling episodes of this inimical invasion of the Huns, and are filled with incidents of deep heart-interest. It is then one observes the undeterred spirit which throbs beneath the characteristic stoicism of everyday life, when they recall the abhorrent outrages of the Hunnish invaders. It is then one has some conception of the spontaneous answer of Belgium's sons who rushed to the colors, and although outnumbered, they met the foe and resisted until weight of numbers forced them to retire. Their brilliant fighting won the admiration of every nation, and the Belgian soldiers I have met confirm the title "Brave Little Belgium."

You find as you traverse the country that the only ones left to care for the soil are the fathers and mothers and the younger element. Their sons have long since answered their country's call, and many today are resting in soldiers' graves. As you listen to the stories of the loved ones of these hero-martyrs, whom they gave to their country, a work-worn hand or the corner of an apron wipes away the tears which comes to their eyes, as they recall with reverence the recollections of peace and happiness before their boy departed for the front.

BELGIAN FARMER'S LIFE.

I here record some of the many incidents of life and conditions under which the Belgian farmer tills the soil within a few hundred yards of the firing line. Not only the men, but the women and children work in the fields, when both sides are sending destructive shells over their heads, and the most surprising thing in the world is that they show not the least concern, even when the enemy's shells are bursting in the fields in which they labor.

The following is an incident which I witnessed the other day: A peasant was cutting wheat with a scythe and tieing it in sheaves adjacent to our position. Suddenly the Huns began shelling some reserve trenches, which were at one end of the field in which he was working. These trenches are not occupied by troops, but the Huns register any point where their aeroplanes report new earthworks. Not until the shells began falling within a few yards of him did the peasant seek a place of safety, and as soon as the bombardment ceased he immediately resumed work. Today the work is finished, the sheaves stand in the usual rows, and all day long shells from both sides have gone over him.

I have often wondered how long a Canadian farmer would remain in his field under the same conditions.

Tonight I witnessed another affair in a pasture field adjoining the road. A milkmaid, two little boys, and a dear little girl (whom I know well, and who pays a visit to my dugout to share my daily supply of sweets and chocolates which I get from England by mail) are here. The milkmaid and boys were busily engaged milking, when like a bolt from the blue, two high explosive shells burst within a few yards of them. I was in fear lest my little friend would be injured. They expressed no fear, simply drove the cows to the other end of the field and continued milking. I tried to induce them to leave the field, but they exclaimed "Ah, no, Monsieur, we are not afraid. One is as safe here as any place else."

Referring to my little Belgian comrade, Germaine, one of the many sweet little children who are our constant companions, who play hide and seek around the guns, or come into my dugout, sit on the floor and play the whole day long: Germaine is my favorite. She is a winsome, blue-eyed, golden-haired, little elf. Her sweet, smiling face and rosy cheeks would win the heart of any one who meets her. Then there's Lucile Marie and Mary Magdaline, and two boys, Napoleon and Caesar, her playmates, all about the same age, who live in the neighborhood. If you could see this merry bunch sporting on a green patch just below my dugout, with my gunners who are playing football, and the peaceful aspect of the scene, you would be likely to ask the question we often hear the boys—in good-natured banter—ask each other: "Where is the war?"

THE SCENE IS CHANGED.

Come, then, with me, my friend, and follow the winding path which will take us to the crest of the hill facing the north, a few minutes' walk down the road. As I caution you to be careful you wonder why. Before you in the valley below is the same type of country you just left. Suddenly you hear the report of a rifle and an angry buzz close to your head. It's a German sniper. Where is he? As you wonder, you hear the boom of a gun and before you in the valley you see a flash and a puff of smoke, as the shell bursts with a whack. Put your glasses to your eyes and you behold a network of barbed wire and earth works; but not a living soul in this uncanny valley does your eye behold—only the network of zig-zag trenches and flash of sniper's rifles.

Thus do we realize the significance of this terrible war. As the refugee expressed it: when one views the demolished homesteads and ruined towns and villages, those who know join with the refugees and say it will be a good thing when the war is over, and when Belgium is restored no people in the world will be more happy than the Belgian peasants.

SPAFFORD.

P.S.—Boys all well. Send best regards to all at home.

FAMOUS PHYSICIAN HAS HIGH PRAISE FOR ALGANQUIN PARK

Sir James Grant has just been spending a holiday at the "Highland Inn," Algonquin Provincial Park of Ontario. The eminent physician was greatly impressed with the possibilities of this beautiful region, and in a letter to Mr. Geo. W. Bartlett, Superintendent of the Park, says:—

"That twenty years should have passed since this attractive park struck life in Ontario and this my first visit I greatly regret. The scenic beauty surrounding is unsurpassed in Canada; the climate condition remarkable as to its power of restoring the strength and vigor of the system laboring under debility; and the pleasure of boating, fishing and artistic camping in and around the numerous lakes in this great park, a source of enjoyment difficult to overestimate. The many and varied attractions are only in infancy. The pride and pleasure of thousands seeking rest, quietude and restoration of mental and physical vigor will ere long make Algonquin Park a chief attraction of our progressive Dominion."

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

We have not yet heard the last of German atrocities. A commission was appointed in France to verify acts in violation of international law, and their reports have startled and shocked the civilized world. The latest, issued this month, gives official proof of the inhuman barbarity of German soldiers, who—led by an officer—shot or burned alive over a hundred wounded men in a hospital.

The report relates the wonderful escape of a French military doctor, M. Sedillot, who, after the battle at Ethe, had installed a hospital on which was flying a Red Cross flag in some houses and a barn at Gomery. The next morning the village was invaded by German troops. A lieutenant, commanding twenty-five men visited the hospital, and left saying that everything was all right. The men, however, became very excited and menacing, yelling, "This is a war to death and the blowing out of brains." A few minutes later another German officer rushed into the place and shot at Dr. Sedillot, who luckily struck up the arm of his assailant and received the bullet in the shoulder. In a fit of exasperation the officer fired two bullets at the doctor, hitting him in the right calf and left arm.

The officer then called to his men, "Feuer, feuer" (Fire, fire). An indescribable scene of carnage followed. The Germans set fire to the hospital and obliged medical students and civilians who had escaped the bullets, and who were lying on the floor feigning death, to run into the furnace, pushing them into the flames with their bayonets, while they brought more hay to keep the fire alive. Inside the hospital were between sixty and eighty wounded, most of them being unable to walk. Those who tried to escape by jumping from the windows were immediately shot. During the whole of this terrible time Dr. Sedillot, who had regained consciousness, saw the scenes of carnage and heard the desperate appeals of his compatriots. The Germans meanwhile laughed and shouted, "Noch ein, noch ein" (One more, one more), as they shot. Afterwards they began to search the dead bodies, stealing all the valuables they could lay their hands on.

Dr. Sedillot was finally able to jump out of the window. He broke a leg in his fall and crawled to a cellar. The next day he was taken a prisoner with three soldiers. While passing through the village they saw numerous bodies of soldiers who had been shot. Dr. Sedillot was treated at two different hospitals, and was then taken to Ingolstadt, where he was imprisoned from September 16 to March 21. He was finally sent to France through Switzerland, maimed by wounds. He is certain that between 100 and 120 soldiers were thus murdered, being either shot or burned to death.

Previous reports have related almost exclusively to violations of international law committed against the civil population. "We are now able to furnish most complete information," say the commissioners, "concerning acts of treachery and barbarism, of which the combatants as well as the medical persons attached to our armies have been made the victims by the enemy." The commissioners give nine examples of occasions on which the Germans used prisoners and captured civilians as protection against the fire of the Allied troops, and take up the question of the enemy's use on many well-verified occasions of bullets which are made with the express purpose of inflicting gashes and shattering wounds. These bullets are made in factories and placed in special cartridge boxes bearing the label "Parabellum."

The report states how unarmed prisoners were killed by orders issued by General Stenger, in command of the 58th Brigade. The order stated that no more prisoners were to be taken. Wounded, armed or without arms, were to be executed, and prisoners, even in great, compact formation, were to be put to death. No living man was to be left by the troops.

The report also contains the evidence of wounded soldiers in hospitals and in first-aid stations on the battlefield, taken down by magistrates of well-known standing. The men testify that when they lay wounded on the battlefield they saw their comrades murdered with musket and revolver or struck dead with the butt end of rifles and with bayonets wielded by soldiers, non-commissioned officers, and officers themselves. Many others state that they were victims of these attacks, in which they received serious wounds. A large proportion were in addition stripped of their uniforms and any valuable objects in their possession. The report furnishes twenty examples of these acts of cruelty.

Other instances include those of wounded who were massacred without reason—men whom it was possible to reach between the trenches, and who, during the night, had their throats slit, their chests crushed in, their ears cut off and broken, and their bodies generally mutilated. Another source of information has been the notebooks of German prisoners. The following is the extract from the notebook of Private Fahlenstein, of the 34th Fusiliers, on the subject of the massacres on August 28th in the neighborhood of Peronna: "Those who were seriously wounded in the head or lungs, and who were not able to raise themselves, were finished with a ball. It was the order which had been given to us." The report gives instances of outrages suffered by prisoners and abuse of the flag of truce. In one case prisoners, after laying down their arms, were lined up against a wall and shot at five or six paces. Two fell and pretended to be dead. They escaped later to bring back details of the fate of their comrades.

The report gives examples of the ill-treatment of the Red Cross division of the army. Many cases are cited of doctors in the performance of their duty being shot down or struck with muskets or bayonets, and suffering all possible indignities when not actually killed.

The merciless barbarity and cowardly brutality of the German army is one of the most surprising features of this deplorable war.

Austria's request to Uncle Sam to prevent the export of arms to the Allies got her a lot of satisfaction.

At the end of twelve months of war the British navy has fulfilled every function it exists to perform—except indeed the destruction of a fleet that declines to engage—and it is far stronger today both absolutely and relatively than on the day it disappeared to take up its silent watch over the oceans of the world—London Daily News.

England neutral or indifferent while Belgium was being ravaged, while Germany poured out her wrath and her frightfulnes upon the innocent population of France and stamped her military despotism upon all Europe, would have been an England which Englishmen would have despised and the whole world have flouted—Westminster Gazette.

How could we fail to be moved to the depths of our being when a British stateman shakes off the memory of the age-long struggles to pay us a homage which it is our ambition to reserve? Yes, we are proud that, to obtain the awakening of consciousness which the present situation demands of the greatest peoples of the world, a Lloyd George has seen fit to show to the workers of Great Britain that France, in her fight against the invader for human right and independent life, has the more honor and dignity—L'Homme Enchaine, Paris.

In the consciousness that the wielders for the old powers would throw themselves on the new power, as the dogs in the steets of Constantinople hurl themselves on the new arrivals Germany strengthened and developed her military power.

Retorting to the sapient friends of peace and concord who ask why Germany could not have remained as she was without striving after greater power, we would say: Do not these wiseacres know that to live is to grow, that stagnation and death are synonymous? For forty years Germany worked for peace. War came in spite of our peaceful strivings.

The war took its course. Germany fought alone, without looking around her for help. England begged, threatened, pushed all other countries into the fray, so that she herself might be spared its horrors.

Naturally, German diplomacy, too, sought to work in Germany's interests in the neutral States. Here is the great outstanding difference: Germany persuaded all to remain neutral; England and her allies employed every possible means to force them to abandon their neutrality.

Who, then, of the two belligerents is the one who aims at the limitation of the war, who the one who desires to extend its scope?

That in the face of facts such as these the friends of peace should be found on the side of the allied Powers represents one of the most wonderful cases of mental blindness that the world has ever seen—"Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung."

War Notes

During the past month more than 22,000 men have enlisted in Victoria.

As an experiment the Hackney Guardians are to appoint two young Belgian women as wardmaids at the Workhouse Infirmary.

The Durham County Council have released 465 teachers for service with the colors or in munition work. All those with the colors are to receive full pay, less Army allowance.

The Commissioner of Police has written to the Willesden Council expressing regret that at present he is unable to officially sanction the enrolment of women police in the metropolitan area.

The manipulation of food prices by speculators has given rise to serious rioting in a number of German towns. The latest demonstration has been made at Konigshulte, where the police had to charge the mob.

Father Cambier, the Belgian missionary explorer, has been sentenced by the German authorities to two-and-a-half years' imprisonment for preaching a series of sermons on M. Nothomb's book, "Martyred Belgium."

In consequence of the male assistants having enlisted, Wandsworth Borough Council will close down the lending departments of the public libraries at Allfarthing-lane and Garratt-lane for an indefinite period.

A "deplorable impression" has been caused, according to a Geneva telegram to the Paris "Matin," by instructions which have been given in Berlin ordering the railway authorities to prevent military passengers travelling on their line from making any communication to civilians.

The people of Chertsey, England, view with great pride the distinctions gained by local soldiers in the war. These include one French Legion of Honor, two Military Crosses, one Distinguished Conduct Medal, and three Distinguished Service Orders, while about a dozen other Chertsey men have been mentioned in despatches.

Sir William Borlase's school, at Marlow, England, has not only contributed 200 old boys to the colors, but most of the present pupils are sacrificing their holidays and volunteering for war work, while the headmaster (the Rev. A. J. Skinner) says that more than a quarter of the school are on the Board of Trade list for munition work.

It is estimated that over 100,000 members of the Manchester Unity of the Independent Order of Oddfellows are serving with the colors, and those unable to give personal service or bear arms are showing their appreciation of what their brethren are doing by releasing them from any contributions during the war, entailing an estimated expenditure of £100,000 per annum.

THE POET'S CORNER

ENLIST!

Your King and country need you.
So enlist.
You're wanted now, they tell you,
To enlist.
Do not wait another day.
Never mind what shirkers say.
Show "the other chaps" the way.
And enlist.

The boys in France, they call you
To enlist.
To help them, they implore you
To enlist.
Is it that you fear to go
And help our lads to fight the foe?
As a man you'll answer "No."
And enlist.

The voice of conscience bids you
To enlist
To avenge the wrongs of Belgium,
Go, enlist.
Duty tells you what to do.
Help a cause that's just and true,
And the men who fight for you.
And enlist.

Sing "The Maple Leaf Forever,"
And enlist:
Have no use for a white feather,
But enlist.
Show your true Canadian grit,
Get a rifle in your mitt,
Be a man, and do "your bit."
And enlist!

Youth Constructs Novel Automobile

"Bob" Detlor, Son of Chateau Manager, Makes Cycle-Car of Junk

The Quebec Chronicle in a recent issue has the following item, which refers to a former Belleville boy, who is a grandson of Mr. J. J. Haines of this city:

Many Quebecers not in the know, may have wondered lately at a strange machine, not altogether an automobile but a near approach to one, which has been seen gliding gracefully along the city streets, mounting the hills with the ease of a powerful touring car.

The owner of this "two passenger cycle car," as he himself designates it, is also the inventor, his name being Clarences Detlor, more familiarly known as "Bob," the seventeen-year-old son of the genial manager of the Chateau Frontenac.

This youth who is most modest and unassuming is endowed with inventive genius which is remarkable and he took great pleasure in showing a Chronicle representative his workshop which is indeed a revelation. Everything in the line of motors, engines, electric batteries, etc., may be found here, while tools of every sort are at hand. As for material, young Detlor, does not worry for he can adapt a tin can or any piece of junk to his ideas just as easily as the finished article.

The car itself has the appearance of a racer or speeder and its construction denotes an extraordinary display of ingenuity on the part of its inventor.

When in Winnipeg young Detlor constructed a car which was operated by friction drive and this machine was well-nigh perfect in every detail. When the car was taken to Quebec, the numerous hills were found a rather serious handicap to the friction-driven machine and therefore it was dismantled and the material, in part used to construct the present car, which the inventor calls the "Bobolink."

It is 8 ft. long. The beams being of 2 by 2 ash. The engine is stayed in three places and is taken from a Harley-Davidson motor cycle, eight horse power. The wheels are ordinary bicycle ones while the axles are of steel the plans being made by the youthful inventor. The steering column is worked up with cables and pulleys under the front knuckles while the steering wheel is taken from an old motor boat, being attached to a shaft of three-quarter-inch pipe. The sidelights are improvised tobacco tins with also a red tail light of the same manufacture. An acetylene gas headlight is fastened in the front. The electric batteries by which the lights are controlled are fastened under the seat. The engines use about a gallon of gasoline to every fifty miles. The drivers are worked by two and one half inch belts on old elevator pulleys, to the back wheels while the same material is used for the make-up of idlers to take up the slack in the belts. There is a foot brake and accelerator, also worked by the foot, while there are two hand levers, one for compression and the other for the spark and throttle. The oil tank is inside the hood, which by the way has not yet been placed on the car. The drips drop down a tube past the "tobacco-tin" light and down into the engine crank case. A crank will later be added to the machine.

The present car weighs 300 lbs. while the old one was well over 450 lbs., too heavy for Quebec hills. He has already travelled 142 miles and has a maximum of 35 miles per hour.

The youthful inventor does not bend all his energies towards the construction of motor cars. He has also constructed a miniature aeroplane; monoplane,perhaps we should say, for it is of this type and it really flies. It is about three feet in length and has a 16 inch propeller.

"Bob" Detlor hopes to perfect an aeroplane in which he shall be able to navigate the air and in view of the achievements of this young Edison to date, it would certainly not be surprising if his incentive brain turned out something new in this direction before he reaches the age of America's wonder-workers.

Canadian Soldiers Are Irresistible

Hundreds of Wives Carried Off By Them

Canada's soldiers, according to a writer in the "Toronto Evening Telegram," are making a double attack—on English hearts as well as on German trenches.

"London girls," says the writer, "are being carried off as wives by the hundred by these stalwart sons of the west, who have come from the New World to redress the wrongs of the Old.

"At one hotel which is just removed from the centre of gaiety in the city, and which has been popular with the men of Canada who have come to London on leave, fourteen of the waitresses have given up their places during the past six months, and in each case the reason was the same. Each one of these girls married a Canadian.

"In the Lyons restaurants, which dot the whole City of London, havoc has been caused by the Canadian onrush.

"London cannot understand the causes which lead to this remarkable state of affairs—that is, the majority of Londoners cannot; but there is one who has told the writer all about it, and she at least believes she knows.

"This is Mrs. L. Goddard who lived with her four daughters in a cosy flat near Charing Cross. Three of her daughters have married Canadians, and the fourth is engaged to be married to another.

"'I am sure they will be happy,' said Mrs. Goddard, 'and if I were a younger woman there should be five in the family and not four. You see, the Canadians are not ashamed to love a girl and to tell her so, and they are all gentlemen.

"'I love them all myself, so I know why my daughters love them, and they all have been married with my consent.'

"There is humour, too, in some of the rapid marriages that have been arranged. Take, for instance, the case of a Canadian sergeant who met in London one of two sisters who were alone in the world and lived together.

"The girl loved him, and he spent all his hours out of camp trying to induce her to be married. But she would not leave her little sister alone in the world even to have her Prince Charming. Then the sergeant cut the Cordian knot with characteristic directness.

"Always when he called at the house of his sweetheart he would have with him a companion in arms. It never would be the same man twice. Finally he sponsored into her home the man the other sister wanted. Then there was a double wedding.

"The whole thing has caused rather an economic disturbance here. The Canadians are well paid, and there is hardly a man of them who has not a promising future.

"They do not permit their wives to work after marriage, and they provide a home for them either here or in the vicinity of the training camp, where houses are at a premium now. These wives give place to other girls in the postions they have vacated, and prosperity smiles."

Arrest of the Ex-M. P. Spy

Lincoln Charged in New York With Forgery—Extradition To Be Applied For.

Ignatius Timothy Tribitsch-Lincoln, formerly Liberal member of Parliament for Darlington, and self-confessed German spy, was arrested at Brooklyn on charges of committing forgery in England.

The amount of money involved is £1,100. Lincoln will be detained until the extradition papers arrive from England.

Lincoln has been arraigned on charges of forging a note for £750, a bill of exchange for £200 and a cheque for £150 when employed by Mr. Benjamin Seebohm Rowntree.

The Daily Express understands that Lincoln was arrested on a warrant taken out by Mr. Seebohm Rowntree, of York and another gentleman. The prosecution is a private one, and it is officially stated that it has no relation to "anything political."

Extradition proceedings will be taken against Lincoln as soon as the necessary papers arrive in New York and if his extradition is granted he will be sent to London for trial.

It is expected that two experienced Scotland-yard detectives will be deputed to bring him back and that they will start for America in a few days' time. Their names have not yet been disclosed.

For some time Lincoln who is a Hungarian, acted as private secretary to Mr. Seebohm Rowntree, for whom he carried on investigations into the social conditions of various European countries.

In January 1910 he was elected Liberal M.P. for Darlington, by a majority of 29 over Mr. Pike Pease. There was another election in December of that year, but by that time Lincoln had got himself into bad odour with the political organization, and it was decided that he was not a desirable candidate.

When war broke out last August he came to England from Roumania; and was appointed a censor of Hungarian and Roumanian correspondence.

Story of Spying

He held this position for four or five weeks, and then decided, as he himself has written, "to find out important naval and military secrets and to betray them to the Central Powers, and, having achieved that, to quit England for ever, if still alive."

One of his daring and impudent but futile schemes was, he wrote in an American paper, "to lure part of the British fleet into a certain quarter of the North Sea on a certain day and to have the German fleet within easy steaming distance. In order to procure this I proposed just the reverse to Captain Kenny (of the British Intelligence Service) and laid before him a carefully prepared scheme, the ostensible purpose of which was to destroy part of the German navy.

"On December 16 Captain Kenny told me that my plan could not be accepted, as it would necessitate disclosing to me the whereabouts of the British fleet or part of it, which could not be disclosed to any one, no matter what advantages might result from it."

Lincoln was in his own words, "balked." On January 28 he went to the Admiralty.

"Captain Hall, the Director of Intelligence, put an innocent looking question to me. This showed me that the game was up. I expected to be arrested at once. However, I kept up the play, and finally, after a clever tactical conversation, left the room unmolested.

"Next morning I left London for New York."

Heavy Fire Loss At Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 23.—Fire, which for a time threatened to spread to the Strand Hotel and Haddon Hall, today destroyed the Riddle block on the Boardwalk, between Pennsylvania and North Carolina Avenues, with an estimated loss of about $300,000. The promptness of the managers of the two hotels in getting out of their own fire apparatus confined the flames to a single block. Thousands of summer visitors watched the progress of the fire.

Believed to have started in Rothschild's jewellry stop, the fire spread with great rapidity and soon the entire block, a frame structure was in flames. While the Atlantic City Fire Department fought the fire from the beach side eight streams were directed from Haddon Hall and as many more from the Strand Hotel.

On each hotel men were stationed to extinguish the sparks as they fell. The fire caused considerable excitement among the persons staying at these and nearby hotels, but there was no panic.

Mayor William Riddle principal owner of the building, estimated the loss at nearly $300,000, on the building, and $125,000 on the stock of the various tenants. Of this only $12,000 on the building was covered by insurance. Only part of the outer walls of the block remained.

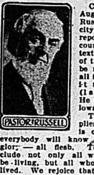
The Glories of the Divine Character Unknown to the World—Faint Glimpses Given to the Israelites—A Clearer Vision Given to the Church of Christ—Still Increasing Light—Gross Darkness Covers the World—"The God of This World Hath Blinded the Minds" of Unbelievers—The Knowledge of God's Glory Shall Cover the Earth During the Messianic Kingdom.



PASTOR RUSSELL

Columbus, O., Aug. 22.—Pastor Russell is in our city to-day. We report his discourse on the text, "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." (Isaiah 40: 5.) He spoke as follows:

This text implies that a time is coming when everybody will know about God's glory—all flesh. This will include not only all who will then be living, but all who have ever lived. We rejoice that God has so grand a Program. We are given an intimation of this as we look into the past and observe that the glory of the Lord has not yet been revealed to the world. God gave some little intimations of His glory, His character, His design, to Abraham, telling him that by and by He purposed to bless the world through Abraham's Seed. But this was only a promise, not a revelation of God's glory; for only Abraham believed. Nevertheless he got a glimpse of that glory as he believed God's promises; so also did Isaac and Jacob. They saw faintly a great purpose of good on God's part, and a time coming when the curse of sin would somehow be rolled away and the true knowledge of God would reach all the human family. But still the glory of the Lord was not revealed.

This hope, though vague, continued with the Israelites, descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. After their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, at Mount Sinai God made a covenant with them that, if they would keep His Law they might demonstrate their qualification to be the Seed of Abraham to bless the world. But they were unable to keep the Law. None of the fallen race of Adam are able. (Romans 3:20.) The hope of becoming the Spiritual Seed of Abraham faded from the minds of the Israelites. But to strengthen them the Lord promised He will make a still greater covenant than the Law Covenant.—Jer. 31: 31-34.

Israel could not keep God's perfect Law. They failed because they were sinners, members of Adam's race, born in sin, misshapen in iniquity, in sin did their mothers conceive them, as the Bible explains. Finally God sent His Son, "born under the Law," put under the Law for the very purpose of demonstrating that what other Israelites could not do He could do. He kept the Law, thus manifesting that "He was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners." Sinners were unable to keep God's Law, but Jesus kept it, and to Him was given the great privilege of being the promised Seed of Abraham.

Qualified to Be Blesser of the World.

His keeping the Law, however, did not make our Lord Jesus Abraham's Seed spiritual, but merely demonstrated His qualifications. Even though He was perfect, as a man He could not have done the work which God had purposed; for He could not have given life to the race under sentence of death. In order to give life to the dying world He must first lay down His own life as an equivalent price for the life of Adam, in whom the whole race fell; and He must also be a perfect Jew, to redeem those who were under the Law. He must take the step of sacrificing His human life-rights, that He might do the Father's will. This He did.

But even then Jesus was not the Seed of Abraham that should bless the world, except as we might regard Him, properly, as having been begotten to be this Seed. At the time of His baptism, He was begotten of the Holy Spirit to a New Nature. It was here that He consecrated His human life-rights unto death. During the three and one-half years of His ministry He carried out His Covenant of Sacrifice. This work was not fully accomplished until at Calvary, when He cried, "It is finished," and died. When on the third day God raised Him from the dead, He was fully qualified to be the Blesser of the world as Abraham's Spiritual Seed—no longer a man, but a spirit Being, privileged, with the price at His command, the value of His own human life-rights, to make application of it, in the Father's due time, as a Redemption-price for Adam and his race.

Since His resurrection, our Lord Jesus is the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. Speaking of Jesus' death and resurrection, the Apostle Paul says, "Wherefore [because He was obedient unto death] God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name." (Philippians 2:8-11.) This name is Christ, the Anointed of God. Christ Jesus is anointed to be Head over the Church which is His Body, anointed to be the great High Priest after the Order of Melchisedec, anointed to be King of kings and Lord of lords—when He shall come into His Kingdom.

"To the Jew First."

The Bible tells us that God, who made this glorious arrangement for our Lord Jesus, provided also that a certain class should be gathered out of the world to be members of His Body, otherwise called "the Royal Priesthood," "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," and His Joint-heirs. The work of calling out this class has been going on for nearly nineteen hundred years. It was necessary that our Lord should begin this work of selecting the Church with the Jews.—Acts 3:25, 26; 13:46; Romans 1:16; 11:7-21.

In a very few years the Lord apparently found 25,000 Jews who were thoroughly consecrated to Him—"Israelites indeed, in whom was no guile." These were ready to receive Him. To such He said, "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; but to them that are without, all these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings." As it was in the Master's day, that none of the unprepared ones, either Jews or Gentiles, could walk in Jesus' footsteps, and as the things revealed to the worthy ones were revealed to their eyes of understanding, so to us to-day the Master's words equally apply. The Lord's consecrated ones shall see, shall understand. It is not God's will that others shall know now. Their time to know will be that mentioned in our text. By and by the Message shall go forth to all.

We recall the various steps in the selection of the Church. First God selected the worthy ones from the Jews in Palestine, then from those scattered abroad. The Apostle says that everywhere the Jews were sought first, and only after they had had their opportunity was the Gospel Call sent to the Gentiles. God wished a very cosmopolitan class to reign with Christ for the blessing of all mankind. Jesus is the Head of all these. All must be true-hearted, all must come through the same low gate of Consecration, all must walk the same Narrow Way—walk in the footsteps of their Forerunner. Whether Jews or Gentiles at the start, all are now New Creatures in Christ. Old hopes, aims, and desires have passed away, and all things have become new.—2 Corinthians 5:17.

Truths Revealed in Due Season.

We have briefly traced the history of the world. During all this time the glory of the Lord had not been revealed. It is true that our Lord Jesus knew about the glory of the Father. The Apostles also saw the glory of the Lord clearly before their minds. Not many, even in the early Church, could se it clearly. (Eph. 1: 18-23.) The Apostles, though fully in God's favor, were not privileged, however, to know certain things that we may now know. Certain truths are dispensational and cannot be understood until the due time has arrived. To illustrate: The Prophet Daniel sought to understand certain things that had been declared to him. But the angel replied, "Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are sealed till the Time of the End."—Daniel 12: 8-10.

The Scriptures indicate that we entered the period of the Time of the End in the year 1799. Since then, the knowledge of the times and seasons has been forthcoming. The times and seasons have gradually been becoming better understood as the due time came for the wise in Heavenly things to understand. To this class it will be given to know everything that the Very Elect are to know, until the time when Christ shall receive the last of these unto Himself. We should rest ourselves in the Divine arrangement of things, and not seek to ferret out in advance that which the Lord has not yet made clear.

God is able to make clear in due time whatever He has decreed shall come to pass. If we are in the right attitude of heart, we shall have enough to keep the eyes of our understanding open so that we can appreciate the things which are freely given us of God. His true children are witnesses to the fact that He has been opening the eyes of our understanding more and more during these last days. Certain great blessings have come to God's people, particularly during the past forty years—riches of grace and knowledge.

Satan a Liar and Murderer.

The world in general has been laboring under a gross misconception of God, which had its start six thousand years ago in Eden. God had said to our first parents respecting the fruit of the forbidden tree, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt die." But Satan, through the serpent, said, "This is not true. Ye shall not surely die." Thus he made God a liar, while he himself became a murderer; for he slew our race. (John 8:44.) But God remained quiet. He did not smite Satan down, although He sentenced Adam and Eve to death and drove them out of Eden.

Practically the whole world has believed Satan's lie. Mankind believe that when they appear to die they really become more alive—that what is called death is really a good thing for them. Practically everybody believes that God spoke falsely when He said, "Dying, thou shalt die." This has greatly dishonored the Heavenly Father. Throughout the entire six thousand years He has been misrepresented. Satan's lie became the foundation for other falsehoods and misrepresentations. It has continued and multiplied; and upon it have been built all sorts of wrong suggestions regarding God and His character.

The lie is to-day at the bottom of nearly all wrong doctrine. God has been misrepresented to be the One who originally planned all the terrible tortures which we are told are being inflicted in places called Hell and Purgatory. That God had to put men somewhere is the theory. A dead person could remain in the tomb, unconscious; but if the supposedly dead person is alive, he must be put somewhere. "Only a handful fear God, and therefore the great mass," they say, "must have gone to a place of torture; being alive and unfit for Heaven, they must be in Hell or Purgatory."

Many say, "God would be glad to destroy man if He could, but He made man too well; and although He said that man would die, He can not kill the soul, which is immortal." Nearly everybody believes this nonsense about our Heavenly Father. They slander Him, making Him out to be the worst Being that ever lived. One cannot picture any more wicked being than we have been told that our Heavenly Father is. We are given all sorts of descriptions, according to the measure of ignorance or wilfulness of the one describing God—the God of all grace and mercy. Why has He not smitten those who have thus blasphemed His Holy Name? But He has not. He has even allowed some of His children to do this in ignorance and blindness.

To some in his day the Apostle Paul expressed the fear that Satan would beguile many of the Church just as he had beguiled Mother Eve—by false doctrine, misrepresenting the Almighty. (2 Corinthians 11:3.) It is very difficult for us to realize that we ever came into such a condition that we believed such lies; yet we must have done so. It is difficult for us to sympathize with others who are in that condition; but we were once just as blind ourselves. Ignorance is the great tool which the Adversary has used to blind the whole world.—Acts 3:17; 1 Corinthians 2:8; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

Satan is a rebel against Jehovah. He wishes that the glory of God should not shine into the hearts of mankind; for it has a sanctifying influence, causes us to will and to do God's good pleasure. Satan would hinder us, would keep us in the dark respecting God's real character.

God's Purposes Will Be Accomplished.

The idea of some evangelists that God is weeping and gnashing His teeth over the condition of our race is because they do not know that there is a God of all Wisdom and Power, who has full control of the situation. He has a broad, deep Plan that will all work out properly. He is not giving it any anxious concern whatever; for He has laid the responsibility upon His Son Jesus, as the Bible sets forth.

In this great work of human uplift the Church will be associated with Messiah will bless all of Adam's race, her Lord. For a thousand years it will progress. As the Bible declares, restoring to them all that was redeemed for them at Calvary. It was a man that was lost. It was an earthly home in Eden that was lost. Jesus came to seek and to recover that which was lost; and by the end of the Millennial Age the world will have been restored and will be ready to be received of the Father.—1 Cor. 15:24-28.

Then, the Bible tells us, God will have another work for Christ to do. It will be for Him, as Jehovah's Agent, to test all mankind in their rich perfection at the end of the Millennial Age; and whoever is not in full heart sympathy with righteousness, whoever does not hate iniquity, will be destroyed from amongst the people. Everything unfavorable to mankind will be rooted out. He will destroy all who love unrighteousness and sin, both root and branch. (Malachi 4:1.) St. Peter, speaking on this subject, says, "These, like natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, shall utterly perish." (2 Peter 2:12.) From this Second Death they will have no resurrection. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

God's Glory Soon to Be Revealed

But the point which I especially wish to make is this: During all these six thousand years past, the glory of the Lord has not been revealed. All flesh have not seen His glory. The only ones who have seen it are God's spirit-begotten children. (Romans 8:9.) All that these have seen of His glory has been since they became God's children. Then the eyes of their understanding began to open; and if they have been faithful, their eyes are opening more and more to behold the glory of God—the grandeur of His character, His loving kindness, and His tender mercies. All the good qualities that Satan says our Father does not possess, He does possess; all the evil qualities that Satan says He has, He does not have.

During the Millennial Age, all flesh shall have opportunity to see God's glory. They will all come to see, to understand. "All the blind eyes shall be opened, and all the deaf ears unstopped." God's keeping quiet for so long, not defending Himself against His traducers, will ultimately redound to His greater honor. (Psalm 50:21.) When the world really come to know that God is Love, they will have such a revulsion of feeling from all the wrong thoughts they have had in the past that it will cause them all the more to appreciate the riches of God's glorious character. As a dark background often sets forth more perfectly the harmonies of a beautiful picture, so the darkness and misrepresentation concerning Jehovah will ultimately redound to His praise. The world will all the more love and honor Him. This will be only the beginning of their adoration, which will increase as His glory and His goodness continue to unfold before their astonished eyes. To know our God is to love Him.

What Type is Your Foot?

Three types of human feet have been noted by a British naturalist. In the most common, designated the L type, the first or great toe projects beyond all others; in the much less frequent S type the second toe extends beyond the first as well as all others, and in the rare E type the first and second toes, longer than any others, are of equal length. The S type, which seems to be a more youthful form than the others, is more common in females than in males.

DISABLED SUBMARINE FIRED ON BY GERMANS

LONDON Aug. 22—The story of the sinking of the British submarine E13, was told in an announcement from the admiralty Friday as follows:

"A report has been received from Lieut. Commander Lryton, commanding the E13, whose grounding on the Danish Island of Saltholm was published yesterday. The lieutenant commander reports that the submarine grounded in the early morning of August 19. All efforts to refloat her failed.

"At 5 o'clock a Danish torpedo boat appeared on the scene, and informed the E13 that she would be allowed 24 hours to get off. At the same time a German torpedo boat arrived and remained close to the submarine until two more Danish torpedo boats came up, when she withdrew.

"At 9 o'colck, while the three Danish torpedo boats were anchored close to the submarine, two German torpedo boats approached from the south. When about half a mile away one of these hoisted a commercial flag-signal, but before the commanding officer of the E-13 had time to read it the German destroyer fired a torpedo at her from a distance of about 300 yards. The torpedo exploded on hitting the bottom close to her.

"At the same moment the German destroyer fired with all her guns and his submarine was on fire fore and aft and was unable to defend herself owing to her being aground gave orders for the crew to abandon her. While the men were in the water they were fired upon by machine guns and with shrapnel.

"One of the Danish torpedo boats immediately lowered her boat and steamed between the submarine and the German destroyer, who therefore had to cease fire and withdraw."

CHAPTER XXIX—CONTINUED

When Phillis had at last soothed her mother—always a lengthy process, for Mrs. Challoner, like other sensitive and weak natures could only be quieted by much talk—she fell to her work in vigorous silence; but by a stroke of ill luck, Mr. Drumond chose to make another pastoral visitation; and, to her chagrin, her mother at once repeated the whole story.

This made matters worse.

"I suppose Mrs. Williams is not bound to let the vicarage know directly she lets her rooms?" observed Phillis, rather impateintly; for she was vexed with her mother for repeating all this.

"No, of course not; but I was at Ivy Cottage myself yesterday, and Mrs. Williams knows I always call on her lodgers, and she never mentioned the fellow's existence to me."

"Fellow, indeed!" observed Pihllis, sotto voce; for she had a vivid remembrance of the stranger's commanding presence and pleasant voice.

"When did he come?" inquired the young vicar, curiously. "He must keep himself pretty close by daylight; for I have passed and repassed Ivy Cottage at least a dozen times a day, and have never caught a glimpse of any one;" to which Phillis replied reluctantly that he had not been there long—that he wanted rest and quiet, and was most likely an invalid.

"And his name is Dancy, you say?"

Phillis bowed. She was far too much taken up in her work to volunteer unnecessary words; and this material fuss and fidget was odious to her.

"Then I will go and call upon him this very afternoon," returned Archie with cheerful alacrity. He had no idea that his curiosity on the subject was disagreeable to the girl; so he and Mrs. Challoner discussed the matter fully, and at some length.

"I don't like the description of your mysterious stranger, Miss Challoner," he said, laughing, as he stood up to take his leave. "When novelists want to paint a villain, they generally bring in a long cloak and beard, and sometimes a disguising pair of blue spectacles. Well, I will catch him by daylight, and see what I can make of him."

"You may disguise a face, but you cannot disguise a voice," returned Phillis, bluntly. "I do not want to see Mr. Dancy to now he is a gentleman and a true man.' And this speech, that piqued Archie, though he did not know why, made him all the more bent on calling on Mrs. Williams lodger.

But Mr. Drummond's curiosity was destined to be baffled. Mrs. Williams turned very red when she heard the vicar's inquiries.

"You never told me you had let your rooms," he said, reproachfully; "and yet you know I always make a practice of calling on your lodgers."

"Deed and it is very kind and thoughtful of you, too," returned the good woman, dropping an old-fashioned courtesy; "and me that prizes my clergyman's visits and think no end of them! But Mr. Dancy he says to me, 'Now, my good Mrs. Williams, I have come here for quiet—for absolute quiet; and I do not want to see or hear of any one. Tell not tales about me, and leave me in peace; and then we shall get on together.' And it was more than I ventured to give you the hint, hearing him speak so positive; for he is a bit masterful, and no mistake."

"Well, never mind; a clergyman never intrudes, and I will thank you to take Mr. Dancy my card," returned Archie, impatiently; but his look of assurance soon faded when Mrs. Williams returned with her lodger's compliments, and he was very much obliged to Mr. Drummond for his civility, but he did not wish to receive visitors.

Phillis was a little contrary all the remainder of the day; she was not exactly cross,—all the Challoners were sweet-tempered—but nothing suited her. Mrs. Challoner had proposed going into the town with her youngest daughter to execute some commissions.

Just before they started Phillis observed rather shortly that she should call at the White House to make inquiries after Mrs. Cheyne, and that she would come back to the Friary to fetch Nan for a country walk. "If I do not appear in half an hour, you must come and search for me," finished Phillie, with a naughty curl of her lip, to which Nan with admirable tact returned no answer, but all the same she fully intended to carry out the injunction; for Nan had imbibed her mother's simple old-fashioned notions, and a lurking dislike of Mrs. Williams' lodger had already entered her mind.

As Phillis did not enjoy her errand, she put on the best face she could, and, hurried down the Braidwood Road as though her feet wer winged like a female Mercury; and Mr. Dancy, who happened to be looking over the wire blind in the little parlor, much admired the girl's free swift gait as she sped down the avenue. Evans, the young footman, admitted her, and conducted her at once to the drawing room, and great was Phillis' surprise and discomposure when she saw Mrs. Cheyne sitting alone reading by one of the windows, with her greyhounds grouped around her.

She stared slightly at the announcement of Phillis' name, and, as she came forward to greet her, a dark flush crossed her face for a moment; then her feature s settled into their usual impassive calm, only there was marked coldness in her voice.

"Good-evening, Miss Challoner, you have chosen a fine evening for your visit. Let me beg of you never again to venture to the White House in such a storm."

Phillis stammered out something about hoping that she was better, but she interrupted her almost abruptliy.

"Much better, thank you. I am afraid you found me decidedly strange yesterday. I had what people call a nervous attack; electricity in the air, a brooding storm, brings it on. It is a pity one should be so childish as to dread thunder; but we are oddly constituted, some of us.' She shrugged her shoulders, as though to dismiss the subject, and stroked the head of the greyhound that lay at her feet.

Poor Phillis found her position decidedly embarrassing. To be sure, Miss Mewlstone had warned her of the reception that she might expect; but all the same she found it very unpleasant. She must not abridge her visit so much as to excite suspicion; and yet it seemed impossible to carry on a comfortable conversation with Mrs. Cheyne in this freezing mood, and, as Phillis could think of nothing to say, she asked after Miss Mewlstone.

"Oh, she is very well," Mrs. Cheyne answered, indifferently. "Nothing ever ails Barby; she is one of those easy-going people who take life as they find it, without fuss and grumbling."

"I think she is very nice and sympathetic," returned Phillis.

"Oh, yes, Miss Mewlstone has a feeling heart," returned Mrs. Cheyne; but she said it in a sarcastic voice. "We have all our special endowments. Miss Mewlstone is made by nature to be a moral feather bed to break other people's awkward tumbles. She hinders broken bones, and interposes a soft surface of sympathy between unlucky folks. There is not much in common between us, but all the same old Barby is a sort of necessity to me. We are a droll household at the White House, Miss Challoner, are we not,—Barby and the greyhounds and I? oh, quite a happy family!" And she gave a short laugh, very much the reverse of merriment.

Phillis began to feel that it was time to go.

"Well, how does the dressmaking progress?" asked her hostess, sudenly. "Miss Middleton tells me the Challoner fit is quite the rage in Hadleigh."

"We have more orders than we can execute," returned Phillis, curtly.

"Humph! that sounds promising. I hope your mother is careful of you, and forbids any expenditure of midnight oil, or you will be reduced to a tread-paper. As I have told you you are not the same girl that you were when you came to the relief of my injured ankle."

"I feel tolerably substantial, thank you," returned Phillis, ungraciously, for, in common with others girls, she hated to be pitied for her looks, and she had a notion that Mrs. Cheyne only said this to plague her. "Nan is our head and task mistress. We lead regular lives, have stated hours for our work, take plenty of exercise, and on the whole, are doing as well as possible.

"There speaks the Challoner spirit."

"Oh, yes that never fails us. But Nana will be waiting for me, and I only called to inquire after you."

O'Connell's Big Head.

Thackeray was six feet two inches in height, and Sir H. W. Lucy says the great novelist wore a seven and five-eighths inch hat, beating Dickens and John Bright by a full half inch. Mr. Gladstone's hat was of seven and three-eighths inch measurement—the same as Macaulay's—while Beaconsfield needed a full seven inch. The hat of Daniel O'Counell, however, would have beaten them all, measuring eight and one-half inches by ten inches.

FAULTS IN OUR SENSES.

Defects That Enable Us to Enjoy Music and Moving Pictures.

It is a fairly well known fact that we cannot hear distinct sounds that come to us at the rate of twenty or more a second (it varies for different people, but only slightly). The result is that we get a continuous sound or musical tone. The same deficiency is evident in our sense of sight, for we cannot see distinctly objects presented to our vision at the rate of more than about eight a second. For this reason only is it possible to have moving pictures. For this reason also a light waved quickly appears as a streak.

The explanation of the deficiency in both cases lies in the fact that it takes time for a sense perception to go from the nerve ending in the particular organ of sense (ear or eye) to the brain; for we perceive only in the brain. It is caused by irritation of the nerve ending, the irritation causing a wave motion winding up at the brain. This speed has been measured and is not very fast. It is about an eleventh of a second after a tall man stubs his toe before he knows it, and another eleventh passes before he can send word to the foot to be held up. If a man had an arm eighty miles long and some one cut off a finger it would be an hour and three-quarters before the wave would cause pain in his brain.

Now, as a man's life consists of absolutely nothing else in the world but these sensory and motor nerve activities, it would seem that the smaller a man is the more perceptions he could have in a given time and that at the same age in years he would really be much more mature than a tall man. Albe has calculated that the entire number of such perceptions in a normal human life of seventy years is about ten to the eleventh power, or ten thousand million.

Of course, if it was not for this so called deficiency two of our most enjoyable entertainments would be forever annihilated—that of music of whatever kind and that of moving pictures.—Chicago Herald.

AN EMPTY STOMACH.

Its Effect Upon the System and Why It Craves Food.

During our waking hours the stomach is rarely, if ever, completely empty; and apparently there is a very good physiological reason why it should not be. Thus the universal custom of taking meals about five hours apart, so that the contents of the stomach are replenished before the organ is completely emptied, is dependent upon a physical need.

Since most foods are not assimilated by the system directly from the stomach, and as food remains in the stomach several hours after being swallowed, the well known fact that eating relieves fatigue almost immediately has long been puzzling. But recent studies of the still mysterious action of the gastric juice offer a rational explanation. When the stomach is empty this digestive fluid draws directly upon the blood, thus depleting the amount of nourishment necessary to the muscles and producing fatigue. But the depleting action ceases immediately when food enters the stomach; hence the feeling of refreshment that follows a meal.

The amount of fluids and salt in the food also influences the action of gastric juice. When either of these is deficient in quantity the amount of gastric juice is reduced. As a result the food is not properly digested, is hurried through the stomach and is likely to produce intestinal disturbances. Hard work with profuse sweating reduces the fluids and salt in the body. This explains the craving of fluids and salty foods, which is experienced by persons taking prolonged muscular exercise and why it is that when these substances are lacking intestinal troubles develop.—Los Angeles Times.

A Prediction by Ouida.

Ouida, far from regarding heavy feeding as a concomitant of literary success, once declared that to eat anything more than was strictly necessary was vulgar and barbaric, and, further, that to take food in public or anywhere except in entire domestic privacy was "an indelicacy which in the coming golden age of refinement we shall not dream of. We shall then," she said, "no more think of indulging bodily needs in the presence of others than of cleaning our teeth or washing our hair in the public view." And then will be the end of the "restaurant" habit.—Pearson's Weekly.

Hard Labor.

A definition of hard labor appears in the decision of the court in People versus Hanrahan, 75 Mich., 621, as follows:

"Hard labor in itself is not infamous or degrading. On the contrary, it is ennobling and is the foundation upon which reposes all true progress in mental and moral development.

"The infamy and degradation consist in its being involuntary."—New York Sun.

Life's Limits.

All indications point to the fact that less than ten miles below our feet a red heat is maintained permanently and within twenty a white heat. Ten miles above us we have the pitiless cold, far below zero, of interplanetary space. To what a narrow zone of delicately balanced temperature is life confined!

Breaking It Gently.

"My millinery bill is $50."

"Goodness! What will your husband say?"

"Oh, I'll break it to him $5 at a time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE PORT OF PROFIT

a Mississippi river steamboat that had a four-foot boiler and a "seven-foot" whistle. Every time the boat blew its whistle it stopped.

His steamboat was great on "attention getting" but poor on progress.

The advertising steamboat has lost interest in the mere noise of whistles. Its owners have ceased to measure results by sound. They are insisting that quick transit to the Port of Profit is to be their test of efficiency.

And so advertisers are turning to newspapers for their voyage to the desired harbor.

ITALIAN TROOPS FOR UNKNOWN DESTINATION

ROME, Aug. 23.—Several transports laden with troops and escorted by warships have departed from Naples Syracuse, Taranto, and Brindisi, for unknown destination. They sailed under sealed orders. It is generally believed that they are to be employed for operations aganst Turkey.

News of Italy's declaration of war against Turkey caused great enthusiasm when it became known in Rome. This war for some time has been unanimously demanded by Italian public opinion. All the newspapers of the day express approval of the energetic action of the Government. Great satisfaction is also expressed in Parliamentary circles at the departure of the Turkish Ambassador for Switzerland.

The official note explaining the reasons for Italy's belligerent action gives these three motives:

(1) Turkey's infraction of the Treaty of Lausanne by the despatch of Turkish officers to Tripoli.

(2) Turkey's declaration of a holy war against Italy.

(3) The refusal on the part of Turkey to permit aliens to leave the country.

Several unofficial reports have stated that Italy planned to send troops to the Dardanelles. No doubt they will now carry out this intention.

A powerful Italian fleet and a force of 150,000 men had been held in readiness for such a step.

In some circles it is believed that the first act of hostilities will be the annexation of the Aegean Islands.

The big chap weighed five pounds and fourteen ounces nine hours after it was caught. It measured 22¼ inches long and 17 3-4 inches girth.

The body of Frederick Levett, Galt, was taken out of the swimming pool in Jackson park. Deceased was in his 73rd year, and for some time had been melancholy.

Letters from Belleville Boys At The Front

GUNNER CARL KISER

Gunner Carl Kiser writes as follows to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kiser 19 Franklin St. Belleville:—

Belgium Aug. 6, 1915

"Everything is pretty quiet today, although it is raining like the dickens outside and we have nothing to do but read or write letters home. I must tell you about how I got stung yesterday. I was eating my dinner of mutton chops and mashed potatoes when I took up apiece of bread and popped it in my mouth. In about 1-10 of a second I jumped at least fifteen feet in the air, I thought I had a thistle in my mouth. I turned it over and got it on my tongue and spit it out. I had been trying to eat a wasp, that had been under the bread. Today I have a mouth on me like a coon, thick lips and tongue like a cows.

We certainly do have some funny experiences. Another funny one happened the other evening. Some infantry were going up the road in front of a howitzer battery, when they opened fire. Every man of the infantry fell flat to escape the splinters, as they thought the Germans were shelling them. Of course it was a new bunch of Kitchener's army that had just arrived over here.

We had a concert the other night and it was certainly a success. We had a fellow from the fifth battery over to play the piano that we stole at a place called Cuinchy, and Bill Bailey, a fellow in our sub-section, recited a poem on "The First Contingent Boys" that he wrote himself, which was a dandy; a lot of the fellows sang and Harry Robinson gave us the buck and wing dance and we had a jolly time all through. Afterwards, we three gunners of D. Sub. had a feast of cake, pickles, sardines, and chocolate.

I haven't heard any word lately from E. Blaylock, but the last report said he was better and was at the base.

Well, according to a prophet who gave a speel in the paper the war will be over Oct. 7, so we should worry.

Well, I must close as I have no more paper, hoping you are well as this leaves me at this writing.

Your loving son,

CARL.

The affirmative was debated by Mrs. Lagrow and Mrs. McGee of the Stirling Institute; and the negative by Miss B. Guffin, and Mrs. Leonard Prest. Splendid papers were presented by both sides. ITALIANS WIN TRENCHES AT BAYONET POINT

Making Satisfactory Progress on all Sides in Struggle Against the Austrians

MILAN, Aug. 23.—One of the objects of the Austrians evidently is to create some diversion from the main operations in Carso and Mezzo. Several incursions with considerable forces have been tried from various points in Trentino and the Carinthian Alps. The last of these attempts was in the Arsiero valley. It failed as did previous ones.

The Italian troops already have made considerable progress west of Arsiero. Northwest of the Arsiero valley, however, the Italian advance was barred by formidable Austrians defences, especially the redoubt on Cime Maggio, which finally was captured, and against which furious counter-attacks have been made by the Austrians without success.

Heavy Austrian artillery tried in vain to shell the Italians out of their positions, which now form a valuable point of vantage for the advance toward Roverto.

Further satisfactory progress has been made on the Carso plateau against formidable Austrian trenches, where the enemy made use of machine guns on armored motor cars. One car, with its gun, was captured, and nearly 100 prisoners taken in a very hot engagement, in which the Italian infantry again proved its superiority over the Austrian troops.

LEAVE PELAGOSA.

VIENNA, Aug. 23.—The Admiralty announced today that reconnaissances on Saturday established the fact that the Italians had evacuated the Island of Pelagosa, in the Adriatic Sea, having destroyed all buildings and fortifications.

The Italians took the island by a surprise attack, and several attempts of the Austrians to recapture it were defeated. It was said to be of value as an observation point principally.

MOVEMENT OF ITALIAN AND GERMAN TROOPS

ROME Aug. 23—A fleet of transports filled with Italian infantry and artillery sailed from Italy today for an unannounced destination. They picked up anchor simultaneously at Naples Syracuse, Taranto and Brindisi, and steamed away under escort of numerous warships. But while the destination of this expeditionary force is not made public by the War Office there is little doubt but that the troops are headed for the Dardanelles, there to reinforce and co-operate with the allied British-French armies and warships which for more than six months have been seeking to force their way to Constantinople. In the absence of definite information on this point, however, it is pointed out by some that a part, if not all, of the expeditionary force may be destined for a campaign against Smyrna and other points on the coast of Asia Minor.

There is a possibility too, that the Italian force which departed today may be on its way to Enos on the Aegean coast of Turkey. Early in the Anglo-French campaign at the Dardanelles Enos was attacked and shelled by British and French warships on several occasions. It was reported then that the Turkish defences had been completely reduced by the naval gun fire, and it was generally supposed that an attack would be launched there by land forces in support of the main operations at the Dardanelles.

A despatch from Geneva says that German troops are being concentrated at various points for entrainment to Bavaria. This would indicate, says the despatch, that the troops are destined for use on the Italian front.

The same message quotes the Koelnische Volkzeitung as recalling the fact that war between Germany and Italy has not yet been declared, but seeing in the probable Italian attack by Italy on the Dardanelles, where German troops are fighting, a likelihood that such a declaration will soon be forthcoming.

The Treatment of German Prisoners

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—State department officials expressed surprise today at reports from Berlin of unsatisfactory conditions in the German prison camp at Amherst, N.S. Latest reports to the department concerning conditions at the camp mentioned the occurrence of some minor trouble, arising from the prisoners' complaint against Canadian cooking, but that had been settled, it was stated by the substitution of two of the prisoners as cooks.

If official complaint were received, it was stated, the department would instruct the consul at Moncton to investigate the report. The United States as custodian of German interests in Canada is responsible for the adjustment of differences relating to the prisoners.

FINDS KIDNAPPED BOY

Quebec Woman's Search Ends in Texas

FORT WORTH, Texas, August 24.—A four-year search through the United States and Canada for her eight-year-old son was ended here to-day by Mrs. Julia Delo, of Quebec, Canada, who indentified the boy held by authorities here since the arrest of E. S. Carroll on March 5, as her son. Carrol had been arrested on a charge of assault. He had been travelling around the country with the boy. Both told conflicting stories and were ordered held. Carroll, it is said, probably will be charged with abduction.

The boy recognized his mother immediately, although he was only four years of age when he disappeared from home.

Carroll's attorney filed a habeas corpus petition to regain possession of the child. The case was set for hearing on Tuesday.

Mrs. Delo came here to identify the boy after an investigation through the American consulate at Quebec. She does not know Carroll and knows no reason why the boy was kidnapped. Carroll claims the boy as his own.

MAKES UNSAVORY CHARGE

Toronto Alderman Alleged to Have Bargained for his Vote

TOONTO, August 23.—A charge was made by Alderman Roden in the City Council this afternoon against Alderman Meredith in connection with the appointment of a fire commissioner. It was contained in an affidavit made by George Hodgson, who takes oath that the alderman refused to vote for Colonel Langton as commissioner until he had been assured that he could get the colonel's position as local manager of the Sterling Trust Company, at $2,500 per year.

Alderman Meredith alleged it was all a joke, the proposition having come from Hodgson himself at a ball game. He declared that it was an attempt to force him to vote for the controllers' nominee. The text of the affidavit was not given out, but was tabled.

The appointment of a fire commissioner is still in the air. The nomination of Mr. C. J. Dougherty by the Board of Control was finally defeated by a vote of 12 to 10.

HONEYMOON COUPLE FAST ON THE ROCKS

Mr. J. A. Nichols, caretaker of Gull Light House heard a crash and a call for help recently shortly after midnight. Upon investigation, he found a motor boat fast on the rocks and he hurriedly offered assistance.

It appears that a bride and groom from Hamilton had started on their honeymon journey by a motor boat and not being familiar with the lake, came too close to Gull Light. The bride was made quite comfortable in Mr. Nichols' quarters, while he and the groom removed most of the cargo from the boat before it could be freed. The pleasure seekers left about four o'clock that morning intending to make the Thousand Islands.

BERLIN OUT FOR PEACE

AMSTERDAM, August 24.—From a source which is often well-informed, I am told that a new big peace scheme is now in course of development in Berlin, the nature of which is not disclosed. But I am assured that it will not take the form of feelers in the neutral press and other neutral quarters as hitherto.

If the plans do not miscarry, the scheme will be disclosed to the world in about two weeks.

MAJOR-GENERAL HUGHES HONORED BY THE KING

Canada's, Minister of Militia Invested With the Order of the Knight Commander of the Bath, by King George, at Buckingham Palace

London, Aug. 24.—Major-General Sam. Hughes was to-day Knighted by the King, and is now a K.C.B.

A Knight Commander of the Bath is a degree higher than a Commander of the Bath—a title bestowed upon several Canadians after St. Julien. C. B. does not carry the title "Sir," but as K.C.B. General Hughes becomes "Sir" Samuel. General Otter is also a K. C. B.; so is Major-General Chas. W. Robinson, a native of Toronto, and brother of the late Hon. John Beverley Robinson, who was Lieut.-Governor of Ontario.

Sir Samuel Hughes, Minister of Militia, is a son of the late John Hughes, native of Tyrone, Ireland. He was born in Darlington, Durham County, Ontario, January, 1853, and educated at Public, Model and Normal schools of Toronto, and University of Toronto After teaching school at West Belleville, Lifford and Bowmanville, he acquired the Lindsay Warder, which he edited until 1897. Since his 14th year, he has been identified with military affairs. He entered Parliament in 1892 and became Minister in 1911. Lieut.-Col. Garnet B. Hughes, of the C.E.F., is a son. Dr. James L. Hughes, of Tohonto, is a brother. Lady Hughes was, previous to her marriage, Miss Mary E. Burk, whose father was at one time M.P. for West Durham.

It is interesting to recall Sir Samuel's ancestry. The general's father, John Hughes, was an Irishman of Welsh descent, who came to Canada 70 years ago. He was the son of a soldier, and married the daughter of an Irishman named Laughlin, who was an artilleryman at Waterloo. This artilleryman married a French woman named St. Pierre, whose father (great-grandfather of General Sam) was a French captain who with his three sons fought under Napoleon at Waterloo. The captain and two of his sons were killed in the battle, and the third was mortally wounded. Their only sister, a motherless girl of 19, came to nurse her wounded brother in the British hospital after the battle. When he died of his wounds she was the only surviving member of the family. She was adopted as a governess for his daughters by a British officer, and subsequently married at Glasgow the Irish artilleryman named Laughlin.

SIR SAM HUGHES, K.C.B

King George has conferred the rank of Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath on Canada's Minister of Militia. It is a signal mark of distinction, and one that has not often been awarded for service rendered in an oversea dominion. General Otter, who was given the Companship in 1900 for services rendered in South Africa, was raised to the knighthood in 1913. For another instance we must go back to Sir Isaac Brock who received the K.C.B. for the capture of Detroit in August 1812, and died at Queenston Heights in the following October. Sir Sam Hughes has gained his K.C.B. by reason of the enthusiasm and tireless vigor with which he has conducted the raising and training of the Canadian contingents who have brought immortal glory on the Dominion —Toronto World.

Sir Robert Also in Consultation With Lloyd George, Bonar Law and Others

LONDON, Aug. 25(Special)—Premier Borden yesterday called upon Lord Kitchener with whom he conferred for some length as well as with General Von Donop and General Coldwell. Ontario Separate School Question

Rumored to be on the Point of Settlement

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 24.—It is asserted here on good authority that the Ontario Separate School question is on the eve of settlement as the result of an important conference held last week at which the Ontario Government, the new separate school commission, and the French and the Irish elements were represented.

Details of this conference are being closely guarded, but it is asserted in some quarters that the basis of the agreement arived at, is the practical abandonment by the Ontario Government of "regulation seventeen" which has been the cause of so much controversy, since it was promulgated five years ago.

It is further asserted that an important announcement to this effect will be forthcoming in the course of the next few days.

"There is nothing to that despatch", said Prime Minister W. H. Hearst this afternoon, and he would say no more.

The plan somehow fell through, and when war broke out Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were not here, and Vancouver, Victoria, British Columbia coal mines, the Pacific cable and steamer route to the far east remained in British hands.

RUSSIANS BOMBARD CONSTANTINOPLE

People Panic-Stricken—41 Persons Killed and Wounded—Dardanelles Expected to be Opened Within a Few Weeks

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The bombardment of the outskirts of Constantinople by a Russian aeroplane squadron, resulting in the death or injury of forty-one persons, is announced in a despatch from Athens to the Central News.

According to these advices the attack was made on Monday on the Asiatic suburbs of Constantinople.

A number of bombs were dropped, throwing the people into a panic. Thirty Turks, eight Greeks and three Armenians were killed or wounded.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Optimistic reports concerning operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula have been in circulation for the past few days, and prophecies are freely made that a few weeks will see the close of the Allies' most difficult task in the Near East. The Turks, too, expect the Anglo-French forces to be successful, if news reaching Sofia from Constantinople is reliable. In this connection a Reuter's despatch from Sofia says: "The population of Constantinople considers the situation grave, according to information received here. Violent fighting has been in progress on the Gallipoli Peninsula for the past week, and it is declared thousands of wounded are arriving every day at Constantinople. At the same time thousands of fresh troops are being sent to the Dardanelles front. The scarcity of bread and coal is said to have added to the general feeling of depression."

Little credence is placed in the flamboyant despatches sent out from Constantinople, and which as in the past, claim repulses for the Allies.

HOPEFUL REGARDING SERBIA

It is felt here now that so far as the Dardanelles are concerned it is a matter of indifference to the Allies whether the Balkan States had a hand Their assistance is wanted, however, against Austria, and also to shorten Turkish resistance if the Straits are opened. For these reasons negotiations with the Near Eastern capitals are being watched with interest, and the decision of Serbia on the proposals of the Quadruple Entente for satisfying the aspirations of Bulgaria, which will be reached at a Council of Ministers to-morrow, is anxiously awaited.

It is believed in London that Serbia's reply will prove satisfactory and that Bulgaria's co-operation will be assured. This would open the way also for an active policy on the part of Roumania, who wants assurances that Bulgaria will not attack her before she commences to move her troops. It is confidently expected all these questions will be settled satisfactorily to the Allies and that within the same period the future policy of Greece will be definitely announced.

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 25.—An official report on the fighting in the Dardanelles says that in the past five days the British have occupied eight hundred yards of Turkish trenches in the northern zone of the fighting, and that a French transport sank a Turkish transport last Friday.

TURKS RUN AWAY FROM BRITISH STEEL

LONDON, Aug . 25.—E. Ashmead Batrlett, who represents the London papers at the Dardanelles, describes the action of the Australians and New Zealanders which began on August 6 with a view to seizing the Kojacheman Heights, running northeast from the Anzac positions.

The New Zealanders, including Maoris, using bayonets only, drove the Turks before them throughout the night of August 6, through difficult ravines, where the Turkish snipers were numerous. The death toll of the invaders was severe.

"The struggle," says the correspondent, "continued on August 7. Much ground was gained, but the advance was untimately held up by the Turks' rifles and machine guns. The fighting was renewed on the following day at close quarters and was desperate. The Turks finally fled, leaving the New Zealanders in possession of the highest point yet gained on the peninsula.

TURKS DIG TRENCHES AROUND NAZARETH

PARIS, Aug. 24.—It is learned here that the Turks, preparing for an allied invasion of Palestine, are digging trenches around Nazareth and several other places famous in Bible history.

By means of these trenches they also are drawing away the water from the River Jordan, in the vicinity of Tiberias, but whether this is for the purpose of defence is not clear.

Many historic buildings have been raised to make way for artillery fire, among them being the Terrasanta convent, near Tiberias. All the inscriptions engraved on the walls, however old, or in whatever language, have been erased for fear that they may afford useful information to the enemy.

U.S.A. NOT JUSTIFIED IN FIGHTING GERMANY

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Special—"There is not a German-American in this country who would fight if the United States went to war with Germany over the sinking of the Lusitania and Arabic. In a just cause no one would be more loyal or willing to uphold America's honor, but in an unjust cause they would not fight."

Such was the statement of Alfonse F. Koelble, President of the German-American Society of New York and President of the German Alliance, on his arrival to-day from Europe on board the Scandinavian-American liner Helligolav. Mr. Koelble, who is a well-known attorney in this city, went to Copenhagen with Dr. Bernhard Dernburg on the Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord.

Mr. Koelble was asked if he thought that a war between the United States and Germany resulting from the sinking of the Arabic and Lusitania would be a just cause. "It would be absolutely unjust," he replied. "And there is not a German-American who would back up President Wilson in a stand of that kind."

RECRUITING MEETING HELD AT ROSLIN

Inspiring Addresses—Goodly Sum Donated by the Red Cross Society

At Roslin last night a recruiting and patriotic meeting was held, which was largely attended by the residents of that locality. Mr. John Elliott of this city was chairman and filled the position in his usual affable and able manner.

During the meeting addresses were given by the chairman, Col. Ponton, and Mr. F. H. Ketcheson of this city, Mr. Scott Fargey, Rev. Mr. Bultiel, Rev. Mr. McLeod and Rev. Mr. Richards. The addresses were of a high order and were most patriotic in sentiment.

The sum of $125 was realized and this amount will be applied for Red Cross work. During the evening and after each address vocal selections were rendered, which were not only of a patriotic nature but most pleasing.

The gathering was in every respect a success and will no doubt have a tendency to inspire recruiting.

London Opinion On C.P.R. Report

According to reports cabled to Montreal the London, England, newspapers in giving their usual analysis of the annual report of the Canadian Pacific Railway, speak in a tone which is sympathetic and optimistic.

The Financial News says: "The handsomely increased margin shown by the special income account amply justified the directors in maintaining the customary rule of dividend for the present."

The Financier Bullion List says: "Not only were the results obtained from the railway highly creditable in their circumstances, but the lands yielded remarkably good returns considering the depression. That the company should have achieved such favorable results in the face of the difficulties is a matter for congratulation, and proves unmistakably that unsold lands are an asset of great potential value. The record of miscellaneous income on the whole is highly satisfactory."

The Financial Times says: "The statement regarding the dividend strengthens the idea that the directors could not have maintained the dividend unless there were good prospects of maintenance throughout the current year."

Italians May Join British Troops

Rome, Aug. 24 (Special).—No announcement was made to-day respecting the destination of the expeditionary forces which left various Italian ports yesterday. Nothing, however, has been hinted that would shake the popular belief that these forces are on their way to join the British and French troops at the Dardanelles.

A Cabinet Council was held yesterday, but the subject under discussion has been kept secret. It is said, however, that it did not concern the Italo-Turkish war or annexation of the Aegean islands, an action which is considered inevitable on the part of this Government.

It is generally believed here in diplomatic circles that Turkey did not refuse the Italian demand of her own accord, but because she was forced to that course by Germany.

The American Ambassador at Constantinople, besides taking charge of Italian affairs in Turkey, has assumed responsibility for Russian affairs in the Ottoman Empire. Previous to the declaration of war the Italian Ambassador to Turkey had administered the Russian business there.

BEGGARS OF CHINA

They Are an Impudent and Aggressive Set of Rogues.

BRAZEN PRANKS THEY PLAY.

Some of the High Handed Schemes They Use For the Purpose of Extorting Money From Their Victims—One Clever Method of Robbery.

Begging is in the nature of an art in China, and the various sorts of supplicants have been classified until now it is known that there are at least thirty classes of traveling mendicants who regularly go from place to place, plying their profitable vocation. The passenger boats know them only too well and do not attempt to collect passage money, for they sleep on the open deck and, curiously enough, pay for whatever rice they require. This being the case, rather than have any trouble with them and gain their enmity the boatmen allow them free passage.

When the mendicants reach the city they put up at the beggar hotel near the big pagoda and let the beggar headman know of their arrival. Soon the regular allowance is forthcoming from their victims, and the beggars spend a few days in pursuit of pleasure and then move on to another place to repeat the same proceeding.

There is one particularly obtrusive and disagreeable class trained to balance various objects on the nose, which usually selects a victim of means. These fellows may walk into a house and pick up chairs and balance them on their noses as they prance around the room. They then take these and place them just outside of the door, possibly on the street, much to the satisfaction of the large crowd which has followed them, as they have possibly just done the same thing down the street a bit. If the money is immediately forthcoming, the show may soon stop and the things will be returned to their proper places.

If, on the other hand, the residents refuse to comply with their demands, they pick up one article of furniture after another, skillfully balance each upon their noses, and, amid the roar of satisfaction from the street rabble, they carry them outside to the street. This may continue till the whole of the room's contents have been piled upon the street, and then the beggars walk off amid the bursts of applause that follow their action and leave the victim to move his belongings back into the house.

Again, there are others who are beggars pure and simple, who walk in the middle of the street, beating the pavement with a small bamboo stick. They turn neither to the right nor to the left to beg, but keep their eyes fixed ahead of them and take only what is thrown to them.

In quite another class is the wretch who shams ailment or physical defect, and who is a clever actor, willing to go to considerable physical discomfort in his efforts to arouse sympathy. He makes a practice of cutting himself when his demands are refused. He will appear before a family and demand a fee. If this is refused he draws a knife and cuts his forehead, and the blood begins to flow, much to the horror and confusion of those in the house, especially if they are only women.

The sight of blood quickly changes the matter, and the beggar begins to yell in a most distressing way at the same time, attracting a crowd. It is now easy with so many witnesses to open negotiations for a much larger fee, and he is usually paid considerably more than was at first demanded.

Having carried his point, the beggar now tours the entire street, where the news of his actions has preceded him, and he finds no trouble in collecting a handsome little sum from his one cut, for the blood, still fresh on his face, strikes terror to the chicken hearted.

There is also a class of criminals who are sent into exile and sentenced to beg for a certain period of time in a province a long distance from their native places. This does away with the necessity of the government's feeding the criminal and puts him out upon public charity.

Of a very different class are the men who have a pitiful tale of starvation to tell, which, they bewail, compels them to sell their wives or sons. Few indeed would think of making a purchase of this nature, and the story almost invariably results in the bestowal of money on the "unfortunate" man. However, if he finds some one who is willing to make the bargain and take the child he is inwardly delighted, for this means a full bag for him when he finally hauls in his net.

The son goes with the new master and proves himself an unusually satisfactory lad, doing his work with his whole heart in it and thereby gaining his master's approval and entire confidence as he had planned. In due time the dutiful son slips the latch and allows his fond father to enter and secure all the goods possible, and together father and son leave with all the plunder they can possibly carry.—Argonaut.

Capable of What?

Mrs. Newlywed—I want a cook, but she must be capable. Head of Employment Agency—Madam, I have several on my books capable of anything.—Judge.

To a sensible man there is no such thing as chance.—Ludwig Tieck.

Horse Thieves Busy in Lindsay

Horse thieves were busy in Lindsay on Saturday night, two animals having been stolen from the Maunder House hotel shed and stable, one of them being owned by Mr John Maunder, the other belonging to Mr. D. Winn, an Ops farmer. Mr. Winn's horse and rig had been in the shed during part of the afternoon and he was a very surprised man on going into the stall to find it empty. All the hotel sheds were visited by him and enquiries made, but no information could be elicited that would give a clue as to where the horse and rig had disappeared to.

The police were notified and got busy working on the case, but could dig up nothing until Mr. J. Isaacs, who had been automobiling south of the town, arrived and gave out the information that he saw two men in a buggy driving a spotted horse and leading a gray one behind; the latter he recognized as being the one owned by Mr. Maunder.

Acting Chief of Police Woods at once 'phoned Peterboro police to be on the look-out for the thieves, giving a description of the animals taken. About 2 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Maunder's horse returned to his own stable, having got away from his captors. Later on Sunday Mr. Winn's horse and buggy were found by the Peterboro police tied to a tree in a park in Ashburnham.

It was hinted that the men are deserters and wanted to leave town in a hurry, and took this way of getting out.

Finger Nail Spots.

It is now thought that the white spots which frequently appear on finger nails are due to the presence of gas in the substance of the nail. MELVILLE.

Owing to harvest fields being flooded by the frequent heavy rains, the old-time method of cutting grain by scythe has been revived and in some low-lying lands some of the grain will remain unharvested because of the depth of water. The inconvenience caused to the farmer by the recent rains is picturesquely depicted by a humorous writer in the following lines:—

"O, the corn is on the blink
And the wheat is full of rust,
The alfalfa's turning pink,
And the creeks about to bust,
Out on the plains.

O, the oats are out of sight
In the water, and the beans
Are blown higher 'n a kite
By the passing submarines,
And still it rains!

O' it's grand to be a farmer and to
'round in an ark,
To fare forth to feed the chickens in a staunch sea-worthy bark;
O, it's fine to be a farmer
And grow goose-webs on your feet,
And to buckle on your armour
And Swim out to cut the wheat."

WAR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS

Statesmen and other public men in the Old Country are looking ahead and studying the after-effects of the war upon the life of the people. Migration to Canada, Australia and New Zealand is regarded as one of the most important methods of relieving the situation which will then arise. Canada is as much, if not more, interested in this question as Great Britain. We may be quite sure that this is one of the many Imperial matters which Sir Robert Borden has been discussing with the Government in England, and on his return we may look for a statement on the subject.

We have before alluded to several aspects of the question, and today would draw attention to female migration. Before the outbreak of hostilities there were 1,364,000 widows, or rather more than the excess of females over male inhabitants in the Old Country, and the number will be terribly increased before peace is signed. Many thousands of the civilian widows were young women of the working classes, hard-working, thrifty and domesticated, and practically the whole of the war widows will be equally desirable as home helps, especially on farms where the loneliness of the life discourages girls to go to undertake domestic work, and the difficulties of inspection deter people from sending them out. The farmer's wife also prefers to have the assistance of a reliable woman of her own age to that of a girl requiring instruction and control.

The experience of a score of widows, each with one child, has been so satisfactory in New South Wales that such women are now regarded as potential domestic servants and given reduced fares as such, with a corresponding reduction in the fares of the children. The latter act as an anchor to the mother, who consequently does not want to go out at night or to leave her situation at short notice. Her interests in her child also removes much of the loneliness women otherwise experience in the country districts, especially on the fringe of settlement. Will not Canada also, after placing out all her own bereaved women, come to the assistance of those who are left alone, from their husbands having died for Canada and for the Empire at large?

Receiving centres and districts for distribution could now be arranged in advance, and enquiry would show how many widows with one or two children could be received. It would be a great advantage if those from each district at home could be placed out in the same distributing area in Canada, and such a transfer of population would be even more Imperial than an exchange of flags. Many of the place names in the Dominion are the same as those in the Motherland. The English counties of Essex, Kent, Middlesex, Norfolk, Northumberland and Surrey: cities of London, Westminster, York, Bristol, Carlisle, Newcastle, Peterborough; Liverpool and Hull, have their place namesakes in Canada, and boroughs and towns such as Windsor, Falmouth, Brighton, Hastings, Berwick, Aylesford, Richmond and Inverness are likewise commemorated in names in the Dominion. Might not these and other place names be united in population across the Atlantic? Such systematic flow of population from one place to another of the same name would be of mutual advantage.

Such a movement would make for a United Empire, and reduce not only the British femininity of population but also Canada's excess of 440,000 males, who in time would become 440,000 fathers, which at present is impossible. Surely the women of Canada will do something for their sisters at home. The husbands of these women have died in the defence of Canada as much as Great Britain, for the possession of this Dominion was undoubtedly part of the Kaiser's plans. To place a number of these war widows in the farm houses of Canada would be a mutual advantage both to this and the Old Country.

CURRENT COMMENT

Conscription has been introduced in the Straits Settlement. The legislature of that little colony has just passed a bill ordering all men between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five into military training.

The most important news in the despatches from England is that cotton is now absolutely contraband. There may be a complaint from American exporters, but it is necessary that Britain shall not sacrifice her case to that of several Americans.—La Presse.

The sinking of the White Star liner Arabic by a German submarine is fraught with serious consequences. Unless the United States backs down completely there can only be one answer to these repeated attacks on American citizens, and that is—war.—Montreal Journal of Commerce.

Italy in 1912 had total imports of £144,000,000, and total exports of over £95,000,000. Owing to her proximity to Germany and Austria, she has transacted the bulk of her business with those countries, but now that she is at war with them, there should be opportunities for such a country as Canada to increase her business with our latest ally.

The United States War Department has taken stock of the resources of American factories engaged in the manufacture of war munitions and finds that the productive capacity of the country in that respect has increased a thousand per cent. within a year. Uncle Sam has been building up his war manufacturing plants and the Allies have been paying the bills.

For our part, and without prejudicing the decision that the chiefs of the Liberal party may take officially, we do not see, in principle, any unsurmountable objection to Parliament according a prolongation to the terms of the existence in office of the present Cabinet, but . . . . it is is an exaggeration to speak of an extension of Parliament until one or two years after the end of the war.—Le Soleil.

It is claimed with some reason that the death of several citizens of the United States justifies the intervention of that country in the war. Certain newspapers exult in that contention, and yet some of them pretend Canada has no right to intervene. But if the United States has a good reason for intervention on the side of the allies, how, many good reasons has not Canada for action?—Le Temps.

The fall in American exchange on London means that the United States has changed from a debtor nation to a creditor nation. In order to maintain exchange at normal levels it looks as if Great Britain would be forced to float a loan in New York. For a time this might make New York the monetary centre of the world, but it is reasonable to suppose that London would regain her former place at the close of the war—Montreal Journal of Commerce.

Justly or unjustly, Americans have already fallen heir to their share of Teutonic hate, but the loose talk prevalent in the German press exhorting the German merchants not to forget the "present attitude of 'neutral' America after the war is settled and the regular trade routes are opened up" is altogether too shortsighted for a nation with such commercial ambition. The boycott will never materialize, simply because the German government would not allow its merchants, even if they so desired, to hate themselves out of the world's richest market, with a population of more than 100,000,000 potential customers.—Chicago Tribune.

That Germany's amazing military efficiency is due in large degree to the German system of compulsory military service is an undeniable fact. Surely it should be possible for a British subject to recognize this fact, and to favor the temporary imitation of the German system in order to combat a great national peril, without incurring the charge of desiring to fasten "Prussian militarism" permanently upon Britain or Canada in order to check the progress of democracy. And yet the Toronto Globe makes that senseless and malicious charge. To call upon all the nation's sons who are fit to serve, to come forward and serve the nation in time of peril—this, according to the Globe, is to conspire against democracy.—Hamilton Herald.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

England is at pains to justify her ancient reputation as the home of political hypocrisy. This much becomes evident when one reads the resolution that is to be adopted with Asquith's approval at the gatherings in celebration of the anniversary of the declaration of war, and which embodies an invocation to "the ideals of liberty and justice which constitute the common and sacred cause of the Allies."

Real English this! The oppressors of the Irish, the Boers, and the Egyptians posing, as they have ever done, amid pious uplifting of the eyes, as the guardians of freedom and justice!

The fact that their love of freedom and justice did not prevent them in their envy of the pesky rival from entering into a compact with absolutist Russia for a war of starvation and annihilation on Germany in utter contempt of every principle of freedom and justice, is conveniently brushed aside.

The more painfully the fraternising with the Russian knout-swingers is felt in many an English heart, the more the conspirators on Thames-side exert themselves to deceive their critical countrymen with lies and with hypocritical discourses.

At the same time it becomes part of the programme as required by the needs of the day to surround the heads of the Allies, too, with the aureole of freedom and justice.

In their heart of hearts, English politicians are utterly disgusted at the fate which has made them the political bed fellows of Russians, Frenchmen, and Italians. They are, therefore, instinctively driven to take a moral bath of purification in public and choose the war anniversary as the most fitting occasion for so glaring a display of the national vice of time-serving cant.

THE POET'S CORNER

AFTER THE ARABIC.

"Ye must not murder!" thus we sent
Our warning oversea.
"To your mad gods all violent
We shall not bend the knee.
Too long, too long our wrath lay pent,
And now we cry, 'Be still!'"
And the answer came
From a mouth of flame,
"We kill as we choose to kill!"

'Twixt teeth that snapped like clashing steel
We sped the message hot,
"To your crazed gods we shall not kneel—
Spike-crowned and misbegot!
Ye must not make the whole world reel
Like stars gone drunk at play!"
And the answer flew
In the tongue of the U,
"We slay as we choose to slay!"

"Ye must not strike at babes afloat!"
We spread our word abroad.
"Their ship must be a sacred boat
That keeps ye overawed.
Ye shall not cut an infant's throat
Nor beat his mother down!"
And the answer rose
From the sea-hid foes,
"We drown as we wish to drown!"

God of the seas! we cry in vain
To you, O puny thing!
Your sails of souls sink in the main,
Gulped by a kraken king.
We pray you for an end of pain,
Safe from the mad shark's will—

Still the answer sweeps
From the depths of deeps,
"I kill as I choose to kill!"

EMPEROR OF SAHARA SURRENDERS TO U.S

Jacques Lebaudy, Jingling with Medals, Gives Sheriff a Hard Ride

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Jacques Lebaudy, who inherited $15,000,000 from his father, Jules Lebaudy, or "Jacques the First, Emperor of Sahara," as he has called himself ever since that day he tried to establish an empire in the Sahara and was driven out by the French Government, has met defeat again. He surrendered to "the United States Government," represented by Sheriff Steve Pettit of Nassau County.

Lebaudy was sent to a sanitarium to recuperate from extreme nervous exhaustion. He might have been at home to-day had he not taken an unaccountable aversion to seeing Mrs. Edward Smith motor on the Westbury Road through the estate belonging to R. N. Ellis, which she had leased.

Forgetting that he was not among the sands of the desert, Jacques the First ordered her not to use the highway and when she persisted, showed his imperial disfavor by causing the said highway to be strewn with baled hay, empty wagons, tree trunks and many other things which made motoring along that road particularly unpleasant. Mrs. Smith, not recognizing such a thing as lese-majeste, promptly appealed to the authorities, and a deputy sheriff was sent with three assistants to look over the situation.

It was mid-day when the deputies heard in the woods behind them the tramp of horses and the clank of accoutrements. They turned to face the racket nervously. From out the leafy covert of the underbrush appeared a horse bearing a commanding figure whose Palm Beach suit, topped by a green-ribboned Panama hat, was weighted down with medals of all kinds till he looked like a German General. He carried a tin horn in one hand.

Emperor Shouts Surrender.

"I am the Emperor of the Saharas," he shouted. "Surrender."

Humber tried to say "never," but he thought of the armies of the Emperor—so his voice broke out on the word. Apparently Emperor Jacques thought he was signalling a hidden battery, for he swung his tin horn to his lips and blew a shrill blast.

Out of the woods, galloped four horsemen clad in dark green uniforms with facings of pink string. In soldierly formation they saluted their leader. They were district messenger boys with the Emperor's martial uniforms pulled on over their own peaceful garb, but they looked very formidable.

"At them," was the command, and the guard rushed straight at the deputies. Every man for himself was the unanimous sentiment of the deputies and they scaled the twelve-foot stone wall in front of them with remarkable ease and agility. Once across, they paused. They were not bein pursued. Humber ordered the others to watch the Emperor while he sent for aid.

Sheriff Pettit was busy playing polo when his deputy called him to the telephone.

"Say, Sheriff, there's a guy here who says he's Emperor, but he looks like a General and I guess you'd better come over," was the message.

Sheriff Dresses Up.

The Sheriff decided that such a high ranking personage called for suitable garb, and he hastened to don his new Scotch plaid suit which he had bought at the Panama Exposition for just such an occasion. Then, mounted on the fastest steed which could be found, he spurred to the aid of the deputies.

When the Sheriff arrived he found the deputies on one side of a high stone wall and the Emperor and his troops on the other. The imperial forces held the road. The Sheriff halted and saluted.

At the Emperor's request he handed his card to one of the guard. The sight of his foeman's name seemed to have a terrifying effect on his Highness, for he pulled his horse several feet back and stood poised like an eagle getting ready to fly.

"Give me the countersign," he ordered.

"In just a minute," returned the Sheriff. "Come here and I'll whisper it to you."

At that the Emperor decided that his enemy was only waiting for reinforcements and he turned suddenly and galloped off, blowing a hunter's call to his men, who scurried into the bushes.

Right at his heels rode the Sheriff, his horse not gaining an inch on that which bore the Emperor. Through the woods they went and over brush heaps. Ever and anon the peals of the horn sounded defiance. Now they came into a little stretch of open country and the Sheriff gained gradually.

He was almost neck and neck with his quarry when the Emperor turned and rode straight for a brook that flowed at his right. Through the water they splashed, pursuer and pursued. The Sheriff's finery, put on to meet a General, was drenched by the spray from the flying heels of the General's horse.

At length in a corn field the chase came to an end. The Emperor's gallant horse could run no farther. Magnificent in defeat as he had ever been in victory, His Majesty turned to his enemy and said simply:

Surrender to Uncle Sam.

"I surrender to the United States Government. I am Jacques Lebaudy, Emperor of Sahara, and I give up to you."

The Sheriff escorted his imperial prisoner back to the scene of the early combat and collecting the deputies took the whole party to the Nassau County Jail, where Drs. Guy Cleghorn and Joseph H. Bogart examined the prisoner.

Lebaudy has been wandering around this country and England ever since the French Government frowned on his scheme to found an empire in the Sahara Desert in 1897. He it was who took rooms at several New York leading hotels and then spent his time in a taxi, receiving callers and doing all business from that vehicle.

In this latest escapade he had locked his wife and daughter in their room while he attacked Humber and his men. His relatives have caused him to be sent to the Knickerbocker Sanitarium at Amityville, L.I., for observation.

Building of Grand Trunk Pacific Line Reveals Many Fertile Valleys in B.C.

"The 'Back to the Land' movement is taking place steadily—but surely throughout the province of British Columbia and if this movement is directed along right lines we shall soon be supplying our own markets and eventually exporting."

Such is the declaration made by Mr. W. E. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the British Columbia Government. This official, with Mr. W. T. McDonald, Live Stock Commissioner, has just returned from an extended tour through the central portion of the province for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the new country along the Grand Trunk Pacific's Transcontinental Line, now open for through passenger service.

In his report, the Deputy Minister says:—

"There have been many opinions expressed about the lands in Central British Columbia contiguous to the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Our observations led us conclusively to the opinion that this part of the province is a country, the future of which is assured as a stock raising and mixed farming country.

"After leaving Prince Rupert, on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, there is practically no land suitable for agricultural purposes until Terrace is reached, 100 miles from Prince Rupert. Here the Kitsum Kalem and Lakelse Valleys extend on each side of the Skeena River. There is probably an area of 250,000 acres of land in these two valleys suitable for agriculture. Considerable development has been effected lately in the Kitsum Kalem Valley. The clearing here, in comparison with our coast districts, is comparatively light. The soil is very productive and is well suited for general mixed farming purposes. Dairying, poultry raising and small fruit and vegetable growing may be prosecuted successfully. The district is particularly well suited for growing strawberries and other small fruits, the quality of the berries being very high and realizing good prices on the Prince Rupert market."

The Bulkley Valley.

"Our next stop was at Smithers, in the centre of the famous Bulkley Valley. A very large amount of development work has been undertaken during the past year in this magnificent Valley. The quality of a large proportion of the land is all that could be desired, and very good crops are raised thereon. Crops of oats promising to run 100 bushels to the acre were seen, and all prospects were most encouraging. Farmers are realizing that the time has arrived when they should develop their lands, and land-clearing operations are in evidence on all sides.

"It is difficult to estimate the amount of land suitable for agriculture in this wonderful valley, but it runs into many hundreds of thousands of acres.

Nechaco Valley.

"Proceeding along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, Fraser Lake is reached. A considerable number of settlers have gone into this district lately and are proceeding to clear land and develop their holdings. The next stop was at Vanderhoof, in the centre of the famous Nechacho Valley. We were immensely impressed with the enormous extent of good land in the Nechacho Valley, most of which can be cleared at a very low cost indeed. A large number of settlers have gone in there, and on all sides one sees signs of activity. Settlers' log houses are springing up in every direction, and considerable energy is being shown by most of them in clearing their lands and getting them into crops. Fields 100 acres in extent in grain were noticed.

"There are many tracts of good agricultural land adjacent to Prince George, whilst at the same time there is a considerable area of jack pine land, where the soil is light and therefore is not the best land for agricultural purposes.

"The wonderful country visited between Hazelton and Prince George has a great future ahead of it, now that transportation has been effected. It is a big country with a big future, and, as soon as times improve and conditions right themselves, a big forward movement must take place. The country traversed grows magnificent crops of timothy, oats and barley. Wheat may also be grown successfully if care is exercised in getting the seed sown as early as possible so as to avoid damage from frosts. Potatoes and other vegetables and small fruits do very well, but my observations lead me to the conclusion that this part of the province is not adapted for growing tree fruits commercially. Certain of the hardier varieties may be grown all right for home use, but every effort should be made to prevent this country being advertised by any interested parties as suitable for commercial tree fruit growing. It is, par excellence, a stock and mixed farming country."

a Mississippi river steamboat that had a four-foot boiler and a "seven-foot" whistle. Every time the boat blew its whistle it stopped.

His steamboat was great on "attention getting" but poor on progress.

The advertising steamboat has lost interest in the mere noise of whistles. Its owners have ceased to measure results by sound. They are insisting that quick transit to the Port of Profit is to be their test of efficiency.

And so advertisers are turning to newspapers for their voyage to the desired harbor.

GOT THE TRAIN STOPPED.

Two Attempts Were Dismal Failures, but the Third Won.

When the late Robert Bonner purchased Maud S. he sent her to Charter Oak park to be trained. One day a friend of Mr. Bonner left New York to visit him at the park, but found that the train did not stop at that station. The conductor was polite, but said that he could not go against orders.

At New Haven a halt was made and Mr. Bonner's friend tried to bribe the engineer with a ten dollar bill, but in vain. He was then told that Charles P. Clark, the president of the road, was on the train, and he went to him and politely requested that the stop be made.

"Why don't you see the conductor?" asked Mr. Clark.

"I have, but he will not disobey orders."

"Why not then go forward and bribe the engineer?"

"I tried bribery at New Haven, but it would not work."

The absence of evasion was the best policy. Mr. Clark not only gave orders to have the train stopped at Charter Oak, but promised some day to see Maud S. He had witnessed the attempt at bribery, and the frank confession of the offense seemed to please him.

BIG NAVAL GUNS.

Death at Times Comes From Merely Serving Them In Battle.

Modern naval engagements demonstrate that the gunners sometimes die after the battle, even when they have not been wounded or injured in any way. Death is caused by disturbance of the circulation due to the strain placed upon the nervous system by the excitement and the tremendous vibrations of modern guns.

Curiously enough, this collapse is quite as likely to affect the most robust members of the gun crew as the ones with poorer physiques and bears no relation to the individual's courage. It is due to a lack of sufficient reserve power of the heart, which is dependent upon the quality of the heart muscles and there is no known means of estimating this inherent quality exactly.

It is possible, of course, to determine the force and strength of the heart in an individual, but only some test, such as that of actual battle, will determine the quality of the heart muscles.

Thus the veteran gunner who has proved his heart quality in actual battle has become a peculiarly valuable factor in modern naval warfare.—Los Angeles Times.

They Like Fat Girls In Tunis.

A Tunisian girl has no chance of marriage unless she tips the scale at 200 pounds, and to that end she commences to fatten when she is fifteen years old. She takes medicine and eats a great deal of sweet stuff and leads a sedentary life to hasten the process. Up to fifteen she is very handsome, but at twenty what an immense, unwieldy mass of fat she becomes! She waddles, or, rather, undulates, along the street. Her costume is very picturesque, especially if she be of the richer class. She is clothed in fine silks of resplendent hues of a bright red, yellow or green and wears a sort of conical shaped headdress, from which depends a loose white drapery. Turkish trousers and dainty slippers, the heels of which barely reach the middle of the feet, complete the costume.

Spanish Surnames.

In addition to three or four Christian names the Spanish child bears the combined family names of his father and mother. When the surnames are doubled or connected by the y, meaning "and," the first is the more important one and the only one that may be taken alone, for it is in the father's name, while the last is in the name of the mother. In Spain they know no "senior" and "junior." Father and son may bear the same Christian name, but each takes his own mother's name as a distinction, the father being, for instance, Pedro Diaz y Castillo and the son Pedro Diaz y Blanco.

Cause Found at Last.

The teacher was having an interesting half hour with the children, asking them questions, any one having the privilege to answer. It was a great time to show off. The teacher asked about various things, and one question was about locusts. Several hands were raised, and finally one boy was selected to speak. "A locust is a bug that gives people tuberculocusts," was his answer.—Indianapolis News.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23.—Some apprehension, owing to the change of weather, was apparent in the wheat market today and for a time the market was nervous and unsettled and prices generally were strong. Threatening rains and high winds caused shorts to cover, even in the face of lower Liverpool cables.

In cash trading was quiet.

Wheat futures closed 1⅛c to 1⅜c lower, cash wheat 1⅜c down, oats ⅛c up and flax ½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—There was some demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat today and on further decline in price in Winnipeg, exporters sold a few odd loads. Oats were weaker, with prices 1c to 2c per bushel lower. Flour weak, with demand slow. Millfeed is still scarce and firm. Butter stronger and ¼c to ½c up. Cheese firm, with a fair amount of business doing. Eggs fairly active and steady.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, there was a weaker feeling in canning stock and prices ruled 50c per cwt. lower owing to the more liberal supplies offered. Sales of bulls were made at $4.50 to $4.75 and cows at $3.50 to $4 per cwt. Carlots of heifers sold at $5.50 to $6 per cwt. Odd lots of choice steers sold at $8.75 to $9 and good at $8.25 to $8.50 per cwt., but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle ranging from $6.75 to $7.75.

Owing to the steady increase in the receipts of sheep and lambs for the past few weeks and the liberal supplies, the weak feeling continues, prices today scoring a further decline of 25c to 50c per cwt. There was an active demand from both butchers and packers for lambs and a brisk trade was done in Ontario stock at $8 to $8.50 and Quebec at $7.50 to $7.75. Ewe sheep sold at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt.

Hogs stronger and prices scored an advance of 10c to 25c per cwt. Choice selected lots sold at $9.50 to $9.75 and the rougher lots at $9 to $9.40; sows sold at $7 to $7.75 and stags at $4.50 to $4.65 per cwt., weighed off cars.

GARDEN ANTS HARMLESS.

Do Not Injure Plants, and Nests May Be Easily Destroyed.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

An unusual number of complaints have been received this year by the department of agriculture from persons who say that ants are injuring their lawns and gardens. As a matter of fact, these ants do little harm, and the injury that is attributed to them is usually caused by something else. In large numbers, however, the small conical nests which they build on lawns are somewhat unsightly and on this account it may be desirable in some cases to destroy them.

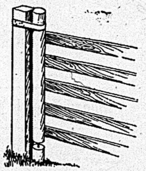
Where there is only a small area to be covered the simplest method is to drench the nests with boiling water. Another simple remedy is to spray the lawn with kerosene emulsion or with a very strong soap wash prepared by dissolving any common laundry soap in water at the rate of one pound or one-half pound to a gallon of water. Such methods are particularly well adapted to small lawns and for the ordinary little lawn ant.

For larger ant colonies of other species, bisulphide of carbon, a chemical which can be purchased at any drug store, will be found effective. This substance can be placed in the nest by means of an oil can or small syringe, the quantity required varying from one-half ounce for a small nest to two or three ounces or more for a large one. An oil can with a long spout is a convenient instrument, as it can be inserted into the nests and the liquid injected without its being brought close to the operator's nose, for the fumes of bisulphide of carbon, although not poisonous, are nauseating. To facilitate the entrance into the nest of the chemical, the ant hole can be enlarged with a sharp stick or iron rod. After the bisulphide of carbon has been injected, the opening should be closed by pressure of the foot in order to retain the bisulphide. This will penetrate slowly thoughout the underground channels of the nest and kill all the inmates. It is important to remember that while bisulphide is perfectly harmless if kept away from all fire, it is very inflammable and may, under certain circumstances, explode when ignited.

Except for the unsightly appearance of their nests, however, the lawn ants do no appreciable harm. They enter houses very rarely and, on the whole, may be said to do no harm of any kind except in so far as they lessen the attractive appearance of the lawn. On the other hand, it is quite possible that by bringing up from the lower depths sand and earth they may distinctly increase fertility by forming a top dressing or soil mulch, and at the same time permit better aeration of the earth.

To Hang a Gate.

Take a locust stake 3 by 3 inches in size and 18 inches long and drive it into the ground until only three inches are left above the surface. Bore an auger hole in the top of the stake and put an iron bolt in the hole; then bore a hole the same size in the bottom of the gate post and place it over the bolt, as shown in the cut. Fasten the gate at the top with a piece of strap iron bent and bolted as shown.—Southern Agriculturist.



Potatoes For Stock Feed.

The heavy production and the low price of potatoes have directed attention to their value for stock feed. Hitherto this subject has not received much attention in this country because under ordinary conditions other feeds are undoubtedly much cheaper and better. Some estimate that even at 15 cents a bushel it is more expensive to feed potatoes to stock than it is to feed silage, while on the other hand it is scarcely probable that the farmer can raise potatoes for much less than 30 cents a bushel. Their actual value for feed depends upon many factors, but it is better to make some use of the potatoes on hand rather than let them rot.

In Germany, where the potato crop is proportionately far greater than in this country, the question has been more thoroughly studied. The tubers may be used for feeding cows, horses, sheep and pigs, but they are best adapted for pigs. To secure the best results with swine the potatoes should first be cooked and than made into a thick mush mixed with the cornmeal or other grain. If skimmilk is added the value of the feed is much increased.

In feeding potatoes to dairy cows from one-half peck to one peck should be fed to start with. They should be given raw and should be run through a root cutter to prevent choking the cows. An excessive feed of potatoes to a dairy cow is liable to cause scours, but as much as one-half bushel a cow a day has been fed without bad results. In addition to the nutrients contained potatoes give succulence to a ration, a factor of importance in feeding dairy cows.

The German experiments with potato flour for bread during the war illustrate the food value of the potato.

"And you did not expect to see me. Well, come again when I am in a better humor for conversation. If you stay longer now I might not be sparing of my sarcasms. By the by, what has become of aur young vicar? Tell him he has not converted me yet, and I quite miss his pastoral visits. Do you know," looking so keenly at Phillis that she blushed with annoyance, "a little bird tells me that our pastor has undertaken the supervision of the Friary. What is it, my dear, that he is trying to convert.

The tone and manner were intolerable to Phillis.

"I don't understand you, Mrs. Cheyne," she returned, with superb youthful haughtiness. "Mr. Drummond is a kind neighbor, and so is Miss Mattie. You may keep these insinuations for him, if you will." Then she would have escaped without another glance at her tormentor, but Mrs. Cheyne detained her:

"There, never mind. I will take back my naughtly speech. It was rude and impertinent of me, I know that. But I like you all the better for your spirit; and, my dear, take care of yourself and your pretty sisters, for he is not worthy of one of you."

"Oh, Mrs. Cheyne for shame"! And Phillis' gray eyes sparkled with lively indignation.

"He is a very ordinary good young man; and you and your sisters are real metal, and worth your weight in gold. There! go away, child; and come and see me again, for it does me good to torment you!" And the singular woman drew the girl into her arms suddenly and kissed her forehead, and then pushed her away. "To-morrow, or the next day, but not to-night," she said, hurriedly. "I should make you cross fifty times if you stay longer to-night." And Phillis was too thankful to be released to linger any longer; but her cheeks were burning as she walked down the avenue.

"Why do people always put these things into girls' heads?" she said to herself. "A young man cannot come into the house, cannot say pleasant words, or do kind neighborly actions, but one must at once attribute motives of this kind. I have not been free from blame in this matter, for I have feared more than once that Nan's sweet face attracted him,—poor Mr. Drummond! I hope not, for he would not have a chance against Dick. I wonder if I ought to say a word?—if it would be premature or unnecessary? But I should hate him to be unhappy,"—here Phillis sighed, and then threw up her head proudly; "I might say just a word, mentioning Dick,—for he does not know of his existence. I wonder if he would take the hint. I could do it very cleverly, I know. I hate to see people burning their fingers for nothing; I always want to go to their rescue. He is tiresome, but he is very nice. And, heigh-ho! what a crooked world we live in!—nothing goes quite straight in it." And Phillis sighed again.

"Miss Challoner!" The voice sounded so near her that Phillis gave a great start. She had nearly reached the gate, and there was Mr. Dancy walking beside her, just as though he had emerged from the ground; and yet Phillis had not heard a sound. "Have I startled you?" he continued, gravely. "You were in such a brown study that I had to call you by your name to rouse you. There is nothing wrong at the White House, I hope?"

"Oh, no! Mrs. Cheyne is better; her nervous attack has quite passed off."

"Magdalene suffering from a nervous attack?" and then Mr. Dancy stopped, and bit his lip. "Excuse me, I knew her before she was married, when she was Magdalene [illegible]enport—before she and poor Herbert Cheyne unfortunately came together. I doubt whether things have happened for the best; there!—I mean," as Phillis looked at him in some perplexity, "that there is little fear of her being an inconsolate widow."

"How can you say such a thing!" returned Pihllis, indignantly. "That is the way with you men, you judge so harshly of women. Mrs Cheyne is singular in her ways. She wears no mourning, and yet a more unhappy creature never existed on this earth. Not inconsolate!—and yet no one dares to speak a word of comfort to her, so great is her misery."

"Excuse me one moment; I have been ill, and am still subject to fits of giddiness. A mere vertigo; nothing more." But he said the words gasping for breath, and looked so deadly white that Phillis felt quite frightened as she stood beside him.

They had been walking a few steps down the Braidwood Road, and Phillis had looked out anxiously for Nan, who had not yet appeared in sight. But now Mr. Dancy had come to an abrupt pause, and was leaning for support against the low wall that shut in the grounds of the White House. Phillis looked at him a little curiously, in spite of her sympathy He still wore his loose cloak, though the evening was warm; but he had loosened it, and taken off his felt hat for air.

In figure he was a tall, powerful-looking man, only thin and almost emaciated, as though from recent illness. His features were handsome but singularly bronzed and weather-beaten, as though from constant exposure to sun and wind; and even the blue spectacles could not hide a pair of keen blue eyes. By daylight Phillis could see that his brown beard and moustache were tinged with gray, and the hair on his temples was almost white; and yet he seemed still in the prime of life. It was a far handesomer face than Archie Drummond's; but the deep lines and gray hair spoke of trouble more than age, and one thing especially impressed Phillis—the face was as refined as the voice.

If Mr. Dancy were aware of her close scrutiny, he took no notice of it. He leaned his arm against the wall and rested his head against it; and the thin brown hand was plainly visible, with a deep-red scar just above the wrist.

As Phillis had regarded it with sudden horror, wondering what had inflicted it, he suddenly aroused himself with an apology.

"There it has passed; it never lasts long. Shall we walk on? I am ashamed of detaining you in this way; but when a man has had a sunstroke——"

"Oh, that is sad" returned Phillis, in a sympathizing voice. "Is that why you keep indoors so much in the daylight? at least"—correcting herself in haste, for she had spoken without thought—— "one never sees you about," which was a foolish speech, and showed she took notice of his movements; but she could not betray Mr. Drummond.

"Some one else only comes out in the evening," he rejoined, rather pointedly. "Who told you I kept indoors in the daylight? Oh, I know!" the frown passing from his face, for he had spoken quickly and in annoyed fashion. "This sounds like a parson's prating; I know the language of old. By the bye, did you set the clergy on my track?" turning the blue spectacles full on the embarassed Phillis.

"I?—no indeed!" and then she went on frankly: "Mr. Drummond was at our house, and he told us that he always called on Mrs. Williams' lodgers."

"True, Miss Challoner; but how did his reverence know Mrs. Williams had a lodger?"

This was awkward, but Phillis steered her way through the difficulty with her usual dexterity.

"I mentioned to my mother that you were kind enough to see me home and she repeated the fact to Mr. Drummond."

"Thank you, Miss Challoner; now I understand. I wonder if your mother would be very shocked if a stranger intruded upon her? but you and I must have some more conversation together, and I do not see how it is to be managed in accordance with what you ladies call 'les convenances'."

"My mother——" began Phillis, demurely; and then she paused, and looked at him in astonishment. 'What Mr. Dancy! you propose to call on my mother, and yet you refused Mr. Drummond's visit?" for the news of Archie's defeat had already reached the Friary through Miss Mattie.

Mr. Dancy seemed rather nonpulsed at this, and then he laughed:

"Ah, you are shrewd, Miss Cahlloner; there is no deceiving you! I have seen Mr. Drummond pass and repass often enough; and—pardon me, if he be a friend—I thought from the cut of his coat that he was a prig, and I have a horror of clerical prigs."

"He is not priggish in the least," was Phillis' annoyed rejoinder.

"No? Well, appearance are sometimes deceptive; perhaps I was too hasty in my dread of being bored. But here comes your sister, I think—at least, I have seen you together; so I am leaving you in good hands." And, before Philis could reply, he had lifted his hat and turned away, just as Nan, whose vigilantt eyes were upon him, was hurying to join her sister.

"Oh, Phillis, was that Mr. Dancy?" she asked in a reproachful voice, as she hurried up to her.

"Yes, Nannie, it was Mr. Dancy." returned Phillis, composedly; "and I wish I could have introduced him to you, for I believe he is coming to call on mother." And, when she had related this astounding piece of intelligence, she looked in Nan's face and laughed, and, in high good humor, proceeded to relate their conversation.

WHAT ONTARIO FOLKS SAY.

Hamilton, Ont.—"This is to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Some time ago I was run down and weak, suffered loss of appetite and was miserable. Four bottles of the 'Prescription' cured me up in fine shape; it did wonders for me and I can recommend it very highly to women who are ailing."—Miss Marie Miller, 127 Hess St., Hamilton, Ont.

Brantford, Ont.—"Some few years ago I got in a very much run-down condition. Was very weak; could not do anything; had no strength at all. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; I only took five bottles and it put me in splendid condition. I felt better than I had for years. Other members of my family have used this medicine and found it equally as beneficial. I can highly recommend it to weak women."—Mrs. A. Gilmour, 71 Brighton Row, Brantford, Ont.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps, sleepless nights—tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source.

Get the "Prescription" to-day—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Keep the body clean inside as well as outside.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

TO THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION VIA THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to the modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

What to Do When Hair Grows Thin

Parisian Sage Makes the Hair Grow

If your hair is getting thin and causing you anxiety, you ought to read about Parisian Sage, the hair grower, that surely does grow hair.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by the Manufacturers to stop your hair from falling out, or refund your money. It will make the hair grow profusely if used regularly.

Hair falls out and stops growing because the hair root does not receive proper nourishment. If the nourishment entirely ceases for any length of times the hair root will die and baldness will follow. It's the dandruff germs that steal from the hair root the nourishment that nature supplies it.

Parisian Sage soaks into the scalp, destroys the dandruff germs and furnishes the nourishment needed to stimulate a renewed growth of hair.

Parisian Sage grows hair, stops hair from falling out, eradicates dandruff and puts an end to splitting hair. It turns dull, lifeless, faded hair into bright, lustrous hair, and is used by women and men who take pride in beautiful and luxuriant hair. It is the most delightful and refreshing hair dressing ever put into a bottle and should be used by every member of the family

Parisian Sage is sold by leading druggists everywhere for only 50c. a large bottle.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices, or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

WRIST SEVERELY CUT

Mr. Wm. Hurd, a young man employed at the City Hotel here, yesterday afternoon met with a painful accident. He was engaged in cleaning a window when the glass broke, resulting in his right wrist being severely cut. The victim was taken to the hospital, where his wound was dressed.

AUTO SHED BROKEN

On Monday night a building adjoining Mr. Addison Thompson's residence, Station Road, in which was stored his automobile, was broken into and some wrenches and other tools were taken. Yesterday the police recovered the stolen articles, they having been purchased by a citizen at a second hand store. The name of the party who sold the same is known and is thought to be a tramp. A description of him has been obtained and every effort will be made to locate him.

Painful Swollen Veins Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler of Federal, Kansas writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact one had broken), for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks and, to quote from her letter. "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since.'

Absorbine, Jr., is an antiseptic liniment—healing, cooling, and soothing. Safe and pleasant to use. $1.00 and $2.00 at your druggist's or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c. in stamps. W. F. Young, P.D.F. 457 Lymans Bldg. ,Montreal, Can.

Death Resulted From Accident

Mr. Wm. Bullen, of Peterboro, Dies in Toronto Hospital

Numerous Peterborough friends and acquaintances will be sorry to learn of the death of Mr. William Bullen, who passed away at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. One week ago deceased when struck by a street car suffered concussion of the brain. He was unconscious to the end. The accident occurred on Queen street, after the late Mr. Bullen had alighted from a west-bound car. He evidently failed to notice the east-bound car which struck him as he attempted to cross the track behind the car he had left.

Deceased, who was thirty-three years old was the second son of William Bullen, and was educated in this city. He held a position in the office staff of the T. F. Matthews packing plant and went to Toronto about fifteen years ago, where he took up the insurance and real estate business in which he was very successful.

Surviving are his widow and two children, Clara and Stuart, his father, who is now at Kingston, one brother, Robert Bullen of Campbellford, and five sisters, Mrs. Geo. Valway, Agincourt, Mrs. H. J. McCanan, Mrs. C. E. Curtis, Miss Pearl Bullen of this city, and Miss Eva Bullen, nurse-in-training at Belleville General Hospital.

Record Entry of Live Stock

Toronto Exhibition Officials May Have to Erect Temporary Quarters for Overflow

Live-stock for the Canadian National Exhibition are the largest in the history of the Big Fair at Toronto, and the prospects are that temporary quarters will be required to house the overflow for the first time since the new sheds and buildings were erected. Increases are shown in nearly every class of sheep, swine and cattle. A notable feature is the exceptionally large number of the new exhibitors whose names appear in the entry lists, an indication of the fact that the farmer is loyally responding to the Patriotism and Production campaign despite the labor scarcity and other handicaps.

The dairy, grain, vegetable and other agricultural exhibits will be on a more elaborate scale than ever before. In addition to the model settler's farm, to be the feature of the Ontario Government exhibit in the Government Building, where growing crops will be shown, an advanced state of growth is to be shown by the Government in the Horticultural Building. The Dairy Exhibit will have an unusually large number of entries from Quebec and promises to be very extensive.

The Egg Exhibit is proving very popular and more entries are being received than can be conveniently handled. Next year new cold-storage arrangements wil be made for this feature. The poultry entries are the largest in the history of the Fair.

Within The Military Circle

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

The bayonet scaffold in connection with three lines of trenches is proving a great attraction to the soldiers in camp. There is a touch of real war about the undertaking of being compelled to rush across an open space and assail three lines of trenches and the bayonet dummies suspended from the fighting scaffold.

There are now 105 men on the roll of the 33rd Battery. Major Sears is still in need of good material for his battery. It must be good though, or there will be no place for it in the 33rd. Men who want the 33rd degree in Barriefield camp, must be worthy of the place, or they can't get it.

Three recruits for the 34th Battery arrived in camp yesterday and 20 more are expected to report to-day.

On Sunday evening before the draft of the 8th C.M.R. left the camp Lt. Col. Munro addressed his men and told them of the privilege they were permitted to have in being called to the battle front. Everybody in the regiment envied them, and hoped the same chance would come their way, and come quick. In the name of the regiment he bade them God-speed, and expressed the hope that he would be permitted to meet them at the front. The regiment gave the departing boys three rousing cheers, and the trumpeters and pipers joined in the send-off.

The proposed trek of the 8th C. M. R. to Brockville and back will occupy about a week.

The men in camp are given a great deal of bayonet fighting. There is a big difference between the old discarded bayonet exercise and the present bayonet fighting. The former was intended for exhibition, while the latter is intended for the more serious business of fighting. Every movement in the fighting exercises is intended to teach a soldier to defend himself, or to attack an enemy.

The men of the 59th Battalion and the 8th C. M. R., are worked hard from morning until night. But, they are fed to stand the great physical strain. An officer of the 59th who watched one of the companies of the battalion drill hard yesterday morning, early, said the men were able to stand it because they always consumed a good breakfast.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

Horse Sausages Made at Buffalo

Animal Bought for $3 Sold for $86.50 as Sausage Meat

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 23.—It has been established to the satisfaction of Health Comissioner Fronczak that meat of horses slaughtered during the last six weeks at a farm near Buffalo was sold in Buffalo and used in the manufacture of sausages.

Efforts will be made to learn whether the animals were healthy when they were killed, and if not prosecutions may follow.

One butcher, brought before the Commissioner, admitted that he bought 600 pounds of the meat.

"There is reason to believe that more than six horses were killed and dressed," said Dr. Fronczak. The business was a profitable one while it lasted. Three dollars was the price for one of the horses and it brought a return of $86.50 as asusage meat.

Might Supply Potash

From the Feldspar Mines in Frontenac—And Fill a Great Want

The manufacturers of the United States are crying out for potash which as a result of the British blockade, cannot be shipped from Germany. Shipments of wood-ash are being sent across the border from Canada from several pieces, among them being Napanee.

The manufacturers are of the opinion, according to articles that have recently appeared in industrial journals, that the feldspar deposits in Canada should be more fully developed. Feldspar from Canada runs about 16 per cent potash and the German deposits are little more, being about 20 per cent. Potash is now selling at thirty cents a pound. Feldspar can be laid down in Kingston from the Frontenac mines at $4.50 a ton and it costs only fifty cents a ton to crush. The problem of extracting the potash from the feldspar has been overcome and there are several places, among them being Napnow where this is being done.

MAYOR OF BROCKVILLE

Invites 8th C.M.R. To Pay That Town a Visit

Mayor Allen Donaldson, Brockville, has extended an official invitation from the municipality of Brockville to the 8th Regiment Canadian Mounted Rifles at Barriefield to visit that city. The 8th returned a few days ago from Belleville where it went on a route march. Word of the excellent character of the regiment has spread throughout the district and this invitation is the first of several which are expected to come. Brockville has always been very partial to soldiers as it will be remembered that municipality paid for a special train to take members of the 21st Battalion there for a visit. Mayor Donaldson is very energetic, and it is likely that Lieut.-Col. J. R. Munro will accept the invitation for visit to the neighboring town.

Strange Rider Carried Revolver

Rode Bare-back Through City and Collided With Bicycle in Montreal West

MONTREAL, Aug. 25—"I am on my way to Toronto from Quebec and am shooting bears on the way" is the only explanation given by Brunet Dominque, who is being held by the Police of Montreal West on a charge of carrying a revolver. How he came to possess the horse he was riding, is also a matter which the police are endeavoring to clear up.

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning Dominque, who is a poorly clad man between the age of 30 and 40 years, was riding a bay horse up Westminster avenue, when he collided with a bicycle. The horse, and its rider fell on the pavement, and in the mix-up a 44 calibre revolver fell out of the man's pocket. There was no saddle on the horse.

The unusually large revolver attracted considerable attention, and as the man could not give a satisfactory explanation as to how he came in possession of it, or of the fine bay horse, the police of Montreal West are holding the stranger, together with the horse and revolver until a thorough investigation is made.

When questioned the man spoke French with a Parisian accent, and all he would say is that he was riding from the City of Quebec and that he is on his way to Toronto. He said he had the revolver to shoot bears on the way.

Napanee Man Is Charged With Arson

Napanee, Aug. 25.—A sensation was caused here yesterday by the arrest of Michael Maker, a Syrian engaged in the fruit and dry goods business here. The accused faces a serious charge in connection with the recent fire in the Douglas property, in which two stores were burned out, one tenanted by E. W. Boyes, and used as a grocery store, and one tenanted by A. Adrick, who conducted an ice cream and candy business. It appears that Maker held a mortgage on the contents of Adrick's store, and evidence will be given to show that Adrick was offered a sum of money if the place was burned down. Inspector Reyburn, of the Provincial Police, has been working on the case, assisted by the local police, and Maker's arrest was the result. Accused was given a hearing before Magistrate Rankin in the Police Court today. D. H. Preston is acting for the Crown.

BREST LITOVSK FORTRESS CAPTURED BY TEUTONS

Mass of Heavy Artillery Brought Into Use—No Further Advance Along Riga Kovno Line—Central Powers Claim Turco-Bulgarian Agreement

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The Russian fortress of Brest-Litovsk has been captured by the Teutonic forces. An announcement to this effect was made today by the German Army Headquarters staff.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The invaders of Russia, with Ossowetz safely in their hands, are now rapidly gaining the whole triangular railroad system, which, with its apex at Bialystock, also serves Grodno and Ossowetz. A mass of heavy artillery, which has been freed by the fall of Ossowetz and Kovno, is now being brought against Brest Litovsk and Grodno, but not without great difficulty.

Hereafter field manceuvring will count more for the German armies than the use of heavy artillery against fortresses, but open field movements may be checked by the reported determination of the Russians to dig themselves in when their line has been reformed back of Brest-Litovsk.

No further advance has been reported along the Riga-Kovno line, which presents a perilous problem to the Russians, but the Germans and Austrians are getting rapidly within range of Brest-Litovsk, notwithstanding the obstacles offered by the swampy nature of that region. No hint has been given, however, that the Russians entertain any fear that their armies will be trapped along this line.

The Near East conditions present an appearance of precarious balance between the warring groups. The Central powers claim a diplomatic victory, in the form of a Turco-Bulgarian agreement, while the Entente Allies apparently are bringing Serbia around to their view, that concessions are necessary to procure Bulgaria's adhesion to a reformed Balkan league.

Serbia'a Reply Thought Favorable

Balkan Crisis Takes a Turn Which Causes Optimism in London

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Balkan crisis, which has been prolonged for weeks, took a favorable turn today from the Allies' viewpoint, according to reports reaching the diplomats here chiefly concerned in the pending issues. Serbia's reply to the note of the Allies was delivered to Baron Sonnino, Italian Foreign Minister, yesterday, and is expected to reach London tomorrow, and there is reason to believe, it is stated in official circles, that it will concede the main points the Allies have asked in behalf of Bulgaria in order to secure Bulgaria's co-operation in the war.

Should the Balkan States be brought together through the efforts of the Allies, diplomats say, the only question outstanding would be Bulgaria's attitude with regard to supporting the Allies.

German Cruiser Reported Sunk

LONDON, Aug. 25.—A Paris despatch to The London Star says confirmation has been received of the report that a Russian submarine on Monday sank the German cruiser Augsburg in the Baltic, north of Dantzig.

The Augsburg was a light cruiser of 25½ knots designed speed and had made 27 knots. She carries twelve 4.1 quick-firers and two machine guns. She is of the same class as the Mainz, sunk by British ships in the Bight of Heligoland early in the war. She was reported sunk on the 7th of August, 1914, in the Baltic, by the Russians, though there was doubt then as to whether the vessel sunk was the Augsburg or the Kolburg, a sister ship.

French Aviators Bombard Prussian Shell Factory

Squadron of Sixty-two Drop 150 Bombs on Town in Rhenish Russia

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 25.—(Afternoon official statement). During part of last night there were artillery exchanges and fighting with hand grenades and other explosives in the Artois district, in the vicinity of Souchez and Neuville.

Around Roye there have been continued marked activity on the part of the enemy's artillery, as well as our own.

In the Argonne district, in the sector of La Fille Mort, yesterday saw fairly severe fighting with bombs and hand grenades.

During the day of August 24th French aviators dropped bombs on the railroad station of Offenbourg, in Baden, seventeen miles from Karlsruhe. At this point there is an important railroad junction in the grand duchy.

On August 25th an aerial squadron, composed of four groups, and including a total of sixty-two aviators, flew over the heights of Dellingen, to a factory where shells and armor plate are made. The location of this point is to the north of Saarlouis, in Rhenish Prussia, thirty miles southeast of Treves. The aviators dropped with precision over 150 bombs, thirty of which were of large calibre.

Lindsay Acclaims Its Worthy Citizen

The Daily Warder, Sir Sam Hughes' Paper, Comments on Events

LINDSAY, Aug. 25—The Daily Warder, Sir Sam Hughes' newspaper, speaking of his new honor to-day says

"Canada's leading soldier, Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, has been signally honored by King George who personally conferred upon him the honor of Knight Commander of the Bath. Loyal subjects of the King throughout the Dominion and throughout the Empire, cannot but feel proud of Sir Sam Hughes, who has during an unprecedented crisis in the Empire's history manfully and diplomatically measured up to all expectations; who has as Minister of Militia for Canada placed this Dominion to the fore in the despatch of battalion after battalion to swell the Allied host at the battle front.

"The residents of his home county, one which bears the name of that most illustrious and sainted Queen—Victoria—feel honored on having their representative in the House of Commons, for over a quarter of a century, elevated by the King.

"Here, where his name has been a household one for years, and where he has been associated with every good movement, his fellow citizens acclaim him and realize that he was worthy of the King's favor.

"The Warder with wheih he was associated for years as editor and proprietor, and which became a prime factor in newspaperdom, gaining prominence because of his stirring, convincing and educative editorials, at this important occasion in his life extends hearty felicitations.

"Sir Sam Hughes was ever a staunch Imperialist, was ever a tower of strength in the service of his King and country, and a loyal subject most worthy of knighthood. Of him it might well be said (as it was said of the late Premier Whitney): 'He was bold enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold.' We heartily congratulate him on the honor which has been conferred upon him."

BRITISH GAINS IN DARDANELLES

British Positions Consolidated Along a Front of Twelve Miles—Allies Have Confidence of Forcing Dardanelles By End of September

LONDON, Aug. 25.—(8.34 p.m.)—Recent operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula have enabled the British troops to extend materially the area in their possession, and to connect their lines along a front of more than 12 miles, according to an official statement issued here tonight.

The statement indicates also that additional troops have been landed on the peninsula, although no details are given on this point, and it is stated simply that "further reinforcemnets have arrived." It is stated that the losses have been very heavy, but that the Turks suffered more severely than the British.

COSTLY EFFORTS YET

The public is warned that in spite of the encouraging report made, the true objective of the operations has not been gained, and that "further serious and costly efforts will be required before a decisive victory is won."

The official statement follows: "It now is possible to give a further account of the important operations which have been in progress since Aug. 6 on the western extremity of the Gallipoli Peninsula These comprise two separate lines of attack: First, from the old Anzac position, which was delivered principally by Australian and New Zealand troops; second, from the new landing at Suvla Bay, in which the fresh army was employed. An attaack also was made in conjunction with these from Cape Helles towards Krithia.

LOSSES WERE HEAVY.

"Very continuous fighting with heavy losses on both sides resulted. Our forces have not yet gained the objectives at which they were aiming in either sphere, although they have made a decided advance toward them and greatly increased the area in our possession.

"The attack from Anzac, after a serious of desperate actions, was carried to the summit of the Sari Bahr and Chanak Bahr ridges, which are the dominating positions in this area, but owing to the fact that the attack from Suvla Bay did not make the progress counted upon the troops from the Anzac zone were not able to maintain their position, and after repeated counter attacks were forced to withdraw to positions close by. These positions have been concentrated effectively.

"The attack from Suvla Bay was not developed quickly enough and as recounted on the 19th was brought to a standstill after an advance of about 2½ miles. The ground gained by both attacks, however, was sufficient to enable their lines to be connected along a front of more than 12 miles.

REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVE.

"Further reinforcements having arrived, a renewed attack was made on the 21st, on the centre of this new and extended line. The Australian and New Zealand troops successfully advanced about three-quarters of a mile and a strong system of knolls and under features was secured.

STRONG RESISTANCE.

"On the rest of the battlefront advanced Turkish trenches were stormed. All the divisions engaged reached points on the slopes and spurs of hills which form the enemy's centre, but after several hours sharp fighting they were unable to gain the summits, and, the intermediate position on this part of the line not being capable of permanent defence, they were withdrawn to the original front.

"The great power of defensive under modern conditions accounts for the difficulties of troops once the advantage of surprise is lost. In the close fighting, with the varied fortunes of repeated attacks and counter attacks attending these battles, the losses inflicted on the enemy undoubedly were much heavier even than our own. The ground gained and held is of great value, but these facts must not lead the public to suppose that the objectives have been gained or that further serious and costly efforts will not be required before a decisive victory is won."

FORCING THE DARDANELLES

An official report on recent operations in the Gallipoli Peninsula, issued in London last night, sets at rest rumors which have been in circulation for several days, crediting the British troops with having either cut off or out-flanked the Turkish forces opposed to them. The report states that while the ground gained is of great value, the true objectives have not been reached.

The report admits heavy British losses, but adds that those of the Turks must have been heavier. Altogether, the British hold a front of 12 miles along the west side of the peninsula and at some points have penetrated a considerable distance into the interior. The Turks are making a very stubborn defence of their positions, but the allies have confidence that with the strong forces at their command and the assistanne of the fleet, the Dardanelles will be forced before the arrival of the unfavorable weather which is due towards the end of September.

CANADIANS HONORED FOR THEIR BRAVERY

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The following Canadians have received the distinguished service order:

Captain Stanley John Anderson of the 5th Battalion for conspicuous gallantry at Festubert on May 20, when he refused to go to the ambulance after having been wounded, until his tour of duty had been completed. Captain Anderson was again wounded in the head on May 24, but remained during the day and night gallantly leading his men in the attack.

Captain Frank Morrison of the 16th Battalion for conspicuous bravery and ability on May 20, when he commanded the leading company in an attack on Orchard La Quinque Rue. Captain Morrison captured the enemy's position, which was of primary importance, under heavy shrapnel, rifle and machine-gun fire.

Capt. John Foster Paton Nash of the Fifth Battalion, for conspicuous gallantry throughout the action at Festubert, on May 22 and 24, when he personally repaired the telephone wires under very heavy fire. Capt. Nash was again brought to notice by excellent work at Fleur Baix and Gravelstafen.

Capt. Stanley Alwin Smith of the Field Ambulance, for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Festubert, on the night of May 20. Capt. Smith, with a party of eight men, went out voluntarily and removed wounded from an orchard whilst under heavy fire. He eventually succeeded in bringing all in safely. Four of the eight men of the rescue party were wounded and two of these have since died.

Military Crosses

The military cross has been awarded to the following:

Lieut. Charles Stewart Craig of the 4th Artillery, for conspicuous gallantry, resource and ability on many occasions, especially on June 15 at Givenchy, when he used an eighteen-pounder in the trenches with great effect, destroying forty yards of the enemy's parapet, two of their machine guns and a stretch of 75 yards of wire entanglements. Lieut. Craig was seriously wounded at this date after he completed the task, and twice wounded on a previous occasion.

Lieut. D. John Macdonald, Strathcona Horse, for conspicuous gallantry and ability near Festubert May 24. Although wounded in three places, he continued to lead his men with great dash in the advance to attack the enemy's position, and entered the redoubt accompanied by two men.

Lieut. Wm. Disraell Sprinks, brigade Grenadier officer, for conspicuous gallantry and ability at Festubert, May 21-22, in organizing and directing a grenade company in an attack carried out by the Second Canadian Infantry Brigade, but Sprinks maintained the position gained by continuous bombarding for 24 hours' time, being subjected to very severe shelling by machine gun and rifle fire.

Germans Rebuilding

One of the Old Walls at Fort Henry

KINGSTON, Aug. 25.—The prisoners of war are being given every possible opportunity to work inside the walls of Fort Henry. Between the upper and the lower court is a short road cut through from one level to the other. Col. J. J. H. Fee, commandant at the fort, has a number of prisoners re-building a wall, and they are making a splendid job of it.

There are now seven reserve officers of the German army in the fort. They are treated a little better than the others, although as far as the Government are concerned all are alike. Baron Polonz is acknowledged by the prisoners to be the emperor of the Fort, and they look to him and the other six ex-officers for guidance in any trouble they might have with themselves or guards. He exerts a great influence, but is broad-minded enough to see that internment for naturalized Germans in Canada is necessary under the war circumstances, and he is responsible in a way for the pleasant conditions existing at the fort.

All day long the men throw quoits, wash their clothes, play cards or loaf as the mood takes them. They have splendid quarters around the lower court. Wood-carving takes up a great part of their time and some of the work being done is splendid. One fellow has a German coin with the spread eagle on the reverse side and the cut of the Kaiser on the face. He is carving both figures on a wall plaque, and the result is wonderful. A glass is used to magnify the lines in the figures and the work will be perfect in every detail when finished. When asked how long he had been at it, the fellow replied, four months.

Sail Boat Capsizes With Three Boys

Occupants of the Craft Narrowly Escaped a Watery Grave

Yesterday afternoon a fatality was averted upon the Bay of Quinte by the prompt arrival of a motor boat and other crafts. Three boys, whose ages range from 10 to 14 years, were in a sail boat proceeding from Belleville to Massassaga Park, when a sudden squall overturned the craft, and the three occupants were precipitated into the water. The predicament of the boys was witnessed by persons who were in a motor boat and also by the crew of the Brockville, which was proceeding to the Point. The motor boat reached the lads first and they were taken on board. The Brockville stopped near the scene of the occurrence and everything was in readiness to afford every assistance that was possible. Fortunately the lads were rescued and were none the worse for their ducking. Had not assistance been near it is probable that the waters of the Bay of Quinte would have claimed three victims, as the boys were in a somewhat exhausted condition when rescued.

Letters from Belleville Boys At The Front

CAPT. O'FLYNN.

Col. L. W. Marsh has received the following letter from Capt. O'Flynn:—

Aug. 4th, 1915.

Dear Colonel Marsh:—It was a year ago today that Great Britain entered into what has turned out to be the greatest conflict the world has ever seen, and nearly six months since we arrived in France.

Little we dreamed what was ahead of us, for, although we realized it would be a tough proposition, we did not give the Germans the credit of being such fine fighters. When all is said and done, they are game fighters, and although you hear a great amount of talk about their lack of spirit, and all that rot, from some one who was as close to the front as Rouen or Boulogne, ask the man who is in the trench, and he will tell you that the German is a hard, game fighter, and will take all kinds of chances. I have read a great deal of the difference between the Prussian, Bavarian and Saxon; but I would advise any man who talks about the Saxon and his lack of desire to fight, to keep his head down if he ever gets in a trench opposite him. The only difference I can see is that the Prussian and Bavarian are much more active in sniping than the Saxon; but, for all that, the Saxon picks off anyone who is foolish enough to put his head over the parapet.

The German artillery is wonderful, and they pick up a range with wonderful speed and accuracy. Their shortage of ammunition is a myth. If they are short, I would hate to see them open up when they have lots of it.

I have had the pleasure of seeing the famous French "Seventy-five," and it is easily the finest gun in the world today. Their gunners are marvelous. They turn a battery loose on a trench, and you would think nothing could possibly live there. Their fire is so rapid that it gives a man no chance; and their shooting is so accurate that the French can creep up under cover of their fire to the enemy's wire. We had some French guns on our right at Givenchy (near La Bassee) and their work was excellent.

The Belleville boys have been remarkably fortunate in comparison with units from other regiments. I believe our losses in the Battery have been comparatively small.

Poor old Dick was knocked out with fever and gastritis. He was ill for some time and held on gamely; but was forced to quit. He should have been in hospital a week before he went. I believe he has ten weeks' leave and will likely go to Canada, so you will no doubt see him before this letter arrives.

We have only four of the old officers left of the twenty-two who came to France with us. Five have been killed, three missing since Langemarck, three wounded and prisoners, and seven are either wounded or in hospital with fever. One of our four officers, Captain Richardson (George Richardson, of Kingston hockey fame) was wounded at Langemarck, but refused to go to hospital, and gamely stuck. He is all right now and in command of No. 2 Company of our battalion.

We are expecting the Minister of Militia here any day now. He is coming to look us over. We have been inspected by everyone over the rank of full Colonel since we arrived in France.

Well, Colonel, I must close. Kind regards to Mrs. Marsh and Jack.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) E. D. O'FLYNN.

Col. Marsh has also received cards this week from Capt. "Tom" Fennell and Sergt. Lorne Green, of the 39th Battalion.

40 Men Overcome At Fire On Ship

Man Had His Skull Fractured During Blaze on Anglo-Californian

MONTREAL, Aug. 25.—Less than two months after her hull was riddled on the high seas by shells from a German submarine and her decks glorified by the heroism of men who died rather than surrender, the Anglo-Californian yesterday, this time in the peaceful port of Montreal, underwent an experience from fire which developed in No. 1 hold and from the yet more deadly smoke from the burning bales of hay by which fourteen horses lost their lives and a yet larger number of men were overcome. Fortunately, all of the men are expected to recover, but the tale of their work, from the highest to the lowest, also deserves an honorable place in the list of brave deeds which fire departments and seamen have to their credit. Altogether, 23 men were in the hospitals as a result of the fire, fourteen horses are dead, and another score and more men were not in hospitals only because they recovered from the suffocating smoke quicker than their comrades. The vessel itself does not seem to have sustained great damage, but examination today will determine this finally.

Captain Livingstone had just made a trip all around the ship preparatory to its leaving the dock with its 916 horses, Mr. Andrew A. Allan was standing in the shed watching all the preparations for the vessel's departure when smoke was seen to issue from the port holes and air vents. A number of people seemed to see the smoke at the same time. A boatswain on the vessel yelled "Fire," and the captain exclaimed "Fire, did you say fire?" Mr. Andrew A. Allan heard this exclamation, immediately ordered all ropes to be re-attached, and the gangways shoved out again. Mr. George Dunne, who was standing beside him, waited for no more, but rushed to the telephone to inform the Fire Department. On board the Allan liner Scandinavian at Shed 2, whose bow came at right angles to that of the Anglo-Californian, the third officer first saw the smoke and also got an alarm into the Fire Department.

While they were coming Captain Livingstone went down to the hole from which the smoke was pouring, and tried with the men at his disposal to do all against it possible. Chemical extinguishers were used, but the fire had gained too great headway. Captain McGiffin, marine superintendent of the Allan Line, with his small but efficient company of workers, did very effective work in getting out the horses from the ship. Many of the horsemen helped, and everyone whose services could not be utilized were ordered ashore by the officers. The pandemonium created by the shouting men, excited neighings of the horses, the crash of breaking wood as the men who were freeing the horses broke the partitions holding the horses in their places quickly and remorselessly to allow the animals to be taken ashore.

KICKED IN THE HEAD

The chief cook, Percy Williams, was ordered back to his galley by the captain, but for once the captain's orders were disobeyed for, as Mr. Williams said, "I am an Australian and know how to manage horses. I will be needed." So he worked with the others, rendering excellent service. He It was who received the most serious wound of all, his skull being fractured by a kick from a struggling horse.

The first stream of water into the hold of the Anglo-Californian came from the Scandinavian. First Officer Henderson and two or three men pulled their hose over on to the endangered vessel and were down in the hold with the stream playing on the smoke. No doubt this held the fire in check until the fire brigade arrived.

FORTY MEN OVERCOME

When the firemen did come up their work made the Anglo-Californian once again the theatre of exploits which deserve the highest praise. The firemen worked down amid the suffocating smoke until one by one, chiefs deputy chiefs and firemen alike, they succumbed. Then they were sent out to the fresh air, and other firemen took their places, in their turn to be carried out to the shed and on to the hospitals when their condition was serious. Twenty-three men in all were sent to the hospitals, and Deputy Chief Mann believes that between forty and fifty men had to be carried out during the fight down in the hold.

The first call from the shipping people brought Stations 2 and 20 to the scene. Captain Serron immediately saw the seriousness of the situation and sent in a alarm which brought men from sations 1, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, under Deputy Chiefs Mann and St. Pierre, and District Chiefs Marin, Lussier and Gauthier. Later when so many men were put out of business by the smoke another alarm brought men from Stations 8, 9, 12 and 14. Altogether 80 men took their places from first to last on the ship, in addition to the men whom Captain McGiffin had working at the horses. Captain McGiffin managed to keep himself going throughout the afternoon while the worst of the work had to be done, and then he was taken on board the Scandinavian, where the doctor attended to him. At five o'clock he was taken to the Royal Victoria College. He was delirious at the outset, but inquiry late last evening elicited the information that he was making a fine recovery. Captain Livingstone, of the Anglo-Californian, also had a collapse while down in the hold, but did not leave his vessel, and last night was feeling almost normal again.

Yesterday afternoon it was estimated that the damage from fire and water would be 1,000 bales of hay, 150 bags of oats, 150 bags of bran, 2 bags of salt and 2bags of linseed.

An exciting incident in connection with the fire was when a team of horses ran away with a patrol waggon They came down the harbor front at a terrific rate. Constable Stanhope made a strong effort to stop them, but they dashed by, smashing the vehicle against a standpipe and breaking the pipe so that a stream of water sprayed out of it for a distance of forty yards from the pipe. Constable Stanhope was wet to the skin.

The harbor police, later reinforced by city police, held the crowds out of Shed No. 3, and the men quickly and methodically loaded the horses back on to long trains of cars, and they were transported away again.

One of the sailors on board the Anglo-Californian gives as his hypothesis for the cause of the fire the habit of horsemen, well known to those who have much to deal with them, to smoke on the sly in spite of the orders not to do so. He thinks that one of them must have been doing this when the captain came around on his last inspection, and that he threw it away so as not to be caught with it. Many theories are advanced by men along the water front as to the cause of the fire, but no one who knew could be found on the vessel or anywhere else. The most commonly accepted theory was that of the sailor that some of the horsemen had been careless, smoking a cigarette or a pipe in spite of the strictest orders to the contrary. A spark in the hay would do the damage. Alien enemies were also cited as the probable authors of the accident, but there was nothing more said to substantiate this than that some of the horsemen had been heard to converse in German. This language is, however, well known to many Poles, and some of these are said to have been working with the horses. Investigation shows, it is claimed, that these men have papers indicating that they are not citizens of an enemy country.

THE INJURED MEN

Thirteen men were taken to the General Hospital, six to the Notre Dame Hospital and five to the Royal Victoria Hospital, among them being District Chief Marin and Captain W. J. McGiffin, marine superintendent of the Allan Line.

Those taken to the General Hospital were: Arthur Gingras, aged 24, No. 4 station, overcome by smoke; Joseph Lachance, aged 31 years, No. 7 station; Louis Trudeau, aged 29 years, of No. 7 station; Fireman Bordeaux, of No. 7 station; Noel Landry, aged 28 years, of No. 1 station! Joseph Blackburn, aged 30 years, of No. 5 station; Fireman Morel, of No. 4 station; D. Beaudoin, aged 27 years, of No. 5 station; C. Labrie, aged 31 years, of No. 20 station; William Bourdon, aged 37 years, of No. 7 station; Arthur Dugal, aged 38 years, of No. 8 station; and Edward Stafford, a sailor of the Anglo-Californian. All of these were suffering from the effects of the smoke, and save for the last five named, all were able to leave the hospial last night, while the others will probably be able to do so todday.

Those taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital were District Chief Marin, Captain McGriffin and Firemen Napoleon Beaudry, Archie Laporte and Gustave Berard, of No. 4 station. All the firemen have taken leave and although Captain McGriffin was very ill when first taken to the hospital, he will be himself in a couple of days.

The men taken to the Notre Dame Hospital were: Percy Williams chief cook of the Anglo-Californian, with his skull and right arm fractured by the kick of a horse, being in a serious but not critical condition; Lieutenant Browning, No. 3 station; F. Belanger, No. 8 station; Henri Desy, No 7 station; Albert Guerin, No. 2 station, and A. Dugal, No. 8 station, all suffering from the effects of the smoke. They were all able to go home last night.

Deputy Chief Mann stated that nearly all the men who had been affected by the smoke were at their stations last night and although somewhat weak and ill, were ready for anything that happened to come their way.

Laid To Rest

MRS. S. MOULT

One of the largest attended funerals even seen in Tyendinaga Township, was that of the late Mrs. Samuel Moult, which took place yesterday. At the family residence services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Mair, pastor of the Melrose Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Joblin and Rev. Mr. Hill. The former officiated at the interment at Victoria cemetery. The floral tributes were numerous, many being beautiful in design. The bearers were Messrs. Wm. McCreary, O. Glass, T. Parks, R. Elliott, R. Gibson and J. Carter.

GERMAN LEAVES KINGSTON

Given Permission to do so to Get Work

Claiming that he was unable to get work on account of being German descent, although he has naturalization papers, Andrew Mueller, who was formerly employed at the Canadian Locomotive Works, has left the city. It is understood that he is in the United States.

Citizens became very suspicious about Mueller. It will be remembered that he was in Germany when war was declared, but, strange to say, he was allowed to leave his native land and return to Kingston.

When he returned he endeavored to get work in Kingston, but owing to coming from Germany there was evidently "nothing doing." He had lived in the city for some years, and had some property, some of which he sold before leaving.

When there were complaints to the police and military authorities about Mueller being a German, a search was made of his home, but absolutely nothing could be found. After the search was made Chief Baillie communicated with the authorities at Ottawa, who gave Mueller a permit to cross the border.

FAIR GROUNDS BLAZE OF LIGHTS

Electrical Arrangements for Canadian National are on a Magnificent Scale

The electrical arrangements for the Canadian National Exhibition should prove a pleasant surprise for visitors to the grounds. The handsome Gooderham Fountain has been equipped with colored lights, submerged in the fountain, that will flash and play on the falling waters in a manner that will greatly enhance the beauty of the Grand Plaza. Flags of the Allies in colors will be stretched across the roof of the Manufacturers' Building and at night will be brilliantly illuminated. Another new feature will be the strings of colored globes strung about the grounds in all directions, while an artificial moon has been erected north of the grand stand in the outdoor agricultural section. The sphere is eight feet in diameter, contains 18,000 globes and when illuminated the supporting column will be invisible, giving the effect of a huge ball of fire hanging suspended in mid air. The interior of the buildings have been equipped with vacuum or nitrogen lights of high power, and these will add greatly to the brilliance of the indoor illumination.

The grounds themselves never looked more beautiful. The floral arrangements are unsurpassed, while the lawns are a deep green and show no indication of the presence there this spring of the thousands of soldiers who were encamped over the winter.

WHO SAID WAR?

There will be no war between the United States and Germany. Of course not. Uncle Sam does not believe in fighting—not from a military point of view. Fighting for trade and commerce is quite a different matter. True it is that the deliberate sinking of the Lusitania, and the drowning of American citizens, aroused an outburst of indignation and resentment. What became of it? Nothing. The bodies of the murdered victims had scarcely been placed beneath the earth than a precisely similar crime is committed by the German Navy. Two Americans lose their lives, and others are saved from a watery grave by the prompt action of another vessel.

Is the U.S. Government eager to avenge this further outrage? Not in the least. Excuses are promptly made for the Huns. "Perhaps," it is said in the States, "it was thought that the Arabic (which was going to the protection of another vessel) was approaching with malign intention!" It is really hard on the Huns to think that they would deliberately sink a vessel if they knew Americans were on board! Cardinal Gibbons voices the opinion of W. J. Bryan, the peace-at-any-price politician, and would evidently submit to any kind of humiliation rather than risk a rupture with Germany. He blames American citizens for crossing the ocean on British ships, as by doing so they inconsiderately and unnecessarily expose themselves as well as their country to danger. This is reechoing the voice of Berlin. The President of the United States has asserted the right of American citizens to travel on the high seas without molestation, and protests that a repetition of the Lusitania occurrence will be regarded as an unfriendly act. "The Government of the United States will not omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of the sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment," says the President. What are these grandiloquent words worth?

The latest information at hand is that President Wilson has been informed from sources close to Count Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador, that the next communication from Berlin on the sinking of the Arabic will be of a character satisfactory to the United States. We have no doubt it will be. Germany may say that she was not aware there were American citizens on board and deeply regrets that their lives were lost. This will probably end the matter. It would seem as if whatever reply were sent (provided it was covered with a veneer of politeness and conciliation) would be acceptable to Uncle Sam. His attitude may be summed up in some humorous lines written many years ago:—

"Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For 'tis their nature to;
Let foreign nations have a fight,
And fight till all is blue.
We'll be like the busy bee
To each contending power—
Lend 'em money all the day,
At ten per cent. an hour!"

But the German Press is not quite so amiable or conciliatory. The Hamburg Nachrichten hopes the report that the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic by a torpedo will be confirmed, because since the Lusitania disaster only rarely have vessels of more than 5,000 tons been sunk by German torpedoes. "It has not been proved," says this journal, "that the vessel was struck by a torpedo and it may have fallen a victim to 'one of those bad-English mines.'" Admitting it may, nevertheless, have been a German undersea boat which destroyed the Arabic, the Nachrichten contends: "The U-boat acted rightly, and even if American passengers on board sank with the steamer and some of them were drowned, then that serves again as a warning that no one should lightheartedly enter the war zone or go within range of weapons." That is a very good illustration of the way in which the German Press regards American opinion. It treats it with absolute contempt. Uncle Sam might as well put up at Washington a notice similar to that affixed to his door by a colored quack doctor—"You may insult me with impunity!"

SIR SAM HUGHES.

The honor conferred upon Major-General Hughes is a well-deserved recognition of the immense labor he has undergone in organizing and equipping for the field the largest army of Canadians that has ever left these shores. It is an eloquent answer to the carping criticism which has been directed from time to time at the work of the Minister of Militia. The Prime Minister of Canada, in his first speech in England, during his present visit, took particular care to point out the remarkable celerity with which the Canadian Division was mobilized. The London Dispatch says: "There is not the least doubt his remarks were for the enlightenment of those of his good countrymen who, like others on this side, find it congenial to pick holes in the work of a man performing labors which ought to fall on a dozen shoulders."

Britons, rise, and hurl defiance
At the foes who bid you kneel;
Armed with justice, place reliance
Not alone on flashing steel.
Righeousness shall march beside you,
Honour shall to glory guide you,
You who spurn the tyrant's heel.

Let no foolish doubt disturb you,
Rise, and arm you for the fight;
Never earthly power shall curb you,
Nothing stand before your might.
History shall record your story
Bards to come acclaim the glory
Of the beacon you shall light.

Hark! The roar of sullen thunder
Sounds across the narrow sea!
Pirate hands your hearths would plunder,
Rise, and say it shall not be!
You are called to high endeavour,
And your deeds shall live for ever,
Britain's sons can never, never Sell for ease their liberty!

CURRENT COMMENT

A million in gold and another large quantity of American securities arrived in New York on Sunday from Liverpool. This shipment may be regarded as another instalment in the direction of strengthening sterling exchange.

The sound policy for both parties is to oppose Nationalism squarely and to recognize frankly that it is a common nuisance, thriving only upon enmity and prejudice and aiming chiefly to create friction between Canada and the mother country.—Toronto News.

Much as we deplore war and all its hideous consequences, it is true that never before in the history of Canada was there so much to do for one's fellows and for one's country, and never such an amazing display of the qualities which dignify and glorify human nature.—Toronto News.

As it takes two combatants to make a fight, it is extremely improbable that there will be any war between Germany and the United States of North America. It looks as though our good neighbors across the line may soon be in a mood to apologize to the German government for all the worry to which it has been put over this pesky correspondence on the subject of submarine warfare.—Hamilton Herald.

A "society of the Lusitania" has been organized in Cleveland, O. The members wear a button which bears the imperial arms of Germany disfigured by a great red splotch, and these words appear beneath: "The Blot That Won't Come Off." The society issues stamps bearing the same device. We doubt if the wearing of the button will become popular in American cities. It will be loudly protested against as a violation of neutrality.

In view of information in its possession, which it cannot reveal, the Advertiser calls attention to the need for adequate home defence. If Canada remains uninvaded, it is not because of a desire upon the part of the kaiserphobes across the border. It is all very well to talk of "letting them come." If "their" strength is as great as responsible men assert it is, every district should consider it a duty to prepare.—London Advertiser.

Georgia people are resenting the denunciation of that state in connection with the lynching of Frank. They say that all that Georgia asks is to be left alone. And indeed they may get what they ask, for there is some talk of ostracizing and boycotting Georgia.

Bill had been paying fifteen shillings for his board and lodgings. His appetite constantly increased until finally his landlady saw that she must either sell out and quit or raise the lodger's rate. One day, after feverishly watching him devour plateful after plateful, she plucked up courage and said: "Bill Aa'll hev te raise yor board te twenty shilling." Bill looked up with a start. "Dinnet de that, missus," he said, in a tone of consternation, "it's as much as Aa can de noo to eat fifteen bobs' worth."—Newcastle Chronicle.

If there is truth in the despatch from Turin to the effect that Dr. Richard Dernburg has arrived in Italy to open pro-German propaganda work in that country, a curious status has arisen in the relations of the two countries. Italy and Germany are not at war, officially. But Italy is attacking Germany's ally. How long can such a condition last? Inject Dr. Dernburg into the situation and an element of danger appears at once; for if the distinguished propagandist displays the same exquisite tact and feeling in Italy that he did in America the country of King Victor will likely be at war with Germany within a month.—Boston Post.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Despite the tyrannical nature of their sway, their shameless corruption, and their intrigues, the English have lost every vestige of the prestige that once was theirs in Egypt.

The native feelings towards them what has chiefly contributed towards the creation of such sentiments is the behaviour of the Canadian and Australian contingents.

These troops conduct themselves in the land whose hospitality they enjoy, not as guests, but as masters, who graciously tolerate the presence of the natives. Day after day the natives are thrashed without the slightest provocation by the Australian soldiers, who have been guilty of the most excessive outrages committed on the inhabitants of the lower quarters in Cairo.

The refusal of the Arab traders to receive in payment the Australian gold, which to them constituted an unknown coinage of doubtful value, led to downright mutiny in the barracks, the result of which was that between fifty and a hundred men were killed and wounded.

Owing to the serious public agitation, the greater part of the Australian contingent was hastily withdrawn from the city. The men, it was officially alleged, were despatched to Constantinople. In reality they were secretly repatriated to Australia.—Vossische Zeitung.

A New Ham Story.

At the dinner given to Col. George H. Ham at the Place Viger Hotel this week, Mr. J. M. Gibbon, of the C. P. R. publicity bureau, told a new story on the colonel.

George Ham has alawys had a reputation for making other people happy, and one of his pursuits is helping people out of trouble. This attribute is widely known, and one day a lad who had been dismissed from the Bank of —— went to Col. Ham and told him his trobules.

"So you left the bank?" queried the colonel.

"Yes, I got fired," said the boy.

"Give me the money," said George.

"It wasn't for that," retorted the younbster. "They sent me a letter." youngster. "They sent me a letter."

The boy produced the letter which the colonel read carefully. Then: "Let's see the envelope." This was looked over.

"Have you been back to the bank yet?" he asked in a moment.

"No," was the response, the boy thinking the colonel had taken leave of his senses.

"Well," he asked again, "have they called for you?.

"No."

"Well, this envelope says, 'If not called for within five days return to the Bank of ——.' Now beat it back or the time will be up."

The boy took the advice, and is now on the fair way to become president of the institution that once fired him.

INVENTIONS WE NEED.

Plenty of Opportunities For Would Be and Could Be Edisons.

The world is full of would be Edisons, and the point we want to bring out is that quite a lot of them are could be Edisons.

A man invented the stocking frame for weaving silk stockings. He got the idea while he sat watching his wife work. But surely he wasn't the first man who sat and watched his wife work.

There is a huge fortune for the man who can commercialize weeds. The raw material is inexhaustible, for it renews itself automatically every year. It might pay a reader in the paper making trade to follow up this idea.

Then we want a paint that will last as long as the material upon which it is placed and an iron that won't rust. We want something that will counteract the wearing effect of the atmosphere. It's going to be invented some day, and it may as well be done now, and you who read this may as well be the person to do it.

In some remote corner of the earth today a could be Edison may be experimenting with the possibilities of cities on the sea. There are millions of square miles of water that are more or less wasted, and sooner or later, as the land area of the earth becomes crowded, people will inevitably take to cities on the sea.

Above all, keep your eyes on Nature, who is continually making inventions which she never protects with patents. —Stray Stories.

FREE FALLING.

Just Collapse, Drop Limply and You May Escape Serious Injury.

It was stated in a description of a recent aeroplane mishap that the aviator had time to clamber to the upper struts of his machine and that when the crash came he was practically unhurt, the landing wheels and lower part of the machine receiving and absorbing the shock.

Flying men, too, in the early days of aviation frequently leaped from falling machines and escaped with minor injuries. There is a knack in leaping and an art in falling, and athletes and aviators know both. It is to "fall free" and to offer no resistance or as little as possible.

It is not Providence that specially guards drunken men and little children when they topple. They collapse, and as the muscles and sinews are not drawn taut and no resistance offered, but little damage and frequently none results. The bone of a limp arm would need some force to be applied before it broke. A "resisting" arm would snap almost at once. In a fall all attempts to recover one's balance, if unsuccessful, mean greater damage. Let yourself collapse—fall limply—and you may escape serious injuries. It is the strain and wrench on muscles and sinews which make the bones snap.

Fall anyhow. Don't try to save yourself—and you will.—London Answers.

Never Had 'Em.

Old Dick was an old plantation darkey. He was rarely if ever sick, and he always claimed that it was the way he had lived. One day as he was walking down the street a local merchant, taking advantage of his ignorance, accosted him thus:

"Dick, one of your best friends has just told me that you have ancestors of the worst sort."

"Now, look heah, Cap'n Gawg, I doan want to hurt nobody, but I jes' want to know who dat man was wot tol' you, and I sho will go after him, 'cause he done gone and 'sult me. Me got ancestors? Why, cap'n, that's as big a lie as was eber told. I neber had nothin' in my life but the mumps and colic."—National Monthly.

The Telephone Pole.

The employer of a Polish girl who has learned quickly to speak English tells of her attempted mastery of the telephone. After its use was explained to her she was eager to answer every call. A ring came and she jumped to the phone.

"Hello," came from the receiver.

"Hello," answered the girl, flushed with pride at being able to give the proper answer.

"Who is this?" continued the voice.

World's Longest Street.

In Seebohm's "Siberia In Asia" is thus described what is called the longest street in the world: "Siberia was half jestingly described to me as a big village, the main street of which, extending from Nishni-Novgorod to Kiakh-ta, was about 5,000 miles long, where there were always half a million horses on the road and where everybody knew everybody from one end of the street to the other."

THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

That's the Official Title of England's North American Daughter.

The official title of Canada is the Dominion of Canada. It embraces eleven provinces—viz, Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Saskatchewan, Northwest Territories and Yukon Territory.

The government is federal, centered at Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion, while each of the provinces, like our states, has its local legislature and capital. The head of the federal government is a governor general, appointed by the king of Great Britain and holding office for five years. Each province has a lieutenant governor, appointed by the federal government for a term of five years.

The federal or Dominion parliament consists of a senate, with eighty-seven members, nominated by the governor general and appointed for life by the king, and a house of commons of 221 members, elected by the people of the several provinces for a term of five years, the right of suffrage being subject to a property qualification.

The provincial legislatures are elected by the people of each province. Each province has its own courts of local jurisdiction, and there is a federal supreme court consisting of a chief justice and five associate judges.—Philadelphia Press.

BEE CULTURE.

It Doesn't Cost Very Much to Start It In a Small Way.

It is simple, and not very expensive, to start bee keeping in a small way. About $25 to $30 will do it. The amateur bee keeper needs but one colony of bees, a good queen and a couple of hives. Of course he should have two or three books on bee culture, a veil, gloves and a smoker.

The smoker is for the purpose of slightly confusing the bees when it is desired to open the hive. The extra hive is necessary because, as bee keeping is usually started in the spring, there must be some place for the swarm which may soon leave the parent colony. It is by swarming that increase comes about, and this may be so regulated by the bee man that his profit will be entirely through increase. Or, if he chooses, he can retard increase and work for honey only.

With an outfit such as that mentioned above the amateur can in most seasons produce enough honey for a family of five persons, and he can do this by giving no more than a few moments daily, or perhaps half an hour during the course of the week, to the care of his bees. Starting with two colonies of bees, he ought to be able to provide for his own family and have a surplus of honey to sell.—Philetus Barnard in the Countryside Magazine.

Grim Scot Wit.

A Scottish minister had among his parishioners a man who dealt in old horses, alternating his spells of labor with heavy sprees. During the period of depression which followed each over-indulgence John habitually took to bed and there diligently studied the family Bible. During one of these fits of attempted reformation his condition prompted his wife to call in the Rev. Mr. Wallace, the parish minister, who at the time happened to be passing.

"Oh, Maister Wallace, come in and see our John; he's rale bad!"

"What's wrang wi' him?"

"He's feart to meet his Makker," said Mrs. John.

Quick as fire came the crushing reply: "Humph! Theil'm he need na be feart for that; he'll never see'm."

Immortal Animals.

Some of the lower animals are immortal, having neither birth nor death. The condition was never more clearly or scientifically expressed than by S. T. Coleridge in his "Biographia Literaria" in a footnote to chapter iv on Wordsworth's "Lyrical Ballads" where he says:

"There is a sort of minim immortal among the animalcula infusoria which has not naturally either birth or death, absolute beginning or absolute end, for at a certain period a small point appears on its back, which deepens and lengthens till the creature divides into two, and the same process recommences in each of the halves now become integral."

BAKED CIGARS.

Before Smoking the English Dry Out All Spirits and Nicotine.

The English bake their cigars thoroughly in the oven until all of the moisture and nicotine are dried out. As is well known, they have the pick of the tobacco crop over there, and what they apply to the best of cigars might well be administered to those of inferior quality which are smoked in America.

Here is what every smoker should do: First, loosen the cigars in the box and let them stand on or near a stove or radiator until absolutely dry.

A moment before smoking wash the cigar in water on the outside and dampen well the wrapper. This may be done at the table by holding the cigar by the tip in a glass of drinking water, taking care not to wet the filler. Then wipe the tip end before cutting it off on the napkin. Water revives the leaf and restores its natural flavor.

What you have previously dried out in the oven is not water moisture. It is the bay rum and other spirits which are frequently sprinkled over the cigars after boxing to keep them looking fresh. Both the wholesaler and the retailer often sprinkle them again before showing them to customers. It is these spirits that impart such a strong odor to clothes in which cigars are carried. Drying and washing afterward will make for a better smoke, to say nothing of better health, in cases where very cheap spirits have been used on the cigars.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

SUBMARINE CABLES.

Placed End to End They Would Reach Halfway to the Moon.

The various governments of the world own together 880 cables, having a total length of 14,480 miles and containing 21,500 miles of conductors. The French government, which takes the lead as to length of cables, has 3,400 miles in fifty-four cables. As to number, the Norwegian government comes first, with 255 cables, having a total length of 248 miles. Finally, as to the length of conductors, the English government comes first, with 5,468 miles of conductors, divided among 115 cables, having a total length of 1,583 miles. Private companies to the number of twenty-eight own 288 cables, having a length of 120,864 miles and containing 127,632 miles of conductors.

The French companies, only two in number—the Compagnie Francaise du Telegraphe de Paris et New York and the Societe Francaise des Telegraphes Sous-Marins—have eighteen cables with a total length of 7,249 nautical miles. The most important of the private companies is the Eastern Telegraph company, which operates seventy-five cables, with a total length of 25,347 miles. The total number of cables in the world is 1,168, with a total length of 140,347 miles and 149,193 miles of conductors. This is not sufficient to reach to the moon, but would extend more than halfway there.—London Tit-Bits.

The Ancient Brahmans.

The Brahmans were the lawyers, priests, professors, the sole instructed class, the sole authorities on taste, morality, the sole depositaries of whatever stood in the place of science. Everybody was to minister unto them, everybody to give way to them. The Brahman was above the law. He was "not to be subjected to corporal punishment, must not be imprisoned or fined or exiled or reviled." In the law of the Vishnu it was written: "The Brahmans sustain the world. It is by the favor of the Brahmans that the gods reside in heaven." Under English rule and ideas the ancient caste has lost some of its prestige, but is still a forcible reminder of its former grandeur.—New York American.

An Early Legal Blunder.

Dyeing, or, at any rate, the madder root used in it, was the subject of one of the oddest of England's legislative blunders. In the reign of George III. it was found necessary to regulate the trade in madder, and accordingly an act was passed for that purpose. Tests of its purity were ordained, and various regulations spread the length of the act to over sixty sections. But when it was finally passed into law it was found that madder was not once mentioned by name in it. In fact, those called upon to administer it had no official knowledge of what the act was talking about.—London Telegraph.

Ironwork In India.

India was the first country which turned iron into weapons. Persia borrowed the art from India. The Rig-veda, which is the oldest record in the world, gives evidence of this. So do also the Astras and Sastras of the Dhanurneda, and during the early part of the Christian era the Indian blade was the most used throughout the eastern and western world. This art reached its greatest perfection in northern India, the Punjab, Nepaul, Rajputana, Gujarat and other provinces, where they still make beautiful arms.

Why He Was Shy.

"Thought you were to have that second installment ready yesterday on your car?" said the collector for the automobile concern.

"I did have it," was the reply, "but I was arrested for speeding, and the judge seemed to need the money more than you did."—Yonkers Statesman.

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

Worn Out, Thin and Miserable Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1914.

"Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives." He said, "If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can."

British Soldiers' Pay.

The English war office gives some interesting information concerning how the soldier is paid, whatever the circumstances of his service.

In the trenches of course there is not much use for money, but while he remains on the firing line the soldier's accounts are kept by his company officers, and he can make withdrawals when convenient.

A statement of his financial position follows him into the hospital, and his banker is then the medical officer in charge. On furlough during convalescence there is a special paymaster. Pay due to a soldier killed in action is dealt with as part of the estate and sent to the next of kin.—Philadelphia North American.

A Curious Error.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale told how a curious error crept into the translation of the Lord's Prayer into the Delaware Indian tongue. The English translator had as an assistant an Indian who knew English. "What is 'hallow' in Delaware?" asked the translator. The Indian thought he said "halloo" and gave him the equivalent. Therefore the Delaware version of the Lord's Prayer reads, "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallooed be thy name."

Alabama's Capitals.

When Alabama was a territory its capital was at St. Stephens, in Washington county. The convention that framed the constitution under which it was admitted into the Union was held in Huntsville, where the first legislature met in October, 1819, and the first governor was inaugurated. Cahaba became the seat of government in 1820. In 1825 the capital was removed to Tuscaloosa, and in 1846 it was again removed, this time to Montgomery.

Witness My Hand.

In the early days only a few scholars knew how to write. It was then customary to sign a document by smearing the hand with ink and impressing it upon the paper, accompanied by the words, "Witness my hand." Afterward the seal was introduced as a substitute for the hand mark and was used with the words above quoted, the two forming the signature. This is the origin of the expression as used in modern documents.

Placing Himself.

The Tramp—No, ma'am; it isn't true that we have a hobo organization. That's newspaper talk. At the same time I'll admit I'm a p. m. of the P. S. O. U. The Housewife—Why, what's that? The Tramp—Perpetual member of the Permanent Society of Unemployed.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Corns Are Out-of-Date

They Indicate Methods Which Are Obsolete Now

Folks who have corns are folks who pare them, or use liquids, or some other old-time treatment —ways not up-to-date.

Most folks don't keep corns now. When one appears they apply a Blue-jay plaster. The pain stops instantly. In 48 hours the corn disappears forever.

A famous chemist found this way to end corns without pain or soreness. Now millions use it. Fully half the corns that grow are ended as soon as they appear.

There is no excuse for corns. You can't prevent them, maybe, but you can remove them quickly. There will be no lasting corns on any feet when all folks know of Blue-jay.

Julius Caesar

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The Hopeville Debatin' society was Squar' Joslyn's idea. It dawned on him one afternoon as he was hoein' in his garden, and that evenin' he came over to the drug store and made a speech and started the ball rollin'. A week later the society had its first meetin'. There was a hot time fur about an hour. Of the forty men present five wanted to be president, but after awhile and by puttin' in two votes fur himself the squar' was duly elected. Deacon Jackson was made referee, and the other offices was struggled after to an extent. There wasn't any debate at the first meeting, but Squar' Joslyn made a speech of acceptance which raised the price of butter in Hopeville 10 cents per pound. After saying that he wouldn't exchange places with the president of the United States he began with the year 750 B. C., and the way he come whirlin' along down to the year 1915 made the glass in the windows rattle. He excited the crowd as he hit Nero, brought applause as he touched Columbus, and when he got through with Washington there wasn't no holdin' Enos Williams, and Jonas Bebee and Aaron Bradshaw was in tears. After the speech was over Elder Harper figgered up and declared that the squar' had made twenty-seven different p'ints in his oration.

The subject fur debate at the next meetin' was "Does Honesty Pay?" The number on the affirmative and negative sides was almost even, and Ebenezer White was appointed to lead off and tell how honesty paid him. Each speaker was to be limited to ten minutes. Ebenezer had been thinkin' it over fur three or four days, and when he got up he began with:

"Foller me back to the days of Julius Caesar. When Caesar was a young man of twenty-two he hadn't a dollar to his name and no show to strike a job. He had about made up his mind to commit suicide when he found a five dollar gold piece in the road. His first thought was to use the money to start in business, but it was only a temptation. His honesty wouldn't permit such a thing. He went around inquirin' who had lost $5 and at length found the owner, and the owner took a likin' to him and pushed him along until he was finally made a king."

"That's one tally mark fur the affirmative side," said the deacon as the speaker sat down, "and I decide that Ebenezer has made five p'ints. We will now hear from Jonas Bebee on the negative side."

"Foller me back to the days of Julius Caesar," began Jonas as he rose up.

"When Caesar was a young man of twenty-two he hadn't a dollar to his name," continued Jonas. "He had made up his mind to hang himself when he found a stray mewl in the woods. He sold the critter to the first man who would buy, and with the $12 he received he went into politics and pushed along until he finally became one of the greatest men of his time."

"That's a tally mark on the negative side," said the deacon, "and the p'ints seem to be even."

The deacon called upon Aaron Bradshaw, who was on the affirmative side.

"Foller me back to the days of Julius Caesar," began Aaron, with a wave of his hand. He had it that Caesar was poor and out of a job and discouraged when he happened to find a diamond ring in a mudhole. He could have got an advance of $50 on it at a pawnbroker's, but he actually went hungry for three days while huntin' up the loser. Struck by such a display of unselfish honesty, the owner presented him with $75, took him under his wing and in time made him king.

"That's another tally fur the affirmative," said the deacon, "and I guess I'll give Aaron the same number of p'ints as the rest.

"It's the turn of the negative," said the deacon as Aaron sat down, "and we'll now hear from Philetus Johnson."

"Foller me back to the days of Julius Caesar," began Philetus as he rose up, and there was a row. It was full ten minutes before order was restored, and during that time everybody got his head punched at least once and his coat torn up the back. By and by Deacon Spooner said:

"It's a shame and a disgrace to this town of ours to carry on in this way. I notice that Jim Yates, who don't belong on either side, has jest come in. Jim, do you want to say anything?"

"Not very much," replied Jim as he looked around. "I'd simply like to ask if anybody here has lost this half dollar?"

He held up the coin in his fingers. There were forty-seven men in the room, and every single one of 'em, includin' the deacon and the squar', replied that it was his.

"As to a debatin' society, it may be a good thing," said Jim as a grin spread over his face, "but as to the subject of discussion tonight I guess you'd better drop it and let it stay dropped. This half dollar has bin in my pocket for two weeks, and every one of you was willin' to lie to git hold of it!"

Then he moved softly downstairs and went home, and after the rest of the crowd had sat and looked at each other for two or three minutes in an uncomfortable way the president put on his hat and said:

"Instead of follerin' anybody else back to the days of Julius Caesar, I guess we'd better foller Jim Yates downstairs and call the thing busted!"

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS

CHAPTER XXX.

One fine morning in September, Mr. Drummond was standing at the back of Milner's Library, turning over the last new assortment of books from Mudie, when two gentlemen entered the shop.

Strangers were always interesting to Archie, and he criticised them under a twofold aspect—pastoral and social. In this way curiosity becomes a virtue, and a man with a mission is not without his interest in life. Hadleigh was Mr. Drummond's sleep-walk, where he shepherded his lambs, and looked after his black sheep and tried to wash them white, or, in default of that, at least to make out that their fleece was not so sable after all; so he now considered it his duty to leave off turning over the pages of a seductive-looking novel, and to inspect the strangers.

They were both dressed in tweed travelling costumes, and looked sunburnt, as though they had just returned from a walking-tour. The elder was a short wiry man, with a shrewd face and quizical eyes; and he asked in sharp clipping voice that was not free from accent, for the last number of the local paper, containing lists of inhabitants, visitors, etc.

Meanwhile, the younger man walked about the shop, whistling softly to himself, as though he had a fund of cheerfulness on hand which must find vent somewhere. When he came opposite Archie, he took a brief survey of him in a careless, good-humored fashion, and then turned on his heel, bestowing a very cursory glance on Miss Masham, who stood shaking her black ringlets after the fashion of shopwomen, and waiting to know the gentleman's pleasure.

No one would have called this young man very good-looking, unless such a one had a secret predilection for decidedly redish hair and a sandy moustache; but there was an air of bonhommie, of frank kindness, of boyish fun and pleasantry, that attracted even strangers, and Archie looked after him with considerable interest.

"Oxford cut, father and son; father looks rather a queer customer," thought Archie to himself.

"Dick, come here!—why, where is that fellow?" suddenly exclaimed the elder man, beginning to put on his eyeglasses very nervously.

"Coming, father. All right; what is it?" returned the imperturbable Dick. He was still whistling "Twickenham Ferry" under his breath, as he came to the counter and leaned with both elbows upon it.

"Good gracious, boy, what does this mean?" went on the other, in an irritable perturbed voice; and he read a short advertisement written in a neat lady-like hand: " 'Dressmaking undertaken. Terms moderate, and all orders promptly executed. Apply to—the Misses Challoner, the Friary, Braidwood Road. Ladies waited upon at their own residence.' What the"—he was about to add a stronger term, but, in deference to Miss Milner, subsituted—"dickens does this mean, Dick?"

The young man's reply was to snatch the paper out of his father's hand, and study it intently, with his elbows still on the counter, and the last bar of "Twickenham Ferry" died away uncompleted on his lips; and if any one could have seen his face, they would have remarked a curious redness spreading to his forehead.

"Nan's handwriting, by Jove!" he muttered, but still inaudibly; and then he stared at the paper, and his face grew redder.

"Well, Dick, can't you answer? What does this piece of tomfoolery mean—'dressmaking undertaken—ladies waited upon at their own residences?' Can there be two families of Challoner and two Friaries? and why don't you speak and say something?"

"Because I know as little as yourself, father," returned the young man without lifting his head; and he surreptitiously conveyed the paper to his pocket. "Perhaps this lady," indicating Miss Milner, "could inform us?"

"I beg your pardon," observed a gentlemanly voice near them; and, loking up, Dick found himself confronted by the young clergyman. "I overheard your inquiries, and, as I am acquainted with the ladies in question, I may be able to satisfy you."

"I should be extremely obliged to you if your would do so sir," returned the elder man, with alacrity; but Dick turned away rather ungraciously, and his cheerful face grew sullen.

"Confound him! what does he mean by his interference? Knows them, indeed! such a handsome beggar, too, —a prig, one can see that from the cut of his clothes and beard!" And again he planted his elbows on the counter, and began pulling his rough little stubbly moustache.

"If you are referring to a mother and three daughters who live in the Friary and eke out a scanty income by taking in dressmaking, I am happy to say I know them well," went on Arcihe. "My sister and I visit at the cottage, and they attend my church; and, as Miss Milner can tell you, they work had enough all the six days of the week."

"Indeed, Mr. Drummond, there are few that work harder!" broke in Miss Milner, volubly. "Such pretty creatures, too, to earn their own living; and yet they have a bright smile and word for everybody. Ever since Miss Phillis," (here Dick groaned) "made that blue dress for Mrs. Trimmings—she is the butcher's wife, and a dressy woman, though not flashy, like Mrs. Squails—they have been quite the rage in Hadleigh. All the townspeople and the resident gentry, and even the visitors, want their gowns made by the Miss Challoners. Their fit is perfect; and they have such taste. And——" But here the luckless Dick could bear no more.

"If you will excuse me, sir," he said, addressing his bewildered father, "I have left something particular at the hotel; I must just run and fetch it."

Dick did not specify whether it was his handkerchief, or his cigar-case, or his purse, of which he stood so urgently in need; but before Mr. Mayne could remonstrate, he had gone out of the shop. He went as far as the door of the hotel, and there he seized on a passing waiter and questioned him in a breathless manner. Having obtained his information, he set off at a walk that was almost a run through the town, and down the Braidwood Road. The few foot-passengers that he met shrank out of the way of this young man; for he walked, looking neither to the right nor to left, as though he saw nothing before him. And his eyes were gloomy, and, he did not whistle; and the only words he said to himself were, "Oh, Nan, never to have told me of this!" over and over again.

The gate of the Friary stood open; for a small boy had been washing the flags, and had left his pail, and had gone off to play marbles in the road with a younger brother. Dick, who understood the bearings of the case at once, shook his fist at the truant behind his back, and then turned in at the gate.

He peeped in at the hall door first; but Dorothy was peeling potatoes in the kitchen, and would see him as he passed, so he skirted the little path under the yews. And if Dulce had been at her sewing-machine as usual, she would have seen him at once; but this morning the machine was silent.

A few steps farther he came to a full stop, and his eyes began to glisten, and he pricked up his ears after the manner of lovers; for through an open window just behind him, he could hear Nan's voice, sweet and musical, reading aloud to her sisters.

"Oh, the darling!" he murmured, and composed himself for a few moments' ecstasy, for no doubt she was reading Tennyson, or Barrett-Brown- or one of the poetry-books he had given her; but he was a little disappointed when he found it was prose.

" With regard to washing-dresses," read Nan, in her clear tones, 'cottons, as a general thing, have another material made up with them; the underskirt may be of foulard or satin——"

"Oh, I dare say! What nonsensical extravagance!" observed Phillis.

"Or, the bodice of surah, satin, casmere, or llama, and the skirt of cotton. . . . The skirts are nearly always made with single box-pleats, with a flat surface in the centre, and a flat band of trimming is often stitched on at about five inches from the edge of the flounce.' I should say that would be sweetly pretty, dear; we might try it for Mrs. Penlip's dress. And just listen to a little more."

"I shall do nothing of the kind," blurted out Dick. "Oh, Nan, Nan! how could you be such a traitor? —washing-dresses indeed, and me left in ignorance!" And there was Dick, his face glowing and indignant, standing in the window, with Laddie barking furiously at him, and his outstretched hand nearly touching Nan. Phillis and Dulce screamed with surprise, being young and easily excited; but Nan only said, "Oh, Dick!" very faintly; and her sweet face grew red and pale by turns, and her fingers fluttered a little in his grasp, but only for joy and the sheer delight of seeing him.

As for Dick, his eyes shone, but his manner was masterful.

"Look here!" he said, drawing Nan's advertisement from his pocket; "we had come down here to surprise you girls, and to have a little fun and tennis; and I meant to have treated you to the public ground at the hotel, as I knew you had only a scrubby little bit of lawn; and this is what has met my eyes this morning! You have deceived mother and me; you have let us enjoy our holiday, which I did not a bit, for I had a sort of nasty presentiment and a heap of uncomfortable thoughts; and all the while you were slaving away at this hideous dressmaking.—I wish I could burn the whole rag, tag and bobtail—and never let us know you wanted anything. And you call that being friends!"

JEFFERSON'S HOME.

Monticello, With Its View of the University of Virginia.

A mansion on Monticello ("little mountain," pronounced "Montechello"), was Jefferson's boyhood dream. He worked at it all his life with an artist's creative zeal.

The road from Charlottesville is winding, hilly and rough. Rows of big stepping stones cross it, lifting pedestrians out of the red mud, but jolting beedless drivers.

Visitors may stay in the grounds twenty minutes, but must bring no luncheons. Jefferson's guests stayed weeks and ate him into poverty.

From the servants' quarters a long sunken way runs under the house to the ice house and other storage beyond. The flat roof of this walk, two feet above ground, is a dry promenade. Over the icehouse is an outlook platform. Icehouse and servants' quarters are half underground, with windows only on the far side. Jefferson looked out over them east toward Washington, west toward the University of Virginia, whose beginnings he watched with his telescope when he could no longer walk.

Students enjoy the most beautiful and inspiring scholastic shades in the new world. Jefferson's university is artistic perfection, reverently preserved. Toward the town the curved walls he designed to save brick and labor for a poor institution still stand. The length of each wave line curve is twenty feet. Its width, forty inches, gives the stability of a three foot wall to one only four inches thick. The effect is pleasing.

Jefferson was a better architect than Washington, and perhaps his equal in landscape gardening and estate planning.

On Jefferson's gravestone at Monticello no mention of the presidency is made, but his authorship of the Declaration and the Virginia statute of religious liberty is recited and that he was the "Father of the University of Virginia."—New York World.

BAHAMA ISLAND SHELLS.

The shores of the Bahama islands are each day strewn with multitudes of beautiful seashells, more than fifty varieties of which have a commercial value in the United States and Europe.

Among these are rice shells, so tiny in size as to make one marvel how a sufficient number could be picked up to fill a barrel; gold shells, mud shells, cockles, bleeding tooth; pretty decorative sun shells, eardrop shells, which are exported to Odessa, Russia, to be used as ear pendants; Panama or tent shells, which resemble miniature encampments and sell at $90 a barrel; black snails, which take a high polish; conchs—king, queen, ivory, pinklip and trochus or Turk's cap, locally termed "whelks." These are but a few of the assortment kept in stock at the leading warehouses at Nassau.

The queen conch, which is especially adapted for cameo carving on account of having a layer of brown with a white top and the pinklip conch, which has layers of white and pink, are much sought for. Only the lips of these two varieties are exported, the demand coming from New York and from Torre del Greco, near Naples, Italy.

Ordinary conchs sell at 1 cent; pinklip, whole shells, from 5 cents to 25 cents, and queens at 30 cents United States currency in Nassau. The whelk or Turk's cap is particularly valuable, as it has a portion resembling the best mother-of-pearl, from which pearl studs, for instance, could be made.

It is estimated that a million shells of this variety could be obtained annually in this colony. These shells sell for 1½ cents each. Labor is cheap, colored women receiving from 25 to 30 cents, ordinary laboring men 60 cents and white engineers $1.50 a day.—Indianapolis News.

Study of the Law.

Rabbi Chonan of Zeporn said: "The study of the law may be compared to a huge heap of dust that is to be cleared away. The foolish man says, 'It is impossible that I should be able to remove this immense heap; I will not attempt it,' but the wise man says, 'I will remove a little today, some tomorrow and more the day after, and thus in time I shall have removed it all.'" It is the same with studying law.—Case and Comment.

The Eye of the Beholder.

He—Miss Oldgirl is looking particularly well just now. She doesn't appear a day over twenty-five. She—Is that so? Well, if she looks that way to you it's time you got a pair of glasses. There is something wrong with your sight.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Coming In Throngs.

"My wife is greatly disturbed."

"What's the trouble?"

"She says the red ants are holding an old home week in our pantry."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

To accuse the wicked and defend the wretched is an honor.—Cicero.

SCUTTLE HOLE PICNIC

The picnic at the Scuttle Hole in the Township of Thurlow yesterday, attracted many visitors notwithstanding the threatening weather. It was held under the auspices of the A. O. U. W., and as the picnicers arrived they were conducted over the interesting features of the place. The cave was an object of interest. There is a story in connection with the place to the effect that years ago a fur dealer, or trader, or lumberman, was going through this section with several thousands of dollars, when the Indians thereabouts were in a semi-barbarous condition, and an Indian killed and robbed the leader, and when pursued, crawled into the cave, where he was followed for nearly a mile into the dark clamy cave and several times shot at, but it was never known whether he was killed, but at all events the money was never found and no one has been courageous enough since to go in after it.

In the afternoon short speeches were delivered of a patriotic nature by Grand Master Mikel, J. J. B. Flint, F. E. O'Flynn Robert Boyle, Arthur Jones, manager of the Molson's Bank, John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, J. S. McKeown and Alex. Moore, the chairman. Races and games were then held. The baseball match between the Plainfield and Foxboro Clubs, and the ladies' foot ball match were the chief events.

Col. Hemming Lieut.-Col. Dawson, Capt. MacConnell, anud Prof. Mulloy, left the camp yesterday afternoon at three o'clock for a trip to Springbrook in Rawdon Township. All wanted to see the kind of country that lies between Kingston and North Hastings, so are making the trip by car. All have an eye on the recruiting possibilities of that section.

Mr. Sprague of Belleville, visited Major Wilson, of the camp staff, yesterday afternoon.

These officers have been appointed to the three overseas batteries being mobilized at Barriefield Camp:

Boy Killed In Horrible Manner

Crawled Upon Threshing Machine and Fell on Table, Catching in Teeth

CORNWALL, Ont., Aug. 25—Stanley Barlow, the six-year-old son of W. L. Barlow, of Westville, on the opposite side of the river, met a horrible death in his father's barn while threshing was in progress.

The lad, unknown to his father, climbed up on a beam, directly over the machine. He lost his balance and fell on the table below and was dragged in by the iron teeth, and before the machine could be stopped his skull was crushed and half his head torn off. The left arm was also pulled from the socket, and one side of the body torn open.

The threshing machine was an old-fashioned one, run by horses on a treadmill.

Mr. Nicol was the one selected as a result of the drawing, and to-day he set off for Montreal to enlist as a private with an overseas unit.

He had been offered a commission but in order to please some friends who are going over in the ranks he turned down this offer.

English Aviator Sinks Submarine

Admiralty Announces Great Feat Performed off Ostend

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Flight Squadron Commader Arthur W. Bigsworth has destroyed single-handed a German submarine off Ostend, the Admiralty announced this afternoon. Bigsworth sank the U-boat by bombarding it from his aeroplane.

Bigsworth has figured before now in the despatches. It was announced on the day of the Zeppelin attack on Ramsgate that "Flight-Commander Bigsworth dropped four bombs when 200 feet above the airship. The Zeppelin then rose to 11,000 feet, with her tail down. Our machines were exposed to a heavy fire from the Zeppelin. No casualties."

Has Had Quick Promotion.

Bigsworth joined the air forces at Fort Grange flying station only ten months ago. He was only recently promoted from flight commander to squadron commander of air forces.

This is the first official announcement from the British Admiralty in several weeks of the destruction of a German submarine, though it has been reported from reliable suorces that a number of U boats have been captured or destroyed in British nets It is one of the few instances officially reported in which an aviator has sunk a submarine.

HOW HUNS SANK STEAMER

Spanish Captain Was Told "No One Can Go to England"

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The sinking of the Spanish steamer Isidoro recently, by a German submarine, which was the occasion of a protest by Spain to Germany, is described by the correspondent at Bilbao, Spain, of the Havas Agency. His despatch gives the official report of the Isidoro's captain to her owners.

The captain states that on August 17, he heard three shots of a cannon. A German submarine appeared suddenly beside the vessel. The captain of the Isidoro went aboard the submarine and exhibited all his papers to the German commander, who remarked in Spanish:

"No one can go to England."

The captain reports that the Germans dismantled the wireless apparatus on his vessel and ordered the crew to abandon the ship at once. Scarcely had the crew debarked when the submarine fired on the Isidoro, sinking her quickly.

According to the captain's report. the German commander retained all the Isidoro's documents, even her log-book. The cargo of the Isidoro consisted of 25 tons of oil, 3,000 tons of iron, and 1,000 tons of foodstuffs.

Earl of Selborne Hints Conscription

Says Navy Has Submarine Menace Well in Hand Now

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Something in the nature of conscription, though the term was not employed, was foreshadowed by the Earl of Selborne, president of the Board of Agriculture, in an address this afternoon to a deputation of agricultural land owners which visited him in London.

"Many more men have got to join the army, whether voluntarily or compulsorily," said the Earl. "The agricultural laborer has done his part nobly in this war, but the response has been very unequal over the country and I forecast that during the next year men will be taken from districts and farms whence hitherto they have not gone.

"What I shall aim at and Earl Kitchener has been very sympathetic—is to leave the farmer his foreman, stockman, carters and shepherds, but the rest of the work will have to be done by women or men not hitherto engaged in agricultural work. Earl Selborne emphasized the fact that Russia's reverses had imposed a greater strain on her allies.

"We have a greater burden on our shoulders at the present moment than six months ago," he said. "The financial strain is going to be very great and the situation is going to demand from every class greater and greater sacrifices."

The speaker stated that the navy had the submarine menace well in hand.

ALLIES' AIRMEN MAKE RECORD RAID

Sixty-two French, British and Belgian Aeroplanes Participate Various Fires are Caused—Third Recent Raid in This Part of Germany

Further details are to hand concerning the great raid by aeroplanes, which was mentioned in a despatch published in the Intelligencer yesterday Wiring from Paris, Aug. 26, a correspondent says:

Sixty-two aeroplanes rose from behind the French lines into a grey dawn yesterday, wheeled and manoeuvred into four groups, and sped away towards Rhenish Prussia. It was the biggest and most formidable squadron of fliers that had ever set out as a body to bombard an enemy position.

Saarlouis, over the heights of Dellingen, a small twon in Rhenish Prussia, was the objective, for at Saarlouis is a great German factory, where shells and armor-plate are being made From the moment that the outfliers, the scouts, crossed the German front until the army of aerial invaders had guns was incessant.

The loses, if any, are not stated by the War Office, nor is the probable damage. But it is hoped and expected here that the damage was great, as it seems it must have been, from the huge quantity of explosives carried by so many aeroplanes and dropped on a single target.

This raid was duplicated to-day by one of equal proportions against the wood of Monthulst, north of Ypres, in Belgium. In the squadron which sailed forth to-day there were 62 machines, but they were not all French. British and Belgian aeroplanes participated. Heavy fires were observed as the fliers turned and began their flight back.

FURTHER AIR RAIDS.

(Canadian Press Special)

During the night of August 26 our aviators bombarded St. Baussant and Essey, in the Woevre district. In the Argonne district the railroad station at Ivoiry and Cierges also were bombarded by French aeroplanes.

This followed an attempt on the part of German aviators on Clermont, in the Argonne. The bombs thrown down on this position by the Germans did no damage, however.

During the night of August 26-27 a French aviator threw down ten shells on a factory at Dornach where Germans have been manufacturing asphyxiating gases.

During this morning a French squadron of aeroplanes bombarded the railroad station and electric power house at Muelhein, in the grand duchy of Baden. All the aviators returned unhurt.

Strathcona Trust

Two Gold Medals to be Awarded Cadets for Best Scores

The Central Committee of the Strathcona Trust, in order to encourage proficiency in rifle shooting, offer a gold medal annually to the Public School Cadet in each city making the best score, and a similar medal to the cadet who has left school but is still attached to his corps, and under 18 years of age, and making the best score.

A short time ago the local committee received over ninety dollars from this Trust to be used in the purchase of prizes for physical culture and cadet work in the inspectorate of South Hastings. The committee wisely decided to put it in the form of good pictures and these were presented to the schools winning them a few days ago.

Western Campaign

French Capture German Trenches on Mountain Top

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Aug. 27.—(French official statement.) In the sector to the north of Arras artillery firing last night was less violent but it was very spirited in the vicinity of Roye and on the plateaux between the Oise and the Aisne.

In the Champagne district in front of Auerive-sur-Suppe an offensive German reconnaissance was repulsed.

In the Argonne there has been reported nothing more than fighting by means of mines, in which we had the advantage.

In the Vosges to the north of Sondernach we have straightened our front and accelerated our installation on the mountain top between Sondernach and Landersbach. This we did by taking possession of several German trenches. A counter attack on the part of the enemy was completely repulsed.

800 OFFICERS LAID OUT. AT THE DARDANELLES

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The severity of the recent fighting on the Gallipoli Peninsula is shown by the fact that in the past eight days there have been nearly 800 casualties among the officers of the British forces, the Australians and New Zealanders bearing the brunt of the losses. The casualty list issued yesterday contained the names of 122 officers and 1,350 men.

It is estimated that for every officer killed or wounded ten men are put out of action.

Britain Preparing For the Big Drive

World Will Be "Dumb With Admiration" at Greatest Fighting Machine Ever Seen

PARIS, Aug. 26.—"The Government now has under control all factories able to produce cannon, rifles, projectiles and explosives," said David Lloyd George, British Minister of Munitions, in an interview with the Journal. "It also controls all foundries and maching and tool factories, and not one pound of metal or one detached piece is turned out by this vast industrial machine which is not destined for the use of our armies. This war must not be fought with brawny chests but with machinery." From what Mr. Lloyd George showed the editor believes Britishh preparations in many ways are more ample than those of the French. He declares the army now in training will be one of the most powerful the world has ever seen and when, later it will be possible to tell what has been accomplished by the British, the universe will be "dumb with admiration."

Submarine Menace Now Well in Hand

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The Earl of Selborne's statement today that the navy now has the submarine menace well in hand lends color to recent unofficial reports to the effect that the British have of late months captured a very large number of these submersible vessels and that many others have been sunk.

Returning travellers have described the new British sport of submarine hunting, and have said that great numbers of small, high-powered, and speedy motor boats, mounting guns of small calibre, have constantly scoured the coastal waters of Great Britain for months. There have also been repeated stories of an expensive system of submarine nets in Channel waters, and even of one submarine net that extends entirely across the English Channel, with guard boats at the opening.

It is a notable fact that for nearly a year the Franco-British naval transport service across the Channel, by means of which hundreds of thousands of troops have been transported, has been maintained without, so far as is known, one single troopship having been sunk by a submarine in these waters.

Premier Borden Sails for Home

Well on Way—Bears Good Tidings —More War Contracts

LONDON, Aug. 26—Premier Borden is now well on his homeward way. Military necessity has hitherto precluded reference to his departure.

The Premier, during his last two days in London, had further interviews with Lord Kitchener, Bonar Law Lloyd George and Earl Grey, who came to London specially for conference with him.

The Premier left Euston Station for Liverpool, travelling in the North Western royal saloon. The night before the ship sailed he employed his last few hours in England visiting Canadian wounded in the Mersey district.

Sir Robert, it is safe to say, returns quite satisfied. He will be able to assure the Canadian producers of war material that the imperial government is not only willing, but anxious to utilize the resources of Canada to the full. Sir Robert's visit will result in sending to Canada very shortly, emissaries from the munitions department who will make known further requirements to producers in the Dominion.

EFFECTIVE CO-OPERATION.

Premier Borden made the following general statement: "During my visit I have had the advantage of discussing with members of the British Government matters of great moment. I am convinced these discussions will lead to more effective co-operation in the common purpose. From information thus received I am assured all possible steps are being taken to carry on the enormous preparation necessary to insure the triumph of the allied nations.

"Not only in the justice of their cause, but in numbers and resources these nations possess an overwhelming superiority. We have advanced in our empire from an almost utter lack of preparation 12 months ago to an organization training, arming and equipping hugh forces on a scale unprecedented in our history. Beyond question great things have been accomplished during that period, although a close experience makes clear even more might have been achieved.

TRIBUTE TO WOUNDED.

"Nowhere have I found firmer, truer spirit of courage and determination than among the men at the front and the wounded.

"In hospitals, on speaking to them on many occasions, during the past two months I have been infinitely moved by their wonderful response to the thought that the cause for which they have risken their lives, touches more than the interest and influence of our Empire, that it concerns the future civilization of humanity. It was my hope and purpose to assist all the Canadian wounded. I have indeed visited nearly 40 hospitals and spoken to thousands of them. I trust those in charge of the hospitals I did not visit will convey my message to the Canadian wounded under their care. To them, and to the wounded in all parts of the Empire, I send a message of sympathy for all who have suffered and endured, of gratitude for their splendid response to the Empire's need and pride for the magnificent valor which distinguished them in the field."

Libau Squadron Goes Into Port

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The Daily Mail correspondent at Copenhagen says that the disaster in the Gulf of Riga last week seems to have made the German squadron off Libau uneasy. information received from Berlin is to the effect that the majority of the German warships that had been there have removed to the safety of the port of Danzig, which has been further fortified.

A despatch to the Central News from Amsterdam says that a transport carrying seriously wounded German marines who participated in the recent fighting in the Gulf of Riga has arrived at Koenigsburg from Libau.

4,000 GERMANS KILLED CROSSING THE RIVER

Russians Take Terrible Toll at the Wladowa Crossing of Bug River—Russian Armies Divided by Austrian Cavalry Wedge

LONDON Aug. 26.—The Budapest correspondent of The Morning Post describing the crossing of the Bug River at Wlodawa by the Austro-German forces says it was most important from a strategic point of view, to force the crossing of the river at that point, and it succeeded only after the most desperate efforts and immense sacrifices. Two divisions were engaged at first, and although they tried to accomplish the task, with contempt for death, in six attempts, it was only with the help of other regiments brought up that they succeeded in crossing the river and establishing themselves on the other bank. The river carried more dead bodies this time than the Dniester or the Vistula ever saw. At one point the Austro-Germans succeeded in bridging the river three times, and three times their efforts broke down after small bodies had got to the other side, never to return. At last pontoons were placed over the water and under the incessant gun and rifle fire the attackers succeeded in gaining the bank, but only after two days of the most desperate fighting. Over four thousand men were killed or drowned during these attempts to cross the Bug.

Russians officers say that during the twelve months of war in which they fought in Galicia, Poland, East Prussia and Hungary they have not come across such intense misery as the civilian population of Russian Poland had to endure in consequence of the devastation of the country caused during the war.

RUSSIAN ARMIES DIVIDED

Austrian Headquarters, Aug. 26.—Austrian cavalry has pushed eastward from Kovel and divided the Russian forces into two groups, which are now unable to co-operate with each other, according to advices received from the commanders at the front.

The Austrian armies operating north of the Bug have gained ground in the direction of the railway connecting Brest Litovsk with Minsk. They now hold position about three miles west of the River Lesna.

The wedge thrust into the Russian front by the Austrian cavalry occupying Kovel has been carried farther eastward and widened. The Russian forces are thus severed into two groups, which makes it impossible for them to co-operate with each other.

THE DUKE REVIEWS "PATS" REINFORCEMENTS

MONTREAL, Aug. 26.—Ten thousand people gathered on McGill University campus this evening, when his Royal Highness, Duke of Cannaught reviewed and adressed the 333 men who comprise No. 3 Company, McGill University Battalion, going to the front to reinforce the sadly depleted members of the Princess Patricia's Regiment. Eight hundred members of the McGill Auxiliary Battalion Training Corps turned out with No. 3 Company.

The Duke's address contained a personal note, as was to have been expected when he touched upon the glory won by the Princess Pats. He congratulated the new contingent on the fact that they were going to reinforce the regiment which had so gallantly upheld the traditions of the British Empire and had so completely fulfilled their duty as a unit sent from Canada. He wished them the best possible luck and hoped they would all return safe and sound, with the knowledge that they had done their duty.

The Duke, who was accompanied by Lieut.-Col. Stanton, A.D.C., and Major Duff, returned to Ottawa shortly after the review.

The Bombardment Of Zeebrugge

Number of Soldiers Killed and Wounded—Some Submarines Destroyed

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Concerning the recent bombardment of Zeebrugge, Belgium, by a British fleet, the Amsterdam Tidj says it has learned that a large number of soldiers were killed by the fire of the fleet, and that 90 severely wounded men were brought to Ghent, The material damage done, it adds, was apparently very great, as a shed built for submarines was completely destroyed and with it some submarines.

Many Have Been Sunk.

The significant announcement in the Amiralty report that it is not the practice of the Admiralty to publish accounts regarding the losses of German submarines, together with the statement of the Earl of Selborne, President of the Board of Agriculture, in the course of an address to a deputation of agricultural landowners that the navy now has the submarine menace well in hand, lends color to recent unofficial reports to the effect that the British have of late months captured a very large number of these submersible vessels, and that many others have been sunk. The number sunk has been variously stated at from 20 to 40, but to-day's statement is the only official admission that there were others than those previously announced by the admiralty as having been destroyed.

AN INTERMENT CAMP.

How Canada's Aliens Are Cared for in the North.

At a certain point in New Ontario the party of newspapermen and railway officials who made the initial trip on the National Express to Winnipeg passed the most flourishing settlement that crossed their vision since the train pulled out of Cochrane on its first run over Canada's new railway. It is not the usual sort of a settlement one meets in the wilderness. It is not a Hudson Bay trading post now, nor is its chief activity the sale of corner lots to strangers. Its form of municipal government is unusual, being organized on the principle of the absolute monarchy, with a ruling class and compulsory labor and all that goes with it.

It is an internment camp. Its name is spelled Kapuskasing, but it is not usually pronounced. Most people prefer to know it by the name of the station, Macpherson.

A football game was in progress when the National drew up. A crowd of Austrians and a scattering of red-fez-ed Turks were the spectators. Interest in the game was replaced by the phenomenon of a train formed solely of passenger and express coaches. But none of them offered to approach the tracks, and the passengers who alighted remained close to the train. One of the train party forgot about war regulations and climbed a pile of brick to "snap" the encampment. Before he had his camera focussed a sergeant and several privates in various stages of shocked excitement closed in on him and prevented him from unwittingly committing what is now a serious offence.

The camp consists of a row of tar-papered one-storey shacks, set in the middle of a large clearing. Here approximately a thousand Austrians and Turks are gathered. There are only about a hundred and fifty of the latter, but they cause more trouble than all the rest put together. Their pet foible is to refuse to work. When that happens they are made to work. This system of compulsion, we were told, is a deep, dark secret in which not even the officers of the camp share. Suffice it to say that invariably the Turks do work, sooner or later.

At one time or another a few of the prisoners have escaped from the camp, but none of them enjoyed more than a few hours of freedom. Without exception they have been rounded up and returned to camp Kapuskasing.

Their labor consists of clearing the land. One of the soldiers on duty at the right-of-way outskirts of the camp informed us that nearly two hundred acres had already been cleared. If the war lasts long enough, Macpherson station will find itself the centre of a farming district, potentially one of the richest in Ontario.

After hours the prisoners are given a wide range of freedom to enjoy themselves. They play football, or watch the soldiers play; improvise sports of their own, or go a boating on the river in large punts which have been provided for their amusement.

Their diet includes a form of sausages popular among Austrians, sometimes beef, bread, jam and the like. Their rations are as good as those served the soldiers, healthful and satisfying. They are living an out-of-door life and are gaining in knowledge of the wild. When the war is over they will be given first chance to claim for settlement the land they have cleared. Altogether there are worse things than being an alien enemy in a Canadian military internment camp.

Funeral for a Dog.

In a casket lined with white satin, his paws folded, "Laddie," beloved fox terrier of Mrs. Edward H. McAndrew, lay in state last night in the parlor of his late residence, 549 Carlaw avenue, Toronto, while over a hundred mourners paid their last respects before the remains were forwarded to Vermont for interment at the birthplace of the deceased.

Beside him lay his collar and leash, the mug from which he had drunk, an old shoe beloved of Laddie, and a piece of rope with which, 14 years ago, he, then a puppy, had played, treasured in the family ever since.

Mrs. McAndrews stood to receive the visitors in genuine sorrow beside the body of her dead pet. She had raised him, trained him, brought him across the blue, loved him for 14 years and finally lost him through the inevitable ravage of old age.

An Explanation

To The Editor Intelligencer,

Dear Sir:—In your issue of sixth instant, an article appeared under the High Honor," the first paragraph of which refers to the recent Entrance Examination and may be misleading to the general reader. The statement is made "Her writing this year on the examinations has been the best on record among the pupils in a great many years. Her papers have been sent to all the Educational Departments throughout the Dominion. On her writing examination she made the whole total."

This could not refer to the Entrance examination for this year for the following reasons: (1) The members of the Board of Examiners are forbidden to make public the marks of any candidate and further her marks in writing are not a record. (2) Her papers, are at present locked in my vault and will be handed to the Principal of the High School upon his return to the city, who must by regulation preserve them until next May and (3) Miss Shannon did not make the total mark in writing at the Entrance Examination.

I have no desire to detract from the honor due this pupil who was formerly a pupil in one of my rural shcools but as Secretary of the Board of Entrance Examiners, I consider it my duty to make the above explamation.

Yours respectfully,
H. J. CLARKE, B.A.,

SUBMERGED SUBMARINES.

Signs by Which They May Be Located From an Aeroplane.

In answer to a correspondent who asks to what extent a man in an aeroplane can watch the movements of a submerged submarine boat the Scientific American replies:

"We have consulted a naval aeronautic expert on the visibility of submarines from an aeroplane. He states that if the surface of the water is smooth and the water is fairly clear a submarine can ordinarily be observed visually from an aeroplane at any depth the submarine is likely to travel, which is usually not over 100 feet. Experiments have been made at Guantanamo, Cuba, and Annapolis, Md., and in the latter case the submarines were able to avoid observation at first by sinking to a muddy bottom. But the aviators soon learned to pick them out by some sign, such, for example, as escape of air bubbles."

In another article on the subject the Scientific American says that when the sea is rough it is much more difficult to discern a submarine. The captain of a warship can watch the course of a submarine by the bubbles it sends to the surface when the sea is smooth, but these bubbles are scarcely discernible when the sea is choppy. The disturbed surface inevitably makes it more difficult for an observer in an aeroplane to see what is going on below

Chanak-Kalesi.

Chanak-Kalesi, the straggling town near the "narrows" of the Dardanelles means "earthquake castle" in Turkish and is so called from a celebrated pottery on the Asiatic side of the strait An agent from this pottery used to be always on the lookout for a wandering European and hooked on to every passing ship. His boatload of gaudy crockery was generally more remarkable for gilding and tawdry color than for taste. But the forms of the vessel were often graceful, even classical, and specimens of the tall water jugs it sells, or once sold, can be seen throughout the Levant, though seldom in London.—London Chronicle.

TWO GREAT INVENTORS.

Their Foresight Did Not Equal Their Ingenious Ability.

Not infrequently great inventors do not comprehend the significance of the thing they have produced. An interesting anecdote of two famous men of science whose foresight did not equal their inventive ability appears in Les Inventions Illustrees.

When Hertz first began to obtain satisfactory results from his now famous researches into the possibility of transmitting electric waves certain men of science suggested that some day similar vibrations might serve to transmit messages through space. Hertz laughed at the hypothesis and assured all comers that his experiments were for laboratories only. Now, after a few short years, it is hard to find a single issue of a daily paper that does not record some noteworthy example of the use of wireless telegraphy.

Levassor was the great engineer who sketched the automobile with such skill that his design has not been materially changed to this day. After Levassor accomplished his historic trip from Paris to Bordeaux and return at the dizzy speed of about fifteen miles an hour his admirers gave him a banquet. During the toasts one of them, stirred by the spirit of the occasion, rose and enthusiastically called on the assembly to drink to the approaching day when carriages should travel at the speed of sixty miles an hour Levassor turned to his nearest neighbor and asked in a quick undertone, "Why is it that after every banquet some people feel called on to make fools of themselves?"

IRON IN WATER.

It Takes Only the Least Little Bit to Make Itself Felt.

Half a part per million of iron in water is detectable by taste, and more than four or five parts makes water unpalatable. In some mineral springs iron is the constituent which imparts a medicinal value to the water, but ordinarily it is undesirable. More than 25 parts per million in water used for laundering makes a stain on the clothes. Iron must be removed from water from which ice is made or a cloudy, discolored product will result. An iron content of over two or three parts per million in water used in the manufacture of paper will stain the paper.

Iron is harmful in water used for steaming, for it is in equilibrium with acids which inside the boiler become dissociated, with the result that the free acids corrode the boiler plates, but the amount of iron carried in solution by most waters is so small that the damage it does to steam boilers generally amounts to little.

Waters having a high iron content have in some places, where they have been used as city supplies, caused an immense amount of trouble and expense, for they favor the growth of crenothrix to such a degree that the water pipes become clogged with the iron sheaths of that organism. The removal of iron from water is sometimes easy and sometimes very difficult.—United States Geological Survey.

Quits.

Little Maudie would tell "whoppers." One day her aunt thought she ought to be cured of this habit, so she spoke seriously to the little maid, who promised to mend her ways.

To point the moral auntie told the tale of the shepherd boy who was always calling "Wolf!" until no one would believe him. Then one day the wolf really came and ate up all the sheep.

"All the sheep?" interrupted Maudie.

"Yes, every one of them," replied auntie decidedly.

"Every single one?"

Auntie nodded.

"Well," said Maudie slowly, "I don't believe you, and you don't believe me So there!"—London Answers.

In the early days only a few scholars knew how to write. It was then customary to sign a document by smearing the hand with ink and impressing it upon the paper, accompanied by the words, "Witness my hand." Afterward the seal was introduced as a substitute for the hand mark and was used with the words above quoted, the two forming the signature. This is the origin of the expression as used in modern documents.

Tobacco for Our Fighting Soldiers

Advantages of the Overseas Club Explained by Mr. Arthur Private

Mr. Arthur Private, who is at present in Canada as the representative of the Oversea Club of London, Eng., was in this city yesterday and outlined to a few representative citizens, who assembled at the Belleville Club premises, the object of his visit, namely to assist in forming clubs at various centres in this country to provide tobacco for the soldiers at the front.

In his opening remark Mr. Private explained that some objection had been made to the wholesale distribution of cigarettes to the soldiers, by people who did not object to tabacco in other forms. It was, however, a fact that cigarettes were of more service to the man in the trenches than tobacco in any other form. In the first place there was not room in the ordinary service uniform for a man to carry a pipe and tobacco. Secondly the sustained match glow necessary to light a pipe of tobacco would show their position to the enemy. And tobacco in the trenches was pre-eminently a necessity. All along the hundreds of miles of battlefront small areas were being constantly taken and retaken, and hundreds of bodies therefore were left exposed for weeks in and near the trenches. The result was an odour which made the use of tobacco almost imperative, and which often made it impossible for the men to eat more than one day's rations in three. These conditions brought the nerves of the soldiers to such a state that the use of tobacco was a mighty relief.

Origin of the Club.

The Overseas Club owed its origin to the late King Edward, and having been launched as a result of his initiative in the matter, had now progressed until there were some 141,000 members. The club had heard the plea of the man at the front for tobacco and were doing their best to see that it was unanswered. During the first seven months of the war the club brought to being a movement that resulted in the consolidation of the tobacco funds of all England. Now it proposed to extend its efforts in the interests of the men from Canada. The greatest possible efficiency of service was secured for the delivery of the tobacco, as it was made, manufactured, packed into cases and shipped directly under the control of the Government. From England it is being taken right to the trenches by the Royal Army Service Corps. The Dominion Government was prevented by law from subsidizing the tobacco fund but after interviewing several members of the cabinet Mr. Private had succeeded in arranging that the post offices throughout the Dominion be placed at the disposal of the club. Thus every municipality, great and small, central or isolated, was at one stroke taken into the movement and much very valuable time was gained. Sixty or seventy representative newspapers had also taken hold of the cause.

A Vast Saving.

"If only seventy per cent. of the tobacco funds of the Dominion are consolidated,' said the speaker, "it will mean a saving to Canada of $600,000 a year. And we all know that every cent of money is needed and will be needed. By means of the club's organization, tobacco which would cost local retailers not less than 99c. to purchase wholesale, was bought packed and delivered to the soldiers. Not only that, but delivery was ensured, thus overcoming the difficulty that a man who might belong to a certain regiment to-day may be drafted into a different unit to-morrow. The club's system provides an equal distribution to all, thus preventing waste.

Mr. Private took pains to point out that all wishing to send tobacco to relatives at the front could send twice as much for the same money, and be a great deal more certain that delivery would be made, than by the ordinary channels. At first the tobacco had been all purchased in England, but now arrangements had been made to buy it in Canada. Thus the money was being paid to Canadian workmen.

$500 a Week.

In conclusion Mr. Private pointed out that men had gone from this district, and it would therefore take $500 a week to provide them all with 50c. worth of tobacco each week. He urged upon the men who understood the absolute need of tobacco for the men at the front, to take hold of the local end of the scheme and make arrangements for monthly subscriptions which would total $500 a week. He asked that some one newspaper should make daily appeals on the Club's behalf, that a committee of prominent men well informed as to the possibilities of the club be appointed and that they in turn secure a field force of fifty men each to be responsible for a minimum of $10 a week.

At the suggestion of Mr. Porter, K. C., M.P., Mr. J. O. Herity was elected temporary President of the proposed Club, and a meeting of citizens to complete the organization will be held in the near future.

WHEN HUNS LOST WARSHIP

How Inferior French Destroyer Sank German Craft

PARIS, August 26.—Details of the action in which a German torpedo-boat destroyer was sunk by a French destroyer on the night of August 22-23 are contained in a Havas despatch from Dunkirk.

The German destroyer was more powerful than the French, the despatch avers, and the commander of the French boat asked by wireless for assistance. He did not wait, however, for the arrival of help, but engaged the German craft. The French boat fired first and scored a hit. She then launced a torpedo, which sank her adversary.

After the first shot took effect, the damaged German vessel limped toward Ostend, where a German coast battery fired at the pursuing destroyer but succeeded only in preventing the rescue by the French destroyer of the crew of the sinking German boak. A French torpedo-boat which replied to the destroyer's call for help arrived only in time to see the German vessel go down.

Pinnacle St Paving Tenders Are Too High

A special meeting of the Public Works Committee of the City Council was held last evening, the object being to consider the tenders for the paving of Pinnacle street.

The members present were Mayor Panter, Aldermen Willbridge, Platt, Smith, Woodley, Duckworth, McCurdy, Earle and St. Charles.

Two tenders were opened and discussed when the following recommendation was passed:

"That we consider the price of the pavement tenders too high and that no action be taken."

It was intended to hold a special meeting of the Council after the committee meeting, but the recommendation of the committee thwarted the proposition.

Things Women Like to Know

A FRUIT PIE

For a deep dish fruit pie take an enameled ware pan about three inches in depth. Put a small round enameled ware cup up side down in the centre. Then fill with friut. This sort of pie has an upper crust only. Fit the pastry carefully. The cup in the middle not only catches the juice but affords support for the top crust.

A MIXED PICKLE RECIPE

The number of pickles consumed by Americans has long been a standing newspaper joke. In fact so much has been said that foreigners may be excused for believing that as a nation we live chiefly on pickles and pie! However, pickles in their place are very good and by no menas to be despised. The pickle of commerce is good in these days, but the homemade pickle is better. To make good pickles two things are absolutely essential—care in the choice of utensils and the purest vegetable vinegar, be it cider or wine. The safest of all utensils is of course enameled ware, as there is then no danger of the action of the acid on metal. Take, therefore, a good sized enameled ware preserving kettle and make chili sauce. First slice four dozen ripe tomatoes, add ten ripe peppers and two onions chopped fine. Pour over these two quarts of vinegar. Add four tablespoonfuls of salt, two tablespoonfuls each of cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg and all-spice and a few leaves of mace. Finally stir in a large cup of sugar. Cook it all down until thick enough to serve. Sealed in glass, this keeps perfectly and is a wonderful addition to a cold meat dinner or luncheon.

THE SMALL SAUCE PAN

In cooking for a small family, remember there is always waste of food in using too large utensils. Manufacturers were slow to learn this, but there are in the market now tiny sauce-pans even small enough for the proverbial "old maid and her cat." Such sauce-pans can be bought in enameled ware in a variety of sizes and colors. They are scarcely larger than ramekins and are most useful for sauces and gravies.

Gave Life for Empire.

Without the satisfaction of having gone to the front, or the glory of dying in battle, Harry Robbins Scale of Toronto gave his life for his country as truly as any Canadian soldier who met his death from shrapnel or German gas, when he died at St. Michael's Hospital a few days ago.

Early in July, having a day off from his work with the Don Valley Brick Works, he went to the Armories and volunteered for active service with the 10th Royal Grenadiers. The doctor told him that before he enlisted he must have a varicose vein removed from one of his legs. Accordingly he had that operation at St. Michael's Hospital, but died a couple of weeks later of blood poisoning.

British Soldiers' Pay.

The English war office gives some interesting information concerning how the soldier is paid, whatever the circumstances of his service.

In the trenches of course there is not much use for money, but while he remains on the firing line the soldier's accounts are kept by his company officers, and he can make withdrawals when convenient.

A statement of his financial position follows him into the hospital, and his banker is then the medical officer in charge. On furlough during convalescence there is a special paymaster. Pay due to a soldier killed in action is dealt with as part of the estate and sent to the next of kin.—Philadelphia North American.

Food For Punsters.

"I don't see how Fussleigh gets any enjoyment out of his food. He's dieting, you know."

"Yes."

"He uses this new 'mathematical masticatory' system."

"Good gracious, what's that? So many chews to the mouthful?"

"No. He eats beans by the dozen, rice by the grain, fish by the perch and spaghetti by the yard."

"Does he seem better?"

"Measurably so." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TO PUT ON FLESH AND INCREASE WEIGHT

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by J. S. McKeown, Belleville, Ont., and other good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Food for the Business Trenches

It takes the highest type of nerve and endurance to stand the strain at the battle front of modern business.

Many fail. And often the cause is primarily a physical one—improper food—malnutrition. It is a fact that much of the ordinary food is lacking in certain elements—the mineral salts—which are essential to right building of muscle, brain and nerve tissue.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

made of whole wheat and barley, contains these priceless nerve- and brain-building elements in highest degree.

Grape-Nuts food is easy to digest—nourishing—economical—delicious, and as a part of the menu of modern business men and women helps wonderfully in building up the system for strenuous demands—and keeping it there.

PARLIAMENT'S DURATION.

The suggestion has been made that the present Parliament should not only be carried on during the war, but for two or three years afterwards. There appears to be a unanimity of feeling that the present is not a fitting time in which to hold a general election. The Liberal party—if it can be judged by the Globe—seemed to be obsessed with the idea that a general election was contemplated, and the Conservative party was accused of being desirous of bringing it about. The fact that there was no general election, and that Sir Robert Borden went to England and engaged in much more serious matters, should be a sufficient answer to these criticisms. Both parties evidently being in agreement that the present is not a suitable moment in which to hold a general election, it seems to be waste of time to discuss the question as to whether this Government should remain in office for two or three years after peace is declared. From a strictly party point of view it would no doubt be in the interests of the Liberal party that the Conservatives should remain in power. The extraordinary expenditure which the war necessarily entails must be met by extraordinary taxation, which naturally would not be popular with the electors.

But we are not now concerned with petty party affairs. There is much more serious business ahead of us. We are all deeply interested, Liberal as well as Conservative, in bringing this war to a successful and speedy conclusion. When we are within sight of that much-desired goal will be time enough to perplex our minds with contentious political questions, which in times of peace are an all-important part of our national life. We have a long way to travel yet, and many precious Canadian lives will be sacrificed, before we shall be in a position to give anything but a passing thought to the question of the next general election. In the meantime, the people can rest contented in the belief that national affairs are being guided by a Government who have the welfare of the country at heart; and when the war is over they will have every opportunity to pronounce their judgment upon the actions of the men who have held the helm in the troublous seas through which the Ship of State has passed, and who, we hope and believe, will bring her safely into port.

PINNACLE ST. PAVEMENT.

Few local matters have aroused so much interest of late as the proposed new pavement for Pinnacle Street. It will be remembered that at the last meeting of the City Council it was decided that the paving should be done and that tenders be invited. Ald. Wallbridge was alone in opposition to the proposal, his contention being that the city's finances did not warrant the expenditure this year. At a special meeting of the committee last night two tenders were opened, and as they were considered too high it was resolved that no action be taken. As the Council does not sit again until October we take it that it will be impossible now to carry out the work this year.

THE POET'S CORNER

THE GREAT BLUE TENT.

Edith Wharton has written the following poem for The New York Times, which has been cabled from Paris:—

Come unto me, said the Flag,
Ye weary and sore opprest;
For I am no shot-riddled rag,
But a great blue tent of rest.

Ye heavy laden, come
On the aching feet of dread,
From ravaged town, from murdered home;
From your tortured and your dead.

All they that beat at my crimson bars
Shall enter without demur.
Though the round earth rock with the wind of wars,
Not one of my folds shall stir.

See, here is warmth and sleep,
And a table largely spread.
I give garments to them that weep,
And for gravestones I give bread.

But what, through my inmost fold,
Is this cry on the winds of war?
Are you grown so old, are you grown so cold,
O Flag that was once our star?

Where did you learn that bread is life,
And where that fire is warm—
You, that took the van of a world-wide strife,
As an eagle takes the storm?

Where did you learn that men are bred
Where hucksters bargain and gorge;
And where that down makes a softer bed
Than the snows of Valley Forge?

Come up, come up to the stormy sky,
Where our fierce folds rattle and hum,
For Lexington taught us how to fly,
And we dance to Concord's drum.

O flags of freedom, said the Flag,
Brothers of wind and sky;
I too was once a tattered rag,
And I wake and shake at your cry.

I tug and tug at the anchoring place,
Where my drowsy folds are caught;
I strain to be off on the old fierce chase
Of the foe we have always fought.

O People I made, said the Flag,
And welded from sea to sea,
I am still the shot-riddled rag,
That shrieks to be free, to be free.

Oh, cut my silken ties
From the roof of the palace of peace,
Give back my stars to the skies,
My stripes to the storm-striped seas!

Or else, if you bid me yield,
Then down with my crimson bars,
And o'er all my azure field
Sow poppies instead of stars.

Holes in His Overcoat.

Major Byng Hall, D.S.O., First British Columbia Regiment, now a prisoner at Bischofswerda, had an exciting experience in the second battle of Ypres when he and his men were surrounded by the Germans. He forgot to put up his hands with the result that a German only a few yards distant fired two shots at him in quick succession. Fortunately the bullets went through his outer coat. The German was about to see what a third shot would do when Private Hills caught hold of Major Byng Hall and rushed him into a group of men and the major had no more holes made in his overcoat. In a letter in which Major Byng Hall refers to the battle, he says:

"All our officers were cool and the men simply splendid; their discipline was the best I ever saw."

Major Byng Hall adds:

"This prison here is an infantry barracks, quite new and beautifully clean; we are well treated and have nothing to complain of. The food is naturally not English, but we can buy what we want at a canteen. My knowledge of German is very useful."

Major Hall has seen considerable service. As a young officer he was with the 34th Sikh Pioneers in the China-Boxer campaign. Whilst there he was ordered to raise a body of Chinese police for the district and for eighteen months was engaged in chasing brigands. Whilst doing this he won the D.S.O.

Study of the Law.

Rabbi Chonan of Zepora said: "The study of the law may be compared to a huge heap of dust that is to be cleared away. The foolish man says, 'It is impossible that I should be able to remove this immense heap; I will not attempt it,' but the wise man says, 'I will remove a little today, some tomorrow and more the day after, and thus in time I shall have removed it all.'" It is the same with studying Law.—Case and Comment.

CURRENT COMMENT

Recruiting is good, fishing is good, and crops are good, says Sir George E. Foster. In other words, the country is safe for a while at any rate.

The new Japanese Foreign Secretary says that Japan must help Russia more than she has been doing, and Russia knows from experience that Japanese aid is worth something.

And if the German Government stops murdering people at sea, Uncle Sam will be expected to kiss the bloody hand that has been smiting him.

Hon. Mr. Lougheed, acting Minister of Militia, reports that recruiting throughout the Dominion continues to be satisfactory, more particularly in the large centres. To date Canada has contributed all the men asked of her, and the indications are that she will continue to do so until peace is restored in Europe.

A correspondent of the London Standard reports that in a recent skirmish on the western front there was a great deal of in-fighting, and at one place some of the British troops used their fists on the enemy. Probably the victims of the energetic punches were sore for some time after the assault. The fist is no mild weapon when the heart of its owner is behind the blow delivered.

This is the curt statement of the British Admiralty: "The Arabic was an unarmed passenger ship, outward bound to a neutral port. It was thus impossible for her to have been carrying contraband to this country. She was sunk by a German submarine without warning and she neither attempted to attack the submarine nor to escape from it." Short and sharp!

The United States Government proposes to take control of the customs and finances of Hayti under a receiver-general for a period of ten years. A reply is awaited from Port-au-Prince. If the suggestion is adopted the new order may be a good thing for the Haytians, who do not seem to be able to look after their own affairs satisfactorily. Uncle Sam's restless neighbors keep him quite busy.

It was narrow and intolerant prejudice like this which drove Prince Louis of Battenberg from the post of First Sea Lord early in the war. Since then there has been a revulsion of feeling in Britain with regard to Prince Louis. It has been revealed that it was he, and not Winston Churchill, to whom the credit is due for preventing the demobilization of the British fleet immediately after the great review in the summer of last year. He saw trouble coming and he took the responsibility of ordering the fleet commanders to "stand fast," and by so doing saved the navy and the empire from disaster. To him more than to any other man is due the fact that the British navy was ready when war came. And yet he was compelled to resign his post—because he was of German extraction and so fell under suspicion.—Hamilton Herald.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

From a lecture by Lieutenant von Mucke, of the defunct Emden, and reported in several of the German papers:—

The English were always most grateful when, in sinking their ships, we allowed them time to save their personal belongings. Their gratitude was such that the Emden was soon the most beloved ship that navigated Eastern waters.

Anyway, the English, on the whole, have no understanding whatever of the war, which is not to them what it is to us—a people's war, but simply a sport. Thus it could come about that our commander's prowess was celebrated in song and story, with trumpet and cymbal all over India.

Certainly some homage was due to us because, again and again, we have lost valuable time to accommodate passengers whom we sought to please and humor in every way in our power.

One instance I recall was that of an Englishman who, shortly before we sank his ship, entreated us to save his beloved motor-cycle. We did so, and the man, with tears of gratitude welling from his eyes, cried, "You Germans are noble creatures; no English seaman would have done as much!"

As we approached the coasts of Ceylon and Southern India, we beheld to our astonishment great crowds of English and Indians watching us; handkerchiefs were waved at us and voices cheered us in English and in the native dialects.

It was nothing less than the tangible expression of disgust at the war and of the corresponding joy at beholding a German ship which had done more than its share towards ending it.

Shell Crisis Is Over For Russia

While Seven Teutonic Armies Already Are Floundering in Fog and Mud

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The shell crisis in Russia is over, according to an announcement made by Chariman Shingareff, of the Duma Defence Committee, to the Daily Chronicle's Petrograd correspondent.

The quantity of munitions, the statement continues, has been more than doubled and all necessary supplies are going forward promptly. The Russian army now is in splendid fighting condition, it is stated, and the machinery of the internal adminstration is gradually being adapted to the new conditions.

"The word 'evacuation,'" says the correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, "is losing its terrors in the minds of the people, who are beginning to regard the idea of somewhat protracted mobility as a feasible military scheme."

The Daily Mail's Petrograd correspondent also telegraphs in an optimistic view; He says a new phase of the Russian operations is now beginning in which the Russians will have two useful allies—namely, autumn mist and autumn mud.

"Already," says the correspondent, "seven Teutonic armies in many places are floundering through marshy districts where there is a thick fog in the morning and evening and where the rains are turning the roads into deep mud. Amid the lakes and bogs where the operations must now take place the Germans will often be obliged to move in narrow causeways under the concentrated fire of the Russian artillery, which thus will be able to inflict terrible losses of small cost. The foggy weather will prevent the German airmen feeling out the Russian positions.

"An indication of what the Russians will do next is given in an official announcement that the time has come for the Russian armies to select a suitable position upon which to remain until it can be made to serve as a point of departure for a decisive advance. In other words, the Russians now plan to dig themselves into a fortified defensive front such as exists in the west."

CANADIAN MEDICAL OFFICER HAD HOT TIME AT FESTUBERT

Capt. Geggie, With Stretcher-bearers, Made Half-Mile Through Shell Zone

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Captain R. C. G. Geggie, medical officer of the 10th Battalion, now in a West-End hospital, had a hot time at Festubert, when the headquarters buildings were shelled. Being called up from his station half a mile away, he with the stretcher-bearers was obliged to take a road within full view of the German lines, running, crawling, or ducking every few moments. Reaching headquarters he found several men wounded. These were placed in a barn nearby, but fire then opened on the roof of the barn, which collapsed. The wounded were again removed under incessant fire, and when only 200 yards away, another shell crashed over the barn, completely demolishing it.

The Tenth was then relieved and went into the reserve trenches a quarter of a mile back, but still suffered heavy shelling, having eight casualties, among whom were O.C. Major Guthrie and Lieut. Nicholl. Major Guthrie had been in the most severe part of the fighting at Festubert, escaping altogether, but was shot in the foot in the reserve trenches, it now being probable that he will be permanently unfit for service.

Captain Geggie was formerly with the 1st Field Ambulance, but was transferred to the 10th Battalion when their medical officer fell at Ypres. He was one of the three medicos who examined the reservists at Levis before going to Valcartier. He was with the battalion in the trenches until a week ago, when he fell ill of an old appendicitis trouble.

HOW MANY POLES DO WE USE?

So far from modern inventions making wood less necessary they increase the demands upon our forests. This is brught out in a bulletin of the Dominion Forestry Branch on Poles and Cross-ties which has just been prepared by the Branch and is now in the hands of the printer. With the extension of telegraph and telephone lines of railway means the need of thousands more cross-ties. The demand for these two commodities is very irregular in Canada as the Bulletin indicates and explains. The different kinds of wood employed, where grown and where used are described. The bulletin will be issued shortly and any person interested may secure a copy free, or information in the meantime upon any special point, by writing to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

Plaintiff and Defendant

By OSCAR COX

Having received a note from my cousin, Belle Archer, that she wished to see me very particularly, I went to her house at once. I found her on the rear porch in a hammock reading a novel. She did not rise to receive me, nor did she lay down her novel, but pointed to a letter lying on a wicker table. I took it up and perused it. It read as follows:

Miss Arabella Archer:

Dear Madam—We beg to inform you that Mr. Edward Herbert Angell has retained our services, directing us to enter suit against you for the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) for breach of promise. We should be pleased before doing so to hear from you with reference to settling the matter out of court, thus avoiding both publicity and expense. We are, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

GYMCRACK, SPINNER & MUCHMORE.

I read this letter not only with surprise, but with a smile. I believe there have been cases of a man suing a woman for breach of promise, but they have been rare. Having finished reading the epistle, I looked up at Belle, but she seemed more interested in her book than what the letter involved for her. Nor was I able to engage her attention till she had finished the chapter she was reading. Then I said:

"I dare say you have deserved this."

"I dare say I have."

"You would not hesitate to jilt an angel."

"That's what I am accused of having done."

"Perhaps if you send the plaintiff a letter expressing contrition he will withdraw the suit."

"Perhaps he would, but I'm not contrite."

I thought for a few minutes, then, changing my tone, said:

"I suppose it must be treated seriously. Do you wish me to act for you in the matter?"

"I do."

"What evidence has Mr. Angell that you have consented to marry him?"

"I don't know that he has any."

"You mean that you have been so reckless in your numerous flirtations that you have not kept track of the men you have accepted and those you have refused?"

"That's about it."

"What course shall I pursue in this case?"

"Oh, settle it as best you can. It won't beggar me to pay at all."

Considering that Miss Archer was worth several hundred thousand dollars this was true. Angell was worth a million.

"I don't suppose," I said, "the plaintiff wants money."

"No; he wants to squeeze me."

"What!"

"He wants to make me throw over my other suitors for him."

"Oh!"

"He thinks he can bluff me."

"And you don't propose to be bluffed."

"No, I don't. You just write his lawyers for me that I'll pay the amount sued for entire and don't consider it any compliment that the damages named are so small."

I wrote Messrs. Gymcrack, Spinner & Muchmore that my client would pay the amount claimed. In due time a reply came from them inclosing a typewritten apology that Miss Archer was to sign acknowledging that she had acted very dishonorably toward the plaintiff, humbly begged his forgiveness and "she will keep her contract with him." Belle signed it, but put the word "not" between the words "will" and "keep."

It did not appear to me that Mr. Angell was making much progress in this game of bluff. I was curious to know what his next move would be, for I did not see any move that he could make. He adopted the Fabian policy—he did nothing. When sufficient time for a reply had elapsed and I received nothing like a continuance of the fight nor a disposition to capitulate I made up my mind that it would be a case of attrition. I was convinced that the couple were in love with each other and one of the two would give in in time. Which would it be?

One day I received a note from Angell's attorneys to the effect that since their client was about to be married a return of his letters to Miss Archer would be appreciated. I took the note to Belle, and I saw by her expression when she read it that she was beaten.

"This caps the bluff's climax," I remarked to give her courage.

"That we don't know. He's just mean enough to marry somebody to spite me."

"What will you do next?"

"Please write the lawyers that I will deliver Mr. Angell's letters to him in person. But I shall expect an apology from him for putting this affair between us into the hands of lawyers."

"Humph!"

"What do you mean by that?"

"Nothing. I think your decision very sensible."

"Sensible? Of course it's sensible. What do I want with the letters of a man I don't intend to marry? And am I not entitled to an apology?"

"Certainly."

A meeting was arranged between plaintiff and defendant at my office. I was supposed to be present, but when Belle came in with a satchel full of letters I slid out a back door. I remained away an hour, and when I returned a grinning student in the office told me that after much billing and cooing the lovers had departed radiantly happy.

I wonder if Angell thought he was deceiving his attorney as Belle supposed she was deceiving me.

PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS MEAN BAD BLOOD.

People who have impure or impoverished blood should be careful to take only a vegetable remedy such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is and has been for over 40 years.

The first day you start to take this reliable medicine, impure germs and accumulations begin to separate in the blood and are then expelled through the Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

In place of the impurities, the arteries and veins gradually get fresh vitalized blood and the action of this good blood on the skin means that pimples, boils, carbuncles, eczema, rash, acne and all skin blemishes will disappear. Then you must remember that when the blood is right, the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys become healthy, active and vigorous and you will have no more trouble with indigestion, backache, headache and constipation.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day at any medicine dealers; it is a powerful blood purifier, so penetrating that it even gets at the impure deposits in the joints and carries them out of the system.

Contains neither alcohol nor narcotics. Its ingredients are made public and printed on wrapper.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. You will not be disappointed. For free advice write Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

CARDINAL GIBBON'S VIEW

Americans Should Not Risk Plunging U.S. Into War

BALTIMORE, August 24.—Cardinal Gibbons returned from his vacation to-day and looks the picture of health. He went at once to his home on North Charles street, accompanied by Bishop Dennis J. O'Connell, of Richmond, Va., who spent his vacation with the Cardinal on Long Island. Almost the first topic of conversation of the Cardinal was the strained conditions with Germany. He is pained and grieved over the possibility of the United States becoming involved in the terrible struggle. He spoke his views clearly and gave the impression that he had pondered the subject long and carefully.

"War is a terrible thing," said the Cardinal, "and we should not lightly jump into the strife that is tearing the world to pieces. We, in this country, know little of the harrowing conditions in the Old Country. War seems to have a lot of glory and chivalry, but for the widows and orphans it seems endless suffering and pain. The millions in Europe know now what war means.

"True, too," he continued, "it seems a terrible cost to sacrifice thousands of young men—the life and sinew of the nation just because a few insist on taking a risk. For it is nothing but a foolish risk for Americans to take the dare of travelling by ships that are in danger. Why should they court the danger?

"The sinking of the steamship Arabic precipitated the present crisis between the United States and Germany. This was an English vessel and it is deplorable that Americans take the risk of travelling on ships that are subject to such dangers."

"A true lover of America should sacrifice personal whim when the honor and the peace of the nation hangs in the balance. It seems like asking to much to expect the country to stand up and fight just because a few are over-daring.

"Calm thought and great prudence is what the nation requires in the crisis. We can rely on President Wilson to lead us right. The people should not in any manner hinder him in deciding the issue. Loud-voiced opinion, no matter from what source, is untimely and only complicate matters. Both sides should be heard and trust that President Wilson will wait until Germany explains herself or has a chance to explain."

* * *

Harry Lauder is going to the front to sing, and in order to prove how heroic the sacrifice is it is explained that Harry won't receive a half-penny for it. That is enough to scare the Germans out of their trenches.

DIVERGENT PATHS

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Having business in a small town in the west I found within its limits a very pretty park bounded by substantial improvements. In its center was a bronze statue of a man in civilian's dress, in one hand a roll of parchment. I fancied that the original was either a distinguished public man or a philanthropist—quite likely the latter. Meeting a man who appeared to occupy an average position in the town I accosted him and asked him whom the statue represented.

"There's a story connected with it," he replied, "and if you will sit beside me on one of these benches I will tell it to you."

We seated ourselves, and he told me the following story:

"This is Rogers' park, and that is a statue of Ben Rogers, who founded it. More than fifty years ago Ben and Sam Rogers were boys, somewhat ragged, playing marbles and ball and such other boys' games right here where this park is now located. It was then a vacant tract and considered worthless. Now the property bordering on it is worth millions.

"Sam Rogers, the younger brother, was picked out for a failure in life because he couldn't hold on to his money. He was what was called chicken hearted, and whenever he saw any one in trouble for want of money down went his hand into his pocket. Ben, on the contrary, was marked for a rich man. He looked out for himself and rolled up money in a small way from the time he was ten years old.

"Ben Rogers stayed right here in this town and accumulated money slowly till the man who owned the land on which we are sitting died, and it was sold out for a song. Ben bought it and conceived the idea of making a park of it. He secured options on all the bordering property, then gave his original purchase to the town on condition they would make a park of it.

"Sam Rogers when about twenty-five years old left the town, regretted by every impecunious person in it. The more successful citizens said, "A good riddance." At the end of a dozen years Sam came back and surprised every one by bringing a fortune with him. When asked how he got it he said it was by pure luck. This was all they could get out of him, but I learned the truth long after his death. He had loaned a man a hundred dollars to save a piece of property he owned, the property afterward became very valuable, and when the owner died, having no one else to leave it to, he left it to Sam Rogers.

"Sam on his return resumed his giving to needy persons, only he now gave $10 where formerly he had given 10 cents. His brother, Ben, had been saving his money and had got enough together to begin to think about making an investment on a larger scale. It was soon after Sam's return that the original owner of this property died. Ben not having enough money to carry out his enterprise called on his brother to go in with him. Sam said that he didn't want to make any more money than he had already, but he would loan Ben all he wanted.

"I was then studying law with Ben Rogers' attorney and know whereof I'm going to tell you. Sam paid no attention to the securities his brother gave him and one day woke up to learn that he had been swindled out of all he possessed. He never told any one how he lost his fortune and enjoined secrecy on his brother's attorneys. By this time he was too old to make another fortune and lived a precarious life till he finally died from want of proper sustenance and medical attendance. A number of persons whom he had befriended bought a lot in the cemetery and buried him there.

"Ben Rogers became the most influential man in the town, and when any important town matter was to be decided he was called upon for his opinion. He built a church on a worthless tract of land he owned and sold off the rest of the tract for another fortune. He established other institutions, contriving to make money out of all of them.

"When he died he left money for a suitable monument, desiring that he should be buried in the park that bore his name and which it had given him so much pleasure to have provided for the enjoyment of the people of his native town. His executors had been instructed by him before his death to provide that statue, for which and its pedestal $50,000 had been provided in the will."

When the narrator had finished his story I expressed a desire to visit the grave of Samuel Rogers. He told me that the cemetery was not half a mile away, and I determined to take a stroll in that direction. He also told me where to find the grave in among the less desirable lots. I thanked him for his story and passed on.

When I reached the cemetery I asked a well to do looking person I saw there if he could direct me to the grave of Samuel Rogers. He looked at me doubtfully, then said:

"I reckon you're looking for the monument of Benjamin Rogers, the philanthropist and founder of Rogers park. It's in the center of the town."

I passed on and presently at a little distance saw a grave covered with flowers. Approaching it, I read on a cheap headstone the name "Samuel Rogers, the friend of the poor."

WHEAT CUTTING NOW GENERAL IN MANITOBA

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—The C.P.R. weekly crop bulletin, issued to-day, says, that in Manitoba good harvesting weather prevailed during the week and cutting is general over practically the whole province. On the main line, the Souris and the La Riviere subdivisions, 75 per cent. of the cutting is done, and in the rest of the province approximately 50 per cent. Threshing has commenced at a number of points in southern Manitoba, but will be about two weeks later in the north.

In Saskatchewan there is cutting in early fields in all parts of the province. Cutting will become general before the end of the week.

In Alberta heavy rains in most parts retarded ripening somewhat. Cutting will not be general before the end of the present week. Hail losses during the week amounted to 28,000 bushels.

CHAPTER XXX—CONTINUED

"Yes, and the best of friends, too," responded Phillis, cheerfully, for Nan was too much crushed by all this eloquence to answer. "Come along, Dulce! don't listen any more to this nonsense, when you know mother is wanting us. Dick is all very well when he is in a good humor, but time and dressmaking wait for no man." And the young hypocrite dragged the unwilling Dulce away. "Can't you leave them alone to come to an understanding?" whispered Phillis in her ear, when they got outside the door. "I can see it in his eyes; and Nan is on the verge of crying; she is so upset with the surprise. And, you goose, where are you going now?"

"To mother. Did you not say she wanted us?"

"Oh, you silly child!" returned Phillis, calmly; "does not mother always want us? One must say what comes uppermost in one's mind in emergencies of this sort. But for me, you would have stood there for an hour starring at them. Mother is out, as it happens; if you like we will go and meet her. Oh, no, I forgot; Dick is a young man, and it would not be proper. Let us go into the kitchen and help Dorothy." And away they went.

"Phillis is a trump!" thought Dick, as he shut the door. "I love that girl." And then he marched up to Nan, and took her hands boldly.

"Now ,Nan you owe me amends for this; at least you will say you are sorry."

"No, Dick," hanging her head, for she could not face his look, he was masterful and determined with her, and so unlike the easy Dick of old. "I am not a bit sorry; I would not have spoiled your holiday fro worlds.'

"My holiday!—a precious holiday it was without you! A lot of stupid climbing, with grinning idiots for company. Well, never mind that," his wrathful tone changing in a moment. "So you kept me in the dark for my own good?"

"Yes, of course, Dick. What an unnecessary question!"

"And you wanted me, Nan?"

"Yes," very faintly, and there was a little tear-drop on one of Nan's lashes.

She had been so miserable—how miserable he would never know; but he need not have asked her that.

"Oh, very well; then I won't bother you with any more questions. Now we understand each other, and can just go to business."

Nan looked up in his face in alarm. She anticipated another lecture, but nothing of the sort came. Dick cleared his throat, got a little red, and went on:

"I say settle our business, because we have been as good as engaged all these years. You know you belong to me, Nan?"

"Yes, Dick," she returned, obediently; for she was too much taken by surprise to know what she ought to say, and the two words escaped from her almost unconsciously.

"There never was a time we were not fond of each other,—ever since you were so high," pointing to what would represent the height of an extremely dwarfish infant of seven or eight months.

"Oh, not so long ago as that," returned Nan, laughing a little.

"Quite as long," repeated Dick, solemnly. "I declare, I have been so fond of you all my life, Nan, that I have been the happiest fellow in the world. Now, look here; just say after me, 'Dick, I promise on my word of honor to marry you.'"

Nan repeated the words, and then she paused in affright.

"But your father!" she gasped—"and the dressmaking! Oh Dick! what have you made me say? You have startled me into forgetting everything. Oh dear! oh dear! what shall I do?" continued Nan in the most innocent way. "We shal be engaged al our lives for he will never allow you to marry me. Dick dear Dick, please let me off! I never meant to give in like this."

"Never mind what you meant to do," returned Dick, with the utmost gravity; "the thing is, you have done it. On your word and honor, Nan, remember. Now we are enaged."

"Oh, but Dick, please don't take such advantage of me, just because I said—or, at least, you said—I was fond of you. What will mother say? She will be dreadfully shocked; and it is so cruel to your father. I will be engaged to you in a way. I will promise—I will vow, if you will—never to marry any one else."

"I should think not," interrupted Dick, fiercely. "I would murder the fellow, whoever he was!" and in spite of himself his thought reverted to the fair beard and handsome face of the young clergyman.

Nan saw from his obstinate face that her eloquence was all wasted; but she made one more attempt, blushing like a rose:

"I will even promise to marry you, if your father gives his consent. You know, Dick, I would never go against him."

"Nor I. You ought to know me better, Nan, than to think I should act shabbily and leave the dear old fellow in the dark."

"Then you will set me free," marvelling a little over her lover's good sense and filial submission.

"As free as an engagement permits. Why, what do you mean, Nan? Have I not just told you we are engaged for good and all? Do you suppose I do not mean to tell my father so on the first opportunity? There he comes! bless the man, I knew he would follow me! Now you shall see how I can stick up for the girl I love." But Dick thought it better to release the hand he had been holding all this time.

There are certain moments in life when one is in too exalted a mood to feel the usual sensations that circumstances might warrant. At another time Nan would have been shocked at the condition of her work-room, being a tidy little soul, and thrifty as to pins and other odds and ends; and the thought of Mr. Mayne coming upon them unexpectedly would have frightened her out of her senses.

The room was certainly not in its usual order. There had been much business transacted there that morning. The table was strewn with breadths of gray broche silk; and unfinished gauzy-loking dresses hung over a chair; the door of the wardrobe was open, and a row of dark-looking shapes—like Bluebeard's decapitated wives—were dimly revealed to view. A sort of lay figure, draped in calico, was in one corner. As Nan observed to Phillis afterwards, "There was not a tidy corner in the whole room.

Nevertheless, the presence of Dick so glorified the place that Nan looked around at the chaos quite calmly, as she heard Mr. Mayne's sharp voice first inquiring for her mother and then for herself. Dorothy, with her usual tact, would have shown him into the little parlor; but Nan, who wished for no disguise, stepped forward and threw open the door.

"I am here, Dorothy. Come in, Mr. Mayne. Dick is here, too, and I am so sorry mother is out.

"I might have known that scapegrace would have given me the slip"! muttered Mr. Mayne, as he shook hands ungraciously with Nan and then followed her into the work-room.

Dick ,who was examining the wardrobe, turned round and saluted his father with a condescending nod:

"You were too long with the parson; I could not wait, you see. Did you make all these dresses, Nan? You are awfully clever, you girls. They look first-rate—this greeny-browny-yellowish one, for example," pulling out a much furbelowed garment destined for Mrs. Squails.

"Oh, Dick, do please leave them alone!" and Nan authoritatively waved him away, and closed the wardrobe.

"I was only admiring your handiwork," returned Dick, imperturbably. "Does she not look a charming little dressmaker, father?" regarding Nan with undistinguished pleasure, as she stood in her pretty bib-apron before them.

But Mr. Mayne drew his heavy eyebrows together, and said,—

"Pshaw, Dick! don't chatter such folly. I want to have some talk with Miss Nancy myself."

fl;DDt Difmgb liDLv xDiDi um

"All right; I have had my innings," returned naughty Dick; but he shot a look at Nan that made her blush to her finger ends, and that was not lost on Mr. Mayne.

"Well, now, Miss Nancy, what does all this mean?" he asked harshly. "Here we have run down just in a friendly way—Dick and I—leaving the mother rather knocked up after her travels at Longmead, to look you up and see how you are getting on. And now we find you have been deceiving us all along, and keeping us in the dark, and that you are making yourselves the talk of the place, sewing a parcel of gowns for all the townspeople."

Mr. Mayne didn't add that his son had so bothered him for the last three weeks to run down to Hadleigh that he had acceded at last to his request, in the hope of enjoying a little peace.

"Draw it mild!" muttered Dick, who did not much admire this opening trade; but Nan answered, with much dignity—

"If people talk about us it is because of the novelty. They have never heard of gentle-people doing this sort of work before——"

"I should think not!" wrathfully from Mr. Mayne.

"Things were so bad for us that we should have all had to separate if Phillis had not planned this scheme; and then mother would have broken her heart; but now we are getting on famously. Our work gives satisfaction, we have plenty of orders; we do not forfeit people's good opinions, for we have nothing but respect shown us, and——"

But here Mr. Mayne interrupted her flow of eloquence somewhat rudely.

"Pack of nonsense!" he exclaimed, angrily. "I wonder at your mother—I do indeed. I thought she had more sense. You have no right to outrage your friends in this way; it is treating us badly. What will your mother say, Dick? She will be dreadfully shocked. I am sorry for you, my boy,—I am indeed; but, under the circumstances——"

But what he was about to add was checked by a very singular proceeding on the part of his son; for Dick suddenly took Nan's hand, and drew her forward.

"Don't be sorry for me, father; I am the happiest fellow alive. Nan and I have come to an understanding at last, after all these years. Allow me to present to you the future Mrs. Richard Mayne."

To be Coontinued.

DREAMS THAT COME TRUE.

And Those That Don't and the Workings of the Sleep Mind.

Of course, some dreams come true. The most hardheaded business man will have to admit it. But the proportion of them? That's where people differ.

Few people, if any, sleep without dreaming, and even on the basis of only one dream a night this would mean over seventeen thousand dreams for each person fifty years old. Yet few of us can recall even seventeen occasions in which a coming event has been forecasted in a dream. The prophecy that comes true is remembered because the actual occurrence brings to memory the concepts in the dream, the others are forgotten.

Since our dreams are woven from the fabric of our lives, and our lives, after all, run along in fairly narrow grooves, it would be astounding if some of them did not juggle our impressions in such wise as to seem to forecast something new. The mathematical doctrine of chances alone suffices to justify the dreams that strike right. After all, one in a thousand isn't so many.

The dreams that give right answers to problems, too, are evidences not only of prophecy, but also of the existence of a sleep mind which works differently from the waking mind.

The sleep mind, which works by intuition, gains, as well as loses, by its freedom from the shackles of logic and reason. Conclusions based on reason are often utterly unsound, because we do not know all the reasons, whereas an intuitive conclusion, which is the outcome of emotion, may be inherently right.

Wherefore when a serious question awaits decision it is not a sign of indeterminateness, but an evidence of wisdom, to say, "I want to sleep on that."

Quite unconsciously we do this sometimes, believing the answer to be merely a ruse to gain time. Truly our intent is to take a change of venue, to have the point settled by the sleep mind, which is free from the shackles of prejudice and custom.—New York American.

His Quaint Suggestion.

A Frenchman who appears to have been of a thrifty turn of mind conceived the idea in 1878 that too much valuable time was being wasted in cleaning sardines when preparing them for the market. He found a way of preparing them without cleaning them, and on this he took out letters patent. Apparently he had some slight misgiving as to whether the public would be perfectly suited with his invention and so in his claim he makes this parenthetical entry:

Fish put up by this process may be slightly unpleasant to the customer at first, but he soon gets used to it.

First Moving Pictures.

The first moving picture machine was patented in 1867. In 1893 the cinematograph was produced by Lumier. This was the first machine to project on a screen pictures from a film. Edison improved upon this machine in 1896, when he produced the vitascope. These machines provided the models for the improved types in use today.—Philadelphia Press.

Women.

"Women are dreams," murmured the sentimentalist, gazing on a group of them in silk attire.

"You bet they are," the practicalist snapped back at the murmurous one, "and dreams go by contraries, all right."—Judge.

Drink Plenty of Water.

A Roumanian scientist claims that any one can live to be 100 years old, barring accidents, if he drinks enough water. He declares he has discovered that old age is due to a decrease in the amount of water in the system and that Father Time may be checkmated by systematic water drinking during middle age.

Buying Wives.

Wives are still obtained by purchase in some parts of Russia. In the district of Kamyshin, on the Volga, this is practically the only way in which marriages are brought about. The price of a pretty girl from a well to do family ranges from $100 to $200.

Same Way.

"How did you find dear old Broadway?"

"That way yet."

"What way?"

"Old and dear."—Cleveland Leader.

TO THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION VIA THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to the modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

INVASION OF CLUBLAND

Young Bloods of Army Disturb Service Clubs' Quiet

NEW YORK, August 26.—"Over in England so many of you fellows without military training have been utilized as material for officers and have to go through a course of training that there is a new personage in London now—it is called the "temporary officers'", said a Vanderbilt guest who arrived today on the Nieuw Amsterdam. "Some of these chaps are pretty wild. They have access to the service clubs and more than once their youthful spirits have helped enliven some of those conservative haunts to the extent of alarming the governors.

"One of these clubs was recently compelled to post a notice requesting the young bloods to restrain themselves when in the club rooms. The notice runs this way: 'Temporary officers who enjoy the privileges of this club are respectfully requested to conduct themselves as temporary gentlemen.'"

THE PORT OF PROFIT

Abe Lincoln told this story of a Mississippi river steamboat that had a four-foot boiler and a "seven-foot" whistle. Every time the boat blew its whistle it stopped.

His steamboat was great on "attention getting" but poor on progress.

The advertising steamboat has lost interest in the mere noise of whistles. Its owners have ceased to measure results by sound. They are insisting that quick transit to the Port of Profit is to be their test of efficiency.

And so advertisers are turning to newspapers for their voyage to the desired harbor.

Patriotism of an M.P.

Buys a Machine Gun With Money He Saved for an Auto

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—A signal example of patriotism is shown in the announcement that Mr. Clarence Jamieson, Conservative member for Digby, N.S., took the money that he had been saving for the purchase of an automobile and bought a machine gun for the soldiers. His example in the province of Nova Scotia has resulted in the offer of no less than 100 machine guns by individuals and corporations, stimulated by the M.P.'s action.

Mr. Jamieson injured his leg rather severely a couple of years ago, and was confined for months to his rooms in Ottawa. For the purpose of travelling throug his constituency, an automobile to him would have been a necessity, and not a luxury but he has sacrificed all that for the good of the cause.

Ready for Big Fair Opening

War Demonstration and Military Features to be big Attractions of a Record Year

When the Canadian National Exhibition is formally opened on Monday next there will be inaugurated what promises to be one of the most successful fairs in the whole thirty-seven years' history of the big institution. Held as it is, at a time when the Empire is embroiled in a world war, and when Canada is doing her bit to the extent of her resources to keep her place beside the Mother Country, the Exhibition has made a peculiar appeal to the national pride and all indications are for a demonstration of Canadian strength, industrially and agriculturally, that will be a fit answer to outsiders who may think that Canadian unity or faith has been disturbed by the events in Europe.

Everything has been done to reproduce as faithfully as possible the conditions under which the boys in Flanders are now living, and the war demonstrations at the Model Camp and in other parts of the grounds will vividly picture the difficulties and dangers besetting both the Army and Navy. The activities of the Flying Corps will be shown by military aviators from the training camps, who will drop bombs and, with the aid of hidden mines destroy minature battleships on the waterfront, in a spectacular portrayal of some of the difficulties the men of Fleet forcing their way to the heart of Turkdom are experiencing.

Rawdon Rallies To the Flag

$2000 to be Raised for the Equipment of Soldiers

The council of the Township of Rawdon, called a meeting of the citizens at Springbrooke on Tuesday evening, August 24th, to get the sentiment of the people in regard to making grants for the equipment of the different battalions going to the front, and for the needs of the soldiers.

The meeting, which was largely attended, was addressed on the "Issues of the War," "The Needs of our Soldiers," "The Protection of our Homes," "Why we are at War," by Col. Hemming, Commander of 3rd division; Col. Dawson, commanding 59th Battalion; Trooper Malloy, R. M. C.; Capt. McConnell; J. R. Cooke, M. P. P.; W. McIlroy, M. P. P. Carleton Co., and interspersed by selections of music.

A standing vote was taken and every man, woman, boy and girl in the audience rose to their feet; thus authoizing the expendutre of 1 mill on the dollar of the assessment or $2,000 in round numbers.

This bequest, together with other patriotic contributions from Rawdon Township, totals $7,500, in the first year of war.

CAMPBELLFORD PLACES TWEED IN THE DISCARD

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont., Aug. 25.—Campbellford won their tenth stright victory and the eastern Ontario intermediate championship of he O. A. L. A. here to-day, when they defeated Tweed by the score of 6 to 2 before the largest crowd that was ever at a game in Campbellford. This gives the locals the round by 11 to 7, as the first game in Tweed was 5 to 5. It was a nip-and-tuck affair in the first half, but the pace set by the locals told on Tweed in the last half. In the second quarter Campbellford had five men on the fence, but Tweed failed to score.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Lt.-Col. Munro, officer commanding the 8th C.M.R., and Major Routh returned from Brockville yesterday, where they interviewed prominent citizens in regard to the proposed visit of the regiment to that city some time next week. As far as it is known at present, the 8th will reach Brockville byway of Seeley's Bay, Lyndhurst and Athens on September 4th. On Sunday, the 5th, a drumhead service will be held in the morning in front of the Court House, with the band of the 15th regiment present. The regiment will remain in Brockville until Tuesday, September 7th, and then return to camp by way of Lansdowne and Gananoque.

Throughout the entire trek of the 8th active service conditons will prevail, and tactical schemes will be worked out on the way. This, combined with a desire to stimulate recruiting, is the purpose of the trek.

At noon yesterday there was quite a commotion in camp over the arrival of the new brass band for the 59th Batatlion. The band played its way into the lines of the 59th, and drew the men and officers from all over the field. The band was recruited in Peterboro' some time ago, and for a while it looked as though Peterboro' was going to hang on to the musicians recruited for the use of the 59th in Barriefield camp, but, finally, influence and argument prevailed and the band landed in camp yesterday.

Yesterday the men of the 32nd, 33rd and 34th batteries were issued with boots. They have not yet received uniforms, but these are expected soon. The demand for military clothing is so great, that outfitting the men who join the service is quite a problem.

The 59th were in good luck yesterday as they received 52 recruits from Peterborough, 11 from Belleville, and 2 the battalion secured in camp.

The 34th Battery received altogether 29 recruits yesterday, Lieut. Johnson is keeping the recruits very busy with their foot drill, so that by the time they get their horses, they will be prepared to undertake gun drill.

The 34th now has 100 men on its roll. They are of the best type, physically, morally and mentally.

Lt.-Col. Munro and Major Routh left by boat for Toronto yesterday afternoon for the purpose of trying to buy a field kitchen. This is something the regiment must have to carry on its training successfully, and will be needed for the trek next week. It will be bought in the hope that friends will rally round the 8th, and help them in paying for it.

WHAT'S WHAT and WHY

For Fall 1915

The first "peep" at the new Fall Styles brings forth many delighted expressions, which signifies much for their coming popularity, especially so is the distinctly smart Suit Model in Navy Blue Serge on display in the window. A button up to the neck or lay down collar, with belt and pockets. Above the belt in the back pleating is used and below a large boxpleat. The skirt is semi-wide with two pockets at the sides.

PRICE

$22.50

A brief Mention of Coat Styles just to Pique Your Imagination

They are loose, very, not however the looseness of former seasons, but a decided "chic" style suggesting greatness and they are invariably belted.

Military styles, of course, predominate, and do not allow us for a moment to forget how they originated. The cloths are for the greater part imitation fur fabrics and here we wish to dwell—fur fabrics such as these we have will surely "take." Rich lustrous "Lambs," Chinchilla, Mole, etc., are surprisingly well copied and their prices are to say the least "moderate." Your judgement will verify this.

R TANNAHILL
Manager Belleville Branch

A Costly Client.

Miss Bayley told me that Mr. Phipps the oculist, told a gentleman, who told her, the following anecdote of the late Duchess of Devonshire: Mr. Phipps was sent for to Chatsworth to operate upon the duchess' eye. He stayed there some time and at parting received from the duke a fee of £1,000 Just before he stepped into his carriage a message from the duchess brought him to her chamber. She hoped the duke had done what was handsome by Mr. Phipps. The gentleman protested:

"Yes, and more than handsome."

"It is an awful thing," continued her grace, "to ask, but really I am at this moment in immediate want of such a sum, and if you could, Mr. Phipps"—

What could the oculist do? He produced his £1,000, took his leave and never heard of his money from that day to this.—From "Recollections of a Long Life," by Lord Broughton.

Weather Wise.

Wrinkled and old and gray,
With a magician's skill,
The spider toils each day
Weaving his threads at will.

Dew spangled on the lawn
His webs are all in place
Looking at peep of dawn
Like coverlets of lace.

Just at the rise of sun
His net he spins and spins,
And dewdrops, one by one,
Into the mesh he wins.

The day will then be fair,
No drop of rain will fall;
Children without a care
May picnic, one and all.

The spider's weather wise
And we can trust his sign,
The storms will not arise
To spoil the glad sunshine.

But had his webs he spun
Upright from spray to spray
No outdoor picnic fun
Could we have had that day.

Had Learned One Lesson.

At one school the pupils were requested to bring 5 cents each for the piano. Donations were slow in coming and the teacher was obliged to remind the class frequently before the total was collected.

A few days later, at the physiology lesson, the teacher asked, "What are the five senses?"

To which an earnest foreigner replied, "Five centses is for de piano."—New York Tribune

West Harvest Has Suitable Weather

No Danger of Frost in Any of the Provinces

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27.—Comparatively high temperature has prevailed throughout the West to-day, with some rain in Alberta and clear elsewhere, and there is no danger from frost anywhere. Harvesting is proceeding at a very satisfactory rate in all districts.

The manager of the Government Labor Bureau at Saskatoon states that the supply of labor exceeds the demand and at many points it is reported a number of men are unable to find work.

Threshing is reported from one point near Moose Jaw and a carload of oats was shipped to Winnipeg.

Calgary reports that the majority of the crop is beyond danger from frost.

HOLDS WATSON MOST GUILTY

Georgia Can't Forget His Work, Says Atlanta Journal

ATLANTA Aug. 26.—Commenting on the Frank lynching The Atlanta Journal says:

"This unspeakable cruel and horrible crime that has been perpetrated by a band of law-defying men sweeps immeasurably further than the issues of the Frank case; it sweeps to the very base of our government institutions and challenges the very existence of our social order.

"If this lynching, which, by the way, is the ninth that has occurred in Georgia within the last eight months, is condoned by responsible authorities, who can say how frequent and swift will be the lynching to follow? Let us face the stark and terrible issue now, let us settle it now, or resign our State to the unbridled instincts of the jungle.

"As the chief custodian of the State's honor and law, it is the Governor's solemn duty to probe this crime to its blackest bottom and to exhaust every resource at his command to see that the guilty are punished and the State's integrity vindicated. If Governor Harris does nothing else during his entire administration, but does this in just completion, he will have rendered his State immortal service and will go into history among the bravest and greatest men of his time.

"It is a straight-out issue between law and anarchy. Let Georgians choose for themselves. The climax was inevitable as long as we permitted incendiary publications to set Georgia aflame. Tom Watson has cost Georgia more than 10,000 good and true men can rebuild in twenty years.

"The war in Europe is horrible enough; but anarchy at home is worse.

"Those who are disposed to temporize with this istuation further will be as guilty of Georgia's disgrace and retrogression as the mob itself. Only worse than either of these is the man who has so persistently sown these seeds of hate and violence and anarchy throughout Georgia.

"God may be able to forgive him, but Georgia will never be able to forget him and his hellish work."

British Gov't May Take Over The Coal Mines

LONDON, Aug. 27—Nationalization of the coal mines of Wales is an important question now under consideration by the British Cabinet, it was learned to-day.

Premier Asquith called a special Cabinet meeting to-day to discuss the crisis caused by the new strike. Already 25,000 miners have quit work, and the outlook is becoming more serious daily.

The Government wishes to avoid, if possible, the taking of any action that will appear to be a repudiation of the Runciman decision, but the miners' leaders are firm in their declaration that they will refuse to accept this finding.

The Government will not tolerate the closing of the Welsh collieries at the present critical stage of the war. Both the men and the coal operators were so informed several weeks ago when the dispute was carried to London. In the event that the two sides are unable to agree the Government wil take over the Welsh mines and operate them for the remainder of the war.

BRITAIN'S BIG NAVY MADE MORE POWERFUL

Will Germany Come Out and Fight on the Seas ?—Additions to the British Fleet Add to the Odds Against Germany

Discussing the present condition of the British navy and the possibility of an early sea fight, Mr. H. A. Pollen, in Land and Water, says:

A year ago we possessed twenty-eight battleships and battle-cruisers of the all-big-gun type, each individually more powerful than the German. Since then we have purchased two Turkish and one Chilean ships. During the year we have been competing, as Mr. Churchill told us in November, twelve more. As the Benbow, Emporor of India, Warspite, Vialant, and Barham were all, according to the pre-war program, due for completion before February this year, and as we know that Erin, Agincourt, Queen Elizabeth, and Tiger have already joined the fleet, it seems safe to assume that our numbers cannot be less than thirty-seven to the German twenty-three. The German fleet, then, is not increasing relatively. It is falling more hopelessly behind. If Germany would not engage when the odds were twenty-three to twenty-eight—and she had as many opportunities as there were days between August 4th and the first increase to our strength—is it likely that she will seek an engagement when the odds are at twenty-three to thirty-seven?

Do Not Command Baltic.

Germany's impotence at sea has again been demonstrated by the events of the week reported from the Baltic and her failure to take Riga. The loss of Riga would not at present be a great blow to the Russians, because the fact that the Baltic is closed to ocean trade greatly lessens the value of Riga as a seaport. It never has been a naval base. But if the Germans could get command of the Baltic, Riga would be of supreme importance to them as a base for an invading army. Libau and Windau already in the foe's possession do not afford facilities.

As yet the Germans have neither Riga nor command of the Baltic. They cannot get command of the Baltic except by defeating the Russian squadron or driving it into Reval or behind Kronstadt. The latter procedure would probably not be as simple as it sounds. If, as one gathers from Admiral Grigorovitch's recent statement, the four new Dreadnoughts are in commission, it will need a very considerable squadron of German ships to hold them in their ports. If this war has shown anything, it has shown that the Russians are not afraid of engaging even when the odds seem to be hopelessly against them. Any adventure of the foe in the Baltic has been fraught with danger, especially since the advent of British submarines.

RUSSIAN RETREAT CARRIED OUT ALONG PREARRANGED LINE

(Canadian Press Special)

PETROGRAD, Aug. 28.—Official statement last night says Brest Litovsk was not taken by Austrian assault. It had been decided for some time it was inconsistent with Russian general plan to retain one hundred thousand in that fortress and therefore while resistance was maintained on the left bank of the Bug all useful material was removed from the fortress. The garrison retiring joined the field army and fortifications and ridges were destroyed.

London, August 27.—Brest-Litovsk, the greatest fortress and entrenched camp in Russia, and regarded by military authorities as a vastly more important strategic point than Warsaw, has been occupied by the Austro-German armies

The exact time of its evacuation by the Russians cannot be stated, but apparently it began soon after the piercing of the western and northwestern front of the position by the Germanic allies on Tuesday night.

As was the case at Warsaw, Ivangorod and Ossowetz, the Russian garrison not only escaped to carry with them or destroy all their supplies and ammunition.

No attempt was made by the Grand Duke Nicholas to defend the fortress itself. The Russian commander-in-chief, as shown all through the great campaign regards a fortress as important only so long as it serves the purpose of a field army. In other words, it is used to facilitate the movements of the mobile force, not to imprison and immobilize it.

The three weeks since August 5th, the day of the German entry into Warsaw, have seen the Germanic Allies march and fight over 20 miles of Polish plain, between the Vistula and the Bug, seize the fortresses of Novo-Georgievck, Kovel, and with the exception of Grodno and the secondary fortress of Olita, force back the entire main Russian line of defence, the Bug river-Best-Litovsk barrier.

Military writers have given full credit to the war machine that could accomplish this enormous task in so brief a time. But they give as much credit to the Grand Duke Nicholas, whose genius in retreat has extricated his forces from traps into which less ably led armies would have fallen in disaster. Not once has the German net, skilfully placed and as skilfully manoeuvred, caught the Russians in its meshes.

In the opinion of observers here the most serious aspect of the situation for the Russians now is the Austro-German wedge driven into the Pripet marches from Kovel. This wedge may have sut off the army south of Kovel, and operating along the Zloota Lipa river to the Dniester, from all connections with the great body on the line from Brest-Litovsk to the Gulf of Riga.

The only railway communication now between the extreme left wing reaching down to Bessarabia and the Roumanian frontier and the centre and right is by a circuitous route through Kovno and Lunienz, a distance of more than three hundred miles over a single track railroad.

Rejected Recruit Charged at Lindsay

An east ward young man appeared before P. M. Jackson, at Lindsay, charged with unlawfully entering the Digby Lumber Co.'s premises during the night of the 24th of Aug., and taking from the premises one chisel, one saw, 1 try square, 3 braces and bits, 2 cold chisels, 1 finishing hammer, 2 rubber pads and 1 inking pad.

The usual question, "Will you be tried summarily or go to next court of competent jurisdiction," was propounded to the prisoner by the magistrate. The prisoner took the quickest way of settling the difficulty and elected to be tried summarily, pleading guilty to the charges placed against him.

In answer to the magistrate, the man attributed his downfall to drink, being very much under the influence of liquor at the time.

"I will not occept a plea of drunkness as an extenuating circumstance for crime," said his worship. "You are now out on suspended sentence given by County Magistrate F. D. Moore at a previous session of this court and I will await his decision before passing sentence."

The prisoner was taken to the jail by Constable Woods who made the arrest during the day, to await the return of County Magistrate Moore, K. C., who is out of town.

Crown Attorney Stinson was present and referred to the bicycle case the prisoner had been implicated in some weeks ago and which charge he got off by going for overseas service, but on going to Kingston from Lindsay was rejected and sent home.

Conscription Is Before Cabinet

Committee Has Heard Evidence of Kitchener and Other Ministers

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Daily Chronicle says a committee of the Cabinet, consitingof Lord Crewe, Lord Cabinet consisting of Lord Crewe, Lord Chamberlain, and Arthur Henderson, is holding an inquiry as to the advisability and feasibility of conscription.

Lord Kitchener has given evidence before the committee as have other Ministers, members and officials and it is hoped that the committee will finish its labors before the meeting of Parliament in the middle of September.

Trent and Triest Objectives of Italian Army

Italian Front Has Been Divided into Two Wide Sections

(Canadian Press Special)

ROME, Aug. 28.—The Italian front has been divided by General Cadorna, commander-in-chief, into two wide sections each conducting vast enveloping movements. Triest is the objective in one case and Trent in the other.

Action is developing in each theatre in accordance with pre-determined plans. Reports from the front state that constant progress is being made, though it is slow.

350 CANADIAN GUARDS PROTECT GRAIN CROP

GRAND FORKS, N.D., Aug. 27.—Three hundred and fifty armed Canadian guards are strolling the international boundary along northern Minnesota and North Dakota as the result of threats that attempts will be made to destroy the Canadian grain crop by fire.

Recently such threats came to Canadian officials from several sources, and, although they declare themselves "unconcerned" they have placed an unusually heavy guard on the border.

Threats against Canadian farmers are said to have been made principally by Austrian and Hungarian laborers.

Not only have Canadian soldiers been stationed along the boundary lines, but the Provincial elevators throughout Manitoba are said to be closely guarded.

Consuls of Allies Attacked by Huns

LONDON, Aug. 27.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd says:

"A telegram received here from Teheran, Persia, reports that the Russian and British Consuls and their military escort have been attacked at Kenghever by an armed band led by M. O. Schunemann, the German Consular Agent at Tabriz. The Britishers defended themselves with rifles, but suffered some losses.

A Cabinet meeting was held, with the result that a request was sent to the commander of a Persian brigade of Cossacks who were encamped four days' march from Kenghever to send a detachment there immediately."

Iron Money In Germany

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—The Bundesrath has passed a law providing for the coinage of iron five pfennig pieces (1 1-4 cents). The demand for five-pfennig pieces is great, especially because quantities are in circulation in the hostile territory occupied by Germany, and more are needed. Under present circumstances, however, the use of nickel as a metal for their coinage is held to be inadvisable.

RUSSIA SURE OF ULTIMATE VICTORY

Will Fight on to a Victorious Finish—Minister of Foreign Affairs Makes Optimistic Statement—"No Force in World Russia Need Fear"

"No one who has studied the campaigns of our glorious armies can doubt their stamina and determination to fight this war to a victorious finish, even if years elapse and our armies are obliged to retire to the heart of Russia. We have faith in the sovereignty of our people and our allies there is no force in this world that Russia need fear. This faith we have, and with it ultimate victory for our arms is assured."—From statement of M. Sasanoff, Minister of Foreign Affairs for Russia, to the correspondent of the London Times.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 26.—Russia is now facing two attacks. One is Germany's advance with her armies. The other is far more serious. It is the German publicity campaign, which moves through a thousand intricate channels, and is aimed to discourage with misinformation the Russian public.

For a year past every Russian setback has been followed by the promotion of the same sort of insidious propaganda, which starts simultaneously in a thousand different quarters.

The attempt to destroy the Russian armies has so far proved ineffective, in spite of the superhuman efforts the enemy has made during the last three months. After each battle, and after terrific losses, the Germans find themselves holding an empty city or fortress, with the Russian army slipping out of their grasp without demoralization or confusion, to fight again on another line.

MORALE UNBREAKABLE.

It has now become obvious to the Germans that their greatest obstacle to success is the heretofore unbreakable morale of those armies. They are now, with every method possible, circulating rumors intended to demoralize the army and destroy the hope and confidence of the public.

From the moment of Warsaw's fall this propaganda has been pushed with increasing cleverness and force both in the army and in all Petrograd circles. It is directed to mislead both the soldiers and the public into the belief that victory is impossible, and that the Allies have deserted the Russian cause.

The continued necessity for retirements has now presented the opportunity to the enemy to push this programm more effectively and plausibly until today there are some people in Russia in a chaos of pessimism as to the real situation, the idea being subtly circulated that the attack in the west has been indefinitely suspended and that the highest authorities are secretly planning peace.

Within The Military Circle

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

BARRIEFIELD

Two military police will be on duty at Ontario Park for the future. They will leave the camp every evening at 6.30 and remain at the park until closed each night.

Ten nurses will be sent from the division to the city of Quebec on the 1st of September for the purpose of taking a special course in field nursing. Major Gardiner will appoint the nurses for this course in a few days, and the number will contain at least one or more from the City of Kingston

The route of the trek of the 8th C. M. R. has been definitely settled and the regiment will go via Seeley's Bay, Lyndhurst and Athens to Brockville. From Kingston to Seeley's Bay is 22 miles, and this will be the first bivouac. From Seeley's Bay to Lyndhurst is 8 miles, from Lyndhurst to Athens 12 miles, and from Athens to Brockville, 15 miles. This will mean a trek of 57 miles through what ought to prove an excellent country for recruits.

The 55th Battalion now has about 1,240 men of all ranks after losing the draft of one whole company, yesterday.

The 34th Battery received nine recruits from western points in the Division yesterday.

The 34th Battery has tackled the Engineers in a game of indoor baseball, and although beaten by a score of 21-11, the batterymen intend having another battle. The team has only just been organized and commenced practicing.

BANKERS URGED TO USE DOMINION NOTES FREELY

The Finance Minister Advises Methods to Help Farmers and Merchants

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—The Minister of Finance has drawn the attention of the Bankers' Association to the provisions of the Finance Act of 1914, under which advances may be obtained in Dominion notes upon approved collateral.

The Minister thinks that the Canadian crop will this year be unusually large and valuable, but that owing to war conditions and the state of the exchanges the movement will likely be slow. This means that the financial demands in connection with the crop movement will be heavier, and while the banks are in an unusually liquid condition and probably able without assistance to handle the situation, the Minister of Finance feels that the unusual demands of grain customers might result in curtailed banking accommodation to other sections of the community and he therefore urges the banks not to hesitate to avail themselves of the privilege of the act of last year.

The Dominion notes issued against grain bills would be retired from time to time as the crop was sold. There is no reason to apprehend a redundancy of note circulation should the banks freely avail themselves of the invitation of the Minister. With abundance of funds available for the crop movement there will be less likelihood of its being pressed for sale at least against the desire of producers and dealers.

REGIMENTAL BADGES

Great Deeds Enshrined in Familiar Devices—Battles of the Past

The regimental badges of the British Army have become so familar in past few months that there is now no difficulty in recognising the majority of the corps to which the wearers belong. The past significance of these devices, however, is not always appreciated.

Many of the badges, especially those of the line regiments, are simply an adaptation of the coat-of-arms of the country with which they are associated, but there are not a few which tell stories of gallant deeds performed centuries ago by the predecessors of the existing corps.

A good example of this "narrative" badge is that worn by the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry—a turreted archway and two red feathers above a bugle with strings.

The archway commemorates the defence of the Residency at Lucknow by the old 32nd Foot, which became the 1st Battalion of "The Docs" in 1881; the feathers are a reminder of an episode in the history of the 46th, the 2nd Battalion. The 46th went through the American War of Independence and formed part of a light battalion. When, in 1777, these six corps defeated the Americans, the latter were so incensed that they sent word that they would give no quarter to "The Light Bobs."

THE RED FEATHERS

To prevent the enemy withholding quarter from other British troops, the light battalion dipped their feathers red, and throughout the war these six companies carried the red feathers into the thickest of the fight. When the struggle ended, only the 46th retained the symbol.

In some form or other, a number of line regiments have a representation of the Sphinx on their appointments to mark their bravery in the Egyptian war with which the nineteenth century was ushered in. But the Gloucestershires are unique in possessing the right to display the figure at the back of their helmets as well as at the front. It was the 28th Foot, now the 1st Gloucestershires, who won this honor at Alexandria in 1801.

Under the command of Sir Edward Paget, the 28th triumphantly repulsed their assailants when attacked simultaneously in front and rear, and to commemorate their gallantry they were given permission to wear, first their number, and later on the substitution of territorial designations, the Sphinx, at the back of their helmets, as well as in the front.

Another regiment which has as its badge a familiar symbol is the Norfolks. On practically all the appointments of this historic regiment appears the figure of Britannia, and as a result they have been popularly christened. "The Holy Boys," the Spaniards having, or so the tradition relates, mistaken the lady for the Virgin Mary, and consequently given the men a description which they have found it difficult to live up to.

The badge was bestowed by Queen Anne on the old 9th for heroism at the battle of Almanza during the War of Succession in Spain, when they covered the retreat of Lord Galway, and "thus upheld the honour of Great Britain."

The one regiment which displays a snowy plume does so in recognition of a plucky exploit. The Royal Sussex won their white feather with Wolfe at Quebec, where, on the historic Plain of Absaham, the old 35th took the plume from the grenadiers of the famous French regiment of Royal Roussillon. The trophy is half-hidden in the existing badge by a Maltese Cross, which recalls the capture of Malta, when the King's colours of the senior battalion of the 35th was the first flag hoisted over this stronghold of the knights.

SIEGE OF GIBRALTAR

The defence of another outpost of the British Empire is mommemorated by the device used by three line regiments, the Suffolks, the Essex and the Northamptonshires. These corps, or rather, their predecessors, were among the five regiments which served throughout the famous siege of Gibraltar from June 1779 to February 1783, the last of the thirteen attempts to storm the Rock.

As a reward, they were given the right to wear the ancient device and motto bestowed on the fortress by Henry VI. of Castle in 1492 after its capture from the Moorish King of Grenada.

It seems somewhat paradoxical when we are concerned with the overthrow of Prussian militarism, that one of the regiments assisting in the task should go into battle—or, at all events leave home for the trenches—with

Market Letter

ROBERT E. KEMERER
108 BAY Street,
TORONTO.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—That the severe reaction which occurred in the stock markets during the earlier part of the week tended to tremendously improve the general position of securities, there can be no doubt, and as a matter of fact, a reaction was due and expected in most quarters, the sinking of the Arabic, with its attendant complications, simply having the effect of carrying the reaction farther than would have been the case otherwise. The important feature of the reaction was the revelation of a most exceptional degree of underlying strength: at no time did there appear to be any question as to the wisdom of buying back stocks, it simply being a case of the exact moment to make purchases and in many cases those who carried in mind the market which followed the Lusitania disaster held off too long and missed the opportunity. Indeed, the difference in the extent of this break as compared to that following the sinking of the Lusitania is in itself evidence of the improvement in the technical position of the markets.

General trade conditions continue to show steady and progressive improvement, and the benefits, both direct and indirect, from the immense war orders are making themselves more and more felt as the weeks go by. According to reports the general improvement in the retail trade is already making itself felt in wholesale circles and it is apparent that the cycle of improvement is well under way. There are still a few pessimists who refuse to believe in a coming prosperity, and talk gloomily of increased taxes, destruction of capital and what not, but these are in a hopeless minority, and are simply blinding themselves to establish facts which have an inevitable outcome.

Considering the market situation as a whole it would appear that practically all of the well established issues are a purchase at the present time. The natural and to be expected reaction has occurred and its benefit to the market was enhanced by the fact that international affairs caused it to be carried farther than might have been the case. There is remarkable underlying strength to the market, the public is buying heavily, money is free, we are beginning to feel the wave of prosperity, and increasing earnings may be expected to be the order of the day in company and corporation reports. Purchases made at around current levels entail a minimum of risk and can hardly fail to bring large profits. The better class of securities should be bought before further advances are scored.

Regimental Badges

the Prussian Eagle as its badge. The 14th (King's) Hussars have for more than a century shown the emblem of despotism.

When George III.'s second son, the Duke of York, was Commander-in-Chief of the British Army at the close of the eighteenth century, he gave the 14th the style of the Dutchess of York's Own Regiment of Light Dragoons, in honour of his wife, who was in 1798, and at the came time the Prussian Eagle, "displayed, crowned, and scpetred," was adopted as the regimental badge, while the lemon yellow of the original facings was changed to the orange livery of the "TREU UND FEST."

Another horse regiment, the 11th Hussars, has the crest and motto of the Prince Consort—a pillar, charged with the arms of Saxony and "Treu und Fest" on its appointments, because it furnished the escort to his royal highness on his journey to London previous to his marriage.

There are few more familiar badges than the globe and laurel leaf of the Marines, and certainly none more deserved, for "The Jollies" have gained honours in every corner of the world where the British Empire has become known. The laurel was won almost immediately after a marine force had been organized on a permanent footing 160 years ago, being granted for the bravery shown by a battalion fighting on shore at the famous siege of Belle Isle.

By the time the globe was added two-thirds of a century later, in 1827, when new colours were presented to the senior division of the Royal Marines by the Duke of Clarence (afterwards William IV.), the regiment had more than justified the inclusion, for it had seen service, ashore or afloat, in America, Gibraltar, Australia, the Canada, Trafalgar, and had even sent a small party round the world with Cook.

The Scuttle Hole

The Township of Thurlow has One of The Most Interesting Places in Canada—A Battle Ground of the Gods—Hidden Treasure and a Dead Indian—

Since the A.O.U.W. picnic at the Scuttle Hole many people have been enquiring about it. Where is it? How did it gets its name? What is there about it that makes it interesting? W. C. Mikel, K.C., was seen in reference to the subject, and gives the following interesting account:—

The reason so little attention has been paid to the Scuttle Hole in the past is because it is so near home. People have travelled far and paid dearly to see less interesting sights. It is situated in the Township of Thurlow on the easterly bank of the Moira River just a little north of the Poucher Mill, and is only about three miles from Plainfield. It is difficult to describe—it must be seen to be appreciated. Speaking generally, it looks as if the gods in a fit of rage or in some mighty battle for supremacy among themselves had kicked and twisted and crushed and bent and heaved the whole ponderous earth and mighty rocks. Here waters run as smooth, tranquil and silent as the sleep of death, and at the next step surge and toss with restless force, and in another part of the stream a few yards away, eddies circle round, throwing off froth and scattering it over a portion of the water and giving it the appearance of snow. Beautiful dells, rough bold shores, shady nooks and sunny fields—all is contrast and incongruity. Here trees grow at all angles to the ground. A huge cucumber tree, a kind rarely ever seen stands in line with the entrance to the main grounds. If only a part of the fish stories heard about the place are true those deep rocky pools are the very home of the bass.

Here also is the most gruesome, awe-inspiring, most interesting and perhaps the most unfathomable cave. Perhaps it was through this that Jupiter pushed Satan into Hades. It looks it. After following a winding passage sloping down to about twenty feet below the bank above, passing water on one side, and high rocks and knarled old animal-looking stumps and roots on the other, you reach the entrance about, 20 feet in diameter, walled up with rocks in all shapes and forms. The way into the cave then turns at right angles and from there on all sides is darkness as far as a human being is known to have penetrated. Under what may be described as the floor of the cave a stream of water flows slowly away—where, cannot be seen.

The place is said to have received its name from a bad Indian having a name that sounded like Scuttle, who is suposed to have lost his life in the cave. A trader from Montreal with a large sum of money was making his way through the country before this part was inhabited by whites, and at or near Kingston—then Fort Frontenac, he fell in with Scuttle, who on a pretext of showing him immense gold deposits, lured him up the Sagounaskion River (Indian name for Moira), murdered him and took his money. The traders' friends, not having heard from him as agreed, started in pursuit, and learned of his murder from the good Indians in the district, with whose help they nearly succeeded in capturing Scuttle, who eluded them by disapearing into the the cave above described, with the trader's money. Scuttle was followed a distance into the cave, supposed to be about a mile, and several shots were fired at him, in the darkness in the direction in which sounds were heard. A strong guard was placed at the entrance to the cave for a long time, but he was not caught, and the conclusion arrived at was that Scuttle either died in the cave where his stolen treasure still remains, or he escaped with it by some unknown passage. It is also thought that Scuttle made this a hiding place for other stolen booty and for pieces of gold and other minerals picked up by him while roaming around the country. Many have gone into this cave to search for the stolen money but none have succeeded. Now that electric lighting is not far away from the cave some have suggested that it be lighted, and whether the money is found or not, it would no doubt be interesting to explore the place.

DANGEROUS SPEED OF AUTOMOBILES

Dear Mr. Editor,—Allow me to occupy a small space in your valuable columns. I understand in this city we have a by-law calling for a speed limit of automobiles, namely 15 miles per hour. Now I suggest at the meeting of the City Council they would submit an amendment to that by-law by striking out the figures "15" and inserting the figures "55." Since Station Street and Mill Street have been repaired and put in first class condition this is simply a speed track.

I watched several cars on Wednesday passing down said streets, and being a pretty good judge of speed, I say they were travelling at a rate of 40 miles per hour. Is there no possible way that we can have the law carried out?

If not, change the by-law to read "55 miles per hour," as suggested, and no one will break it. On the two streets named above it is not safe for any person to cross. There is not a town or city in the Province of Ontario in which such a speed is allowed. Get busy, citizens, before someone is killed.

Ford to Start Peace Campaign

Says He Will Devote His Wealth to Fighting Against All Wars

DETROIT, Aug. 26.—Denouncing the advocates of military preparedness as instigators of a movement tending to lead the United States into the path of militarism and eventually to involve this country in war, Henry Ford, in a lengthy statement today annoucued his intention of using his wealth in a campaign for universal peace.

Evidently referring to the enrollment of Thomas A. Edison, as a member of the new board to suggest and pass opon inventions calculated to strengthen the American Navy, Mr. Ford said:

"They have called in Thomas Edison to help their war plans. Let me say that Thomas Edison never has used, and, in my opinion, never will use his great brain to make anything that would destroy human life or human property. He could destroy nothing. His mind is a constructive mechanism that abhors destruction, and war is destruction. He is a man of peace, for he realizes the true meaning of war—wanton, unnecessary, and unreasoning destruction, death and disfuption of all that peace has builded."

In the course of his statement Mr. Ford declared:

"I will do anything in my power to prevent murderous, wasteful war in America and the whole world; to fight this spirit which is now felt in the free and peaceful air of the United States, the spirit of militarism, mother to the cry of 'preparedness'—preparedness, the root of all war.

"I have prospered much, but I am ready to give much to end this constant, wasteful 'preparation.' Not by building palaces of peace, not by inspiring fearful peace by powerful armament, but by teaching the men, women, and children of America that war does not threaten us, that was will not reach us, that the fullness of peace is their inheritance, not the burden of militarism, with its heavy hand that curbs liberty, and its foul sustenance upon the blood, the labor, and the toil-earned happiness and goods of the workers.

"This I will make a world work, for all the world cries for peace, and there can set of these militaristic parasites who encourage war and who damn all whose idea of patriotism and love of their fellow man does not call for arming brother against brother.

"I confess I do not know how it is best to undertake this work in an organized manner. I realize it is a vast undertaking. Yet I want to see this Nation and all the nations of the earth nourishing that feeling already deeply implanted in the minds and hearts of millions that is expressed in the words: 'We do not want war. We will not have among us the breeders of war, be they men who cry out that the enemy seeks and we must prepare for him, or be they only those who would dazzle with the false glory that has been the cloak of murder for centuries.'

"I could today make vast sums from warfare if I so chose, but it would be better to die a pauper than that anything have helped to make, or that any thought, word, or act of mine should be used for the furtherance of this slaughter.

"I shall expect the sneers and condemnation of those whose business is war and of those who profit by war. But I can weigh against this the feeling for peace and aganist war and the spirit that brings war which, I know, bruns in the hearts of the masses the world over, and in this I shall feel that I am right.

'I shall raise my voice in no controversy with those who cry out that such peace would bring destruction upon us by matrial nations, but who really mean that they would have peace by enforcing their will upon others with cannon and whose constant cry of 'prepare' cloaks their damnable aims. The very thought of such men and such ideas cannot but bring the strongest words of condemnation and reproach from any man.

Bad Example for Latin America

"The building of armament by the United States is not only a waste of itself and a war-breeding policy, it is worse still, it is an example that the world has followed, adding the burden and the danger to the peoples in those lands.

"The isolation of the United States is a perfect safe guard against an invasion, and if this fact would not prevent a landing of hostile armies the very vastness of the country and the enormous population would make the attempt futile. We are neither Aztecs nor East Indians.

"The writers of military treaties showing how Japan, or Germany or any other nation could invade the United States under the guire of history and 'military probabilities' are trying to fill the minds of the people with fear by the use of their high-sounding nonsense. It is a good jjoke to see these big business men, now in the newspapers, spending a few weeks vacation learning the art of soldiering. I wonder if they are really frightened by the stories.

"The pity of it is that this same war talk is allowed to take up the columns of magazines and newspapers that could be used toward the inspiration of peace.

"The adivce of militarists on the needs of a vast army is about the same as the advice of a group of professional gamblers would be in the framing of the civil laws. The only difference is that the former would gamble with human lives and the peace and prosperity of the nation. They plead for 'national honor,' when they mean 'personal glorification' or 'blood money.'

"The present war's end will, I believe and hope, see the end of the military spirit and the military caste of Europe; the death of the military in Germany, and those same workers whom are today performing wonders of arms against the whole of Europe under the eyes of an Emperor and a Fatherland will be the very ones who will end that regin of militarism.

"If I can see the world—and America is the brain of the world, and the brain the guide of all—moving toward that day when war shall cease, when nations shall not burden the workers with huge armaments and then destroy the workers with those very armaments, I shall be content to end my days where I began—a humble worker in a peaceful world."

THE PORT OF PROFIT

Abe Lincoln told this story of a Mississippi river steamboat that had a four-foot boiler and a "seven-foot" whistle. Every time the boat blew its whistle it stopped.

His steamboat was great on "attention getting" but poor on progress.

The advertising steamboat has lost interest in the mere noise of whistles. Its owners have ceased to measure results by sound. They are insisting that quick transit to the Port of Profit is to be their test of efficiency.

And so advertisers are turning to newspapers for their voyage to the desired harbor.

Sarnia expects to furnish a company for the 70th Battalion, soon to be recruited.

WHAT THEN?

If the reply from Berlin does not definitely state that the torpedoing of passenger vessels is to cease, what will happen? The United States Government is officially informed that if it is found that the Arabic was torpedoed without warning "full satisfaction" will be given. But what does this mean? Surely an apology would not suffice, and it would not be deemed sufficient if the commanders of German submarines always warned passenger vessels and placed their passengers in boats before sinking the vessels. The London Spectator appropriately comments upon this point. "We do not believe for a moment," says that journal, "that America would consent to this caricature of satisfying international law and humane customs. Imagine placing women and children in small boats 60 miles from land, in a high winter sea and piercing cold, and saying that their safety was provided for. Now we are sure that if Germany means to prevent America from taking action of some kind she will have to change her policy drastically."

Would such a promise meet with the approval of the American Press? All the United States newspapers of any influence were unanimous in condemning the Arabic outrage in emphatic language. The New York Tribune was particularly hostile in its comment. "If there is now war, that war has been made in Germany. But not even the certainty of war could excuse further negotiations with the German Government. Ultimately the individual, the state, the nation can have but one protection against the assassin. And in the crime of the Arabic the last thin disguise has slipped from the German beast, and we see the fact as it is—but we see it unafraid." The New York Sun said: "The German answer has come . . . . in the form which President Wilson and Secretary Lansing plainly characterized on July 21st as 'an unpardonable offence against the sovereignty of the neutral nation affected'; and again, as an act 'deliberately unfriendly.' The Government of the United States then notified the German Government that it would continue to contend for the right of its neutral citizens to sail on the neutral seas unassassinated, 'without compromise and at any cost.' No government worthy of the respect of its equals on earth could let that definite promise go unredeemed without immersing itself and its people in indescribable humiliation." The Washington Post was content to rest the case with President Wilson. It said: "The President has manifested the gravest concern for the maintenance of the American honor and the preservation of the lives of Americans at sea. The people are confident that he will in this new crisis maintain the principples that have been so plainly enunciated and that are so strongly indorsed by the country."

These outbursts of indignation were general in the American Press, and we could quote other opinions to the same effect. The interesting point to consider is—if the answer of the German Government is not a complete abrocation of its former policy of recklessly torpedoing any passenger vessel that is sighted—what then? Will the United States Government convoy all passenger vessels leaving its shores, or will it declare war against Germany? We do not expect they will adopt either course. There is no doubt the United States is placed in an extremely difficult position. Quite apart from internal circumstances, there can be no question that the United States is not in a position to declare war. It is no use assuming a high tone unless you are. Germany knows this well, and is acting accordingly. If proof were needed of America's unpreparedness for war ie is found in the utterance of Governor Dunne, of Illinois. "The army of the United States," he said, "consists of but one man in each thousand inhabitants, while in the British army there are 17 soldiers to each 1,000 inhabitants; in Russia 28 to each 1,000 inhabitants; in France, 34 to each 1,000 inhabitants; in Germany, 51 to each 1,000 inhabitants; and in Italy 57 to each 1,000 inhabitants. As to whether our army should be increased at least for defensive purposes, there does not seem to be much doubt among thoughtful men. Whether the increase must be in the nature of a standing army or in citizen soldiery is a question about which there is room for legitimate debate. If war were to be declared against this country by one of the six great nations in Europe it must be conceded that the United States in its present condition of land and naval forces would be in a sorry predicament." Here we have in a nutshell the kernel of the United States policy, and we might as well look for the immediate declaration of peace as to imagine there will be war between the United States and Germany.

CURRENT COMMENT

The name of the pro-German clergyman who was lynched in Indiana was Kayser. That explains much.

Britain commits herself to the heaviest burden of the war in announcing that she will, in future, nail all German lies.

The departure of Bulgarian reservists from the United States and Canada for home is more significant than much of the news regarding the Balkans that comes by cable.

Some human beings always desire international peace, but some people prefer to seek it by comfortable methods only. W. J. Bryan and Rev. Dr. Macdonald of the Toronto Globe are a pair of the latter.—Montreal Mail.

Three boys ran away from New York with the idea of starting a newspaper and becoming rich. Truly the rising generation is headed for the padded cell wing.—Guelph Mercury.

Germans are wonderful as organizers and soldiers, but in the higher realms of psychology and the spirit, Heaven knows, there are none to compare with them for wrecking their own cause.—New York Evening Post.

"Peace at any price is better than war at any price," says Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, chairman of the Church Peace Union. Perhaps; but how is a people to be assured that it can have peace at any price? Those upon whom the war is now being visited with more cruelty than any others concerned are the Armenians, Poles, Jews and Belgians, none of whom can be accused of any responsiblity for the war.

One of the most curious letters yet published in the New York World's revelations is a warning from the German consul general in Philadelphia to a manufacturing firm with a Germanic name that it would violate the German criminal law if it should accept an order for certain railroad material intended for Russia. Just how could the German consul general have expected to apply German criminal law to an American firm?

Among all the spectacles that have arisen out of this war, that one that will probably cause the most surprise and astonishment among the historians will be the magnanimity—truly in contrast with all historic precedents—which the United States has shown before the provocations and affronts of Germany. It is, however, permitted to express the belief that the historians—at least the majority of them—will not be all in accord to commend and eulogize the new methods of defending the national honor which the United States has adopted.—Le Soleil.

Cardinal Gibbons asks why Americans "court danger" by travelling on "ships that are in danger." That is an easy after-thought. Did Cardinal Gibbons or anyone else, outside the inner circles of the German Government, believe at the time the Lusitania sailed that her passengers were really in danger; that the Germans really were so ruthless as to torpedo that ship without providing for the safety of those on board? And in the case of the Arabic, Did Cardinal Gibbons or anyone else believe that the Germans were really so ruthless as to torpedo a westbound passenger ship without warning? The bitterest enemies of the Germans, to say nothing of neutrals, had not put them so low in the scale of humanity as they have placed themselves. It was not a case of "courting danger," but of crediting fellow-men with certain standards of humanity which they had every right to assume that those men possessed.—Buffalo Express.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Even though the war ends as we hope it may, Germany's position will by no means be an agreeable one.

We shall be the most detested people in Europe, and we shall need superhuman efforts to fortify our position. We shall no longer be able to afford to leave a considerable portion of our youth without thorough military training. The ordinary school education will have to be transformed into a military education.

The whole of our material life will have to be renewed, and all this will cost money; we shall be compelled to scrape and save in every way possible, and taxation will be increased heavily.

It will not be as it was in 1870, when France paid us a big sum after a war of relatively short duration. This time even victory will cost us dear.—Kreuzzeitung.

RANDOM NOTES

("From Grave to Gay, From Lively to Severe.")

Was it not an American humorist who said, "Never prophecy unless you know?" Everyone recognises that to enter the realms of prophesy is treading on dangerous ground. It is for this reason that I am very much struck with a remarkable prophecy made about 30 years ago by that distinguished German, the late Professor Max Muller. The following extracts from his life, which were written during 1884 and 1885, might have been written today.

"When one reads the discussions in Parliament," he wrote, "one might easily fear for England, but they are mere fireworks. The nation is of good old stock, and woe to him who forgets this. England will never be conquered, never before the last Englishman, the last Scotsman, the last Irishman—aye, the last Australian, the last Canadian and Newfoundlander, the last Sikh—aye, the last Yankee has fallen."

:: ::

"Every man in Europe is now a soldier," wrote the German Professor; "England is the only land that has not taken to arming people. Drive England into a corner, and tomorrow every man is a soldier. There may be jealousies between her colonies, but if it came to extremities the colonies would allow no hair of England to be touched. Even India, which was formerly a danger, has shown now that England's enemies are her enemies."

:: ::

How wonderfully true this has all proved to be. Pretty good for a German, isn't it? We could do with a good many more Germans of this stamp just now. But they would be hard to find.

:: ::

It is satisfactory to find that recruiting is going on steadily from Belleville and the vicinity. Since the war began the 49th Regiment has enlisted over 600 men and 25 officers. A good deal of the credit of this is due to Col. Ketcheson, who is energetically engaged in recruiting.

:: ::

A guy who was hardy but fattery,
Said "My work is too light in this hattery."
So he gave up his job,
Heeded not his wife's sob,
And is now in the 34th Battery.

:: ::

When those narrow-minded Methodist passed that famous resolution at Toronto, protesting against the sending of cigarettes and tobacco to the soldiers, the remark was made in The Intelligencer that it would probably have the effect of causing an increased number of cigarettes to be sent to the gallant fellows at the front. A tabacco fund was opened in this journal and readers of The Intelligencer subscribed nearly $50.

Now the work of collecting subscriptions for supplying the soldiers with tobacco is to be organised in Belleville on the same lines as in other towns. The Overseas Club have taken the matter in hand, and it is hoped that as a result of the informal meeting held on Wednesday afternoon a committee will be formed who will arrange for the collection of subscriptions.

:: ::

Mr. Private, who spoke on Wednesday, is the speaker who engaged a special train to take him from Montreal to Hamilton, in order that he might keep an appointment. He was ill, and the nurse put back the hands of the clock an hour, in order that he should miss the train. No "private" in the trenches has more enthusiasm for his work than the gentleman who was in Belleville on Wednesday.

Queen Mary Frowns

Those who have anything to do with Queen Mary just now in connection with philanthropic and war schemes marvel at the methodical and orderly way in which she deals with the multifarious committees and schemes with which she is connected. Her memory and capacity for organization are extraordinary, and she appears to carry the details of every department in her head.

As a matter of fact a strong leather bound notebook plays an important part in assisting Queen Mary's memory. It accompanies her everywhere. In it she enters all the things she desires to remember in connection with her various good works just now. Her schemes of organization are her own, and these little leather bound books should be collected and placed in the London Museum at Stafford House they would make an interesting addition to the royal collection.

The Queen has taken a very decided attitude with regard to entertaining in war times, and has shown her strong disapproval in no uncertain manner. In fact, it has been so openly expressed that very few hostesses have dared to send out invitations for dances for some time—and dinners, too, have not been so numerous or popular of late.

WHERE JACK FELL SHORT

Johnnie Eckhardt, formerly a newspaper man, now a follower of theatricals, was heard telling a story of Jack Dempsey recently.

"A lot of us took a tug an went up the Hudson to hold a prize fight some years ago," said Mr. Eckhardt. "Dempsey was not one of the men who were to battle, but he was in the crowd. On the way back a police boat stopped our tug and the officers came aboard. We all tried to pretend we were connected with the tug's crew. Dempsey quickly donned a jumper and some overalls and went to shovelling coal in the hold.

" 'Who are you?" asked the officer.

" 'The fireman," Dempsey replie.

" 'That's fine. Where did you get that elegant gold watch and chain?'

" 'Bought it. I'm a thrifty fellow.'

" 'Glad to hear it,' said the officer. 'Now, what's the name of the boat you're working on?'

"Dempsey hesitated. 'I don't believe it was ever named,' he stammered.

"They took him along."—Exchange.

WHAT SHE WANTED

A woman walked into the clerk's office of the police court and asked Mr. Holley where she could find the "reprobate' judge.

"Do you mean Judge Boldrick?" inquired Mr. Holley.

"No, the reprobate judge. I want to see about a will."

"You mean the probate judge, then?"

"Yes, yes; that's it. My sister's husband died detested and——"

"You mean intestate, don't you?"

"Yes, yes; and he left three children and I want to be appointed their executioner."

"Executrix, you mean," prompted Mr. Holley, as he directed her to the county court house.

"I'm for the literacy test," gasped Mr. Holley, when the woman had gone.—Louisville Times.

FOOLING HIMSELF

J. F. Harts of Detroit, the doyen of the American Surgical Trade association, said at the 50th annual convention in New York.

"The war has kited the price of carbolic acid up to $1.65 a pound—it sold before the war at 9 cents a pound. The hospitals that use carbolic now have to be as economical and sparing as old Josh Lee.

"Old Josh Lee was a miser, and he breakfasted every morning on oatmeal. To save fuel he cooked his week's supply of oatmeal on Sundays. This supply, by the time Saturday came round was pretty stiff and tough and hard to down.

"One Saturday morning old Josh found his oatmeal particularly unappetizing. It had a crust on it like iron. He took a mouthful of the cold, stiff mixture—then he half arose, thinking he'd have to cook himself some eggs.

"But he hated to give in. He hated to waste that oatmeal. So he took out the whisky bottle, poured a generous glass, and setting it before his plate, he said:

" 'Now, Josh, if you eat that oatmeal you'll get this whisky; and if you don't you won't.'

"The oatmeal was hard to consume, but Josh, with his eye on the whisky, managed it. Then when the last spoonful was gone, he grinned broadly, poured the whisky back into the bottle again, and said:

"Josh, my son, I fooled you that time, you old idiot!' "—Washington Star.

RELICS OF LONG AGO DUG UP IN SUBWAYS

Excavators Uncover Prison Wall and Well Sunk by Early Dutch

Not the least interesting phase of subway building is the uncovering of interesting objects that have been buried. Every month is marked with some such find, often not of sufficient historic interest to be noted in the reports of the excavators, but of great interest to the individual or gang making the find. An engineer engaged on the work said that there were bound to be historic objects brought to the surface when it is considered that the excavators are burrowing through the most historic ground in the whole New World. Sometimes the finds are only a few coins, as for example those uncovered when the old flag pole at the Battery was taken down, to the uncovering of old prisons or historic buildings.

Many months ago Charles M. Higgins of 271 Ninth Street, Brooklyn, called the attention of the Public Service Commission to the fact that the excavation for he Fourh avenue subway in that borough would pass through the sub-surface of the battlefield where the battle of Long Island was fought at the beginning of the War for Independence. The route of the subway crosses a part of the battlefield in Fourth avenue between Third and Fifth streets. Mr. Higgins asked that the contractor be requested to look for relics. The commission notified the E. E. Smith contracting company, which had the contract for that part of the subway, to look for relics. They did so, but with no results. The work is now finished and during the progress no finds rewarded the diggers, who were kept always on the lookout.

It is the opinion of Mr. Higgins that the present street level is about 10 or 15 feet higher than the marsh lands and solid ground across which the soldiers of the Revolution fought the British. The fact that nothing was found was rather a disappointment to Mr. Higgins, for he expected the work would yield many valuable and historic relics. He said that the battle raged around an old stone house which stood at the corner of what is now Fifth avenue and Third street. He expected that the relics might be found anywhere along Fourth avenue between First and Eighth streets.

One of the most curious experiences was when the new Broadway subway between Park place and Murray street ran into the old Beach tunnel. This was a brick tube constructed in the late '60's for underground travel. The scheme of operation was ingenious. The design was to have circular cars closely fitting the inside of the tube. These were to be propelled to and fro by air blasts, and for this work powerful blowers were built. The enterprise never got beyond the semi-experimental stage. The tube was opened in 1870 or 1871, when one car was operated. There still live many men who remember taking a ride in the wonderful Beach railroad.

The road, however, was never finished. It was covered over, and it remained but a memory in the back of the minds of a few men. When the Broadway's work was started, this old line was one of the first curiosities uncovered. The Degnon Contracting Company excavated and removed the old structure. To engineers the old tunnel was of more than ordinary interest because in its construction the hydraulic shield was used for the first time in America. The Public Service commission presented the shield to Cornell university, where it is now exhibited.

A subway workman in the excavation at Broadway, near Reade street, uncovered several bones one February day. He was about to toss them to one side when another of the gang came across more bones. It was decided to call the foreman. It was done, and the latter cautioned the men to go carefully, as the bones were no doubt human bones. In the course of the work at that particular place three human skeletons were uncovered. They were buried about six feet under Broadway. An investigator from the Public Service commission made inquiry at the New York Historical society. The records were examined and the fact was brought out that at one time there had been a burying ground in the locality of Broadway and Reade street. It dated from the early 18th century and was used to some extent during the British occupation of New York in Revolutionary times. It is supposed the skeletons were those of persons buried in this cemetery and not removed at the time the street was cut through.

At about the time of the discovery of the skeletons another contractor on the Broadway subway, working in the Trinity place, just back of Trinity Church yard, exposed an old well and the ruin of an old building. Both were several feet below the surface of the street and the well was immediately beneath the retaining wall on the west side of Trinity church yard. The well was four feet in diameter and lined with stone. It had been filled with earth and covered over. Local historians advanced the theory that it may have been one of the six wells sunk in this part of Manhattan in the days of the Dutch rule in New Amsterdam.

In April, 1914, F. L. Cranford, Inc., contractor for sections Nos. 1 and 1-A of route No. 5, covering the lower part of Broadway subway in Manhattan, reported the discovery of a subterranean jail underneath Church street and midway between Dey and Cortlandt streets. The discovery was made at a depth of about 30 feet. The workmen first uncovered the top of a stone wall. As soon as its character was discovered the workmen took some pains and no little pride in uncovering their find. It proved to be the wall of a prison fitted with windows and fortified with iron bars. The wall extended from a point about eight feet below the surface to the bottom of the excavation.

An antiquarian who examined the wall came to the conclusion that it was part of a prison that had been erected in the early days of the Dutch settlers. From its barred windows the prisoners could perhaps look out upon the Hudson in days when Indian canoes were the principal craft on that stream and when the arrival of a sailing ship brought the entire town to the Battery.

"That old wall could tell many a heart-ache," was the comment of a sentimental foreman.

The ends of the prison wall are still underground, awaiting the coming of other excavators, for, as the subway ran directly through it, the contractors simply demolished the centre.

At the Battery an old cannon was excavated, and the contractors on the Battery section of the Seventh Ave. subway reported the finding of two cannon balls a short distance below the surface near the Battery station of the existing subway. Both were of iron, encrusted with rust, one about two inches and the other about four inches in diameter.—New York Times.

Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism Relieved By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. L. LABRIE
594 Champlain St., Montreal.

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me.

LOUIS LABRIE.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the famous medicine made from fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Only Cure For A Weak Stomach

INDIGESTION AND SIMILAR TROUBLES MUST BE TREATED THROUGH THE BLOOD

Indigestion can be treated in many ways, but it can only be cured in one way—through the blood. Purgatives cannot cure indigestion. By main force they move on the food still undigested. That weakens the whole system, uses up the nautral juices and leaves the stomach and bowels parched and sore. It is actually a cause of indigestion—not a cure. Others try pre-digested foods and peptonized drugs. But drugs which digest the food for the stomach really weaken its power and makes the trouble chronic. The digestive organs can never do the work properly until they are strong enough to do it themselves. Nothing can give the stomach that power but the new, rich red blood so abundatly supplied by Dr Williams' Pink Pills So the reason for the success of this medicine is plain. Nothing can stimulate the glands and nothing can absorb the nourishment from the food but pure red blood. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills surpass all other medicines in giving that new, rich blood. Miss B. E. Johnson, Hemford, N.S., says: "For months I was a great sufferer from indigestion; food of any kind was distasteful to me, and after eating I would suffer much: Naturally I grew weak and was but a shadow of my former self. I was taking a doctor's prescription, but it did not help me in the least Then I read of a case similar to my own cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try this medicine. By the time I had taken six boxes the trouble had entirely disappeared, and I could eat heartily of all kinds of food. More than this I found my general health greatly improved through the use of the Pills. I can therefore strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for indigestion."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BAD MUSKRATS

The muskrats of this country which were introduced on the estates of Prince Colloredo-Mansfield in Bohemia in 1905 have not behaved as they should and have been no credit to the land of their ancestry.

Like the rabbit in Australia and the English sparrow in the United States, the muskrats has developed evil traits of which it was apparently innocent in its native habit. While it has grown much in size its value as a furbearing animal decreased to almost nothing.

It undermines the dams and banks of the fish ponds in regions where fish culture is a leading industry, allowing both fish and water to escape; it works havoc among river crabs and mussels, the former furnishing a large food supply and the latter shells which support important industries. And as if this was not severe enough an indictment, our consul at Prague accuses it of other crimes; catching fish, disturbing their feeding and spawning, eating grain and vegetables and stealing eggs.

Here, indeed, is a fine record in a foreign land for one our most harmless creatures which is furnishing American women with their finest sable, seal or marten furs. The Bohemians do not call it a muskrat, but an "American muskrat," and they also say it it a pest—N. Y. Sun.

A BLIND GENIUS

The late John Brown Herreshoff, totally blind from his fifeenth year, conquered fortune out of some the greatest of human disasters. Touch, developed to an almost miraculous delicacy, served him as eyes. He saw by means of the inner eye. He saw the lines of a boat with a clean, sharp consentrated mental virsion. The swift famous boats constructed by him and designed by his brother, Nat, have had due mention in the obituary notices. Our prupose is to recall and reinforce the lesson of brave, successful endeavor, of high intelligence overcoming for nearly 60 years a hopeless infirmity metamorphased by will and mind into strength.—New York Sun.

Gave Life for Empire.

Without the satisfaction of having gone to the front, or the glory of dying in battle, Harry Robbins Seale of Toronto gave his life for his country as truly as any Canadian soldier who met his death from shrapnel or German gas, when he died at St. Michael's Hospital a few days ago.

Early in July, having a day off from his work with the Don Valley Brick Works, he went to the Armories and volunteered for active service with the 10th Royal Grenadiers. The doctor told him that before he enlisted he must have a varicose vein removed from one of his legs. Accordingly he had that operation at St. Michael's Hospital, but died a couple of weeks later of blood poisoning.

CHAPTER XXXI

Dick Thinks of The City.

When Dick had uttered this audacious speech, Mr. Mayne started back, and his expression of mingled wrath and dismay was so ludicrous that under any other circumstances his son would have found it difficult to keep his countenance.

"What! what!" he almost shouted, losing all sense of politeness, and even of Nan's presence; "you young fool, what do you mean by trumping up this nonsense and presuming to talk to me in this way?"

Dick thought it prudent to drop Nan's hand,—and, indeed, the girl shrank away from them both in alarm at this outburst; nevertheless, her countenance and bearing maintained the same admirable sang-froid, as he confronted his angry parent:

"Now father, what is the use of caling me names? When a fellow is of age, and knows his own mind, he does not care a pin for being called a fool. 'Hard words break no bones,' as our copy leaves used to tell us,—no, I have not got that quite right; but that is about my meaning. Look here, father," he continued, in a coaxing boyish voice; "I have cared for Nan ever since she was a little creature so high," again reverting to an infantile measurement. "I have always meant to marry her—that is, if she would have me," correcting himself, as Nan drew herself up a little proudly. "Money or no money, there is not another girl in England that I would have for a wife. I would wait for her if I had to wait half my life, just the same as she would wait for me; so, as I said before, when a fellow has made up his mind, there's nothing more to say." And here Dick pursed up his lips for a whistle, but thought better of it, and fell to twisting and untwisting the ends of his sandy moustache.

Nan's downcast eyes revealed nothing. But if Dick could only have seen the happy look in them! What eloquence could ever have been so dear to her as that clear rough-and-ready statement of her lover's feelings for her? "There is not another girl in England that I would have for a wife." Could anything surpass the beauty of that sentence? Oh, how manly, how true he was, this Dick of hers!

"Oh, indeed! I am to say nothing, am I?" returned Mr. Mayne, with exquisite irony. "My son is to dictate to me; and I am to be silent! Oh, you young fool!" he muttered under his breath; but then for the moment words seem to fail him.

In spite of the wrath that was boiling within him, and to which he did not dare give vent in Nan's presence, in spite of the grief and disappointment that his son's defiance had caused him, Dick's bearing filled him with admiration and amazement.

This boy of his was worth something, he thought. He had a clear head of his own, and could speak to some purpose. Was a likely young fellow like this to be thrown away on that Challoner girl? Poor Nan- Pretty and blooming as she looked, Mr. Mayne felt almost as though he hated her. Why had she come between his boy and him? Had he a dozen sons, that he could spare one of them? Was not Dick his only one—the son of his right hand, his sole hope and ambition? Mr. Mayne could have wept as these thoughts passed through his mind.

It was at this moment that Nan thought it right to speak. Dick had had his say, but it was not for her to be silent.

"Mr. Mayne, please listen to me a moment," she said pleadingly. "No; I must speak to your father," as Dick much alarmed, tried to silence her. "He must not hink hard things of us and misunderstand us."

"No, dear; indeed you had better be silent!" implored Dick, anxiously; but Nan for once turned a deaf ear to him.

"I must speak," she persisted. "Mr. Mayne, it is quite true what Dicks says; we have been together all our lives and have grown to care for each other. I cannot remember the time,"—the tears coming into her bright eyes—"when Dick was not more to me than a brother, it is all of such long standing, it is far, far too late to stop it now."

"We shall see about that, Miss Nancy," muttered Mr. Mayne, between his teeth; but the girl did not seem to hear him.

"Dick took me by surprise just now. I ought to have been more on my guard, and not have given him that promise."

"What promise?" demanded Mr. Mayne, harshly; and Nan hung her head, and returned, shyly,——

"That I would marry him some time; but indeed—indeed he made me say it, and I was so taken by surprise. No, Dick; you must let me finish," for Dick was looking at her with piteous entreaty in his eyes. "I know we were wrong to say so much without your leave; but indeed I will do your son no harm. I cannot marry any one eles, because I am engaged to him; but as far as he is concerned he is free. I will never marry him without your permission; he shall not come here if you do not wish; but do not be so angry with us;" and here her lip quivered. "If you did not mean this to happen, you should have kept us apart all these years."

"Oh, hush, dear" whispered Dick in her ear; but Mr. Mayne almsot thrust him aside, and laid a rough grasp on the girl's wrist. "Never mind him; answer me one question. Are you serious in what you say, that you will never marry him without my permission?"

"Of course I will not," answered Nan, quite shocked. "Dick would not ask me to do such a thing; he is far too honorable, and—and—no one would think of such a thing."

"Very well; that is all I wanted to know;" and he released her, not overgently: "the rest I can settle with Master Dick himself. Good-morning Miss Nancy; under the circumstances I do not think I will wait to see your mother. I am not quite in the mood for ladies; perhaps, later on, I may have something to say to her."

"Don't you mean to shake hands with me, Mr. Mayne?" asked poor Nan, much distressed at the evil temper of Dick's father; but there was no sign of softening.

"Yes; I will shake hands with you, and gladly, if you will promise to be sensible and send this boy of mine about his business. Come now, Nan: own for my comfort that it is only a bit of boy-and-girl nonsense, that means nothing. I am not over-particular, and do not object to a bit of flirting with young folk."

"You had better go with your father, Dick," returned Nan, with much dignity, and quite ignoring this speech.

Dick seized the little hand that had been so rudely rejected, and kissed it under his father's eyes.

"I will see you again somehow," he whispered, and Nan was quite content with this promise. Dick would keep his word, she knew; he would not leave Hadleigh without seeing her.

A very pleasant hour ensued for poor Dick. Mr. Mayne in one of his worst tempers; he had conducted himself to Nan in an ungentlemanly manner, and he knew it; as Dick said to himself,—

"It is very hard on a fellow when one's father acts like a cad."

Mr. Mayne had shown himself a cad. No gentleman by birth or breeding would have conducted himself in that offensive way. Bad temper had broken down the trammels of conventionality; never before in his life had Dick felt so utterly ashamed of his father. Mr. Mayne was conscious of his son's criticism, and it made things worse.

It spoke well for Dick's prudence and self-command that he let the storm of his father's anger break over his head, and said no word. Mr. Mayne ranted and raved; I am afraid he even once or twice—at leastt wpth his language was undesirably strong—and Dick walked beside him and held his peace. "Poor old boy, he is terribly cut up about this!" he thought once.

"Mr. Drummond saw them coming along, and wondered at the energy of the older man. Was it the visit to the Friary that ha put him out? and then he fell anew into cogitation. Who were these people who were so curious about the Challoners? At least that sulky young fellow had taken no apparent interest, for he had the other had persisted in an investigation. Perhaps he was some relation,—an uncle, or a distant cousin; evidently he had some right or claim to be displeased. Archie determined to solve the mystery as soon as possible.

"Well, sir, have you nothing to say for yourself?" demanded Mr. Mayne, when he had fairly exhausted himself. He had disinherited Dick half a dozen times; he had deprived him of his liberal allowance; he had spoken of a projected voyage to New Zealand; and Dick had only walked on steadily and thought of the cold trembling little hand he ahd kissed. "Have you nothing to say for yourself?" he vociferated.

Dick woke up at his.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

CARING FOR FOXES.

How Breeders Rear Valuable Fur-Bearing Animals.

Since the early summer of 191[illegible] over a million dollars has been withdrawn from the Charlottetown branch of the Dominion Government saving banks for use in the fox industry. The methods of caring for foxes are now generally known, but no person who has not lifelong familiarity with animals should attempt to put them into practice. There have been instances where highly intelligent town bred men have failed after earnest efforts to handle foxes. The females are in the highest degree capricious and sensitive, especially during the mating and rearing season. If they have the slightest suspicion that their young are in danger they carry the little ones ceaselessly from place to place or even bury them alive in the snow or earth with the insane idea of protecting them. On the other hand there are captive foxes which become quite tame and make fairly tractable pets.

The young ordinarily mature sufficiently to propagate during their first year. During the early summer all foxes except the spring pups shed the long "guard hair" which projects out beyond the soft body fur. In the autumn this hair appears once more against the approach of cold weather, restoring the beauty of the fox's coat. The fur is usually taken late in December; the animal is killed with chloroform and the skin is removed with solicitous care, incisions being confined if possible to the backs of the hind legs.

The ranch is usually located in a piece of underwood on sloping ground near the owner's dwelling and is surrounded by an outer stockade or a fence of fourteen gauge galvanized fox wire (similar to chicken wire) manufactured especially for the purpose in England, Canada, and "the States." The fence is ten feet high and an overhang of two feet at the top prevents the fox from climbing out, while a deep foundation or an extension of the wire underground precludes escape by burrowing. The inner enclosures or paddocks, each devoted to one pair, are also fenced as just described and are ordinarily about thirty-five feet square. Each contains a wooden kennel or fox-house, divided into a nesting compartment bedded with seaweed or straw and an outer cleaning compartment. Sometimes quarters for four pairs of foxes are built, though separate, in one central house, with spouts debouching from each corner into corresponding paddocks.

The foxes are fed very sparingly with scrap meat, clean offal, fish, special bannock cakes prepared with tallow, or with manufactured dog biscuits. They will consume berries and small fruit to a limited extent; and they seem to relish green grass or other herbage—this appetite apparently being nature's provision for the regulation of their alimentary systems. To females during the winter and spring are fed eggs, milk, gruel, and other nutritious and easily assimilable foods. To foxes about to be killed for their pelts are fed molasses, honey, and various patent stock foods with the purpose of enhancing the brilliancy of the fur.

The most elaborate and extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent the loss or theft of the high grade blacks. Man traps and uninsulated electric wires of high voltage are in use on several ranches; although since the fox pens are not an integral legal part of the owner's dwelling such measures are not strictly within the law. Small shanties are often built at the gates of the enclosures and armed caretakers who sleep in these huts are warned by electric gongs of any attempt to break into the ranch.

RED CROSS WORK

The Red Cross workers in camp at Presqu'ile are deserving of a full measure of praise for their commendable enterprise. During a few weeks sojourn they have raised over $175 for the good work, and many of the ladies including the younger ladies, have devoted considerable time knitting for the soldiers. Last Monday evening they held a patritic dance, at which the girls sold bouquets, and the proceeds exceeded $40. Mr. Quick very kindly donated the use of the Pleasure Palace and Tyce's Orchestra supplied the music without charge.

SERIOUS AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

In an automobile accident which occurred on the front road west on Thursday evening, Fred Lavis of Cobourg, was seriously injured. The car, which was driven by Don Haynes, turned turtle. Haynes escaped without injury but Lavis was less fortunate. When the car overturned he was thrown out head first and was picked up in an unconscious condition. He was immediately removed to the Cobourg Hospital, where he now lies in a precarious condition. Besides severe internal injuries he is suffering from concussion of the brain, and but little hopes are held out for his recovery.

BIG RECRUITING AT NAPANEE

September 2nd, promises to be a red letter day in Napanee. For the first time in the history of Canada the acting Premier, (Sir Geo. E. Foster) and his political opponent, the ex-Premier (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) meet upon a common platform to address not a small group of some particular class but all Canada, upon the greatest question that ever engaged the attention of Canadians. Besides these two orators, there will be also upon the platform, a young man from our own district, who has actively participated in all the great battles upon the western front in which the boys of the first contingent have taken part. Capt. R. D. Ponton of Belleville, who is home on sick leave, has kindly consented to be present and say a few words to the boys who may be hesitating about enlisting.

HOW FAT FOLKS MAY BECOME THIN

By Elizabeth Thomas

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orilene capsules. Take one after each meal and one before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co. Box 1240 Montreal, Canada.

CALL FOR POLICE

At an early hour this morning the police were called to a residence on Front street, where a party was acting in a rather disorderly manner. The result of the visit of the officer to the place restored peace and no arrest was made.

SUCCESSFUL LAWN SOCIAL

Under the auspices of the Knitting Circle in connection with the R. T. of T. a lawn social was held last evening at the residence of Mr. Anderson, Hillside street. A large number were in attendance and a goodly sum was realized for a worthy object. The Fifteenth Regimental Band was present and discoursed a programme enjoyable to all present. WILSON—DOWNER

A quiet wedding took place at five o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jos. Wilson, corner of Cambridge and Durham streets, Lindsay, when her eldest daughter, Annie Victoria, was united in marriage with Beecher Wellington Downer of Woodville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Brown, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. After an hour of very pleasant social intercourse, followed by a most excellent evening meal, Mr. and Mrs. Downer set out for Woodville, at which place Mr. Downer has carried on a very successful blacksmithing business for the last fifteen years. Best wishes were extended to the newly organized couple for a happy and prosperous life.

JEALOUS BROTHER ATTEMPTS TO SHOOT

This week Thomas John Patterson of Stewart Settlement, appeared before P. M. Davidson, Cobourg; charged with attempting to shoot his brother, Samuel Patterson. Both are old batchelors, and live in the same house but in different apartments, and are not on speaking acquaintance. Last Friday, the former went to Cobourg and was drinking. The following morning he got a shot gun and pointing it at his brother told him to get down on his knees and say his prayers and snapped off the gun several times.

Jealousy seems to be at the bottom of the trouble. Some time ago Thos. John was paying attentions to a widow in that vicinity, but recently she seems to have soured on him and transferred her affection to Samuel.

Police Magistrate Davidson committed him for trial.—Port Hope Guide.

Letters from Belleville Boys At The Front

FROM AN ENGLISH TOMMY

The following letter is from a married English soldier, and was sent to his young orphan sister, Miss M. A. Davis, who is alone in Canada. She is now staying with Mrs. P. A. Moffatt, Park street North, Belleville, R. F. D. 5. The letter breathes the true patriotic spirit and shows the splendid morale of the British soldier. He gives generous praise to the Canadians for their bravery. He sent his sister his cap badge that he wore in the charge at Langemarck.

Dear May:—I am all right at present, but I am sorry to say I saw a lot of your Canadians killed, but we happened to be on the flank and those poor things were right in the middle, and in the thickest of the fight, but I can tell you they did not shrink a moment but went at the Germans "hell for leather", and only a few remain to tell how bravely they fought and fell; for when we came up to reinforce them they were still game enough to follow us and finish the battle. We made the Germanss pay dearly for it, as they must have lost thousands, as we could not move for dead bodies of Germans, and it was the gallant lads from Canada that made the Germans run. So you see that your brother fought by them and am proud of them, for they and our lads from Old England will defend your country's flag to the last. So cheer up and don't get downhearted, as I will let you know as often as I can how I am getting on.

I hope when your Canadian lads return home you will give them a good welcome, as England will never forget them after Hill 60, and the way they fought side by side beneath the shot and shell. I can't write no more at presentt as I have no more paper, for this is the bit I brought from Old England with me. So cheer up, and we and your gallant Canadian lads will make it hot for the Germans. So don't cry, for I do my best to cheer you up, as we are not downhearted—No, never, not while Britania rules the waves—not likely. Send all your letters to Ada and she will send them to me. With my best loves and wishes to you, from your ever loving brother,

DICK.

WHAT'S WHAT
and
WHY

For Fall 1915

The first "peep" at the new Fall Styles brings forth many delighted expressions, which signifies much for their coming popularity, especially so is the distinctly smart Suit Model in Navy Blue Serge on display in the window. A button up to the neck or lay-down collar, with belt and pockets. Above the belt in the back pleating is used and below a large boxpleat. The skirt is semiwide with two pockets at the sides.

PRICE
$22.50

A brief Mention of Coat Styles just to Pique Your Imagination

They are loose, very, not however the looseness of former seasons, but a decided "chic" style suggesting greatness and they are invariably belted.

Military styles, of course, predominate, and do not allow us for a moment to forget how they originated. The cloths are for the greater part imitation fur fabrics and here we wish to dwell—fur fabrics such as these we have will surely "take." Rich lustrous "Lambs," Chinchilla, Mole, etc., are surprisingly well copied and their prices are to say the least "moderate." Your judgement will verify this.

SUPPORT FOR NATIONAL MILITARY SERVICE

Chief Opposition Comes from the Liberal Organs and Labour Unions in England, Who Take the View of Socialists

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The question of national service is daily becoming more acute from the controversial point of view, and though certain papers have striven to dissociate it from politics, the cleavage is on political lines. The Northcliffe organs are waging a strong national service campaign, and receiving more moderately expressed support from the Morning Post, the Standard and the Express, while the Daily Telegraph leaves the subject alone.

The Liberal organs, the Chronicle and the Daily News, devote both leaders to special articles justifying the voluntary system, at the same time attributing ulterior motives to their opponents.

Arnold Bennett, in the Daily News, writes that the conscription campaign is in the hands of the wrong people, and the careful astention from it of the influential Conservative personalities constitutes an almost dramatic phenomenon, and that it is in the hands of the people who by inaptitude and vulgarity might be trusted to ruin a far better cause.

President Smillie, of the Miners' Federation, the most powerful trade union in Britain interviewed in the Manchester Guardian, declares strong opposition to the abandonment of the voluntary system, and charges conscription advocates with a desire to establish conditions under which organized workers could be exploited by capitalists after the war, concluding with a stated intention of fighting conscription inch by inch, if it is attempted.

With such diversified opinions, the Observer thinks that it is the imperative duty of the Ministers to insist that here shall be restraint in the discussion.

A labor party numbering a dozen parliamentary members, will cross to Flanders next week, and probably their visit there will have an important influence upon their attitude in this respect.

Crop Census

The Dominion Census and Statistics Office issued recently a bulletin giving a preliminary estimate of the yield of fall wheat, of hay and clover, and of alfalfa, based upon appearances at the end of July, as estimated by correspondents, and a report on the condition of other field crops at the same date.

Fall Wheat, Hay and Clover and Alfalfa.—The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of fall wheat in Canada for 1915 is 28.10 bushels, as compared with 21.78 bushels, the average of the five years 1910 to 1914. The harvested area of fall wheat in the five provinces of Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia amounts in 1915 to 1,208,700 acres, as compared with 678,300 acres in 1914, and the total estimated yield to 33,957,800 bushels, as compared with 20,837,000 bushels in 1914, an increase in total yield of 63 per cent. In area harvested, in average yield per acre and in total yield the fall wheat harvest of 1915 is therefore expected to be the largest on record. In Ontario the total estimated yield is 27,080,000 bushels from 972,000 acres, an average of 27.86 bushels per acre, and in Alberta, the other large fall wheat province, the total yield is 6,225,000 bushels from 215,700 acres, an average of 28.86 bushels per acre. The estimated yield of hay and clover in 1915 is 10,589,800 tons from 7,875,000 acres, as compored with 9,206,000 tons from 7,997,000 acres in 1914, the average yield per acre being 1.34 tons, as compared with 1.15 tons in 1914. Alfalfa shows a total yield of 158,755 tons from 92,665 acres, as compared with 129,780 tons from 90,385 acres in 1914; the average yield per acre is 1.71 tons, as compared with 1.44 tons.

Condition of Spring Sown Crops—Spring-sown grain crops continue to show an excellent average condition, all being for Canada above 90 per cent. of the standard representing a full crop. Beans, buckwheat and flax are 88 per cent. of the standard; potatoes and turnips are above 90, and the remaining crops are as follows: Corn 82, mangolds 89, hay and clover 81, alfalfa 87, sugar beets 89, and pasture 89. Converted into a standard wherein 100 represents the average yield per acre of the seven years 1908 to 1914, the condition of the principal grain crops at July 31, 1915, is as follows: Fall wheat 120, spring wheat 112, all wheat 113, rye and barley 111, oats 108, flax 107. That is to say, the yields per acre of these crops, according to their appearance on July 31 are expected to be above the average yields of the previous seven years to the exten of 20 per cent. for fall wheat, 12 per cent. for spring wheat, 13 per cent. for all wheat, 11 per cent. for rye and barley, 8 per cent. for oats and 7 per cent. for flax.

COW GIVES WORLD'S RECORD MILK YIELD

MONTCLEAR, N.J., Aug. 26—A test just made gives a four-year-old Holstein cow, Vernon Burke 3d, on his dairy farm at Beemerville, N. J., a world's record yield of milk for a week for a cow of her age.

In seven days she gave 734 pounds of milk. For 30 days she produced more than 100 pounds daily.

German-Americans Not Likely to Take up Arms Against the Fatherland.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Among the passengers who arrived today from Copenhagen on the Scandinavian-American liner Hellig Olav was Alphonse G. Koelble, president of the German-American society, of New York, and honorary president of the German-American Alliance in the State of New York. He claims to represent 100,000 German-Americans and appeared deeply impressed with the justice of Germany's cause in the issue between that country and the United States. He expressed annoyance with the attitude of the King's harbor master at Kirkwall, who did not seem satisfied when he showed his American passport on his way over to Berlin on the Norwegian-American liner, Bergensfjord, August 2.

Mr. Koelble is an American citizen and a lawyer, practising in criminal courts, where he attracted public attention as counsel for Father Hans Schmidt, the slayer of Anna Aumueller.

In an interview with the reporters on the ship, Mr. Koelble said the majority of the German people condemned the sinking of the Lusitania and were sorry for the loss of so many noncombatants, but thought Americans should have heeded the warnings not to sail on belligerent ships.

When asked what would be the attitude of the German-Americans if the United States and Germany went to war over the sinking of the Lusitania and the Arabic, Mr. Koelble replied:

"It all depends. In a just cause they would stand behind America, but in an unjust cause they would not fight unless they took up arms against America. I know that because I am president of their society."

"Do you think that war resulting from the sinking of the Lusitania and the Arabic would be just?" he was asked.

"It would be an absolutely unjust cause," Mr. Koelble replied, "and there is not a German in America who would back up President Wilson in a stand of that kind. Anyway, President Wilson is not going to take up a losing side, and the Allies are losing. The feeling in Germany is that America will be the money power of the world."

Mr. Koelble sailed from New York on June 24 with Dr. Bernard Dernburg and took with him an album to the Emperor of Germany. It contained newspaper clippings on the affair he organized last February for the benefit of the German war widows and orphans.

TO SAVE MILLIONAIRES FROM BLACKMAILERS

Brooklyn Attorney Seeks Indictment Against Ring of Society Crooks.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A Brooklyn lawyer, named Harry E. Shirk, confirmed a report that he was getting ready to apply for an indictment, perhaps in New York county, against a ring of blackmailers, who have been getting thousands of dollars from millionaires. A Pittsburg millionaire, who was entrapped into a $250,000 demand, is Mr. Shirk's client and the leaders of the blackmailers are a woman of French and Spanish extraction and a great beauty, and an Englishman.

According to Mr. Shirk, the woman moves in Newport society under an assumed name; she has a record in Paris and London. The Englishman wears a monocle and the other members of the group are two women and two men. And the woman is the last word in "beautiful adventuresses," for Mr. Shirk returned from Atlantic City where he and Harry V. Dougherty, head of Dougherty's detective agency were bathing alongside the adventuress.

"I am waiting for a certain report from Mr. Dougherty before I seek the indictments," said Mr. Shirk. "The blackmailers are being trailed and they cannot get away."

The story had it that the Pittsburg man met the adventuress at a hotel in Lakewood, N.J., in February, 1914; that she had eyes as big as cherries and was all curves, and that in April at Atlantic City, she threatened to sue for breach of promise unless she got $250,000.

DOWN WITH UNCLE SAM!

(New York Herald)

No one in this country has been in ignorance of the great effort being made by Germany to bend the United States to her will. The elaborate scheme to "run" this Government from Berlin has been known to all men, and the World has performed a good service in producing documentary proof. Proof is what is needed at this time.

Germany lost control of the sea through the inadequacy of its navy—therefore the United States must be compelled by the coersive power of money and agitation to restore to Germany the control of the seas! Germany had all the munitions needed to wage war—therefore the American merchants must be compelled to cease selling munitions in the open market!

Our Government was to be bullied and threatened and our foreign policy was to be "made in Germany." Where the "Kaiser touch" could swing Americans susceptible to flattery the "Kaiser touch" was applied. Where the clink of coin would prove effective the coin was clinked. The "invisible army" remained invisible only when the designs of the precious crew of conspirators were being formed. Then the mask was dropped and forged passports and other measures were adopted as naturally as though the operators were in Berlin.

So it went. It is a revelation which should sting this Government to action. The Germans appear to have assumed that President Wilson would tolerate anything. The exposure should go on, and there should be a housecleaning in the Diplomatic Corps. For this matter goes at the very heart of national decency and national self-respect.

This Government must be conducted by Americans and not by Germans.

Bolt of Lightning Cures Rheumatism

BERLIN, Conn., Aug. 26.—The medical faculty was put to shame by a bolt of lightning which struck the farmhouse on Wothington Ridge. The electric bolt destroyed articles in all the eight rooms of the house and did damage exceeding $1,000, but it cured Mrs. Burdick of rheumatism, from which she had suffered for many years.

Mrs. Burdick was about to put wood in the kitchen stove when the bolt struck her, knocking her down and rendering her unconscious. One of her feet was on zinc beneath the stove. The lightning took a nail out of the sole of her shoe and her foot was burned severely.

Mrs. Burdick, although suffering from the burns on her foot, was free from rheumatism pains.

Barriefield Camp

Interesting Details Concerning the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles

Kingston, in all its long years of military experience, has never been privileged to see a mounted corps which equalled the 8th C.M.R. It is not a Kingston regiment, although it contains a number of Kingston boys in its ranks, and many others have been among the three drafts the 8th has sent overseas since it came to Barriefield camp. The 8th was organized in Ottawa and came here at the opening of the camp, and from the day it landed at Barriefield it was evident, even to a military novice, that the regiment was well officered, and well trained. The 8th now belongs to Kingston by adoption, and the city should take as much interest in its work and welfare as in that of any other unit in camp. Every month since the 8th came into camp here its pay sheet has averaged $23,000, and added to this has been a monthly expenditure of about $7,000 for fodder and food in excess of the government issue. This means that the 8th Mounted Rifles has put into circulation in the city of Kingston every month the sum of at least $30,000. Looking at the fact from the cold commercial standpoint, Kingston has indeed profited by the presence of the 8th at the Barriefield camp.

But the 8th has done more than put money into circulation in the city. It has been one of the greatest factors in securing recruits for all branches of the service since it came here. There is nothing that catches the average young fellow's fancy like a mounted regiment, ond once his fancy is struck, it is not long before he has the uniform on. The officers of the 8th have been among the best that the camp has contained. Always pleasant, courteous, and willing to oblige anybody, they have been hard workers, and are as popular with their men as they are with those who know them outside the ranks of the regiment. When officers are popular with the men who serve under them they are indeed good fellows, for no man is quicker to find the mean streaks in another than a soldier in the ranks, nor can any one appreciate more keenly or quickly the good points of an officer like the fellow in the ranks. Lieut.-Col. Munroe and his entire staff are loved by the men of the 8th, and there is no task too hard or too strenuous for the men to perform when ordered by their officers.

Since coming to Barriefield, Lt.-Col. Munroe has been ever ready to allow the use of his trumpeters band or his pipers for any purpose whatever where help was needed, and every good work inaugurated in camp or out has had the countenance of the officers of the 8th C.M.R. In return for all this, so far nothing has been done for the regiment Kingston has adopted. Not even a dance, a reception or function of any kind, in a city noted for its hospitality and generosity. It is all due to a lack of thoughtfulness rather than to a lack of willingness, and the matter should have attention at once.

The 8th is very much in need of a field kitchen. It is going to do a great deal of treking in the interests of recruiting, and has no kitchen. So far it has been compelled to borrow a field kitchen for its trek, but there should be some way by which it could have one of its own, surely. The fact that it has spent in the city over $12,000 since it came here should in itself cause attention to turn to its presence and its needs. Kingston and Barriefield camp are fortunate in having such a fine cavalry corps and it is to be hoped that as an overseas draft unit the city will be able to retain it.—Kingston Standard.

BACKLESS BATHING SUIT LATEST STYLE

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 25.—Latest of all the bathing suit fashions that have been offered to the gaze of the public here is the backless costume. The first of the new variey appeared at the popular bathing hour, and to say that it created a stir is hardly truthful. It overwhelmed everybody who saw it, including the two guards perched on their lookout.

From the shoulders to the belt the backless suit is not unlike one of the fashionable winter ball gowns. It is cut out in a deep point which reaches almost to the waist and at the shoulders are mere nothings in the way of straps to keep it up. The girl who wore it for the first time evidently had been taking her daily dip in a suit much higher, for you could see the sunburned skin above the outline of her old suit.

WILL GERMANY ABANDON HER WAR OF PIRACY

Well-informed London Circles Think Its Abolition Possible—That Berlin is Coming to Her Senses—Little Doubt Critical Stage Has Passed.

BERLIN, August 27.—Developments of the highest importance have taken place here in the last 24 hours and have cleared the air and ended much of the tension. Secrecy is maintained regarding the details of important communications passing between the foreign offices of Berlin and Washington, but from a well-informed quarter the correspondent learns that the Imperial Chancellor and his supporters, who champion moderation in the submarine warfare with the corollary of maintaining American friendship, appear to have the upper hand and that the Arabic case is well on the road to a settlement which will be satisfactory to America.

Ambassador Gerard looked significantly optimistic this morning and Foreign Office circles seemed relieved and happy over the turn of events. The manner of the German authorities is strikingly different from what it was during the interchange of Lusitania notes, when the Germans were absolutely convinced of the righteousness of the submarine's action in sinking the Cunarder and were prepared to stand their ground regardless of the consequences. In the Arabic case, however, the state of mind of the authorities is quite different, and a spirit of genuine goodwill and conciliation pervades official circles. It is possible that this is induced in part by the succession of eastern victories, culminating in the fall of Brest-Litovsk. There is no denying that the Germans are feeling good as the result of these victories and are in a frame of mind to go at diplomatic exchanges along common sense lines.

There are still some attempts in certain quarters to cling to the hope that the Arabic struck a floating mine or committed a hostile act, but even if this cannot be proved, the general feeling here is that sufficient extenuating circumstances will be shown to excuse the torpedoing as a regrettable accident and that the Arabic case can be settled diplomatically with or without an apology.

The Vossiche Zeitung this afternoon makes this comment: "We learn from a trustworthy source that negotiations with America over the sinking of the Arabic are in full course and that no definite points of difference have arisen to justify friction. There is no lack of goodwill on either side to bring about a peaceful settlement of the case and one may well hope that this comparatively insignificant occasion will not serve to seriously darken more than a hundred years of friendship."

An Internment Camp

At a certain point in New Ontario the party of newspapermen and railway officials who made the initial trip on the National Express to Winnipeg passed the most flourishing settlement that crossed their vision since the train pulled out of Cochrane on its first run over Canada" new railway. It is not the usual sort of a settlement one meets in the wilderness. It is not a Hudson Bay trading post, nor is its chief activity the sale of corner lots to strangers. Its form of municipal government is unusual, being organized on the principle of the absolute monarchy, with a ruling class and compulsory labor and all that goes with it.

It is an internment camp. Its name is spelled Kapuskasing, but it is not usually pronounced. Most people prefer to know it by the name of the station, Macpherson.

A football game was in progress when the National drew up. A crowd of Austrians and a scattering of red-fez-ed Turks were the spectators. Interest in the game was replaced by the phenomenon of a train formed solely of passenger and express coaches. But none of them offered to approach the tracks, and the passengers who alighted remained close to the train. One of the train party forgot about war regulations and climbed a pile of bricks to "snap" the encampment. Before he had his camera focussed a sergeant and several privates in various stages of shocked excitement closed in on him and prevented him from unwittingly committing what is now a serious offence.

The camp consists of a row of tarpapered one-storey shacks, set in the middle of a large clearing. Here approximately a thousand Austrians and Turks are gathered. There are only about one hundred and fifty of the latter, but they cause more trouble than all the rest put together. Their pet foible is to refuse to work. When that happens they are made to work. The system of compulsion, we are told, is a deep dark secret in which not even the officers of the camp share. Suffice it to say that the Turks do work, sooner or later.

At one time or another a few of the prisoners have escaped from the camp, but none of them enjoyed more than a few hours of freedom. With few exception they have been rounded up and returned to camp at Kapuskasing.

Their labor consists of clearing the land. One of the soldiers on duty at the outskirts of the camp informed us that nearly two hundred acres had already been cleared. If the war lasts long enough, Macpherson station will find itself the centre of a farming district, potentially one of the richest in Ontario.

After hours the prisoners are given a wide range of freedom to enjoy themselves. They play football, or watch the soldiers play; improvise sports of their own, or go boating on the river in large punts which have been provided for their amusement.

Their diet includes a form of sausages popular among Austrians, sometimes beef, bread, jam and the like. Their rationis are as good as those served the soldiers, healthful and satisfying. They are living an out-of-doors life and are gaining in knowledge of the wild. When the war is over they will be given first chance to claim for settlement the land they have cleared. Altogether there are worse things than being an alien enemy in a Canadian military internment camp.

CHINA IS RIPE FOR GUM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The immense prospect of profit in China for the enterprising American manufacturer of chewing gum is the subject of a report from the United States Commercial Attache at Shanghai, Julean H. Arnold. According to this report there are 300,000,000 in China that are innocent of the great American enjoyment. The Chinese are said to be keenly fond of sweets, and it is believed they would not be averse to using gum if they could get it.

In southern China a few millions chew the betel nut and secretly elsewhere there is a fondness for opium. Tobacco is used, but not so generally as here, although now that American cigarettes have been introduced, millions of them are consumed daily. Mr. Arnold thinks chewing gum would be very popular with the Chinese. Once they did not use our condensed milk, but now they have strewn all China with empty milk cans. Until recently they did not use tooth powder, but now tooth powders are advertised all over China and used quite naturally.

Mr. Arnold also says that the United States could do a big business in making playing cards for the Chinese. They already like them, and in Shanghai they have practically abandoned their own "sparrow cards" to use our kind. He says that we ought to put Chinese numerals and figures on the cards and use Chinese characters for King, Queen, and Jack. Above all, the cards, to sell well, should be very showy, with amusing and sensational pictures on the backs. Several residents of Shanghai have offered, through Mr. Arnold, to give advice as to the designing of the cards for the Chinese, and any one interested can obtain from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce all needed information.

BOTH WERE STRONG.

But the Price Had a Shade the Better of the Flavoring.

"I don't kick at having to pay good prices," an irate patron of high priced restaurants was saying yesterday, "but, I ask you, isn't $1.50 for garlic rather strong? As for me, the recollection almost makes me weep.

"I was giving a dinner for six last night, and as a part of the dinner I ordered two racks of lamb. The price on the carte du jour was $8 a rack. That's pretty high, but these are high times. I have a great opinion as to the merits of a dash of garlic in cookery, so to the waiter who took my order I suggested that the dish on which the lamb was to be served should be rubbed with garlic, as one frequently does in making a salad.

"When the bill came the item for the racks of lamb was not $16, but $17.50. The waiter could not explain the increase. I called for the head waiter. He went to the checker and came back.

"'The rack of lamb plain would have been $16,' he explained. 'The extra $1.50 was for the garlic.'

"One cent would have covered the cost of the garlic, and another cent would have covered labor and all overhead charges. I figure that the profit to the house on that garlic was 7500 per cent."—New York Times.

MAN AND BREAD AND DONKEY

A Daily Spectacle In Spain Between Alcala and Sevilla.

Bread made in Alcala, Spain, is of such exceptional goodness that the village is famous throughout the country as "Alcala of the breadmakers." Each loaf is carefully stamped with the trademark of the town before baking.

An early train leaves Alcala daily for Seville, and before daylight long lines of pannier laden mules begin to arrive from all directions. At the station the panniers are removed and placed in freight cars, the donkeys being driven into similar cars, and mules, drivers and bread are all transported by train to Seville.

Here amid scrambling, hallooing and shrill cries the animals are unloaded, panniers adjusted, and the bread sellers go forth into the streets of Seville, calling their wares and boasting of the fineness of the Alcala bread. They return at midday, pack their empty panniers into the cars, drive in the mules, light their cigarettes and enter the third class carriages to be taken back to their home town, ready for the following day's trade.

A charge of 18 cents is made by the railway company for the round trip of donkey, man and bread.—Argonaut.

Scotch Dogberrys.

The simplicity and ignorance of the rural Scotch magistrate often quite equaled that of the English, immortalized by Shakespeare in Dogberry, and here are two examples, quite in the true Dogberry vein.

"That is a most tragical event which has just happened," said a friend to Baillie Blank. "Your neighbor, Mr. B., has committed suicide."

"Wha ou?" inquired the baillie eagerly.

Perhaps it was he—it was certainly another Glasgow baillie—who, his health being proposed at a banquet in honor of his recent dignity, responded nobly to the toast:

"I canna but say, ma friends, that I'm proud of the honor of being made a baillie of this great city, and I'm even, I think, entitled to the honor, for I've gone through all the various stages of degradation that a baillie has tae dae tae reach it."—Youth's Companion.

DIDN'T GET A JOB.

But She Should Have Landed It If Nerve Was a Recommendation.

"I've seen a lot of cool ones in my time, but believe me I caught one the other day that had 'em all skinned for nerve."

The speaker, a detective in one of the large downtown department stores, was leaning against the rail in a police court waiting for her case to be called.

"I spotted a woman whose action didn't just suit me. I trailed her for about ten minutes and then, presto, she gobbled on to a bar of five cent soap. That wasn't hardly enough in itself to hang a case on, so I kept my mouth shut and my eyes open as she made her way toward the elevator. When she got into the cage I was right behind her, and I almost stepped on her skirt as she 'traipsed' along the aisle toward the office.

"Apparently, as if in search of work, I played with a slip as she told the boss her story, and, would you believe me, she was trying to get a job. She wanted to get a place in the soap department, saying that she had been a demonstrator for a large soap concern; that she was tired of the outdoor work and offered the bar of soap she had just stolen as evidence of the fact that she was an experienced saleswoman.

"I stood it as long as I could and then gave the superintendent the 'high sign' to 'can' her. Can you beat that for nerve?"—Detroit Saturday Night.

A DIVERTED RIVER.

Who Changed the Flow of the Karun In Persia Is a Mystery.

Arabistan lies at the head of the Persian gulf, its western boundary being the Shatel-Arab, the great river formed by the combined waters of the Tigris and Euphrates, the right bank of which is in Persian territory, while the left is in Turkish Arabia. Forty miles above where it flows into the Persian gulf the Shatel-Arab is joined by the Karun, and the town of Mohammerah stands at the junction of the two rivers, the former a clear green stream, the latter thick and red.

In ancient times the Karun flowed into the gulf and part of the river still runs along the old channel, but the main stream has been diverted, three miles above Mohammerah, into an artificial channel known geographically as the Haffar canal.

It is impossible even to make a guess at the date of this wonderful work, not even a tradition remaining of the ruler whose farsightedness realized the enormous advantage of joining up the two water ways. Alexander the Great has been suggested, but apparently for no other reason than that he is a convenient and likely person to credit with any ambitious enterprise, and that one of his many Alexandrias was built on the site of the present Mohammerah.—Wide World Magazine.

Woman's World

General In Chief of the Suffrage Forces of the Keystone State.

MRS. FRANK M. ROESSING.

Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association, is a new type of suffrage leader. As general in chief of the suffrage forces of the Keystone State she is conducting a campaign for the ballot, which, because of the dignity and common sense that characterize it, has gained the respect and admiration of the entire country.

Sensational stunts that have nothing but their sensationalism to commend them have no place in the Pennsylvania suffrage campaign. Although still in the early thirties, Mrs. Roessing has achieved distinction as both a civic worker and philanthropist, as well as leader of the state suffrage forces. Moreover, her civic and sociological work has always been along constructive lines, with the betterment of evil conditions as the goal to be achieved.

Through the women's clubs of her home city, Pittsburgh, she worked for years to secure better living conditions for women and children. As secretary of the Twentieth Century club and as treasurer of the Playground association she made an enviable reputation both as an executive and financier.

Mrs. Roessing's interest in suffrage came as a development of her active experiences as a civic worker, for she learned early the difficulties of attempting to better conditions for women and children through "indirect influence." She found, she says, that without the ballot even the most earnest workers were handicapped. Therefore she determined to secure the power which it represented for the women who need it most, in her opinion—the women of the factory and mill.

Her success in this task is shown by the growth of interest in the suffrage question in Pennsylvania during the past few years. This year through her generalship the question goes directly to the voters for the first time. Powerful interests are fighting the Pennsylvania suffragists, but Mrs. Roessing does not fear the outcome.

"We will win," she said recently, "because the majority of men in the state believe in fair play. And that is what the question of suffrage finally resolves itself into—just fair play."

THE SUMMER ROOM.

White, Black and Rose Make Stunning Decorative Scheme.

The fad for black and white wall papers grows apace, and the cretonne of cretonnes to use with such wall paper is black of ground and splashed over with great, glowing red roses. Can you visualize the smartness of a country house living room papered in black and white stripes, hung with a few black framed etchings and one or two gilt framed mirrors, and furnished with black wicker furniture and this splendid rose covered black cretonne?

English officers' wives who make homes in India depend for nine-tenths of their furnishings on cretonne. Furniture in the official quarters is of the simplest sort, but twenty or thirty yards of fresh chintz, taken out from "home" and used to cover chairs, couches and tables, turn the austere living rooms into bowers of homelikeness and daintiness. Some of the new summer cretonnes cost but 10 cents a yard—in pleasing patterns too. For 20 cents a surprisingly attractive pattern may be secured, and twenty yards at 20 cents a yard will achieve marvels in the way of giving a country house living room a homelike air.

The woman with a true eye for color is careful about the books and magazines that lie about her living room. A blue book in a gray and blue room may focus all the color and be very effective. Such a book placed conspicuously in another room may be a horribly jarring note. Magazine covers are bright in color, and the cover that harmonizes with its surroundings will happen to be on top of the pile of magazines in the room of the artistic hostess.

SHE WAS A TRUE WIFE.

The Story of a Crisis and the Way It Was Happily Handled.

A woman has just told us of what she did the night her young husband found himself bankrupt. His factory was closed, he had lost all he owned—plus a good deal more—and, as he looked at it, life was about at an end. He reflected that he had taken his wife from a happy and charming home and that he had brought disgrace and poverty on her. It occurred to him that a well placed bullet might be the best all round solution of his difficulties.

His wife, at home, made a poignant surmise as to what he was thinking. Suddenly it occurred to her that here was a chance for team work—an opportunity to show what being a wife really meant. She prepared a delicious little dinner, she made her home as inviting as she could, and she arrayed herself in her most becoming dress.

Her husband returned, not to a disheveled and sobbing woman, to a neglected house and a drama of disaster, but to a home where everything spoke of resolution, of continuity, of expectation. The fire on his hearth, his simple, well cooked dinner, the courageous eyes of his attractive wife, restored him to a true sense of values. He was able, amid all his confusion of purpose and torment of realization, to see his failure as only a retrievable episode in his life.

He is now a successful manufacturer, his debts are paid and he has a happy home with a son and a daughter in it. He was saved from being a suicide by the fact that a woman was sportsmanlike at the right moment.—Collier's Weekly.

An Old Sailing Vessel.

Modern steamships have a very brief life as compared with the old sailing vessels. The Princess Mary, which conveyed King William III. to England from Holland in 1688 and was then over seventy years old, lasted until 1827. This vessel was retained as a royal yacht until the reign of George I., by whose orders she was sold. As the Betsy Cairns she sailed to the West Indies and back for over fifty years and then after another change of ownership was employed as a collier until Feb. 17, 1827, when she struck a rock and was totally wrecked.

Hallam the Amateur.

Douglas Hallam, wounded in action against the Turks a few days ago, is remembered here almost as much for his amateur interest in the stage as for any of his other random, restless exploits. Hallam took part in one of the Press Club productions some years ago, wrote parts of the performance, had usually up his sleeve some scenario for a new play of an unconventional sort, and was usually looking round for some chance to show his peculiar ability. When he was a reporter on a Toronto newspaper, which he became just for the experience, he always had some novel way of wanting to do an assignment. When he took up with camera work he blew one of his hands nearly to smithereens with flashlight powder. At the University he was always seething with some protest. When he went into business he always seemed to hate it. When he took up with flying it was because he was weary of routine and wanted a new sensation. His enlistment in the Navy was as a flying-man. Before he gets through with the war Lt. Guiseppe de Cesare, sent from Nelson to New Westminster for life for murder, has been sent back insane: it is doubted, too.

An Incident Of Heredity

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Doctor," said Norman Goodfellow to Dr. Theodore Colt, "I am thinking of proposing marriage to a lady in whose family there are traces of insanity. Do you consider me justified in marrying her under the circumstances?"

"Not if the insanity is hereditary. There is a great difference between insanity from a temporary cause and from an organic trouble that may be transmitted from parent to child. I do not consider that any one suffering from an ailment which is hereditary has a right to marry. Your question suggests a story involving a case which came within my professional experience.

"One day a young man named Severance came to consult me as to a case similar to yours. He had recently been married and all had gone happily till one day on returning to his home from business he found his wife lying on the bed indisposed. She seemed drowsy, and, suggesting that she try to get a nap, he took the evening paper to a window and sat down to read.

"Presently he heard her tossing about on the bed and, looking at her from his paper, saw that, though asleep or at least dozing, there was an undulatory motion about her that suggested the movement of a snake. He had awakened her and asked her if she had not been dreaming, but she said she had not been conscious during her nap and felt much better for it.

"Nevertheless the young husband seemed to me to have been much shocked at what he had seen. Were it not for this I would have concluded that what he had seen was the working of his wife's nerves uncontrolled during slumber. I gave him this cause in order to reassure him, but it did not. However, since I could give him no other comfort, he left me, much dejected.

Not long after his visit, taking up a newspaper, I saw a notice that he had left his house a few days before and had not been heard from since. The police had been notified, and an alarm had been sent out. Fears were entertained that he had met with foul play, since the day before his disappearance he had drawn a large sum of money from his bank.

His visit to me, the story he told and his depression led me to suspect that he was suffering from some nervous or mental trouble, and I inclined to the belief that what he had told me about his wife was a creation of a diseased brain. I did not see how I would be justified in making known my suspicions without mentioning the cause, and that I did not care to do.

Severance never turned up, and no probable cause was ever given for his disappearance. When several years had passed his wife gave him up for dead, believing that he had been murdered for the money he had with him. Four years after his disappearance she married again, and as fate would have it her second husband was a patient of mine. I did not know that he was to marry Mrs. Severance, and I was satisfied that I had not known it, because I should have been troubled as to what I should do in the matter, for I was undecided what to attribute her first husband's disappearance to.

Within a few months after my patient's—Hammond's—marriage he came into my office one day with a wild look in his eyes and told me a story similar to the one Severance had told me. He had had a disagreement with his wife, during which she had become very much excited. During the vituperations she had hurled at him her eyes had glittered like those of an angry serpent. Her appearance during the trouble had made such a horrible impression upon him that he was afraid he would lose his mind. He asked me to give him a sedative.

Here was a worse complication for me than Severance had brought me, for I was not sure whether Severance's experience had been an hallucination occasioned by a disordered brain or had been caused by some peculiar condition in his life. But I dared not tell Hammond this, for it would be sure to make a wreck of him. I had no recourse but to say to him that he must have been suffering from some nervous weakness. Instead of giving him a drug I advised him to go on a trip, but on no account to take his wife with him.

He took my advice as to the trip, but never returned from it. News of his having fallen over a precipice in Switzerland was sent to her over the ocean, but I have always suspected that he arranged for its transmission himself. One thing confirmed this suspicion; his body was never found.

Two years after having become a hypothetical double widow the lady in this case died. I confess I was relieved. There was now no further chance of any more of my clients marrying her. Soon after her death I made some investigations as to her case through the physician who attended her. I called on him and gave him the experience of her two husbands as given to me. He accepted a theory I gave him and promised if possible to learn facts that would confirm it.

He found an aunt of the subject of my story who told him that her sister soon after her marriage had been frightened by a serpent. Six months after this episode the child, who became Mrs. Severance-Hammond, was born. My theory was that the mother's fright at this critical period affected the nature of the child.

A Strange Conversion

By F. A. MITCHEL

A tramp called for food at a handsome country residence. The lady of the house was sitting on the veranda. She was a woman to interest herself in building up those who needed building up and ordered a maid to bring a substantial meal out on to the veranda and place it on a table. Then she invited the tramp to help himself. While he ate she questioned him as to the cause of his living a life of beggarly indolence. His replies were not very satisfactory and indicated that he followed the life of a tramp because he preferred it to work.

The lady, having fed him, gave him some money, and he departed. When her husband came home that evening she mentioned to him what she had done. He chided her for wasting her sympathy on one who was evidently undeserving, whereupon she declared that all persons were in a sense undeserving; that the mere fact of a person's being in bad condition, even though through his own fault, was a legitimate object for sympathy, and in any event it was an advantage to the giver to lend a helping hand.

A year passed. The tramp was passing over the same route as before and bethought himself of the aid and comfort he had derived at the place he was approaching. He was no more worthy of help than before, felt no gratitude; he only wished to get another meal and some more money. On reaching the house he saw evidences of a funeral taking place in it. The obsequies were for the lady who had befriended him, and since she had rendered herself much beloved on account of her charities a large number of poor people were in attendance.

The tramp joined those who were passing to have a last look at their benefactress. He noticed on the finger of the dead a diamond ring. He further noticed that when the lid of the coffin was put on the ring was not removed. When the funeral procession went to the cemetery he joined the throng and saw the body lowered into the grave. Then the mourners dispersed, and the tramp, after carefully noting the position of the lot, went away.

When night came he went to the house from which his benefactress had been carried, stole a spade and a shovel from among the garden tools and, going to the cemetery, began to remove the earth that had been thrown into the grave of his benefactress. Having uncovered the coffin, he took a screwdriver from his pocket and removed the lid. Taking the hand, he was surprised that there was in it a little warmth. The diamond ring was there, and he attempted to remove it. Failing to do so, he took out his knife to cut off the finger. Feeling something warm on his hand, he struck a match and saw that it was blood.

Leaping from the grave, he ran away as fast as his legs would carry him. Then he stopped and began to think. The most likely solution of what he had stumbled on was that it was one of those very rare cases of a trance having been mistaken for death. His benefactress was lying uncovered in a grave. What should he do? If he rescued her he would be obliged to confess that he had gone there to steal the ring on her finger.

There are natures so bereft of what is good that they can only be affected by some momentous event. The tramp was one of these. A sudden revulsion came over him. Returning to the grave, he found the body as he had left it. Removing it from its cold bed, he wrapped it in his coat and carried it to the nearest house and restoratives were applied.

For a long while the invalid hung between life and death. As soon as there was any hope for her recovery her husband was notified of what had occurred, but not till this was assured was the matter broken to any other member of the family. Then they knew of it by the lady being brought to her home.

As soon as the tramp had done all in his power to save his benefactress, from whose dead body he had intended to steal a jewel, taking advantage of the excitement attending the efforts to restore her, he disappeared. When the lady became convalescent she asked what had happened, but it was not thought advisable to tell her. Seeing that her finger had been badly cut, she inquired into the cause. A story was invented to satisfy her.

One thing puzzled her. Her husband, who had formerly been unsympathetic with her charitable work, which was not a part of organized aid to the poor, but, rather, spontaneous, had suddenly become an unreasoning giver.

The tramp again visited the house where he had received aid and comfort, but not as a tramp. The lady, as at the time of his first visit, was seated on the veranda when she saw a well dressed man coming up the walk. She did not recognize him till he made himself known and told her that it was through her he had become a changed man. But he exercised sufficient caution to discover that she did not know she had been in a grave, and he did not tell her. She asked him if there was anything she could do for him, and he replied that there was. He gave one-tenth of all he earned to criminals, and he thought that his gifts would have more effect if they passed through her hands. She accepted the trust. He made his first donation, and they were continued regularly during his life.

The Vancouver Chinese Benevolent Society executive quarrelled over a $2,600 indebtedness and ended in the police court.

Judge Hoke of Sandy Bend

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

When the court at Sandy Bend had been opened in due and legal form Judge Hoke assumed what he considered a proper judicial dignity and said:

"This ar' a case such as we hev never had afore us before, but we think we kin straighten out the kinks and do jestice to all. Three days ago that red headed critter over thar, who calls hisself Tom Jones, come humpin' down the trail from Big Find to ax if thar was any law in this kentry and to holler fur jestice. He had a wife up thar at Big Find. He went home one evenin' to find that she had skipped with another man. The name of that man was Abe Skinner, and that's him over thar with the broken nose.

"What ginerally happens out yere in this land o' gold and hard times when our wife runs away? If we ain't mighty glad of it, which we mostly be, we git on to her tracks and foller 'em till we overtake her. If she's alone we take her by the ear and lead her back. If she's with a critter we pop him over. Thar ain't no law in the case, but the custom is purty well known. The man who steals another man's wife expects to be popped by the injoored husband, and he likewise expects to pop that same injoored husband if he gits the chance.

"Tom Jones didn't pursoo. Thar was the broad trail before him, and he had guns and knives and a boss, but he hadn't the sand. He jest comes a humpin' down yere to holler fur the law and shriek fur jestice and to git all men, includin' this court, down on him fur his doggoneness. His wife, who ar' that female over thar with a mouth as big as a bar'l, had gone off with Abe Skinner as aforesaid and had him headed for this very camp. As they flies from Big Find they meets up with Jim Hope, who's the cuss over thar with the game leg and one eye gone. Jim he stops 'em and ses:

"'Abe Skinner, what you got thar?'

"'A female.'

"'Who is she?'

"'Tom Jones' wife.'

"'And what you a-doin' with her?'

"'A-runnin' away to Sandy Bend.'

"'Then you needn't go no further. I've been wantin' a wife fur the last six months, and I reckon I'll take her off your hands!'

"Waal," continued his honor, "Jim Hope he had his gun plump on Abe Skinner and his finger on the trigger, and Abe had to give in. This yere court can't l'arn that the woman objected to the change. On the contrary, thar is evidence that she didn't keer a continental, as Jim Hope is a better lookin' critter than Abe Skinner. The couple heads this way by the trail, while Abe Skinner takes a short cut and arrives fustly and comes to me to yell fur jestice. Thar's two fellers yellin' fur jestice and a third one with the woman. The woman gits yere in doo time, along with Jim Hope, and over by the creek they meets Joe Scott, who stops to say:

"'Jim Hope, I was jest goin' out to hunt fur one.'

"'What you mean?'

"'I want a female woman fur a wife, and you git down and skip!'

"Thar was a gun on Jim, and he had to give the woman up. This court can't l'arn that she shed a tear or did any kickin', but Jim he comes whoopin' down to me and wants law and jestice and all that. That makes three of 'em a-wantin', and so I tells the constable to arrest Joe and the woman. Yere's four men and one woman, and the law 'pears to be purty badly tangled up. Fustly, Tom Jones, is this woman your wife?"

"Sartin she is," answered Tom.

"Hev you got the dockyments to prove it?"

"No, but I married her in the Injun Territory a y'ar ago."

"Waal, this court has nothin' to do with the Injun Territory, and that marriage won't stand yere unless the woman wants it to. Mrs. Jones, as I will call you, what made ye run away from Tom?"

"Got tired of him," replied the woman.

"Do you prefer Jim Hope or Joe Scott?"

"I ain't perticklér."

"That makes the case easier. Hank Williams, stand up."

Hank stood up and proved to be a middle aged man of decent appearance.

"Hank, d'ye want a wife?" asked the court.

"I dew," was the reply.

"Then I'll marry ye to this woman."

"Hank Williams, will ye take this deluded woman to be yer lawful wife?"

"You bet!"

"And will ye cherish and defend her and keep all the other critters off?"

"I will."

"Mrs. Jones, ye hear what the critter sez. Ye may be married, and ye may not be, but this court ain't a-goin' to run any chances of any future rows and killin's. Will ye take Hank for better or wuss?"

"Reckon so."

"And will do yer best?"

"Yes."

"Then jine hands. I pronounce ye man and wife, and durn my hide, which ar' the hide of this court, I'll turn out and help hunt down any human critter as tries to come between you and Hank! I now consider that jestice has been done to all hands and all around, and it only remains fur the happy bridegroom to head the purcession to my saloon and treat all hands over the happy event, and thar won't be no ill feelin's and nuthin' to find fault with."

The Result of a Caprice

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"Auntie, why were you never married? I have heard that in your youth you were a great belle."

"My dear," replied the old lady, "why I was not married is a painful story to me. It has been constantly with me ever since I was nineteen years old, but I have never talked about it. There is a lesson in it for young girls like you, and on that account I will tell it to you."

Then the old lady told me the following story:

You know that I was born and raised in the south on one of those plantations that represented typical high life there before the war destroyed the institution which was its foundation. I came of age shortly before the struggle opened. I suppose it is true that I was a belle. Would that I had not been such, for the attention I received turned my head and caused what embittered my life.

Among my suitors were Alfred Beale and Edgar Turnlee. Turnlee was my favorite—indeed, I was very much in love with him—but I wished to be striven for and alternately encouraged him and his rival, Alfred Beale. One day I was sitting in the drawing room of the plantation house with Edgar. My back as well as his was toward the door opening into the great hall, while my face was toward a large mirror resting on the mantel over the fireplace. I caught a glimpse of the reflection of Alfred Beale in the hall.

He saw both Edgar and me sitting together. He paused and looked at us, making no sound to indicate to us that he was there. Indeed, he was eavesdropping, but I thought little of that. I was wrapt in the idea of being an object of strife between two young men and was tempted to see what would happen between them should I purposely increase their antagonism.

I had been expecting a proposal from Edgar and now gave him every encouragement. He was placing an arm around my waist and his face was near mine when I gave a little shriek and drew away from him, assuming to be indignant. Beale stepped into the room and, glaring at Edgar, upbraided him. Edgar looked an appeal to me to exonerate him.

It is impossible to give reasons for the freaks that enter the heads of young persons, especially young girls, in the matter of coquetry. Instead of taking the blame of Edgar's act upon myself, I walked out of the room, leaving my admirers to settle the controversy in their own way. I had no sooner left them than it occurred to me that I had acted abominably. If I had gone directly back and confessed the situation might have been saved. I was about to do so when I remembered that such an acknowledgment would bring down upon me the contempt of both men—that is, if it were believed, which I doubted.

While I was deliberating I heard both men go out of the house. I started to call them back, but hesitated, and before I had made up my mind what to do they were out of hearing.

I wondered what would come to pass between them. It did not occur to me that they would fight a duel. Dueling by this time had largely died out in the south, and I was too young to have heard much of an obsolete custom. What chiefly concerned me was that I had so deeply wronged the man I loved. I was not only suffering from consciousness of having done him an injustice, but was panic stricken lest he should never forgive me.

The affair began in the afternoon, and from then until bedtime I was in a state of dread, not that anything serious might occur between the rivals, but that I had lost my lover. In the middle of the night my father came into my room and asked me for an explanation of what had happened, for he had heard of it. Instead of telling him the truth, I left him with the impression that Edgar had transcended his rights and Alfred had resented his act. I asked father what had come of it, and he replied that I would learn the result in the morning; then he left me.

This was the first intimation I had of anything serious between the two men. Suddenly it flashed upon me that they would fight. I trembled. I lay turning the matter over in my brain, which was like a boiling caldron. With the first light of dawn I arose, dressed myself, stole down the great staircase and out on to the veranda. Looking out from behind a vine, I saw Edgar and two other young men riding by the plantation. Going to the barn, I saddled my horse, mounted and followed them.

I cannot dwell on the rest. It is too painful. I was some time in finding where they had gone. When I reached them they had fought a duel with pistols, and Alfred Beale was lying on the ground, while a surgeon was bending over him. I hurried to him to see if he were dead and was assured that his wound would not be fatal. I turned to Edgar. He gave me a look that has haunted me ever since. I saw in it that I had lost him forever.

You have heard my story. May it be a lesson to you that love is not a game for passing the time that young persons regard it. Love is a serious matter and should be treated seriously. Better the European method of matches made by parents than the follies committed by some young men and women when left to their own caprices.

SYKES' CLERK

By SARAH BAXTER

Jeremiah Sykes was a clerk in a small store in the east till he had by saving accumulated some capital; then he went out to Colorado to become a merchant on his own account. This was years ago.

Sykes' store was located at a crossroads in a mining district in the far west, and the proprietor did a thriving business, supplying the wants of miners in a circuit of fifteen miles. He did all his work himself because he couldn't hire a clerk for less than $100 a month, and that would eat up a good share of his profits.

One day a man came into the store to buy some goods, and after settling the bill asked Sykes how he managed to handle so much business alone. Sykes told him that he should have a helper and why he didn't get one. The man suggested that he could hire a woman cheap enough, and after some conversation said he knew a woman who would be glad to work for whatever Sykes thought he could afford to pay. The merchant told him to send her along and he would see about it.

A few days after that a young woman appeared at the store, and Sykes hired her for a very small salary. He soon learned that she was as valuable to him as a man, but he did not raise her salary. Moreover, he tested her honesty by leaving cash where she could take it without being discovered, but she called his attention to it, at the same time remarking on his carelessness.

At this time a desperado called Simmons was doing a good deal of damage in the neighborhood and Sykes thought it would be better for him to hire a man instead of a woman, since he might need help if Simmons came down on him. He mentioned the matter to his clerk and she said that she could use a revolver as well as a man, and if anything happened she would prove it. Sykes was persuaded and kept her in her position, but he didn't pay her a man's wages.

Sykes' clerk became so useful to him that he gradually left one duty after another to her that he had always considered he must attend to himself, and finally he turned over to her his bookkeeping. Notwithstanding the evidence he had of her honesty, he couldn't bring himself to confide his cash to her. When a robber band dashed into a bank or a store they threatened to kill whoever knew the safe combination unless it were given up. Sykes argued that if he alone could open the safe there would be less likelihood of loss than if another possessed it, especially if that other was a woman. He gave this to his clerk as an excuse for not entrusting her with the combination, and she admitted that it was a very wise precaution.

Sykes kept turning over his capital so steadily that there was never much cash on hand. He was always owing money for goods, and as soon as he received remittances to any considerable amount he paid it out to his creditors. One day his clerk asked him why he didn't let his creditors wait for their money instead of paying so promptly and make interest on it, adding that if he should at any time find it impossible to pay cash they would suspect something was wrong with him. Sykes was impressed with the idea and ceased paying so promptly. After that there were occasional accumulations of cash on hand.

One day Sykes was in the back of the store figuring over his cash account. His clerk was at the front dusting the shelves. It was at an hour when few persons came to the place to make purchases, and no one besides the two were in the store. A man came in, said something to the clerk, and the two walked back to where Sykes was at work. He recognized in the man the person who had recommended his clerk.

"Mornin', Mr. Sykes," he said. "How are you pleased with the young woman I sent you?"

"Very much," Sykes replied.

"He doesn't believe that women's services are worth as much as a man's," said the clerk. "I have been with him long enough for a raise, but I don't get it."

Sykes looked uncomfortable. There was something icy cold in the tone in which she said this.

"Don't you find her trustworthy?" asked the man.

"Perfectly," said Sykes, wondering what this was leading to.

"He has never trusted me with the safe combination," said the woman.

"Hasn't he? Well, I reckon he'd better pay you some back salary." With that he whipped a revolver from his hip and covered Sykes. There was a weapon in the desk on which Sykes was figuring, but he dare not attempt to get it out.

"Who are you and what do you want here?" he asked the man.

"I'm Andy Simmons, and that lady is my wife. I don't think you've treated her fair in not giving her a raise since she's been here, and I've called in to see about it. Supposin' you open the safe?"

The game that had been played on Sykes flashed upon him at once. He opened the safe while the man kept him covered, and, after the woman had gathered some $1,200 that was in it, they bound and gagged Sykes, walked out of the store leisurely, mounted horses standing at the door and galloped away.

HE WON HIS BET

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

I was a reader for a prominent magazine. Perhaps I should explain to those who are not familiar with editorial work that a reader is one who reads manuscripts of unknown authors. A manuscript is brought in to the editor, who sits at a mahogany desk and listens with apparent intentness to a long account of the merits of the work submitted, smiles benignly on the author and as soon as he is gone tosses the manuscript to the reader without a word.

The magazine I was with being for women, most of the readers were women, I being one of the women.

At one time when the editor was ill those who insisted on seeing the editor were referred to me. One of those who left a manuscript with me was a man who seemed to me to be of such caliber that either he should be a successful writer or should not be a writer at all. But successful writers were not used to asking us to publish their works; we asked them to do us the honor to permit us to publish them. I was certainly impressed with Mr. Horatio Beardsley—the name on the title page of his story—and promised him that I would give his story a careful reading.

I did most of my work at home and took Mr. Beardsley's story, called "A Fool For His Pains," there to read it. But a great many manuscripts were crowding upon us at the time, and we were especially successful in getting recognized literary lights in the literary world to give us their works for publication. The consequence was that I omitted to read "A Fool For His Pains" for some time.

One day I looked in my closet for the manuscript, where I had left it, and did not find it there. I asked my mother what had become of it and learned that she had burned an accumulation of pasteboard boxes recently. The manuscript was in a pasteboard box, and it was apparent to me that it had gone up in smoke.

I was terror stricken. If through my carelessness a manuscript committed to my care were destroyed and there was no other copy in existence I would not only suffer a terrible mortification, but would lose my position, on which I was dependent for a living for both my mother and myself.

When I went again to the office of the magazine a letter from Horatio Beardsley was handed me, stating that he had made arrangements for the publication of "A Fool For His Pains" and asking them to return the manuscript. I said nothing at the office about its destruction, for I had not sufficiently recovered from the shock to make up my mind what to do or say in the matter. I went home and tried to think out a way by which I might save myself from the loss of my position, though there was no possible way of escaping the mortification to which I would be subjected.

What I decided upon was this: I wrote a note to Mr. Beardsley, confessing that his manuscript had been burned and asking him if he had another copy and begging him for the present to say nothing about the matter. My note brought him to see me at my home, and it was plain that he was much chagrined at the loss of his manuscript. I told him I could raise $50, which I knew was more than any author unknown to the public could get for a story of the same length as the one he had submitted. He looked up at me with a curious expression when I said this, but made no reply. He left me, saying that he would think over what was best to do, but in the meanwhile I need give myself no uneasiness concerning it. This was very good of him, and I felt very grateful.

A few days later I received a note from him saying that he had decided to rewrite the lost story. Work he did over a second time was always better than his first effort. If I could spare the time to become his amanuensis for the work he would not only excuse me for the destruction of the original manuscript, but if he received a higher price for the second draft than he had been offered for the first he would divide the excess with me.

I was only too glad to escape with this penalty and accepted the proposition except as to any pecuniary interest in what he received for his story. I gave him a couple of hours every working day for a month, at the end of which time the story was finished. In the course of another week I received a note from the author containing a check for $250, which he said was my share of the excess over what he had been offered for the first draft of his story. And what was my consternation to see in his signature the name of one of the most gifted writers before the public.

He had made a bet with a friend that he would submit a story to our magazine under an assumed name and nothing would come of it. Something more than he expected did come of it; his story was burned. Time showed why he treated me so nicely. It seems that he had taken the same fancy to me that I had taken to him. That is why he wished me for his amanuensis. He desired to be with me, to become acquainted with me, and as it turned out he was afforded an opportunity to make love to me. I have been his wife several years and have not yet heard the last of the burning of his production. Indeed, I never expect to hear the last of it. What troubled me at the time was that I could not tell a gifted writer from a common scribbler.

Abundant POWER all the time

What the Siege Guns Teach

THESE diagrams of a modern siege gun and the three different types of automobile engine valves in general use clearly reveal the logic of the "Valve-in-head" principle in automobile construction.

A MODERN SIEGE GUN
The reason this gun will shoot twenty miles is because the firing chamber is so arranged that ALL the force of the powder explosion goes directly behind the shell; none of the energy generated by the explosion is wasted

AN "L" HEAD SIEGE GUN
If the gun were built this way fully 15% of the powder would explode uselessly in the side pocket showing in the drawing. Hence the shell would travel only about seventeen miles on the same amount of powder.

A "T" HEAD SIEGE GUN
If the gun were built like this 20% of the powder's energy would be wasted in the two side pockets illustrated. That part of the explosion would be against the side walls of the gun, instead of against the shell.

VALVE-IN HEAD" MOTOR
In the famous McLaughlin "Valve-in-head" Motor, all the gas is exploded directly behind the piston, just as all the powder is exploded directly behind the shell in the siege gun.

"L" HEAD MOTOR
In the "L" Head Motor, part of the gas explodes in the valve chamber, which means that the piston head does not receive the full force of the explosion.

"T" HEAD MOTOR
In the "T" Head Motor there are two side pockets, thus one-fifth of each explosion is waste. This is the least efficient of all types of motors.

GIANTS OF POWER

The McLaughlin "Valve-in-head" Motor is built on the same engineering principle as the siege gun—a principle as fixed and unchangeable as the laws of gravity. It develops from 15% to 20% more power than any other type of motor. That means power—plenty to use and plenty in reserve.

McLaughlin "Valve-in-head" Six Cylinder Power is smooth, steady, vibrationless, with abundance in reserve for contingencies, and expresses its highest efficiency in the seven magnificent 1916 McLaughlin Models—every one a six.

Power is the life of an automobile. The motor (which generates the power) is the most expensive single factor in the construction of an automobile, representing one-quarter of the cost of the finished product, and in point of service, possibilities and general satisfaction, it represents nearly 75% of an automobile's value.

Therefore—your decision of the choice of a car should be largely governed by the proven merits of its motor.

RAISING RAZORS.

Canada Has Contributed 1,500 So Far for Soldiers.

Kitchener wants a million razors.

Canada so far has contributed 1,500.

Kitchener requested the master cutler of Sheffield to find him a million razors for the use and comfort of the boys in Flanders. The master cutler sent on a request to Mr. Thomas B. Lee, a Toronto wholesale hardware merchant, to collect all the unused razors in Canada. The campaign has only been on for a few days, but already in the offices of Mr. Lee 1,500 razors are piled, which have come from Westville, Nova Scotia, and from Grand Forks, British Columbia, and one, a wonderful old razor made by hand out of a steel file and fitted with a handle of maple, came from a trapper's cabin in the far north!

All in a week's campaign! But this week, Mr. Lee expects to double the number. And when he has 5,000 he is going to pack them up and ship them to the master cutler of Sheffield.

"For," says Mr. Lee, "razors are like pipes. A man is forever seeing a new razor he likes the look of, and he buys it, and never throws the old one away. So that in the bureau drawers of Canada there are thousands of razors just waiting to get to the trenches in Flanders."

Send your razors to Mr. Lee, 30 Front street east, Toronto. A bit of brown paper and parcels post does the trick.

A shave, like a smoke, greatly relieves and comforts the man in the trench. Every man knows how a good clean shave perks him up and makes him feel fit. The effect is the same on the man in the trench, and we can count one German for every shave.

Now, the city of Sheffield, Eng., where razors are made, is denuded of men. In battalions the men of Sheffield now deal with softer but deadlier metals than steel. But the old men still keep the factories going, and it is to these men that the unused and discarded razors will go to be sharpened and touched up as good as new to be distributed to the fighters in Flanders.

Hardly a city in Canada but has sent its offering to Mr. Lee. Winnipeg sends word that 600 razors are on the way. A splendid patriot of Seaforth, Ont., sends his regrets that he cannot fight on account of his age, "but enclosed please find three and three-quarters dozen razors from my shelves."

A Vancouver firm has collected scores. One lady of a Western Ontario city sent two dozen brand new razors, still in their original packing, which must have cost between $35 and $50. The big factories, offices, and stores are deputing one of their staff to collect all the discarded razors in the establishment.

Safety razors are not wanted, for the reason that the old-style razor can be stropped by the soldier on his belt and so kept in good condition.

Among the razors sent in are some wonderful old pieces. There is that home-made one, ground out of a file, spoken of before. There is one very old one with a bone handle, and a thin, narrow blade, made in the time of Queen Anne, and which has shaven many a ruffled and bewigged dandy of olden days. There is one with a genuine tortoise-shell handle, with which came a card finely inscribed in an old-fashioned script—"Used by a soldier in the Crimea." That ought to bring luck to its future wielder. There is another one, a Chinese razor, bearing Chinese lettering stamped on the blade.

All razors are welcome. The old men of Sheffield will put them right and the comfort they will be to the boys in France cannot be estimated.

Law and the Queen.

The quaintness of many provisions of British law is curiously illustrated in the status of the queen of England. So far as her majesty's private business is concerned, she is not regarded by the laws and customs of England as a married woman at all. She is the only woman in Great Britain who does not come within the scope of the married woman's property act. The idea in all this is that affairs of state consume all the time of the king, and therefore no responsibility for the queen's private business rests upon him. If the queen contracted debts in her husband's name he would not be responsible for them, as any other husband in the United Kingdom would. The king cannot be sued for debt, but the queen can be. Should the king die some authorities hold that the queen could not marry again, in case she wished to, without the license of the [illegible] successor.—New York Tribune.

50,000 MORE RECRUITS REQUIRED FROM CANADA

It is Believed at Ottawa That There Will be a Call for 50,000 Men—Call for Twelve Battalions Issued on Saturday

(Canadian Press Special)

TORONTO, Aug. 30.—The Daily News Ottawa correspondent wires that it is believed there that the return of Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes will be signalized by a call for fifty thousand additional men for overseas service. The call for twelve battalions to be sent to England issued on Saturday indicates that the imperial Government have made known to Canadian authorities that the new offensive this fall will demand heavy reinforcements. When these battalions reach England, Canada will have roughly speaking, one hundred thousand men under arms in Europe, forty thousand training in Canada and smaller units on garrison and guard duty. With another call for fifty thousand, Canada will have enrolled two hundred thousand men. It is believed the men will be readily secured.

Attacks on the Turkish Positions

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug 29.—A new attack by land and sea on the Turkish positions at the Dardanelles has resulted in heavy fighting. The Turkish War Office announced to-day that several onslaughts had been repulsed, with heavy losses to the allies. It was also said that a cruiser and a transport of the allies had been hit repeatedly by the German guns. The statement follows:

"On the Dardanelles front on August 27, in the region of Anfatarta, the enemy made a land and sea attack, after a preparatory bombardment with artillery, on our right wing near Liretach Tepe, and on our centre south of Asmakdere. These attacks were entirely unsuccessful. Three attacks on our centre were repulsed, the enemy sustaining heavy losses each time.

"Our artillery repeatedly hit a hostile cruiser and a transport.

"On our right wing, near Avi Burnu, on the night of August 27, there were repeated attacks with bombs.

"Our artillery damaged a transport and a tug near Seddel-Bahr.

"The usual artillery and infantry firing is in progress on the other parts of the front. Otherwise there is nothing to report."

CANADA GIVES FRANCE A SOLDIERS' HOSPITAL

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that arising from the visit of Premier Borden to France the Dominion Government has decided to provide a hospital near Paris for wounded French soldiers. This decision will give immense pleasure not only to Canadians, but also to Great Britain and France, as it affords further demonstration of the reality of the entente cordiale between France and the British Empire.

To French-Canadians the gift is of special interest, because the Government having decided to equip the hospital made the choice of the medical unit, whose members will be able to speak the language of their patients Thus we shall see the treatment of French slodiers by the grandsons of Jasques Cartier, Champlain and Montcalm.

The Canadian Premier on the occassion of his visit to Europe was greatly impressed with the work of the Royal Army Medical Corps.

French President Grateful.

Canada has contributed nobly to funds for alleviating the suffering of the wounded, the gifts having included $100,000 towards a French Hopsital at Dinard. When Premier Borden met the French President recently he offered on behalf of the Canadian Government to provide and equip a hospital for French wounded. The offer was gratefully accepted by President Poincare, and thanks to the exertions of Surgeon-General Carleton Jones Director of the Canadian Army Medical Services, and the co-operation of Hon. Phillippe Roy, the Canadian Commissioner in France, and the interest of Mons Manotaux, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, the promise of the Canadian Minister is about to be full filled. The hospital is already in existance in England under the command of Col. A. Mignault of Montreal with a staff of French-Canadian medical men and nurses. He has been in charge of a tent hospital on the south coast of England capable of accommodating over five hundred patients This is officially known as No. 4 Stationary Hospital. It has done excellent work, and has afforded the members of the staff an opportunity of training experiecne for their new duty

The hospital to be given by Canada will be in the open, but special tents will be provided so that it may be there throughout the winter. There will be accommodation for over five hundred. All necessary stores have been secured, and shortly the staff of French-Canadians, with Colonel Mignault, will leave the south coast to pitch their tents on the outskirts of the French capital.

Zeppelin Raids Military Failure

"Their Errors are Our Gain" Says Mr. Balfour, Writing of Futile Air Raids

LONDON, Aug 29.—"No soldier or sailor has been killed or even been wounded, and only on one occasion has damage been inflicted which would by any stretch of language, be described as of the smallest military importance," says Arthur J. Balfour. First Lord of the Admiralty, of the Zeppelin raids on England, in a letter to a correspondent who had complained that the British accounts of these raids were meagre while the German reports on the same events "are quite rich in lurid details."

"The reason, says Mr. Balfour, in his letter, "is quite simple. Zeppelins attack under cover of night and by preference on moonless nights. In such conditions landmarks are elusive, navigation difficult and errors inevitable and often of surprising magnitude. The Germans constantly assert, and may sometimes believe, that they dropped bombs on places which in fact they never approached.

"Why make their future voyages easier by telling them where they blundered in the past? Since their errors are our gain, why dissipate them? Let us learn what we can from the enemy, but let us teach him only what we must. Nobody will, I think, be disposed to doubt that this reticence is judicious. But the question may still be asked whether it is used not merely to embarrass the Germans, but unduly to reassure the British.

"How ought we to rate the Zeppelins among the weapons of attack, and what have they done and what can they do? To this last question I do not offer a reply. I cannot prophesy about the future of a method of warfare which is still in its infancy. I can, however, say something of its results during the past.

"That it has caused much suffering to many innocent people unhappily is certain, but even this result, with all its tragedy, has been magnified out of all proportion by ill-informed rumor. I am assured by the Home Office that during the last twelve months seven-one civilian adults and eighteen children have been killed, and that 89 civilian adults and 31 children have been injured. Judged by numbers, this cumulative result of many successive crimes does not equal the single effort of a submarine which, to the unconcealed pride of Germany and the horror of all the world, sent 1,198 unoffending civilians to the bottom in the Lusitania.

"Yet it is bad enough, and we may well ask what military advantage has been gained at the cost of so much innocent blood."

Bulgaria Warned Treaty Not Signed

Germans Admit Reported Agreement Between Turkey and Bulgaria Held in Abeyance

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—According to reports from Sofia, Bulgaria has postponed for a few days the signing of the Turkish treaty, the Quadruple Entente having notified Bulgaria that the signing of the treaty at present would be considered as a wilful and unfriendly act. Bulgaria and Turkey, however, are in complete accord.

Germany recently announced the signing of the Bulgarian-Turkish treaty, and heralded it as a sign that allied diplomacy had failed and the Bulgarians had decided to fight with the Germanic powers.

A despatch from London yesterday said:—

"Bulgaria will adhere to her policy of neutrality unless the rights 'filched from Bulgaria' under the treaty of Bucharest after the second Balkan war are restored. But should conditions be so modified as to demand intervention, the Government will immediately summon Parliament.

"This outline of the Bulgarian situation appears in the form of an inspired statement in a publication controlled by the Government and is telegraphed from Sofia.

"There is reason to believe, nevertheless, that the conversations in progress between Nish, Athens and Bucharest will result in a complete agreement to satisfy Bulgarian aspirations in return for assurance of recompense when peace is restored."

700 BOXES OF GOLD CROSS THE OCEAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The second largest shipment this month of gold and securities from the Bank of England to J. P. Morgan & Company arrived here early this morning, and was removed from the depot in twenty-five trucks, under the protection of thirty-eight armed guards, to the United States sub-treasury, Wall Street.

There were 700 boxes of gold in this shipment, the same number that arrived here on August 12, and its total value was between $19,000,000 and $20,000,000. The amount of the securities was not known with exactness by the officials of the American Express Company, but they said that the total value of the shipment was on their books at $55,000,000, so that the value of the securities would be about $35,000,000.

SHIPS WITH CANADIANS ALL SAFE, SAYS OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Aug 29.—The military authorities issued the following official statement regarding a Berlin report (via Sayville) that a British transport carrying 2,000 Canadian troops was torpedoed on August 15 off the Scilly Islands and that 1,000 were saved:

"Between the 31st of July and the 24th of August only two troopships with more than three hundred troops on board have been despatched from Canada, and they have both arrived safely at their destinations. Moreover, every troopship bearing Canadian troops which was at sea on August 15 has arrived safely at its destination. There is no Canadian troopship overdue, and if the story coming via Sayville has any basis of truth it must refer to the torpedoing of the Canadian Northern steamship Royal Edward in the Aegean Sea, the report of which event reached Canada August 17."

AUSTRIANS HAMPERED IN BUILDING DEFENCES

LONDON, Aug. 29.—In connection with their operations in Serbia, the Austrians are attempting to construct new defences along the border, on the banks of the Danube and Save rivers. An official statement dealing with these operations was forwarded today from Nish to Reuter's Telegram Company. It follows:

"On Aug. 25, we stopped the enemy's defence operations on the Danube front at the large island near Mala-Stratcheva, and also on the Save front near Gositch-Inabara, opposite Skela. On the same day we interrupted similar operations near the Island of Moldava, on the left bank of the Save."

POLES BEGIN TO WAGE GUERILLA WAR ON ENEMY

PETROGRAD, Aug. 29.—The fighting is practically uninterrupted along the fronts, but it takes the form of more or less isolated partial conflicts This form of warfare is expected to last another two or three months in Russia, during which the slow process of steady retirement with repeated counter attacks will have brought the Germans another couple of hundred miles deeper into Russia, through the devastated country, and with a Russian winter close at hand.

GUERILLA WARFARE.

It is reported that partisan warfare, such as was so very largely instrumental in producing the disaster to Napoleon's grand army, has begun in several regions in the rear of the German advance. The Poles in particular have always shown themselves admirable guerilla fighters, and are again winning distinction as such, notwithstanding the severity of the merciless efforts of repression.

FORMER FOOTBALLER MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH

BERLIN, Ont., Aug. 29.—Solomon M. (Solly) Brubacher, one of the most prominent citizens of Berlin, and Secretary-Treasurer of the Dominion Button Company, met with a tragic death some time Friday night, which was not discovered until about 9.30 o'clock last night.

His family returned at 9.20 o'clock from two weeks spent in Muskoka, and on reaching the house on Irvin street, found the doors locked and the keys inside. Lights were burning in the front hall and in the bathroom at the rear. It was found necessary to force an entrance into the house, and when Marshall Brubacher, son of deceased, and Orvan Bock, deliveryman, attempted to open the bathroom door they found that the body was lying against it and the room was flooded with water. Forcing open the door they made the gruesome discovery that the body had been literally cooked to death by heated water squirting from the water pipe above the gas heater, the face alone escaping.

Two gas heaters were in the room, one to heat the water and the other to heat the room. The water pipe above the heater had sprung a leak owing to the extreme heat, and the scalding water squirted directly on the back of the body lying on the floor and continued for nearly twenty-four hours. When the room was entered both heaters were still burning.

Solomon Burbacher was the son of the late Henry Brubacher, and was in his fifty-second year. He was one of Canada's foremost football players, being a member of the Berlin Rangers, and accompanied the Western Football Association players to Great Britain in 1888. He was married to Cornelia Clemmer in 1893, and is survived by his wife and two children, Olive and Marshall. He was an active member of Trinity Methodist Church and was popular throughout the city.

Dr. Honsberger stated to-day that within the past few months he has ben called to resuscitate six persons who have become asphyxiated in a similar manner, but they were found before death ensued. He has issued a warning to citizens to ventilate their bathrooms when using gas heaters during the summer months.

WANT SAFE CONDUCT FOR AMERICAN SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—A request for information as to the progress of private negotiations for the safe conduct of American shipments from neutral countries was forwarded to London Saturday by the British embassy. Persistent reports that brokers in London were securing permits for such shipments have led to considerable activity by the trade advisers of the state department, which has failed thus far to secure definite results.

Instructions were sent to Ambassador Page at London to enquire into the matter. He was told to point out that the state department in its unofficial negotiations, desired to secure the privileges now reported as being accorded to private interests. No reply has yet been received.

GERMANS PROGRESS IN ALL SECTIONS

PROGRESS IN ALL SECTIONS

LONDON, Aug. 29.—There are no signs yet of any slackening of the German pursuit of the retiring Russians, and according to the official report issued in Berlin today progress has been made in all sectors of the eastern battle line except that in northern Courland where the armies of Grand Duke Nicholas are offering a stubborn and effective resistance.

From, the southeast of Kovnó, where the Germans claim that they have broken the Russian resistance and must therefore be approaching Vilna, along the Niemen to Grodno and thence southeastward through the forest of Bialowiez and along the borders of the Pripet River marshes the Russians are falling back to new positions.

SPECULATION RE FUTURE

Speculation again is being indulged in as to wether the Germans intend to follow the Russians further or prepare positions from which they can hold the Muscovites while the Teutons attempt an offensive in the Balkans or on the western lines in France and Belgium. Military observers here are of the opinion that this question must be settled before many days have elapsed, arguing that with the summer coming to an end any ventures proposed for the autumn must soon commence to develop.

Thus far the Germans have made no move toward a great offensive in the west, and the threatened Austrian attack against Serbia has consisted mainly of long distance artillery engagements.

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—The German forces have made a further advance on the Russian fortress of Grodno, the only one of their fortified positions near the German border which still remains in their possession.

An official announcement was made here today of the capture of Lipsk, in northern Russian Poland, about 20 miles west of Grodno.

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—In the Eastern theatre the army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg took sixteen hundred prisoners and seven cannon.

The Widsa, a tributary of the Sukelka, was crossed by our troops. The eastern border of the forest directly east of Bialystok has been reached at several points by the group under command of Prince Leopold.

In Bielobiez Forest the fighting goes on for the possession of the crossing over the upper Narew.

German and Austro-Hungarian troops under General von Woyrsch drove the enemy out of his position at Suchonl, on the eastern border of the forest, and at Sceerescowo, and are now closely pursuing him.

In order to render possible the retreat of their rearguard divisions through the marsh district in which the army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen is operating, the Russians once more made a stand yesterday on a line in the Koddubno district, south of Kobrin. They were defeated, although they brought back and threw into the battle some divisions which previously had been falling back.

Germans Ready to Invade Serbia

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The Bucharest correspondent of The Times says:

According to information from a trustworthy source 200,000 German troops have arrived at Brasso, in Hungary, near the Roumanian frontier, during the last week. The Journal Diminea states that man detachments have already taken up positions in the mountains in the neighborhood of that town and in the district of Fagrash.

The opinion of experts is that the invasion of Serbia will begin in about ten days.

In Bulgaria every effort is being made by agents of the central powers to keep alive a feeling of exasperation against Serbia.

It is hoped thus to bring about another Serbo-Bulgarian war, which would facilitate the advance of the Germans to Constantinople. Whether the Entente powers will succeed in counteracting these intrigues and in encouraging Bulgaria to resist the threatened aggressions remains to be seen.

PHOSPHOROUS SHRAPNEL USED BY THE GERMANS

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The Morning Post has the following from Petrograd:

A new application is reported of the invention I mentioned last year. It serves to show how Germany develops the scientific side of her efforts as the war proceeds. Incendiary fire bombs which contain some composition producing sufficient heat to start flames in anything that will burn, are now familiar. The Germans have invented a method of using something similar in the form of or combined with shrapnel. The reports say that any man struck by shrapnel from these things is terribly burnt, also that the burns often prove fatal, even when only a limb is struck. Presumably phorphorus enters into the composition of this new weapon, as also of certain poisonous bullets.

KAISER HONORS THE 'BRITISH "PRETENDER"

Pretender Prince of Wales is Given Order Pour le Merite

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Kaiser Wilhelm has conferred the order of Pour le Merite on the German Crown Prince, the Crown Prince of Bavaria, and the Duke of Wurtemburg.

In awarding these honors, the Emperor sent each of the recipients a telegram. The telegram to the Crown Prince of Germany read as follows:

"This week occurs the anniversary of the battle of Longwy by which the fifth army, under your leadership, opened the way into the enemy's country. Success followed success until the task was fulfilled, establishing the connection between the western army and the home frontier. In the district north of Verdun, your army has fulfilled its task in a manner, creating the foundation for our victories in the eastern theatre of war. During the long wait imposed upon your army, the idea of resuming your aggressive did not effect you. Nowhere was tenacious bravery, inflexible determination to conquer the enemy or consideration for your subordinates displayed more splendidly than during the tedious and heroic battle of the Argonne. I cannot refrain from expressing recognition of your achievements and those of your army by outward symbol. I therefore confer upon you the Order Pour le Merite."

Kaiser Prize Letter-Writer.

The Kaiser's telegram to the Bavarian Crown Prince recalls the battle of Lorraine; "where your royal highness at the head of an army composed of sons of all German States, drove back the invaders of German territory.

"This brilliant victory was followed by a long, onerous period in which it was necessary for you to face repeated assaults by a numerically superior army in order to create conditions for our operations on the eastern front. You and your army performed this difficult task in a manner to be written forever in the page of German history. In grateful recognition of your services to the German cause, I confer upon you the Order Pour le Merite."

In his telegram to Duke Albert, of Wurtemburg, the Kaiser said: "A year has passed since the fourth army under your excellent leadership opened the way far into the enemy's territory by victorious engagements at Semois and Maas. At the head of a newly-formed army composed of young and splendid spirit, you succeeded in frustrating the attempt of the nemy to encompass our northern flank, and also got a footing on the coast of blood-soaked Flanders. Despite floods and bitter struggles with superior forces, you nobly achieved the task of protecting our rear while we were engaged in decisive actions. As a last recognition of your work, I confer the Order Pour le Merite upon you."

The Crown Prince of Bavaria is the "Prince of Wales Pretender," to the British throne. His mother, Queen Mary, is regarded as "Mary IV. of England by the Jasobites.

A case of concealment of birth will be investigated in this city within a few days. The circumstances at present are meagre, but it is learned that a man has been placed under arrest here ,charged with the above offence. The affair came to the ears of the authorities with the result that an investigation was made with the above result.

ACCUSED OF ARSON

Mr. Cephus Munroe, who resides in the Village of Marmora, near the fairground, was taken to Peterboro on Monday night, to stand trial on a charge of arson. On Friday night the barn belonging to the accused's father near Blairton, was destroyed by fire and the son was suspected. It is alleged that when charged with the crime Cephus Munroe confessed his guilt, claiming that he did it as a result of frequent urging by his father, who wished to collect the insurance on the property.

FINE FISH CAPTURED

The maskinonge is the king and the gamest of fresh water fish. Like the black bass, he is a fighter to the finish. Two gentlemen, Mr. J. J. B. Flint and Mr. E. F. Milburn, were seen with a pole, each end of which was carried by them. From the centre hung an imemnse maskinonge, three feet ten inches in length, weighing over thirty-five pounds. Mr Flint and Mr. Milburn were fishing from a skiff, when the fish took Mr. Flint's hook. The boat was a long distance from shore, and a royal battle continued from the hooking of the fish until he was landed upon the shore. It was a fight for life, and every effort possible for the fish to make was attempted. Poor fellow, he battled so well he deserved to escape, but fishermen are merciless when they hook a "big one." This is the largest fish which has this season been landed in the vicinity of Belleville.

PRESENTATION TO MISS ETHEL SLATER

Just before the Sunday School was dismissed yesterday afternoon at the Tabernacle church, Mr. J. Walmsley, superintendent, announced that a valued worker in the Sunday School and Junior League was about to leave the city and asked Miss Ethel Slater to come to the platform, when she was presented with a handsome pendant set in pearls and emeralds, and a bouquet of flowers. Miss Slater was taken entirely by surprise, but thanked her friends for their gifts to her, and assured them it would ever remind her of her pleasant associations in the Tabernacle.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

The 34th Battery received 10 more recruits yesterday from points in the western part of the Division. The battery is building up quite rapidly in strength, and expects soon to have its quota of men.

Captain Ord of the 34th Battery has reported for duty.

Mr. F. A. Savage of Baltimore visited Major McLaughlin of the 8th C. M. R. yesterday, and took lunch with the officers at noon. After looking over the camp, Mr. Savage spent a most delightful time with the officers of the 8th. Mr. Savage has served in the United States naval militia, and is keenly interested in the contest now being waged in Europe between Britain and Germany. Mr. Savage was acompanied on his visit to camp by Mrs. Savage, and Mrs. Theodore Lyman, of New York City.

The course for medical officers proposed by Major Gardiner has been approved by Ottawa, and arrangements are being made for the class to open on the first Monday in September.

The course for nurses has also been approved by Ottawa, and ten will go from this division to Quebec for the course.

On Tuesday, Col. Hemming has promised the camp a half holiday so as to permit all the men in khaki to attend the Havana Red Sox baseball game. Dr. Edwards, M.P., Mr. W. E. Nickle, K.C., M.P., and others will speak on the cricket field before the game is called. The R.C.H.A. band will be in attendance, and the money raised is to be used for purchasing necessities for soldiers for the front.

A fine program of sports is being arranged by the officers of the 8th C. M. R. for their visit to Brockville, which will take place during the fair. Demonstrations with the sword, lance, etc., in feats of horsemanship, including Red Cross races, tent pegging, lemon cutting, cutting off the Turk's head, and other feats common to cavalry regiments. There are a number of old Imperial lancers in the 8th, and these know how to take part in just such a program as Adjutant Blue is preparing for Brockville.

The 8th C.M.R. were given regimental drill on Saturday morning, and in the afternoon had a good march.

An Incident of Independence Day

By EUNICE BLAKE

Alice MacGregor was an American girl with Scotch ancestry. How many suitors there were for Miss MacGregor's hand only Miss MacGregor knew, for she never spoke of her offers to any one. Certain it is that there were two whose attentions were so marked as to be especially noticeable. These were John Kershaw, an Englishman, who had recently come to America, and Michael O'Connor.

Miss MacGregor, being a bit of a coquette—what girl is not?—may have accepted the attentions of one of these men as a foil for the other, but if this were true it was impossible for any one to tell which was the foil and which the man foiled. There were those who declared that the lady listened to both these suitors for the purpose of worrying them.

A crisis came in this triangular love affair on the Fourth of July. Mr. O'Connor wrote Miss MacGregor a note inviting her to accept a seat in a window above the store where he was employed to witness the Fourth of July parade. Miss MacGregor replied that she had already made a partial engagement for the day. She was not sure. She would know by the evening before the Fourth and would advise him. She had already received an invitation from Mr. Kershaw to the same effect and had written him the same answer she had sent O'Connor.

Now, each of the rivals knew very well that the partial engagement mentioned referred to the other. Mr. Kershaw, on the afternoon before Independence day, called on Miss MacGregor for a more definite reply to his invitation. She received him kindly but declared that she did not think it would be appropriate for an American girl, especially one of Scotch descent to celebrate Independence day with an Englishman. There had been a hereditary feud between the English and Scotch races until the crowns were united in one king, and there had been a long fight between the English and Americans. Why should she, a MacGregor born in America, celebrate the Fourth of July with an Englishman?

"But all that has passed and gone," protested Kershaw, failing to detect that the young lady was chaffing him

"It's the impropriety of the thing," she persisted.

Mr. Kershaw left her without having secured a consent, and later Mr O'Connor called.

"I don't think, Mr. O'Connor," said Miss MacGregor, "that it would be in order for me to view the Fourth of July procession in your company."

"Why not?" asked the young man, astonished.

"Because the day celebrates the winning of American independence from Great Britain."

"But I'm Irish; not British at all."

"Ireland was a part of the mother country that oppressed the colonies Besides, I had a great-greatuncle who fought under the Scotch-Irish banner at the battle of the Boyne. Your ancestors were on the other side."

"Hang my ancestors! What do I care for a fight that occurred more than two centuries ago?"

"Nevertheless, the Fourth of July is a day that is, or should be, near to the heart of every American. It would be hurtful to my feelings to celebrate it in company with one whose ancestors were on the other side in the fight for independence."

"But we're all of the same blood—English, Scotch, Irish and Americans."

"Family feuds are the most bitter."

Mr. O'Connor was obliged to depart with no more comfort than his rival had received.

During the evening Miss MacGregor called up each of the rivals by telephone and told him that she would occupy a seat on the stand from which the parade would be reviewed by the governor and she would be happy to see him there. She regretted that for the reasons given it was not appropriate that she should accept his kind invitation, but a bit of a chat would be in order.

At first each of the gentlemen was so disgruntled at this disposition of his invitation that he vowed he would not go near the reviewing stand. But curiosity got the better of both. Miss MacGregor would undoubtedly have an escort. Who would that escort be? Not only curiosity, but rivalry, turned the scale.

Independence day opened bright, and a multitude of stars and stripes fluttered in the sunlight. Both of the suitors took positions where they could look upon the reviewing stand, and as soon as they saw Miss MacGregor take her seat they started simultaneously from different points to go to speak to her, reaching her at the same time. Beside her sat a gentleman with black hair and eyes, who, seeing the others approach to speak with Miss MacGregor, arose and lifted his hat with extreme politeness.

"Permit me to introduce to you, gentlemen," said the lady, "Mr. Marivand. Mr. Marivand is a descendant of the Marquis de Lafayette, who came over from France during our struggle for independence with an army to help us and rendered us valuable assistance."

Mr. Marivand bowed very low. In Miss MacGregor's eye was a sparkle which the Irishman perceived, but to which the Englishman was obtuse. However, both the visiting gentlemen, after a few remarks upon the beautiful day, withdrew, leaving the field to the descendant of Lafayette.

Miss MacGregor has not yet settled upon a husband.

Big Fair is Opened to Public

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Formally Declares in Motion the Sixth Annual Vancouver Fair

(Vancouver B. C. Sun)

"Let me impress this important fact upon your minds. You are fighting for the liberty that your forefathers secured for you. I have but one feeling and that is the end of the war must be success for the Union Jack and the tri-color of France."

A storm of applause from thousands of throats greeted the above declaration last night from Sir Mackenzie Bowell, 'Canada's Grand Old Man," who was selected to make the address formally opening the sixth annual Vancouver exhibition.

The horse show pavilion was crowded with men, women and children. Sir Mackenzie was difficult to hear, owing to his voice weakening in the night air, but there was breathless silence and everybody strained to hear the words of a man who is 92 years of age and has devoted the most of his life to public life in the Dominion.

Fifty Years Ago.

Sir Mackenzie's opening remark caused laughter all over the great enclosue. He said if he could take himself back fifty years when he was in good speaking trim, he could make everybody hear. As almost everybody heard him when he said that it left no doubts in the people's minds but that fifty years ago they would have heard a voice of great power.

He said that when he was asked to speak, he expressed the doubt that he would be able to speak very long, and he was told two minutes would do. Having been so closely in touch with the development of the Dominion, he said he could not help reflebcting upon the modern improvements. When he first visited Vancouver, he said, stumps interfered with his passage about. While he always had had great confidence in the west, he could not have anticipated the developments he sees today.

"Nobody can study the west," he said, "without coming to the conclusion that Canada is the most precious jewel in the British empire."

Marvelled at Exhibits.

Two years ago, Sir Mackenzie said, he visited the exhibition at New Westminster, and he was surprised at the showing of produce quite as good as produced in the east and he marvelled still more at the displays of produce from as far north as Fort George. Those politicians who in the early days referred to the west as "a sea of mountains," he said, could they see it now would conclude that British Columbia can produce about all the mineral and agricultural necessities for man.

Sir Mackenzie said the "Made in B C." motto was a good one. In Eastern Canada they had "Made in Canada" as the slogan.

Sir Mackenzie referred with great feeling to the part South Africa has played in the war and said the leading rebel of one time was among the most loyal men and had done more than any other man in South Africa to consolidate that country.

Those who know Canada and her system of government will come to the conclusion that the loyalty of South Africa is due to the liberties of government.

When Ice Cream Sticks.

Ice cream is sometimes frozen so hard that it does not come out of the mold easily. When this happens let the cold water run over the outside of the can. The water is so much warmer than the ice cream that it melts it sufficiently to start it out and does not melt it enough to spoil the shape of the mold

How to Clean Matting.

When matting is soiled rub it with a soft flannel cloth dipped in lukewarm salt water. Rub the spots with moistened cornmeal; then go over the whole surface again with salt water, this time cold. Wipe with a dry cloth. This method of cleaning does not turn the matting yellow, as water usually does

Ready for Big Fair Opening

War Demonstrations and Military Features to be Big Attractions of a Record Year

When the Canadian National Exhibition is formally opened today there will be inaugurated what promises to be one of the most successful fairs in the whole thirty-seven years' history of the big institution. Held, as it is, at a time when the Empire is embroiled in a world war, and when Canada is doing her bit to the extent of her resources to keep her place beside the Mother Country, the Exhibition has made a peculiar appeal to the national pride and all indications are for a demonstration of Canadian strength, industrially and agriculturally, that will be a fit answer to outsiders who may think that Canadian unity or faith has been disturbed by the events in Europe.

Everything has been done to reproduce as faithfully as possible the conditions under which the boys in Flanders are now living, and the war demonstrations at the Model Camp and in other parts of the grounds will vividly picture the difficulties and dangers besetting both the Army and Navy.

The activities of the Flying Corps will be shown by military aviators from the training camps, who will drop bombs and, with the aid of hidden mines destroy miniature battleships on the waterfront, in a spectacular portrayal of some of the difficulties the men of Fleet forcing their way to the heart of Turkdom are experiencing.

Executive Meeting Of Patriotic League

The Executive Committee of the Speakers' Patriotic League was held at the Tent on the Armouries' lawn last Saturday evening when E. Gus Porter, K.C., .P., president, W. C. Mikel, K.C., secretary, Col. Ketcheson, Dr. MacColl, J. W. Johnson, M.P. P., W. B. Northrup, K. C., M.P., and J. O. Herity were present and a number of other citizens interested in the movement.

The matter of holding a rousing meeting for Coleman Ward was referred to Mr. Northrup, with full power to bring before the Coleman Ward committee and complete all arrangements.

It was decided to hold a grand meeting at the barracks on Pinnacle street, for Foster Ward, Friday evening, September 3rd, at 8 o'clock, when Mr. Porter, Mr. Northrup, Mr. Johnson, Col. Ketcheson, Mr. Mikel and other speakers will be present. It is expected the band will also be present. The arrangements for the meeting were left to Lieut McCargar.

A meeting of all the Ward Committees will be held in the lecture room of the Armouries on Saturday evening, September 4th, at 8 p.m.

Now that the holiday season is over it is hoped that all citizens will throw their energies into making these three meetings a big success.

The advisability of holding another meeting in Ketcheson Ward was discussed, but left in abeyance for the present.

Mr. Porter and Mr. Northrup were appointed a committee to endeavor to get the Rt. Hon. Sir R. L. Borden to come here for a grand rally soon after his arrival home from England.

Many of the citizens will attend the recruiting meeting at Napanee on the 2nd of September, which is to be addressed by the Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Sir. Geo. E. Foster.

MANY LETTERS TO SOLDIERS MIS-SENT

"Address the letters to the soldiers carefully," writes an officer of the Canadian Postal Corps, at Shorncliffe "as over 300 'blind' letters come to my hands for tracing every day. It is very difficult, and delay is caused when the units and the regimental numbers are not given. The addresses on some of the letters would make you laugh, others make you tear your hair. Some I must trace by the least clue, such as the Canadian post mark of a certain town. A French name would of course first be traced through the corps where Frenchmen predominate.

"The letters to officers are particularly a nuisance. The writers seem to think that an address such as Lieut. J. Smith, Shorncliffe, is quite sufficient to find him. The senders do not realize that our nominal roll carry over 2,000 officers alone.

"Some of the letters when they have been around a dozen corps and returned, marked, 'not for them,' look like Chinese scrolls.

"If people would take the care and trouble to write the Battalion or Battery, it would save us endless trouble. Numerous letters come, through carefully staing the soldiers name, number, platoon, company and contingent but not a sign of the Battalion to which he belongs. One might just as well address a letter to Pte. B: Jones; No. 4562 Canadians. I wish the newspapers would be kind enough to call attention to this so as to give the friends and relatives of soldiers the hint to be sure to put the Battalion or Battery on the envelopes. Few letters would then go astray."

The New Britain

The Last of the Series of Sermons By Rev. C. G. Smith

The last sermon in the series on "Present Blessings from the Great War" was delivered in the Baptist Church last evening by the pastor, Rev. Chas. Geo. Smith, B.D. It was indeed an able discourse and was much appreciated by the large congregation present. During the service Mrs. Wilmot sang a solo in her usual pleasing manner.

The subject of the sermon last evening was "The New Britain; or the Solidarity of the Empire." Taking for his text Matt. xiii:30—"Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn,"—Mr. Smith said in part:

Jesus spake unto the multitude in parable, i.e., earthly stories and illustrations with heavenly and moral meanings. In this familiar story, "The tares in the field of wheat," Christ gives us a survey of the world as He saw it with His clear seeing eyes. It was a good world, but a mixed world. The wheat was intermingled with tares and so intermingled that the attempt to root out the tares (the evil) by brute force was deemed unwise, because impossible. It is evident that Jesus did not expect the final overthrow of evil until His second coming at the "end of the age"—not the end of this world. A good deal of modern religious pessimism is due to overlooking this fact that "Paradise lost" cannot become "Paradise regained for all mankind" till Christ's "time of harvest." This story of the wheat and tares indicates, too, that Jesus did not look forward to the speedy establishment of His Kingdom. Like Rome, it could not be built in a day. Jesus knew human nature, and the forces of evil so well that He foresaw a long and fierce struggle between right and wrong, in which the wrong, though checked and restrained and beaten, would hold its own until the end of "the age," whatever and whenever that may be. We should give scant heed to the ridiculous mathematical calculations of the psuedo-millenarians, based on fantastic ignorance of the date of Daniel and fallacious deductions therefrom. We have Christ's deliberate statement: "But first must this gospel be preached in all the world; then shall the end be." That is sufficient data for any sane Christian. Out of Christ's view of the world grows His commission to all His followers. We are to go on sowing good seed, tending the growing wheat, and we are to leave the ultimate problem to heavenly agencies. "The reapers are the angels," both of the wheat and the tares. We are responsible for the preaching of the gospel; not its success. Christians often fail to take Christ's view of His world. We exaggerate the evil and depreciate the good. We look upon the world as a field of tares with a sprinkling of wheat. But Jesus took the opposite view. The world to him was a field of golden wheat, but with a grave admixture of tares. We are often tempted, like Elijah, to summarize the forces of God—conventional goodness—and we can only see ourselves in the good class. But God saw "seven thousand in Israel, all the knees of which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." We count heads, but God counts hearts. We take lists of church-membership, but God has a surer method. There is much more good in the world than we realise. Now this parable of Jesus is a true and vivid picture of Great Britain, the mighty empire of which we as Canadians are proud to form a part—our Mother Country. Her history, from the days of the Druids, is one of the evidences of Divine Providence, and her destiny has been secured by faithful leaders—"saints, apostles, prophets, martyrs," from age to age. She is an elect nation, as Israel was of old, and God's dealings with her indicate that she may really be "the lost ten tribes" Redivivus, as students of prophecy aver. She also is "a son of Abraham," and heir to the covenants and promises of God; and of her it is true, also, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blest." Britain has been elect for the sake of the non-elect, and it is her missionaries who have been her path-finders in colonization, and both trade and flag and possessions and wealth untold have come to her through her heralds of the cross in every continent, and in all the seas from London to Melbourne and from Halifax to Singapore. But the chief glory of Britain and the guarantee of her divinity and establishment by God in the universe is her Protestant religion, and the fact that she is the defender of Christianity as revealed in the Word of God. I have travelled the sea-girt isle from John o' Groats to Land's End; but to me the most sacred shrine is the Martyrs' Memorial in the city of Oxford, built over the ground where that mighty triumvirate of martyrs—Bishops Latimer, Cranmer and Ridley, "mocked the cross and flame" in defence of the true faith. This is the real spiritual centre of England and the secret of her abiding greatness. Through the fearless, dauntless constancy of men like these martyr-bishops we have enjoyed for nearly three centuries a pure national faith, and we have been able to read a free Bible. Britain has also led the way as a nation of homes, and the family circle has been exalted, as also her Christian schools and colleges. This brief sketch will indicate what I mean when I compare Britain to Christ's parable of the wheat and the tares. It is a field of wheat, golden and precious in the eyes of God and man; and this is why "Dear old England," as we call her, is loved by all who know her. But in this field of wheat there has been an increasing evil admixture of tares. For many years spiritual men have declared that Britain has been morally degenerating and growing indifferent, not only to her God and her historic faith, but even to the old moral standards, in the home, in business, society and politics. And the cry has been, "Oh, for one hour of Gladstone," and,

"Milton! thou shouldst be living at this hour;
England hath need of thee: She is a fen
Of stagnant waters: : Altar, sword and pen,
Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower,
Have forfeited their ancient English dower
Of inward happiness. We are selfish men;
Oh! raise us up; return to us again,
And give us manners, virtue, freedom, power."

For some years the leaders of Britain have lived in fear and trembling of some awful upheaval, involving perhaps even civil war and bloodshed, owing to the strained relations between the different classes of society; and I tell you frankly that from the day I put my foot on Britain's soil to spend my days for five years I have never ceased to feel the trembling of the great volcano of class strife and bitterness. Classes were arrayed against classes in politics, business, and even in the church. Then this awful war came; and what happened? Thank God we see the end of this strife, and I believe that through our present struggle this evil thing has been put down never to be resurrected again. Britain has come to see that one class is absolutely powerless to get on without the other class, and that while one man may contribute to this line of life, another man contributes to another line of life, and that only in the total contribution and mutual co-operation of all classes can Britain find her life and power as an Empire again. London is the key to Britain. She strikes the time for a thousand cities. But alas! the "tares" of that mighty city were blatant and vicious and legion before the war. If you have lived there you know this is too true. The licentiousness and luxury of that great city by the Thames was acting as a cancer in the nation, silently eating out its vital heart-chords with all sorts and phases of vice and sin. But all this is changed today.

Sir Wm. R. Nicol said recently: "London today is a better and worthier city than before the war. There is less vice and crime. There is less blatant luxury. There is less class jealousy and antagonism. There is a return of the old moral standards, and a renewal of faith in God, and spiritual worship, and civic righteousness." Behold a new Britain; and please God it will continue to purify and ennoble its life after this war is over. And with this new Britain there goes a new and welcome sense of the solidarity of every part of our vast British Empire on which the sun never sets. That was a significant and memorable cabinet council held last July in old London, when, for the first time in the history of the Empire, a Dominion Prime Minister attended, in the person of Sir Robert L. Borden. Thus the door has been opened by Mr. Asquith, in this time of Imperial stress and strain, to closer solidarity and unification of our Empire. It is hardly possible to pierce the future today and see just how we will be able to develop a closer imperial organisation within the Empire; but it is sure to come, and come quickly. Sir Robert Borden's address at a luncheon in his honor in London indicates how vital and real is the growing solidarity of our Empire. He said: "Prussian militarism made for itself a fantastic picture of the Empire before the war came. It pictured Canada, Australia and New Zealand standing aloof and indifferent, or seeking an opportunity to cut themselves away from this Empire. What is the actual picture today? They are bound to the Empire by stronger ties than ever before, and prepared to fight to the death for the maintenance of its integrity and for the preservation of our common civilisation throughout the world." And this solidarity will destroy the insolent English insularity and contempt for "colonials," so-called, and it will also destroy the crass spirit of isolation which has so often seemed to permeate our colonial national life. So let us each one give ourselves to fostering the good in our Empire and destroying the evil, that our land may be indeed the land beloved of God.

"Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell:
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before,
But vaster."

THE TURKISH BABY.

Odd Customs Attend Upon His Birth and His First Bath.

A Turkish baby looks very queer in his odd dress. He wears over his shirt a kind of padded gown, something like a bathrobe, and on his little head he wears a bright red silk cap with a tassel of seed pearls. To keep all evil away from the baby one or more charms are fastened to the tassel.

His arms and legs are bound tightly after they are straightened out by his nurse, and when he is all fixed he is put in a little bed and covered with several warm pads. In addition to this a thin red veil is put over all.

When he is all ready his father comes in to see him for the first time. If the child is a boy, the father is doubly pleased. He takes the child up very tenderly in his arms and carries him out of the room. Just outside the door he rests a minute and prays. After he prays three times he repeats the name chosen for the baby and this is the way the baby is christened.

When the child is three days old a celebration is held and old women who make a regular business of this go to the different houses inviting the ladies to the party. At each house they tell the day of his birth and the name of the baby and urge the people to come.

On the day of the celebration the people arrive from early in the morning until late in the afternoon. Nearly all bring presents for the baby's mother, and each person as she gives her present to the mother expresses a pleasant wish for the child.

They hardly notice the baby, for the mother is afraid of bad luck if too much attention is paid to it. The few who do look at him say how ugly he is or something like that and this delights the mother, who knows they do not mean what they say.

If the parents are rich sweet sherbet or coffee and candies, cakes and ices are served as refreshments. If they are poor coffee and fruits are offered, but the entertainment is much the same. The ladies talk and laugh and eat until they are ready to leave.

Another great event is the baby's first bath. This happens when he is eight days old, and his mother and her friends may have a bath, too, if they wish. The baby bathes first, then his mother and then the visitors. This bath takes a long time and all the time slaves play sweet music and food is served three or four times.—Portland Oregonian.

AN INCIDENT OF WAR.

General Hugo and His Meeting With a Wounded Moor.

General Hugo, father of that literary genius, Victor Hugo, was a daring soldier and officer. He served brilliantly in both Italy and Spain and especially distinguished himself in putting down bandits and guerrillas. That he was a man as magnanimous as he was brave is attested by a little incident of his career that his son narrated. General Hugo, accompanied by a single trusted hussar orderly, had occasion, at the close of a day of fighting, to ride across a portion of the battlefield as dusk was beginning to fall.

"He heard a feeble sound in the shadows," wrote Victor Hugo. "It was a soldier of the Spanish army, who dragged himself along the roadway, pale, bleeding, gasping and who cried, 'A drink, a drink, in the name of pity!'

"My father, touched, handed his canteen to his faithful hussar, and said, 'Here, give a drink to that poor, wounded fellow.' Suddenly, as the hussar, stooping, leaned over him, the man, a Moor of some sort, snatched the pistol he carried and fired it at my father's head, crying, 'Caramba!' The bullet passed so close that the hat fell, and the charger reared wildly backward.

"'Give him the drink all the same,' said my father."—Youth's Companion.

Punch and Judy.

Turkey is far from being the only oriental land in which a performance very like the English Punch and Judy can be found. Travelers have described entertainments of the kind in Persia, Japan, Kamchatka, India, Egypt, Syria, Nubia, Siam, Pegu, Ava, Cochin-China, China and Tartary. Mr. Villiers Stuart observed the Egyptian Punch flooring the mameur (chief magistrate) and his cavasses quite in the style of the British Punch's conduct toward beadles and policemen, though in the Egyptian version the play ended morally with the hanging of Punch. The hero belongs to all ages as well as to most lands. Some have traced him to the Atellan farces of early Italy, and he has even been recognized in ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics.—London Standard.

CAMP ON GOLF GROUNDS.

London Military Camp Said to Be the Finest in Canada.

London is said to have the finest military camp in Canada. London admits it and it must be so. It is composed of the 33rd and 34th Battalions, full strength, the 29th Battery, a field hospital and Ambulance Corps, Headquarters Staff, and a Home Guard, located in the Barracks. Twenty-six hundred men under canvas, and a city of tents set upon a hill, so that all may see, testify that this war is Canada's war, and that the rural districts of Western Ontario intend to do "their bit."

Typical of the changed activities of the nation from those of a year ago is the fact that what is now an armed camp, bristling with guns and echoing to the bugle's call, was a golf course last year. The company of regulars has long since vacated the Barracks, and is fighting on the fields of Flanders. The golfers are gone—no one knows where. Maybe they enlisted in chagrin. The place of the departed regulars is taken by a stalwart Home Guard, which does police duty for the camp. It is said that six of them arrested one of the 34th men the other night. They are called the "Safety Firsts" by the men in camp.

The Barracks stand on a sandy hill looking south over the city. Around them are some fifty acres of level plain, breaking away in a steep hill along the southern border. An ideal site for a camp. The hill, which once formed a series of excellent natural hazards for the golfers, is now lined at its crest with trenches where the men learn to handle the spade and pick, a very necessary training for a war of attrition. Here, too, at night they await attacking parties and learn patience and the wisdom of the stars.

The camp grounds are high and dry and make a splendid spectacle, with their 500 tents in orderly array and the "cleanest lines of any camp in the country." Out in front, on what used to be the long second hole, and a terror to those who slice or pull, can be seen, any morning, half a brigade at drill, letter-perfect and wearing "cows' breakfasts." The sanitation features are almost perfect. There is an abundance of running water, and shower baths are as plentiful as the most fastidious could desire.

There is keen rivalry between the two battalions, and the interest the men take in the look of the camp is evident as soon as one enters the gate. The kitchens are ranged along the north side, and a small garden is set in front of each. Whitewash is plentiful; there are little walks and squares of whitewashed stones, while whitewashed ropes enclose the officers' quarters, and whitewashed everything-that-is-ugly makes for the appearance of a Spotless Town.

Lucky officers—each has electric light in his tent, a wooden floor, camp bed, and dresser. The men sleep ten to a tent, feet to the pole. "Grub" is excellent, if the officers' mess is any criterion. The men seem happy, though they were somewhat upset at being left behind when a detail was drafted into the second contingent. But they have settled down again to the routine of preliminary training.

A wise sergeant of the 34th discovered that the Y. M. C. A. canteen was making money and the men decided that they might just as well get what profit there was for themselves. So they started a canteen. The 33rd followed suit, and with the profits they opened a moving picture show with a change of reel three times a week.

RADISH ROSES.

Radish roses are not hard to make, and they are very attractive when served as a salad garnish or with celery and olives. Make two thin cuts at right angles in the radish, but leave the ends intact. Then invert the red skin and place the radishes in ice water. The water makes the skin curl back like rose leaves. A tiny bit of the green stem left on the radish heightens the rose effect.

A Dustless Duster.

A good "dustless" duster can be made of a pair of old stockings, slit open, stitched together and then soaked in coal oil for several hours before hanging in the air to dry.

Yellow machine oil stains on white material may be removed by rubbing the spot with a cloth wet with ammonia before using soap.

WHEN WILL IT COME?

We are all looking forward with intense eagerness to the great British "drive", as it is called, which we know is surely coming. John Bull does not do things in a hurry, but when he once starts, his opponents know to their sorrow that he is in the field. It is true that when war broke out he had to make a start before he was ready; but he was forced by circumstances to act in self-defence. For over twelve months Great Britain, in co-operation with her gallant allies, has kept the foe at bay, and all the time the nation has been preparing to take the offensive.

Germany's preparations were on such a prodigal scale that it needs must be that similarly gigantic efforts in the manufacture of munitions must be made by Great Britain; and this takes time. Time means money in this war; and for this reason alone we may be quite sure that a move would have been made before this if Lord Kitchener and the Government felt they were in a position to do so. "We have not yet shot our bolt," said Mr. A. J. Balfour, in his splendid and thrilling speech at the London Opera House, at the anniversary celebration of the commencement of the war. "Let those who consider only the military aspect of the question wait till the end," he said. Mr. Balfour is now in a position to know the extent of the preparations that are being perfected; and his remark helps to confirm our belief that the whole world will be astonished to see the large and magnificent army Great Britain is putting in the field.

Hitherto it has been Great Britain's navy which has been the envy of Germany and the admiration of all countries. Now she is going to show what she is able to do on land. Mr. Balfour is one of England's greatest orators, and he put the position before his vast audience with clearness and emphasis, and with that rhetorical finish of which he is a master. He pointed out that all Germany's calculations—save those as to munitions—had been upset. That was his first ground of confidence. An enemy which had miscalculated for a year might miscalculate until the end of the war. He thought it would. His second ground of confidence was in the Allies. "Each one of us knows that fortune is sure with the other, and each one of us admires the gallantry, the self-devotion, the bravery with which the other is carrying on his part in this great common adventure."

But the gist of Mr. Balfour's speech was that civilization had been saved by the British navy. Speaking of the moment when the question of Great Britain entering the war hung in the balance, he said: "It was the critical moment of civilisation, and the decision taken by the Government of this country at that time, in my judgment, saved civilisation. If Great Britain had not then joined in the great struggle, all the anticipations of Germany in Germany's most sanguine mood would have been accomplished, and more than accomplished." Mr. Balfour went on to show that it was the British navy which had saved the situation.

> "I am not belittling in the least any of the great deeds that have been done, are being done while I yet speak, and are yet to be done by those with whom we are working, and by those on whose side we are fighting. I am not belittling these when I say that the whole basis of this struggle of offence was absolutely dependent during the past twelve months on the fact that through those months the Allies had superiority at sea, that this superiority at sea was secured to them by the British Fleet, and that it could have been secured to them in no other way."

He emphasised how intolerable would have been the state of the world if the supremacy at sea was held by a nation which not only had military supremacy on land, but had no political philosophy except to use its power to spread its own dominance over the globe. "I would have been a tyranny such as the world has not known," he said. The world had been saved from it by the fact that predominance at sea has never been in the same hands as that military predominance which has more than once threatened the world.

Great Britain having effectually checked Germany's designs by means of her immense navy, is now—with the valuable assistance of the Allies—about to crush the Military Monster on land. We await the commencement of this big move with feelings of the utmost confidence.

"Twill be "pretty soft" for the German army if they attempt to cross the Russian marches.

It would be over-sanguine to expect any immediate development. History has rendered co-operation among the Balkan States a matter of extreme difficulty. They managed to combine in 1912 for an attack upon the Turks, but the hopes of fraternal union were shattered almost as soon as they were raised. We all remember the tragic sequel to that episode. We can all appreciate the bitter memories that it has left behind.—London Daily Mail.

The poopulation of England is about 34,500,000, of which number at most not over 2,500,000 may be supposed to be absent from the isle on military or other service. In the latest successful Zeppelin raid ten persons were killed and 36 wounded—a total of 46 civilians placed hors de combat. At this rate the entire resident population of England might be exterminated or invalided in 695,652 Zeppelin raids, or, assuming that the declination of the population would answer the German purpose, only 69,525 cross-channel trips of an air fleet would be necessary. And yet some observers of the operations of the battleships of the air profess to doubt that the game is worth the candle!—Philadelphia Record.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Maximilian Harden has been banished from Germany. Harden has a following of his own, and the supporters of his review, "Die Zukunft," are not likely to acquiesce tamely in his exile. The ostensible reason for this action on the part of the German Government is the approval expressed by Harden of the action of Italy. There are other articles in the current number of "Die Zugunft," however. In one he defends the English:—

"It is puerile to declare that the Englishman is a slave to sport. His sport, to which he devotes almost as much time as the German does to his beer, hardens his body, and is therefore a direct gain to his country.

Take a glance at the girls, the old ladies in the West End of London, at the working men and their children on the immense playing fields, and compare them with the anaemic, fat, flaccid, deformed specimens of humanity one meets at every step in any Continental town.

The Englishman is handsomer, healthier, and braver. In his island, beaten against by the waves, he speedily grasped the idea that only the vigorous could conquer the earth, and straightway he set about creating for himself the indispensable hygienic ditions of a nation that refuses to grow degenerate.

The result of his age-long training is that the Englishman has become a reasonable being; he knows how to obey without humiliating himself, and to force obedience without recourse to capricious or tyrannical legislation. In India a commissioner with a handful of whites at his command controls millions of natives, who dare not lift their eyes at him.

In London, when disorder threatens, dukes and shopkeepers unite and organize themselves into a constabulary service. Every man, be he a millionaire or a wage-earning clerk, instinctively knows and does his duty—in short, he plays the man."

Thy seasons fleet
Sweep circling through thy changeful skies,

And all thy Summer long
Is but a song
Of June
And sun and moon.
Northward, 'mid Arctic day and Northern night,
Thy fallow fields, all white with Winter, dream;
Snow-dressed the trees, silent the frozen stream,
And crown'd with ice the hill—
While Southward still
Brown with her bracken and her fading ferns
The burnished Autumn burns.

Who Is It Pays For Peace Talk?

Secret of the Union of Democratic Control—A Hint to Women

(From the London "Express.")

People are asking: "Who finds the money to finance the activities of the Union of Democratic Control?"

This organization, of which E. D. "Morel," or Deville, is hon. secretary and treasurer, is at the fore front of the anti-patriotic movement in Great Britain. "Morel" himself is a notorious pro-German, and other leading lights of the union include Messrs. Ramsay MacDonald and the famous pacifiscist, Norman Angell, alias Lane.

A "Daily Express" representative yesterday called at the headquarters of the union—37, Norfolk-street, Strand—and asked for a list of subscribers to the union. He was told by an individual who represented the union that no such list could be supplied. No reason could be obtained for this refusal.

The Union of Democratic Control is a public body, and those who defend its cause have stated that it is not anti-patriotic or pro-German. It is merely "misunderstood," they say.

It is now likely to be more misunderstood than ever.

When pressed to say why the list of subscribers to the union should not be open to inspection, the individual in question said:—

"We shall show our list to nobody. The 'Daily Express' would be the last people in the world we should allow to see it."

Plain Statement Wanted.

Let us have a plain statement from the union on these heads:—

Are you ashamed of your activities?

If not, why are you afraid of letting the public know who are the people resonsible for financing the union?

Mr. Arthur Ponsonby, M.P., charman of the London branch of the union, has stated in the House of Commons and in the Press that he is willing to let any responsible person selected by the Government" examine the list of subscribers. Perhaps the Law Officers of the Crown will move in the matter.

Women should make a point of attending the meetings of the peace cranks and anti-patriots. At certain meetings addressed by speakers of the Union of Democratic Control quite a large proportion of the audience has consisted of women.

At the gathering the other evening forty per cent. of those present were women. Female supporters of the union are also employed to screen the cranks when meetings are postponed. After the invariable denial by the caretaker" of the hall, inquirers are furnished with another address where the meeting is supposed to be held. It is always a woman who appears.

She does not wait for any mention of the peace prattlers. "I do not know anything of the union," she snaps. Thereafter a list of addresses is forthcoming—all of them either misleading or false.

"Shoot Him!"

A woman who was present at a meeting held at the house of the mother-in-law of Mr. Arthur Ponsonby recently gave the peace cranks something of an Englishwoman's mind, telling those present that they would be more usefully employed in making bandages than manufacturing asphyxiating gas for their own countrymen.

"What would you do if a man-eating tiger attacked you?" she asked Mr Ponsonby.

"Shoot him," said the gentleman.

"Very well, that is our case," said the lady.

"Blighty"

The British Soldier's Popular Name for Home

(By "H.A.C." in the London Express")

There is one word in the vocabulary of the soldier at the front that is sacred. It is not a pretty word, but it stands for all that is beautiful. It stands for what every mother's son in To one man it stands for a creeper-covered cottage set amid the trees. To another it means a squalid tag-end of bricks and mortar in a mean street in a great city. To the kilty it stands for the moor and the heather and Pat would tell you it means the green splendour of Ireland. The word is "Blighty," and it is Atkinese for "Home."

Eetymologists will tell you that it is a corruption of the Hindustani word for Great Britain—"Belati," from "belati pani," the "black water" which has to be crossed before Britain is reached. I would call it a beatification rather than a corruption. In its inharmonious syllables there lies concentrated all the sentiment of "Home, Sweet Home" and a hundred similar melodies.

Soldiers as a class are not given much to praying, but "Roll on, Blighty" is the most sincere prayer I have ever heard, and many is the time I have heard it in the trenches. It is this same hearthunger that makes the man carrying the mailbag the most important member of the party which carries the rations up to the trenches of night.

It is the word used to cheer up the wounded man, and it is then that you realize the magic of it. It brings a gleam to eyes dimmed with pain, and the wound that means torture becomes a heavensent reprieve—for few soldiers really believe that it is probable that they will ever reach home again, and indeed, for many Blighty never "rolls on!" I have heard lips too weak to speak aloud whisper "Roll on, Blighty," and it makes it worth while for men far gone to hold on to the thread of life. When Blighty lies at the end of it, the slow, labored progress of a stretcher party becomes a triumphal procession. As the ambulance rolls and bumps along the shell-shattered roads of Flanders, tortured limbs and outraged nerves protest in agony and the prayer goes up, "Roll on, Blighty."

Soul-Trying.

This steady gnawing at the heart of the man at the front is the nautral outcome of the new method of warfare. It is trying to body and soul to an extent beyond any in the past. There is too much time to think, and only one thing to think of.

Tommy, crouching under the parapet of his trench while "whizz-bangs," "coal-boxes," "Jack Johnsons," "wooly bears," and all the rest of the infernal brood scream and crash around, has nothing to do but to think. Lying in a shallow ditch for hours, waiting for a charge at dawn, he has nothing to do but to think. His thoughts are all of "Blighty," and many a German soldier has died with the word ringing in his ears.

Physical action in this war comes mostly in spasms and frenzied bursts, with long periods of inactivity and waiting in between. Twenty minutes' frantic bayonet work in the morning, and there follows a day's interminable waiting for the inevitable counter-attack. How slow Blighty is in "rolling on!"

Who that has experienced it can forget the moment when Blighty grows from a longing to a reality? A thin grey shadow lying low on the water brings all men who are able to walk to the forward deck of the hospital ship, and word is passed down to the stretcher cases below that Blighty is in sight. Fingers grimy with warfare point in rapture, and all past troubles are forgotten.

Blighty has rolled on at last!

GOODYEAR
MADE IN CANADA
Laminated Tubes
Extra Heavy Tubes—Laminated
Built Layer on Layer
By the Makers of Fortified Tires

Many Inner Tubes In One

Layer on Layer—Extra Thick

Inner Tubes are made to hold air. Tubes that are built by machinery, of one thick piece of rubber, are apt to have flaws that go undetected.

So trouble ensues from leaky tubes and you might blame your tires for it.

Hence whatever tire you favor, you owe it the justice of using Goodyear Tubes.

Note how cautiously we make them—how we roll the pure rubber into very thin sheets. That thinness shows the slightest flaw, the tiniest speck, and we eliminate it.

Those thin, perfect sheets are wrapped layer on layer, up to the Tube's full thickness. Then we vulcanize them into one solid rubber Tube.

Such Tubes can't leak. And the valve patch can't leak, for we make it an integral part of the Tube.

14 Per Cent Heavier
20 Per Cent Lower Priced

The extra wear is due to extra thickness, too. This year they are thicker than ever. We have added an average of 14 per cent to them. To our larger Tubes we added 16⅔ per cent, and every whit pure rubber.

On February 15th we made our third tire-price reduction in two years. Then we also reduced our tube prices by 20 per cent. That was largely a quantity reduction, due to mammoth output. Now these thick, enduring Laminated Tubes cost about the same as others.

If you are wedded to other tires, use Goodyear Made-In-Canada Tubes and get this taste of Goodyear standards. Then judge our tires by them. Go to some Goodyear dealer, please, and let him show you what it means to get Goodyear Laminated Tubes.

THE PORT OF PROFIT

Abe Lincoln told this story of a Mississippi river steamboat that had a four-foot boiler and a "seven-foot" whistle. Every time the boat blew its whistle it stopped.

His steamboat was great on "attention getting" but poor on progress.

The advertising steamboat has lost interest in the mere noise of whistles. Its owners have ceased to measure results by sound. They are insisting that quick transit to the Port of Profit is to be their test of efficiency.

And so advertisers are turning to newspapers for their voyage to the desired harbor.

TO THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION VIA THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to the modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

CANADA AT WAR

HUDSON'S BAY RAILWAY IS BEING PUSHED TO COMPLETION

Next Year Will See New Outlet For the West.

Development of New Territory Will Then Be Possible.

NEXT year will see a new outlet for the products of the Canadian West, for by that time the Hudson's Bay Railway will be completed, Port Nelson harbor sufficiently dredged and equipment provided, and a huge transfer elevator built. Then the West will be brought closer to Liverpool, the long railway haul dispensed with, or, in other words, the Back Door of Canada will be opened.

Since the first agricultural settlement on the prairie there has been a demand for the construction of this railway. It was repeatedly promised, and as often the promise remained unfulfilled. When Hon. Frank Cochrane became Minister of Railways he personally inspected the proposed route, sailing through the Straits and across the Bay to Churchill and Nelson. He decided that if the road was built that Port Nelson was the best terminus, and his decision has since been unanimously approved. From Port Nelson he made the journey to Le Pas, and from this inspection decided to immediately build the railway and equip the port on Hudson's Bay.

HON. FRANK COCHRANE.
Sketch by McConnell.

Almost Direct Line.

From Le Pas to Port Nelson in a direct line is 400 miles, and the railway will be only 420 miles, about as direct a line for the distance as there is on this continent. This road will be graded into Port Nelson this year and steel laid on two-thirds of it. Next summer the steel will be carried forward to Nelson in time to handle a part of the crop. While the construction of the railway has been making rapid progress equal energy has been shown in the equipment of the port. All supplies for work at Port Nelson had to be taken from Halifax through the Straits, and yearly a dozen freighters have successfully made the trip and to a considerable degree settling the question of the feasibility of navigating these waters. A huge dredge was towed from Toronto to Port Nelson and has been at work for two seasons straightening and deepening the channel. Docks, wharves, and terminal yards have been constructed, and plans secured for a transfer elevator to be built next season. In preparation for opening of this grain route wireless stations are now being established along the Straits and lighthouses erected where required. So that on the completion of the railway there will be no delay in utilizing this new route to market the Western crop.

Development of Resources.

In addition to providing a new route for Western trade, the railway will permit of the development of the valuable fish and mineral resources of Hudson's Bay, now practically untouched. The fisheries are among the most valuable in the world, and there is plenty of evidence that the minerals of that district are equally valuable. Along the line from Le Pas to Port Nelson are great areas of good agricultural lands which in time will support a large population.

The construction of this railway and port through a comparatively unknown country has been done in record time. To build a harbor on Hudson's Bay, only accessible for a few months of the year, and then only by water, was a great task and without any precedents to guide the builders. It has been done at a small cost, without hardship or loss of life, and stands as a splendid example of the energy and foresight of the Minister of Railways. It brings the West closer to its European markets and also to those of the Maritime Provinces, and gives the Western farmer an additional choice of routes whereby to ship his produce.

BALANCE OF TRADE IN CANADA'S FAVOR

Large Increase in Domestic Exports—Statement by Hon. Dr. Reid.

The balance of trade as shown by July returns still continues in Canada's favor. Our people are buying less abroad and selling more, building up a balance in our favor that must have a beneficial effect on the financial and industrial stability of our country.

The total Canadian trade for the month of July reached $100,000,000, according to the statement issued by the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Customs. For the corresponding month of 1914 the total trade amounted to $93,000,000.

Increase in Exports.

The feature of the statement is the large increase in the domestic and foreign exports. During the month of July domestics exports reached $46,600,000 and foreign goods exported from Canada $16,000,000, compared with $41,000,000 domestic and $8,000,000 foreign for the corresponding month of 1914. Eleven million dollars worth of animals and their produce was exported during July, being a substantial increase over the corresponding month last year. Manufactured goods also show a good increase; the exports being $12,500,000 against $5,800,000 for July, 1914.

Imports Fell Off.

While the exports are booming there is a decrease in the merchandise entered for consumption. During July $36,000,000 worth of goods were imported, made up of $20,000,000 dutiable and $15,000,000 free goods. This is a falling off for the corresponding month of 1914, when the imports amounted to $42,000,000, made up of $26,000,000 dutiable and $16,000,000 free goods.

For the four months of the present fiscal year, ending July 31st last, the total Canadian trade was $371,000,000, compared with $306,000,000 for the four months of the corresponding period last year. Last July $13,000,000 worth of coin and bullion was exported.

ASSISTANCE PROVIDED FOR CROP MOVEMENT

Minister of Finance Offers to Co-operate With Banks.

The Minister of Finance has specially drawn the attention of the Bankers' Association to the provisions of the Finance Act of 1914, under which advances may be obtained in Dominion notes upon approved collateral. The Minister thinks that the Canadian crop will this year be unusually large and valuable, but that owing to war conditions and the state of the exchanges the movement will likely be slow. This means that the financial demands in connection with the crop movement will be heavier and more prolonged than previously. While the banks are in an unusually liquid condition and probably able without assistance to handle the situation, the Minister feels that the unusual demands of grain customers might result in curtailed banking accommodation to other sections of the community, and he therefore urges the banks not to hesitate to avail themselves of the privileges of the Act. As Dominion notes issued against grain bills would be retired from time to time as the crop was sold there is no reason to apprehend a redundancy of note circulation should the banks freely avail themselves of the invitation of the Minister. With abundance of funds available for the crop movement there will be less likelihood of its being pressed for sale, at least against the desire of producers and dealers.

CANADA IS MAKING 50,000 SHELLS DAILY

In the production of munitions of war in Canada 145 factories are now engaged on the $152,000,000 order placed here for the British Government by the Canadian Shell Commission. In addition to this huge order there are at least $10,000,000 worth of munitions being produced for the Russian Government. Mr. D. A. Thomas, representative of the British Government in Canada, has inspected all our munition factories in Ontario and the other Eastern provinces, and has stated that their capacity and efficiency have been a revelation to him and further great orders are a certainty. Already the Canadian production of shells amounts to 30,000 per day, and soon will reach 50,000. The production of fixed ammunition has been greatly increased, and will soon overtake the output of empty shells.

Cost of Raids.

The amount thus far awarded for damages for air raids and bombardments in Britain is £90,038.

A "BURNING SHAME."

Canada's Fire Loss Is the Heaviest in the World.

At a recent meeting of the Berlin (Ontario) Board of Trade the following facts were brought out in a resolution placed on record:

The fire loss per capita in Canada is greatly in excess of that of any other civilized country in the world, and our national position in this regard is constantly becoming worse instead of better, until at the present time our Canadian fire losses, in proportion to population, are approximately six times greater than those of Great Britain, France, or Germany, with a correspondingly high rate of insurance premium; and in the past ten years the average annual loss in ten British cities has been but 50 cents per head as against an average annual loss of $3.55 per head in ten Canadian cities from Halifax to Vancouver, with an average rate of premium in the British cities of but 22 cents per $100 of insured value as against an average of $1.46 in Canadian cities.

The fire losses of $14,000,000 paid by Canadian companies in 1913 would at the British rate of premium be reduced to $2,300,000, thus bringing about an annual saving of nearly $12,000,000, which, in every decade, would amount, with compound interest, to more than the Dominion Government's contribution thus far for war purposes; it being equally true that this huge sum represents perhaps less than half of the annual losses directly or indirectly resulting from fire, thus justly representing us in the eyes of European countries, on the one hand, as a nation of incendiaries, and, on the other, as absolute incompetents, and fully authorizing the verdict that the result is not only a national criminal waste, but also a "burning shame."

In the United States, though their rate of loss is considerably lower than Canada's, the National Fire Protection Association of that country, in a recent report, referred to their "reckless and unceasing waste" as an "impoverishment of the nation."

Our own losses are continually deplored and lamented, not only by our insurance companies, but by the public generally, and remedial action is continually urged along Provincial lines, as yet without avail.

The Canadian Commission of Conservation has achieved excellent results in the conservation of our national waterpowers in the great reduction of forest fires along our railways has initiated a movement for conservation on broad national lines for city planning, and has sought out and applied means to conserve our national resources in other directions, thus making it indispensable that they have the organization to take up this most important and directly beneficial feature of national conservation with every prospect of success.

A FLAG FOR EVERY HOME

He Got a Car.

The latest Ford story is a true story and touches Toronto. It concerns the new Ford car now driven by Dr. J. A. Macdonald, Editor of The Globe, Toronto. This car, a five-passenger touring car met Dr. Macdonald on his arrival from Detroit at the Union Station some days ago, and carried with it instructions to remain with him.

While in Detroit Dr. Macdonald addressed a meeting at which Mr. Henry Ford was present, and later visited at the home of Mr. Ford. So greatly impressed was Mr. Ford with the eloquent message of Dr. Macdonald's address that to express his appreciation, he said to Dr. Macdonald; "On your arrival in Toronto there will be a car to meet you at the station. Kindly consider it yours." (Or words to that effect.)

Dr. Macdonald returned to Toronto, and sure enough the shiny new touring car was pawing impatiently at the entrance in charge of a chauffeur from the Ford works.

"Oh, yes, I have plenty to say," he returned cheerfully; "but two cannot talk at once, you know. It was right for you to have the first innings, and all that; and I say, father,"—his filial feelings coming to the surface—"I am awfully sorry, and so is Nan, to see you so vexed."

"Speak for yourself," was the wrathful answer. "Don't mention that girl's name in my hearing for the present."

"Whose name?—Nan's?" returned Dick, innocently. "I don't see how we are to keep it out of the conversation, when the row is all about her. Look here, father: I say again I am awfully sorry you are vexed; but as N— says, it is too late to mend matters now. I have made my choice, for better for worse, and I am sorry it does not please you."

"Please me!" retorted Mr. Mayne; and then he added venomously; "the girl said you would not marry without my permission; but I will never give it. Come, Dick, it is no use thwarting me in this, you are our only child and we have other plans for you. Pshaw! you are only a boy! You have not seen the world yet. There are dozens of girls far prettier than this Nan. Give this nonsense up, and there is nothing I will not do for you; you shall travel, have your liberty, do as you like for the next two or three years, and I will not worry you about marrying. Why, you are only one-and-twenty; and you have two more years of University life! What an idea—a fine young fellow like you talking of tying yourself down to matrimony!"

"There is no use in my going back to Oxford, father," returned Dick steadily; "thank you kindly all the same, but, it would be sheer waste of money. I have made up my mind to go into the City; it is the fashionable thing nowadays. And one does not need Greek and Latin for that, though of course, it is an advantage to a fellow, and gives him a standing; but, as I have to get my own living, I cannot afford the two years. Your old chums Stanfield & Stanfield would give me a berth at once."

"Is the boy mad? What in earth do you mean by all this tomfoolery?" demanded Mr. Mayne, unable to believe his ears. His small gray eyes opened widely and irately on his son; but Dick took no notice. He walked on, with is shoulders looking rather square and determined; the corners of his mouth were working rebelliously; evidently he did not dare to look at his father for fear of breaking into uncontrollable laughter. Really the dear old boy was getting too absurd; he—Dick—could not stand it much longer. 'What in the name of all that is foolish do you mean, sir?" thundered Mr. Mayne.

Dick executed a low whistle, and then he said, in an aggrieved voice—

"Well, father, I don't call you very consistent. I suppose I know what being disinherited means? In plain language, you have told me about half a dozen times that if I stick to Nan I am not to expect a shilling of your money. Now, in my own mind, of course I call that precious hard on a fellow, considering I have not been such a bad sort of son after all. But I am not going to quarrel with you about that; a man has a right to do as he likes with his own money."

"Yes; but Dick, you are going to be sensible, you know, and drop the girl?" in a wheedling sort of tone.

"Excuse me, father; I am going to do nothing of the kind," returned Dick, with sudden firmness. "I am going to stick to her, as you did to my mother; and for just as long; if it must be so. I am not a bit afraid that you will not give your permission, if we only wait long enough to prove that we are in earnest. The only thing I am anxious about is how I am to get my living; and that is why I will not consent to waste any more time at the University. The bar is too uphill work; money is made quickest in the City; so if you will be good enough to give me an introduction to Stanfield & Stanfield—I know they are a rattling good sort of people,—that is all I will trouble you about at present." And Dick drew in a long breath of relief after this weighty speech.

"Do you mean this, Dick?" asked Mr. Mayne, rather feebly.

They had reached the hotel now, and, as they entered the private room where their luncheon was awaiting them, he sat down as though he had grown suddenly old and tired, and rested his head on his hand, perhaps to hide the moisture that had gathered under his shaggy eyebrows.

'Yes, father I do," returned Dick; but he spoke very gently, and his hand touched his father's shoulder caressingly. "Let me give you some wine; all this business has taken it out of you."

"Yes, I have had a blow, Dick,—my only boy has given me a blow," returned Mr. Mayne, pathetically; but as he took the wine his hand trembled.

"I am awfully sorry," answered Dick, penitently; "if there were anything else you had asked me but this—but I cannot give up Nan" And, as he pronounced the name, Dick's eyes shone with pride and tenderness. He was a soft-hearted, affectionate young fellow, and this quarrel with his father was costing him a great deal of pain. In everything else he would have been submissive to his parents; but now he had a purpose and responsibility in his life; he had to be faithful to the girl whom he had won; he must think for her now as well as for himself. How sweet was this sense of dual existence, this unity of heart and aim!

Mr. Mayne fairly groaned as he read the expression on his son's face. Dick's youthful countenance was stamped with honest resolution. "I am going to stick to her, as you did to my mother?"—that was what he had said. If this were true, it was all over with Dick's chances with the pretty little heiress; he would never look at her or her thirty thousand pounds; "but all the same he, Richard Mayne, would never consent to his son marrying a dressmaker. If she had only not disgraced herself, if she had not brought this humiliation on them, he might have been brought to listen to their pleading in good time and at his own pleasure; but now, never!—never!" he muttered, and set his teeth hard.

"Dick," he said, suddenly, for there had been utter silence for a space.

" yes, father."

'You have upset me very much, and made me very unhappy; but I wish you to say nothing to your mother, and we will talk about this again. Promise me one thing—that you will go back to Oxford at least until Christmas."

"What is the good of that, sir?" asked his son, dubiously.

"What is the good of anything? for you have taken every bit of pleasure out of my life; but at least you can do as much as this for me."

"Oh yes father, if you wish it," returned Dick, more cheerfully; "but all the same I have fixed upon a City life."

"We will talk of that again," replied his father; "and, Dick, we go home to-morrow, and, unless you promise me not to come down to Hadleigh between this and Christmas, I shall be obliged to speak to Mrs. Challoner."

"Oh, there is no need for that," returned Dick, sulkily.

"You give me your word?"

"Oh, yes," pushing aside his chair with a kick. "It would be no use coming to Hadleigh, for Nan would not speak to me. I know her too well for that. She has got such a conscience, you know. I shall write to her, but I do not know if she will answer my letters; but it does not matter; we shall both be true as steel. If you don't want me any more, I think I will have a cigar on the beach for this room is confoundedly hot." And, without waiting for permission, Dick strode off, still sulky and fully aware that his father meant to follow him, for fear of his footsteps straying down the Braidwood Road.

HISTORIC HALL PASSES

TORONTO TO SELL LANDMARK OF OLD YORKVILLE.

St. Paul's Hall Has a Remarkable Coat of Arms to Perpetuate the Memory of the First Council—Beaver Surmounts Five Panels, Each Symbolizing the Occupation of One of the Councillors.

It is now probable that the City of Toronto will sell the property on Yonge street, a short distance north of Bloor street, known as St. Paul's Hall.

St. Paul's Hall came into the possession of the city on the annexation of the old village of Yorkville in 1883. It was erected in 1860 by the Yorkville Council, incorporated six or seven years before. Two smaller buildings, one to the north, occupied for years as a hotel, and one to the south, used ever since its erection as a post-office, were originally wings to the town hall. The lock-up and police station occupied apartments on the ground floor, the municipal offices and Council chamber were on the floor above, while a large assembly room took up the greater part of the building, and was designed for use for public meetings and functions of a general character.

Upon the absorption of Yorkville by the city the use of the building for municipal purposes was no longer required.

From 1884 until 1907 the Public Library used the old Council chamber for the Yorkville branch, and the ground floor was for some years used as a stable for horses and car barns by the old Toronto Street Railway Company previous to the acquisition of the franchise by the present company in 1891, and the installation of the trolley system. In recent years a portion of the building has been occupied as No. 5 Police Station, and apart from its use for a few days in each year by a sub-collector of taxes, the hall has been of little value to the citizens other than for an occasional public meeting or party convention which might be held in the big, cheerless assembly here during a municipal or political campaign. During the past few months the 12th York Rangers have been using the hall as regimental headquarters.

An Interesting Relic.

But the most interesting thing about the building, which is not altogether devoid of architectural pretensions, is the singular coat-of-arms which surmounts the large circular window high up in the gable of the front elevation. This unique armorial shield, made of durable stone, and of a size to be easily distinguished from the street, was designed to perpetuate the memory and work of the first Council of the village of Yorkville. The device consists of a shield of arms divided into five panels and crowned by a Canadian beaver. On each of the five panels are symbols representing the name and occupation of each of the five municipal councillors of the day. A beer barrell above the letter S keeps fresh the memory of John Severn, the brewer, whose place of business was just across the street from the town hall; a brick mould with the letter A stands for Thomas Atkinson, a brickmaker; an anvil with a W recalls James Wallis, the blacksmith; a jack-plane with D below was for James Dobson, the carpenter, who for many years was postmaster in the south wing of the building, and whose daughter is the present postmistress; while the centre panel of honor contained a representation of a sheep's head, with the letter H, in memory of Peter Hutty, a butcher, and first reeve of Yorkville 60 years ago.

With the prospective sale of the property it is likely that the old building will soon give place to a modern structure of greater commercial value to a busy thoroughfare; but some of those who are interested in the marking of places of interest in the city's history venture to hope that the purchasers will see that in the new building that will take its place, some position may be found in the front wall to preserve this unusual and interesting memorial of historic significance and personal vanity. An explanatory tablet might also be attached to it, recalling its origin and its significance.

In Quebec a stone emblem, known as Le Chien d'Or, of local historic interest, has been preserved in the wall of the post-office building, which stands on the site of the original place of business, where the Golden Dog for so long occupied an ominous place over the doorway of a French merchant. In like manner the old stone arms of Yorkville should be preserved as an object of historic interest.

Inspection of Factories and Shops.

The twenty-seventh annual report of the Factories Inspection Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture has been issued. It shows that 10,059 inspections of factories and shops were made during the year in 410 cities, towns, and villages. The number of accidents reported are 1,270, of which 52 were fatal.

Regulations regarding specifications for fire escapes are given, well illustrated, together with a most practical article on how to lessen fire dangers. There are also helpful suggestions regarding ventilation and general sanitation, guarding of machinery, child labor, seats for females in shops, and wearing of girls' hair in mills and factories. Results are also given of the inspection of bake shops, canning factories, and evaporators. Special emphasis is placed upon eye protection in certain occupations. In fact, "safety first" is urged upon every possible occasion. A most suggestive feature of the report is a series of danger signs in which warnings are given in nearly every foreign language.

Irish Slay Turks In Bloody Struggle

LONDON, Aug. 28—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from the Dardanelles, dated Aug. 19, says: "For the moment the severe fighting has come to a stop along the front of our new positions after the week of battles which followed the landing at Suvla Bay. The most important advantage secured has been a large extension of the territory held by us on the northern shore of the peninsula. Resting upon Suvla Bay, with its left occupying the long ridge which follows the coast inland for several miles, our army holds the plain southward to where the heights of 'Anzac' look down upon it, so that we are in a position from the cliffs overlooking the Gulf of Saros almost to Gama Tepe."

IRISH BAYONETS BEAT TURKS.

Describing the charge of the Irish division on a Turkish hill to the left of the Suvla Bay position, the correspondent says:

"The Turks came out to meet them, and most exciting bayonet fighting followed on the saddle between the two crests. Bayonets were flashing and stabbing for several minutes before the Turks began to give way. Then they left the crest and ran down over the ridge, the Irishmen standing up and firing down upon them, while at intervals British machine guns on the hills behind drowned the sound of the rifle fire whenever the gunners were ableto get a clear view of the fleeing Turks."

TURKS' FRIGHTFUL LOSSES.

A correspondent in a despatch says: "On the 9th the Turks came down in great numbers from the ridge above and tried to sweep our men off the hill entirely. They themselves were driven back with frightful losses. Being unable to bury their dead, the Turks throw their bodies down the gully until they are stopped by the nature of the ground, while others thrown after them are stopped by the first. Consequently the whole gully is choked with Turkish dead.

POSITION IMPROVED.

"The Australians and New Zealanders have gained another addition in their newly-occupied territory. In their narrow position they now have elbow room and are in touch with our posts across the plain to Suvla Bay. And what is not their least important advantage, they have a supply of fresh water within their own position."

SEDD-UL BAHR FIGHTING.

Constantinople, Aug. 27.—An official statement issued here says:

"Weak hostile forces which attacked our left wing at Sedd-ul Bahr were repulsed. Otherwise there is no change."

Former Resident Dies in Rochester

Veteran Employee of Rochester Branch of American Express Co. Passes Away

On Tuesday last at Rochester N.Y., Mr. John H. Eustace a former resident of Belleville, died at St. Mary's Hospital after a brief illness. Deceased was home in this city two weeks ago and was taken seriously ill after returning home. Mr. Eustace was born here on March 26th, 1856, and left here when a young man. Since residing in Rochester he had been connected with the American Express Company, being one of its eldest employees. He was connected with the company for forty-two years. He was employed as a driver till last year, when he was made assistant on the money delivery wagon, a position of responsibility earned by faithful service. Mr. Eustace became acquainted with many persons, some of prominence, while making deliveries. During his long connection with the company he worked on many routes which took him to all parts of Rochester. Deceased was unmarried. He was a brother of the late Mr. Eustace of this city and surviving are one sister, Miss Elizabeth Eustace, of Rochester, and five nieces, the Misses Elizabeth, Bessie and Stella Eustace, of Toronto, Mrs. James Conlin of Montreal, Mrs. R. J. Quigley of Winnipeg, and one nephew, Edward Eustace, of Toronto.

MONUMENT TO VICTIMS.

Salvationists to Erect Memorial to Those Lost on Empress.

The Salvation Army is to erect a very fine monument in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto, to the Army victims in the Empress of Ireland disaster. It is to be cut out of red granite, and will stand 13 feet high. The base of it, which will be embedded in granite rock, will be five feet square.

The clay model shows the design chosen as most suitable, considering the manner in which so many of the followers met their death. On the base of the monument, which will be about three feet in height, will be the names of the officers who were drowned, and also the total number belonging to the Army who were lost. The stone above the base will be cut like the waves of the sea, with a seagull above them, to give the effect of the disaster.

The upper part of the monument contains the cross and crown, the Army emblem mourning badge, and on the back of it will be cut the Army crest. The only text inscribed on it will be the one used by Colonel Maidment, the Chief Secretary, when he preached the farewell sermon in the Salvation Army Temple before they all left Toronto. The text is: "God is our refuge and strength, and a very present help in trouble."

It is expected that the unveiling of the monument will take place in October. It will stand in the centre of 22 graves in the plot acquired by the Army just a short time before the disaster occurred. It will cost in the neighborhood of $1,500. When erected, a picture of it will be taken, showing the graves around it, and copies of the picture will be sent to the friends and relatives of the victims as mementoes.

WHY
For Fall 1915

The first "peep" at the new Fall Styles brings forth many delighted expressions, which signifies much for their coming popularity, especially so is the distinctly smart Suit Model in Navy Blue Serge on display in the window. A button up to the neck or lay down collar, with belt and pockets. Above the belt in the back pleating is used and below a large boxpleat. The skirt is semi-wide with two pockets at the sides.

PRICE

$22.50

A brief Mention of Coat Styles just to Pique Your Imagination

They are loose, very, not however the looseness of former seasons, but a decided "chic" style suggesting greatness and they are invariably belted.

Military styles, of course, predominate, and do not allow us for a moment to forget how they originated. The cloths are for the greater part imitation fur fabrics and here we wish to dwell—fur fabrics such as these we have will surely "take." Rich lustrous "Lambs," Chinchilla, Mole, etc., are surprisingly well copied and their prices are to say the least "moderate." Your judgement will verify this.

SEE WINDOWS TONIGHT.

JEFFERSON'S HOME.

Monticello, With Its View of the University of Virginia.

A mansion on Monticello ("little mountain," pronounced "Montechello"), was Jefferson's boyhood dream. He worked at it all his life with an artist's creative zeal.

The road from Charlottesville is winding, hilly and rough. Rows of big stepping stones cross it, lifting pedestrians out of the red mud, but jolting heedless drivers.

Visitors may stay in the grounds twenty minutes, but must bring no luncheons. Jefferson's guests stayed weeks and ate him into poverty.

From the servants' quarters a long sunken way runs under the house to the ice house and other storage beyond. The flat roof of this walk, two feet above ground, is a dry promenade. Over the icehouse is an outlook platform. Icehouse and servants' quarters are half underground, with windows only on the far side. Jefferson looked out over them east toward Washington, west toward the University of Virginia, whose beginnings he watched with his telescope when he could no longer walk.

Students enjoy the most beautiful and inspiring scholastic shades in the new world. Jefferson's university is artistic perfection, reverently preserved. Toward the town the curved walls he designed to save brick and labor for a poor institution still stand. The length of each wave line curve is twenty feet. Its width, forty inches, gives the stability of a three foot wall to one only four inches thick. The effect is pleasing.

Jefferson was a better architect than Washington, and perhaps his equal in landscape gardening and estate planning.

On Jefferson's gravestone at Monticello no mention of the presidency is made, but his authorship of the Declaration and the Virginia statute of religious liberty is recited and that he was the "Father of the University of Virginia."—New York World.

BAHAMA ISLAND SHELLS.

The shores of the Bahama islands are each day strewn with multitudes of beautiful seashells, more than fifty varieties of which have a commercial value in the United States and Europe.

Among these are rice shells, so tiny in size as to make one marvel how a sufficient number could be picked up to fill a barrel; gold shells, mud shells, cockles, bleeding tooth; pretty decorative sun shells, eardrop shells, which are exported to Odessa, Russia, to be used as ear pendants; Panama or tent shells, which resemble miniature encampments and sell at $90 a barrel; black snails, which take a high polish; conchs—king, queen, ivory, pinklip and trochus or Turk's cap, locally termed "whelks." These are but a few of the assortment kept in stock at the leading warehouses at Nassau.

The queen conch, which is especially adapted for cameo carving on account of having a layer of brown with a white top and the pinklip conch, which has layers of white and pink, are much sought for. Only the lips of these two varieties are exported, the demand coming from New York and from Torre del Greco, near Naples, Italy.

Ordinary conchs sell at 1 cent; pink lip, whole shells, from 5 cents to 25 cents, and queens at 20 cents United States currency in Nassau. The whelk or Turk's cap is particularly valuable, as it has a portion resembling the best mother-of-pearl, from which pearl studs, for instance, could be made.

It is estimated that a million shells of this variety could be obtained annually in this colony. These shells sell for 1½ cents each. Labor is cheap, colored women receiving from 25 to 30 cents, ordinary laboring men 60 cents and white engineers $1.50 a day.—Indianapolis News.

U.M.W. Plotted Against Militia

Denver Military Court Alleges Having Evidence of Conspiracy Against Recruiting

DENVER, Colo, August 30.—Members of a military court of inquiry recently appointed by Governor Carlson made a partial report to the chief executive last night in which they allege having in their possession evidence in the form of letters taken from the Burns' Detective Agency to show a general conspiracy to prevent the reorganization of the State Militia. They particularly mentioned having indisputable proof that the United Mine Workers of America had secured a detective agency to spy upon the movemnots of the recruiting officers.

It was further claimed that their evidence included certain correspondence upon which was based their knowledge of a plot to secure the indictment of public officials and militia men for the purpose of trading upon such indictments for the benefit of indictment in the so-called "strike" cases.

Members of the court of inquiry refuse to state how the alleged evidenced of the "conspiracy" came into their possession. It was learned that Burn's officers had been left unlockedwith no one in them for about fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon, while the stenographers were at lunch.

Governor Carlson said he had been reliably inforced several weeks ago that a detective agency was "exerting every effort to prevent the enlistment of recruits for the state militia," and that they were employed by a the United Mine Workers.

John McLenna, president of the United Mine Workers, said last night: "It is true that a detective agency has been employed by the United Mine Workers to investigate some of the acts of the Colorado National Guard, and we have enough evidence against them to create a sensation when we desire to give it out."

Today McLenna denied that the United Mine Workers had employed effectives to prevent enlistments.

Not Likely To Remove Wheat Duty

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.—There is no confirmation here of the rumor that Canada may abolish the duty on wheat. The Minister of Finance, the authority on tariff matters, is out of town, but ministers who are here say they know nothing of the report.

Canada does not import wheat and the only apparent object to be gained would be to open the U. S. market. When this country removes the duty on wheat the American duty on Canadian wheat would be removed automatically. Such a course was suggested by the grain growers but not acted upon.

At a time when the great bulk of our wheat goes to and is needed by Great Britain and the Allies it is not the most opportune period for opening up the market of the United States by means of removing our duty on wheat So far as can be learned the question has not been to the front lately in Cabinet discussions.

THURLOW FARMER ENDS HIS LIFE

Whilst Temporarily Insane, George Barnum Cuts His Throat With Razor—Life Extinct When Found—No Inquest Necessary

Whilst suffering from temporary aberration, Mr. George Barnum, a well-known yeoman residing in the 2nd concession of Thurlow Township, this morning committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor.

It appears that the victim of the unfortunate affair had of late been unwell, suffering from stomach and head trouble. This morning he was, however, about as usual until ten o'clock, when he committed the rash act. At the hour named Mr. Barnum was in the yard adjoining the house, and as his son passed him on the way to a field to dig potatoes the father said to him "Good-bye." This salutation did not, however, cause any anxiety to the son, as he considered his father simply said it as a matter of form. It was no doubt meant by the parent as it was the last time he was seen alive. The son coming to the house some time later, not seeing his father about the premises went to the barn and thence into the cow stable. Here he was horrifid to find his father lying in a pool of blood upon the floor, with a terrible [illegible] in the throat. The man was dead, evidently having bled to death. A razor lying near by was evidence of the instrument used to commit the act. The man's throat was severely cut, the jugular vein having been severed.

Dr. Yeomans, coroner of this city, was called, and after hearing the circumstances of the case decided that there was no need of an inquest.

Mr. Barnum was a man about 52 years of age, and had resided in Thurlow for many years. He was well known and much respected by a large circle of relatives and friends, who with the family are naturally shocked at the terrible affair.

In additon to the wife a family of one son and two daughters survive. Mr. J. Barnum of this city, is a brother of the deceased.

Man Arrested is Not Carl Schmidt

Respa Took Brother-in-Law's Name to Hide Identity

WINDSOR, Aug. 30.—After several hours' work on the part of the Provincial officers who made the arrest, assisted by Detroit detectives, the identity of the man arrested on Bois Blanc Island, opposite Amherstburg, Sunday afternoon, on suspicion of being one of the gang responsible for the Windsor dynamite outrages, was definitely established early this morning as Charles Respa. The name he first gave—Carl Schmidt— was discovered to have been assumed by Respt.

BROTHER-IN-LAW OF SCHMIDT.

Respa, whose first name was Karl, when he lived in Germany, is 28 years old, and a brother of Mrs. Carl Schmidt, whose husband was arrested with Gustav Stevens for an attempt to dynamite the Nipigon bridge of the Canadian Pacific Railway last spring. Both men are interned at Kingston.

Ever since the attempt to dynamite the Peabody plant, Provincial police and Detroit detectives have known of Respa's alleged connection with the plot. In order to divert suspicion, they gave out information that Carl Schmidt was the third man implicated in the dynamiting.

REMANDED EIGHT DAYS.

Arraigned in Walkerville Police Court this morning before Magistrate Miers, Respa stood mute when two charges—one of conspiring to dynamite the Peabody Overall Factory in Walkerville and the other charging the actual commission of the dead—were read to him. He was remanded for eight days.

Inspector Let go Guard Denied Leave

KINGSTON, Aug. 30.—Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., has it in for the Minister of Justice for refusing to allow Guard Morris of the Provincial Penitentiary, Portsmouth, a veteran of the Boer war, who distinguished himself, to go to the front now. Morris, it seems applied for permission to enlist in the [illegible]th C.M.R. at Barriefield Camp, and asked that his penitentiary salary be paid to his family while he was absent. His request was refused by the Minister, Dr. Edwards says. The latter cannot understand why such refusal should be made, when the Inspector of Prisons, Lieut.-Col. W. S Hughes, was allowed to go overseas in command of the 21st Battalion with full Government salary.

Two Convicts Made Successful Bolt

Broke from Gang at Work Outside St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.—While working outside the walls of the penitentiary at St. Vincent de Paul on Saturday morning, two convicts, William Parker, alias Skelton, serving a three-year term, and Patrick O'Brien, serving a term of nine years, made a break for liberty and succeeded in getting away from their guards. The two convicts were at work in a quarry, under armed guards, with twenty-four other convicts, when they made a break for a bush about one hundred and fifty yards from where they were at work. Two of the guards caught sight of the escaping pair, when they were about to dash into the bush and opened fire on them with their rifles. The shots evidently had no effect as the fleeing men did not slacken their pace and the next moment were lost to the sight of the guards in the woods.

One of the guards hurried back to the penitentiary to give the alarm, while the convicts who remained at work in the quarry were rounded up and marched back inside the walls. The whistle of the penitentiary, which is sounded whenever a convict escapes, soon aroused the residents of St. Vincent de Paul and surrounding country and must have been heard by Parker and O'Brien, as they made their way through the thick woods or lay hidden in the bushes. Guards, armed with repeating rifles, were hurried out from the penitentiary to make a search through the woods and they were assisted by a score or more of residents of St. Vincent de Paul. The man hunt was kept up throughout the day and night and again yesterday, but the two convicts could not be located.

Murder Reveals Plots Galore

CHICAGO, August 30.—An attempt to wreck a train carrying enough guncotton to blow up the whole town of Gary was discovered to-night at the height of the excitement which has developed with the exposures of secret agitation and spying revealed in the search for the motive and the murder in the case of the Rev. Edmund Kayser.

Fifty miles north of the Aetna Powder Works and three miles east of Gary, the storm centre of war munitions to England, was found a palpable and malicious efforts to derail a train due to leave the works late to-night for the east. The rivets of a plate holding together the ends of two rails had been pried or chiselled off and the end of one of the rails had been crowbarred about six inches out of line.

Officials of the mill declared that gun-cotton is shipped in water holds and no danger would have resulted had the attempt to wreck the train succeeded. They were of the conviction, however, that there had been a deliberate plot to throw the train off the track by men banded together in work similar to that which Kayser had openly and enthusiastically pursued.

Chief Heintz, of the Gary police, was reticent all through the day, hinting that he was working on a "big angle" that would clear up the mystery.

The revelations of the past few days have brought out a substantial exodus from Gary which, as the result of the probing into the affairs of Kayser, have been uncurtained as a honeycomb of plots and counterplots for and against the shipment and manufacture of explosives and war supplies and violence which has been kept secret has been brought to light.

SUBMARINE WARFARE ADMITTED A FAILURE

German Expert Makes Important Admission—"It Requires Fabulous Good Luck to Avoid the Many Bad Pits", He Says

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—In line with British intimations of a growing dissatisfaction in Germany over the diminishing results achieved by the Von Tirpitz submarine campaign is an article by Captain L. Persius, the naval expert of The Berliner Tageblatt, published in its issue of Aug. 10th, just received here. The article is the more notable, since Captain Persius has in the past been one of the most ardent champions and praisers of the U-boat warfare.

"It is to be recalled," he says, "that at the beginning of February hopes in the submarine warfare rose high, and it was widely believed that just as the British fleet had cut off our imports from overseas, so our submarines would have little difficulty in doing the same to Britain. A part of our press, unfortunately, is responsible for the exaggerated expectations which the public frequently hitched to the submarine warfare on merchant shipping. It was often emphasized here that, with an expert estimate of the submarine weapon, and particularly with consideration of the quantity, etc., of our submarine fighting forces, the results and effects of the new method of warfare could be gathered only after a considerable time. Ever and ever again we counselled patience.

"VERY MODEST" RESULT.

"How necessary this was is shown by the simple fact, which it is today considered unwise to conceal, that the result of the activities of our submarine in warfare on commerce is regarded in wide circles—let us say—as very modest.

"At the beginning of the war our submarines laid low a series of warships, and now we hardly ever hear of anything of that sort, so to speak, at times, naval heroes of the seashore. There is no better school than the war, only it is regrettable that it is not we alone who learn in it. To reproach the British with 'poor seamen' is worthy only of a child. They understand how to defend themselves, and now they have thought up many a measure of defence and safety. It is made ever more difficult for our submarines to get into the vicinity of the enemy ships and to launch a torpedo. A large warship outside of a safe harbor is nowadays a rarity. If, on the other hand, it is obliged to take to sea, hundreds of eyes, equipped with glasses, gaze out carefully from its railing for the danger-announcing periscopes, and an escort of torpedo boats, madly crisscrossing through the water, surround it.

BRITISH TORPEDO BOATS.

"Britain has more than 300 torpedo-boat destroyers and torpedo boats, more than 100 submarines, and hundreds of armed fishing vessels and other escorting vessels that are all assigned for insurance against the German submarine danger. Thus the submarine warfare today is verily not a simple matter. It requires fabulous good luck to avoid the many bad pits, the mines, the blockades, the spread nets, etc., to escape the submarine-boat hunters, and still carry out a successful attack."

Trouble Brewing For the Quebec Government

Road-Building Policy May be Subject of Charges Next Session

(Canadian Press Special)

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—The Daily News' Ottawa correspondent says there is trouble brewing in the Quebec Government, whose road building policy may be the subject of important charges at the next session. The correspondent says several Liberal members have been investigating the cost of roads and find some of them costing from $8,000 to $14,000 a mile.

The trouble which the correspondent sees at hand for the Gouin administration, will not be precipitated by the Opposition, but is the result of long-standing hostility between Premier Gouin and Hon. S. N. Parent, the former Premier and at present chairman of the Quebec Waterways Commission.

Arabic Incident Declared Closed

The Commander of the Submarine May be Punished

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The Exchange Telegraph Company's Amsterdam correspondent says the German Government considers the Arabic incident closed, and has declared its willingness to punish the commander of the submarine which sank the steamer. The German chancellor's so-called weakness towards the United States has created considerable feeling in militarist circles.

(Canadian Press Special)

NEW YORK, Sept. 31.—The minutest attention is being paid here to every move in the Arabic situation. There is no disposition to agree to any modification of the blockade in return for Germany's cessation of the submarine warfare. It is felt that Germany's desire to abandon her submarine war is due to her knowledge that her previous efforts have proved failures, and that she is not building submarines as fast as they are being destroyed.

Artist Charged With Murdering Her Companion

JACKSON, Ky., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Mamie Hamlon, who says her home is at Chicago, and that she is a daughter-in-law of a former governor of Illinois, was arrested at Portsmouth, this county, yesterday, charged with the murder of Mrs. Polly Davis, a wealthy widow.

Mrs. Hamlon, an artist, some months ago came to Portsmouth to paint a series of eastern Kentucky pictures. She met and became attached to Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Davis is said to have explained to Mrs. Hamlon that she was making her will to charity and asked her in case of her death to see that her property was not appropriated by her relatives. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Davis had died of poisoning, physicians say, and then came confusion about the will.

Mrs. Hamlon was indicted by a grand jury yesterday on the charge of having poisoned Mrs. Davis and forged a will which purported to leave the dead woman's property to her. Mrs. Hamlon is said to have two children in Illinois. Her husband is dead.

Did Not Know It Was Loaded

Rupert Johnston, Athens Boy, Accidental Killed With a Rifle

Shot in the abdomen by Arthur Shaw, a playmate who did not know the gun was loaded, Rupert Johnston, 13 years, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Johnston, Athens, died at two o'clock yesterday morning at his home in that village.

The accident occurred on Friday morning at eleven o'clock in Cross' woods, just west of Athens village and near the Anglican church. Several boys, Shaw and Johnston among the number, were playing with a larger boy, Claude Watson who had a rifle and was shooting at a mark. Watson laid the loaded rifle on the grass when Shaw picked it up, the rifle in some manner discharging. Johnston was at this time arranging the target, was struck by the bullet which penetrated he lower part of the abdomen on the right side. A companion named Leonard Bulford quickly ran to the store of Mr. Johnston, the unfortunate boy's father. Mr. Johnston was at the time returning from Eldoida, but Mrs. Johnston and Miss Cora Wood, a trained nurse who is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston hurried to the scene of the shooting in an automobile. The wounded boy was carried from the woods by Levi Wilson and Manliff Burney who were near at hand, and placed in the auto, and was conveyed to his home on Elgin street. Dr. Bright and Dr. Moore were summoned as well as Dr Cornell of Broockville.

Every preparation is being made for the Belleville Fair, which will open here on Monday next, Labor Day, and will continue on Tuesday. A fine programme of events has been arranged and the prospects are that the Fair will in every respects be a success. The management are making every endeavor to make it the best Fair held here in years.

A feature of the Fair will be the exhibit from the Dominion Experimental Farm at Ottawa. The exhibit will be placed in the west wing of the main building ,which is well adapted for the purpose and the exhibit is one that every farmer in the district should make a special effort to see. The Belleville Fair authorities are very fortunate in securing this exhibit as it is a grand demonstration of the resources of Canada, and while interesting to all is more especially so to those who are interested in the growing and disposal of the products of the land.

From entries already received there is no doubt there will be a fine display of horses, cattle and other animals, in addition to grain and root crops, which will ensure an exhibit that will be interesting and profitable. During Monday and Tuesday afternoon a programme of events will be presented, which will no doubt prove profitable and interesting.

BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Col. T. D. R. Hemming, O.C. 3rd Division, and Major J. Hamilton, A. D. of S. and T., expect to be in Ottawa on Wednesday and it is understood that the question of wintering troops here will be taken up.

The authorities at Fort Henry had some trouble on Friday evening owing to one of the German prisoners being taken suddenly ill with convulsions. For a time he was so bad that it took about ten of his companions to hold him down until he was removed to hospital where he could receive medical attention. The prisoner of war was taken to the General Hospital. Three of the guards doing duty at the fort accompanied him. He was so violent that it was necessary to strap him to a stretcher.

The road into Barriefield received its first coat of oil on Saturday morning.

There is a rumor in circulation, though it cannot be verified, that Lieut.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, 49th Battalion, is to be the officer commanding the 86th Battalion. Col. Ketcheson is from Belleville, and is well-known here as an experienced and efficient soldier.

Col. Hemming commandant at Barriefield Camp, has announced that a new battalion had been authorized by Ottawa to be stationed at Barriefield Camp. The battalion will be known as the 86th Infantry Battalion.

The 8th C.M.R. is getting ready for its 100-mile trek which starts on Wednesday. Lieut. Clapp veterinary officer, states that the horses are in splendid condition, and several of them have told a newspaper representative that they are counting the days until they leave.

Lieut.-Col. J. R. Munro, and Major Routher, quartermaster of the 8th C. M. R., returned on Sunday from Toronto where they purchased an additional field kitchen for the regiment. The field kitchens have proved to great value on treks, and the new one will be delivered, it is hoped, in time for the Brockville trip.

YOUTH CHARGED WITH HORSE STEALING

Drove Horse and Buggy From Belleville to Kingston

William Logan, of this city, a boy about 15 years of age, who of late has followed the occupation of a shoe shiner, is under arrest, charged with horse stealing. Yesterday morning he hired a horse and vehicle from a liveryman in this city, intimating that he intended to take his mother out for a drive. Instead he drove to Kingston, where he was apprehended after the police had been notified that at a late hour last night he had not returned with the outfit. The police here, on learning that Logan had gone east, sent word to the police at Napanee and Kingston, with the result that the youth was arrested at the latter place in possession of the horse and vehicle.

This morning Sergt. Harman went to Kingston and returned this afternoon with the young culprit. The horse and buggy has been returned to the owner. Logan, it is stated, desired to visit the military camp at Barriefield, and took this means of doing so.

HUNS NOT CHAINED TO GUNS

Chains are Used but Only to Steady Weapons

PARIS, AUGUST 29.—A writer in l'Illustration demolishes the legend that the Germans chain the men serving their machine-guns to the pieces in order to keep them from leaving their posts. He says the chains are undoubtedly used, but simply to enable the gunners to steady the weapons and that the practice was common in the German army before the war.

Besides, it is easy for the soldiers to unfasten the chains, which are attached merely by hooks on either side of the men's belts.

Returned Home From Convention

Fire Chief Had Interesting Time at Ottawa—A Successful Affair

Fire Chief Brown of this city, has returned home from Ottawa where he had been attending the Dominion Fire Chiefs' convention. The convention was one of the most successful and interesting ever held. There were representatives present from cities as far west as Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina, Brandon and Winnipeg, and as far east as Halifax. Quebec province, too, was well represented.

Owing to the large representation present it was deemed abvisable to change the name of the association to the Dominion Fire Chiefs' Convention. This was accordingly done. Chief Graham of Ottawa, under whom Chief Brady served before coming to Brockville, was elected president of the new association. Chief Armstrong of Kingston was elected secretary.

The main subject under discussion was the matter of fire prevention, and much useful information was imparted.

Many new fire inventions were on exhibit. The testing of the new combination automobile mortor pumps hose wagon and gasoline engine for small municipalities was exceedingly interesting.

A model of a new fire chief's car for use in small municipalities was exhibited and delighted many present. It was fitted with a 35-gallon chemical tank and mounted on a Ford chassis. Many of these are at present in use in the Dominion and the test proved its efficiency.

On Wednesday afternoon the Ottawa fire department No. 4 gave a clever exhibition of life saving, etc. One of the big feautres was the high jump into the life net by Capt. Page, who jumped from a height of 75 feet. Following this feature a test of what the sprinkling system accomplishes was demonstrated.

Thursday was given over to entertainment. Chief Brady was loud in his praise of the manner in which the visitors were entertained.

It was decided to hold the convention next year in Windsor.

Arrest Germans In New York for Ship Fire Bombs

Four Lighter Captains, Three of Them Huns, Held by Police and One Confesses

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—An investigation of repeated attempts to burn steamers leaving this port with cargoes for the Allies, which has been going on for several months, resulted in the arrests yesterday of four lighter captains, three of them Germans, and two others.

One of the lighter captains admitted that he and the others who were arrested later were in a conspiracy to rob the ships on which bombs were found, but denied that he knew anything of the incendiary attempts.

Lighter captains and crews have been under suspicion because it was believed by steamship officials and detectives that they were the only ones who had the opportunity to hide fire bombs in cargoes.

A number of other arrests are to be made, it was said yesterday, as the admission already obtained from prisoners showed that a score or more were parties to the plot. Several detectives are trying to find out where the lighter captains obtained the fire bombs which must have been manufacured by an expert chemist. Commissioner Scull and Police Captain Tunney, in charge of the detectives who made the arrests, refused to say whether any of the known German agents in this country were under suspicion of supplying the fire bombs.

Michael Matzet, 56 years old, a German, master of the lighter S.F.S., an employee for thirty-two years of the Shortland Litgherage Companyy, was the first to be arrested. He made a long statement, denying that he had any knowledge of the placing of fire bombs on steamers, but admitting that he and many others were in a conspiracy to steal sugar and other goods which they loaded on steamers.

Most of the ships on which incendiary attempts have been made have been loaded with sugar. Sugar has been the principal article stolen by Matzet and others. The police have not yet got any evidence to show whether the placing of fire bombs on board of the ships was intended to serve the cause of Germany or to cover up thefts of sugar.

Matzet fell under suspicion because bombs were found or fires occurred in holds which had been loaded from his lighter, the S.F.S. This aroused the suspicion of his employers. the Shortland Lighterage Company, and after a series of fires last May he was put at other work than loading trans-Atlantic liners. Then the number of fires decreased. No other ground of suspicion was found against Matzet, however, and he was put to work again last month loading steamers.

On July 20, the Knutsford, loaded with sugar at Pier 31, Brooklyn, caught fire, and on July 24 the sugar steamer Cragside caught fire at the foot of West Twenty-third Street, Matzet's lighters took part in the loading of both steamers. Since that time he has been closely shadowed.

Find Sugar Cache.

It was learned that Matzet and several other lighter captains paid frequent visits to a building at 89 Monroe street, Brooklyn, and that delivery wagons, automobiles and trucks drove there now and then, loaded chiefly with bags of sugar.

The detectives had about decided that this was the headquarters of the conspiracy and were preparing a raid, when they learned on Friday that the lighter Dixie, commanded by Sigmund Sjursen, had caught fire while loaded with sugar. Late on Friday night the detectives entered the building at 89 Monroe street, found 141 bags of sugar and arrested Abraham Kochelink, in charge of the place.

The arrest of Matzet soon followed, and after his confession the round-up began. By last night the following, in addition to those mentioned, were under arrest:

Frederick Kahn, 44 years old, a German, of 337 Seventeenth street, Brooklyn, master of the sugar lighter John F. Rymer.

Captain Under Suspicion.

Several weeks ago it was printed that detectives thought the incendiary bombs had been placed by lighter captains, because the only time the sugar sacks were not under close surveillance was while they were on the lighters.

Most of the cargoes of sugar in which bombs have been found have come from the plant of the National Sugar Refinary at Yonkers. There the sacks are filled by machinery under close guard. The piers are alive with detectives while lighters are loading, and it was thought to be impossible for anyone to hide explosives during the loading, so it seemed plausible that the bombs were placed while the sugar was in transit from the refinery to the ship.

Detectives were out last night searching for the chemical plant where the bombs are made for ships carrying cargoes to the Allies. These bombs have been skilfully made, and the conspirators either have had an expert or have got them from German agents interested, not in covering up evidence of theft, but in destroying ships.

Captain Matzet's account of the thefts to Commissioner Scull was that, long before the war, he and other lighter captains made a practice of stealing a sack of sugar, a bag of coffee, or something of the kind from every load they carried. When the war began there was such rush and confusion that Matzet and others thought they could steal on a big scale Sacks by the score were unloaded from lighters to motor boats or set aside on the piers.

Got Loot Worth Thousands.

The growth of this thievery required that many should be taken in. The men who checked the goods had to have a share in the profits, and on some lighters most of the employees got shares.

Captain Matzet admitted that since the war began he and other captains had made big money, estimated the loot at more than $100,000.

If the purpose of the conspirators was to cover thefts, it was unsuccessful in many instances, for the bombs were found intact on the arrival of the ships in Europe, but, if the cargo shortage was detected the steamship lines failed to report to the police in this city.

Only One Ship Set Afire.

The only ship on which a bombs caused a serious fire was the Minnehaha, which left this port for London on July 4, and put back to Halifax. It was believed that the bomb was placed on the Minnehaha by Erich Muenter, the German professor who shot J. P. Morgan and committed suicide. The police were unable to say yesterday whether any of the lighter captains arrested or under suspicion had anything to do with loading the Minnehaha.

The other ships on which mysterious fires started or incendiary bombs were found were the Touraine which left here for Havre in April; the Dovon City, Lord Erne and Cressington Court, which left here for London, the Lord Downshire and Bankdale for Havre and the Kirkoswald and Strathtay for marseilles, sailing in May; and the Knutsford and Cragside in July.

A fire occured on Friday on the lighter F.F.F. at the French Line pier at West Forty-fourth street. This was visited yesterday by Fire Marshal Brophy and headquarters detectives, but they and the officials of the French Line refused to say anything about the nature of the fire.

Most of the bombs have been iron cylinders with a thin metal partition separating it into two compartments. Different acids were placed in the two chambers and the combustion was obtained when the acids ate through the metal partition and acted upon each other.

CO-OPERATIVE SELLING

IT HAS WORKED WONDERS FOR QUEBEC CHEESEMEN.

Society Was Formed About Five Years Ago Because of the Poor Quality of Dairy Produce Marketed in Quebec—Two Hundred Factories Now Sell Under Auspices of the Society.

SOME five years ago thirty men formed themselves into the Quebec Cheese Makers' Agricultural Co-operative Society, each taking up one ten-dollar share—one dollar paid up. The reason given by Mr. A. Trudel, the manager of the society, for its formation was the poor quality of cheese made and marketed in Quebec; to put the situation in his own words, "the best cheese paid for the poor cheese." The work of the society was to improve the quality, and by doing this establish a market for the product that would enable them to pay the farmers more for their milk, says The Family Herald and Weekly Star.

From the small membership of thirty the society has grown until to-day it is handling the output of over two hundred cheese factories and about one hundred and twenty-five butter factories. The membership has grown to sixteen hundred, each holding a ten-dollar share. This year it increased its reserve fund by over $10,000, and for the past two years in addition to paying operating expenses, has paid a 6 per cent. dividend. As each factory averages about thirty-five farmer patrons, the society practically controls the output of 11,375 farmers.

All butter and cheese received at the headquarters of the society in Montreal is carefully graded by men supplied by the Provincial Government, though this is the only help received from the Government. The society is entirely self-sustaining. Weekly or semi-weekly sales are held by the manager in Montreal, where the society has storage capacity for 10,000 boxes cheese and 6,000 butter. No products are exported by the society directly, all being sold at public auction. The amount of cheese and butter handled last year was 83,612 boxes of white cheese, and 14,519 of colored cheese, which sold for $1,126,223.32; and 39,678 boxes of butter worth $569,933.79.

In addition to butter and cheese, eggs to the value of $3,335.92 and poultry worth $3,087.34 were sold by the society, the eggs and poultry coming from twenty poultry societies scattered throughout the province, that are affiliated with the larger cheesemakers' organization.

According to the officers of the society the cheesemakers of Quebec are still suffering for the shortcomings of the cheese marketed many years ago. Quebec cheese is not favorably received on the English markets, even though of late years the quality has improved. Over there the cheese is graded according to the locality in Canada from which it comes, usually as Ontario Eastern Townships and Quebec. As a result the cheese made in the latter province suffers in price, and though the quality is often the equal and sometimes the superior of the Townships and Ontario cheese, the price it commands does not improve. It may be that the cheese gift of the province will help to convince the "Old Country" buyers of the standard of quality now reached by Quebec cheesemakers.

The following extract from the 1914 annual report of the society is evidence of the improvement wrought by the work of the society:

"You will notice that the prices realized this year for butter and No. 1 cheese are higher than the prices paid on the markets of Cowansville, Que., and Brockville, Ont. Before this Co-operative Society came into existence, the prices realized on these markets were from half to three-quarter cents higher than those of the average Quebec market. The prices paid by this Co-operative Society would be still higher than they are if the quantity of the products received was larger. This would be very easy if the society could count on the encouragement of a larger number of farmers and makers of butter and cheese."

The average society prices from May to November for cheese were: white No. 1, 13.76 cents; No. 2, 13.61; No. 3, 13.47; colored, No. 1, 13.83, and No. 2, 13.55. The average price at Brockville, Ont., being 13.65.

Considering the poor opinion held of Quebec cheese when exported it seems strange that the dealers in Montreal are willing to pay more for it at public auction. It is learned on enquiry, however, that it is not a difficult matter to take off the "Quebec" printed on the boxes and substitute "Brockville" or "Ontario."

Now that the Co-operative Cheesemakers' Society has made considerable progress in the quantity of produce handled and also in the quaility, it faces the proposition of finding some means of overcoming the handicap experienced on export markets. The cheese made in Quebec compares favorably with the best made in Canada, yet the buyers still adhere to the system of practically grading by province.

There seem to be two methods of overcoming this, the first an active advertising campaign in favor of Quebec cheese, by establishing agents in Great Britain, and the second, a revising of the cheese grades. As they stand the three grades for white and colored cheese are all right, but the name on the box creates the difficulty for the makers in Quebec. In this case it would seem that there is "a lot in name" as far as the buyers abroad are concerned, though dealers in this country are apparently of opinion that "the cheese smells and tastes as well," even though the name be changed.

FURNISHING VERANDA.

Hammock, Willow Armchairs and Paint Among the Possibilities.

Every well appointed country house has a veranda, terrace or gallery that is practically an outdoor sitting room. Unfortunately, however, the best appointments for these are still expensive at the select shops, being classed as novelties or specialties. Willow arm chairs and Gloucester hammocks have been greatly reduced in price, but tables, garden seats, settles, etc., of good design are still high

On the other hand, it is possible, with a little skill and a great deal of paint, to furnish a veranda very attractively with little money.

A charming breakfast porch can be equipped entirely with kitchen furniture painted and decorated like the expensive peasant and cottage sets which are in vogue at present. One of the heavy, plain ironing tables that can be converted into a settle is the best type of table to buy, and the chairs should be of the plainest. Get your furniture in the natural wood and paint it any color you wish, though green, on the whole, is most satisfactory. Make or buy a stencil of some simple design; conventionalized flowers, like the decorations on the Swedish or Hungarian pottery, are good. Stencil a border of these around your table and on the backs of your chairs. Paint it in bright peasant colors, and when these are dried go over the decorations with a waterproof varnish.

This is not work that demands any great skill, but it calls for time, patience and extreme neatness. The effect is well worth the trouble, for with the outlay of a few dollars you will have a set of furniture that you could not buy for five times that amount.

Dairy benches and stools decorated in the same way make very attractive garden furniture.

PREMIER BORDEN'S RETURN

"Something attempted, something done" may be applied to Premier Borden's visit to England. He is now on the Atlantic, on his return journey, and is expected to reach Montreal and Ottawa, via New York, about next Friday. As head of the Canadian Government he went to consult with the Imperial authorities as to how the co-operation of this Dominion in the war could be strengthened, and its assistance made as effective as possible. He was received with the very highest honors by the King and the Imperial Government, and his reception must be regarded not merely in the light of personal attentions, but also as a recognition of the fact that Sir Robert Borden was representing the Canadian Government.

As a result of his visit it is known that Canada's participation in the war will be made substantially more helpful and effective. From every point of view the visit of Canada's Premier to the capital of the Empire must be considered as eminently satisfactory. It may be taken for granted that many important questions affecting Canada were discussed, about which at present we have heard nothing. Sir Robert Borden has had interviews with Lord Kitchener, Premier Asquith, Mr. Bonar Law, Earl Grey and Mr. Lloyd George. On his return he will doubtless be able to assure Canadian manufacturers of war materials that the Imperial Government not only is willing but anxious to utilise the resources of Canada to the full. His visit is expected to result in the sending to Canada very shortly emissaries from the munitions department, who will make known further requirements of producers in the Dominion.

On larger views and the position which the Dominion will hold when the time for settling terms of peace arrives, it is also safe to say that while Sir Robert discussed the matter with the Imperial authorities nothing authorised can possibly be published. It is probable, however, that the Premier will have something to say on the subject to which we have referred on several occasions—the immigration of ex-soldiers and soldiers' widows after the war. That is a matter which is exciting considerable interest in the Old Country. Premier Borden's own statement on the result of his diplomatic visit is worth remembering. "During my visit," he said, "I have had the advantage of discussing with members of the British Government matters of great moment. I am convinced these discussions will lead to more effective co-operation in common purpose, and from information thus received I am assured all possible steps are being taken to carry on a complete and enormous preparation necessary to insure the triumph of the allied nations."

There need be no fears for the safety of Sir Robert Borden, as he has long passed out of the war zone. He will meet with a very hearty reception at Montreal and also at Ottawa, as his mission is generally regarded to have been of a highly important nature. The executive of the Belleville Patriotic League, it has been announced, will endeavor to obtain the presence of Sir Robert Borden at a grand recruiting rally. Belleville would be highly favored by such a visit, and it is to be hoped the Executive will be successful in their efforts.

A BUSY INVENTOR.

T. L. Willson, the "Carbide King," Has Entered Codfish Industry.

T. L. Willson, the carbide king, has returned from Newfoundland, where he has just organized a $20,000,000 company which proposes to establish a fertilizer plant in western Newfoundland and Labrador. This well-known Ottawan with the very busy brain, continually thinking out great progressive ideas, has for a long time been working on this important project, which will do more for agricultural progress than perhaps any discovery of recent years. He is head of this big commercial organization, which has secured large and important concessions from the Government of the Codfish colony and which will be the means of utilizing great quantities of water power and involve the expenditure of a large amount of capital in that country.

The land and water powers granted by a recent measure of the Legislature of Newfoundland are very considerable in extent and will involve a survey of portions of the country, especially in Labrador, over which there may be some considerable dispute as to jurisdiction. The matter recently excited some unusual discussion in the Newfoundland Legislature.

The head of this big new corporation, Thomas Leopold Willson, of Ottawa, is one of the best-known citizens of the capital and a famous electrical engineer. He is the discoverer of acetylene gas for commercial purposes, the inventor of the Willson acetylene gas buoy and gas beacon, the promoter of the Ottawa Carbide Company and the Acetylene Construction Company, and he was organizer and president of the International Marine Signal Company and other big corporations.

Toronto University recognized his ability and the importance of his discoveries by awarding in 1909 Mr. Willson the first McCharles prize for scientific discoveries. He is a son of the late Thomas Willson, of Woodstock, and grandson of Hon. John Willson, formerly speaker of the Upper Canada Assembly, and he was born at Princeton, Ont., in 1860. He was educated at Hamilton Collegiate Institute, and after leaving school immediately interested himself in electrical and chemical questions. He first constructed an arc light apparatus in 1880 and gave Hamilton its first arc light display. He has been successively inspector of construction for the Fuller Electric Company, and later for the Remington Gun Company and Messrs. Seward and Morehead, of New York.

Since coming to Ottawa he has devoted his energies to promoting the various corporations with which he is identified and in making a number of important chemical and electrical discoveries. He is a member of the leading Ottawa clubs and has recently erected a large private experimental laboratory at Meach lake that is said to be one of the finest of its kind on the continent.

THE POET'S CORNER

LANGEMARCK AND YPRES

When Kaiser Wilhelm drew his sword and led his hordes to fight,
Determined to be Lord o'er All by might of German blight—
When noble Belgium was spoiled by an immortal stain,
And babes and mothers were destroyed by bloody hand of Cain;
'Twas then King Albert cried aloud to Britain of the sea,
Come help me, by thine honor pledged, to keep my country free.

The answer was a bugle blast that reached the world around—
It pierced to every part of earth where love of Right is found—
The Islands of the Southern Cross, and India heard the strain,
South Africa and Canada caught up the wild refrain,
To arms! To arms!! The bugle calls. To arms! the echoes ring.
To arms, in Freedom's holy cause, for Country and for King.

Responsive to those warlike notes, great souls that love and feel,
Strong men leave homes and friends behind to meet the foeman's steel—
While armies come and armies go throughout the seven seas,
To rally round the brave old flag of liberty and peace—
And Canada, from sea to sea, sends forth, to stand or fall,
The flower of her chivalry—none stauncher 'mong them all.

Hoist up the flag of Canada, and let the story spread—
Unfurl it—let it proudly wave o'er every loyal head—
At half-mast do not let it rest, but run it up on high,
To keep it there, our warriors were not afraid to die;
But dared the cruel, callous Hun, and with beloved care,
With all their strength, with life itself, they keep it flying there.

O bless the lads! No power on earth could put such valor down—
Our righteous cause need never fear the Kaiser's fiendish frown—
Nor shrapnel shot, nor bayonet thrust, nor pois'nous gas of hell
Could move our grim Canadian men from purpose loved so well.
Outnumbered five to one they stood undaunted—undismayed—
Magnificent their feat in arms—when can their glory fade?

Hoist up the flag of Canada, there's courage in each fold,
And daring in its every mesh—its web great deeds unfold—
Its crosses three of heroes tell, who fought and bled and died,
That Truth and Freedom might advance and peace on earth abide—
Behold them! forming back to back at Langemarck and Ypres,
And hear the glorious record speak, "Canadians saved the day!"

Ho, comrades from the golden West, ye tested, tried and true,
The red blood, pulsing in the heart, is stirred because of you;
And it runs riot in the veins—O but to strike a blow
And take a freeman's noble part against the ruthless foe—
And see you rally strong and force the Huns across the plain,
Then gather round the guns you left and bring them back again.

Hat's off! The flag of Canada is flying full and free—
Arise Canadians, arise and kiss each cross with me,
And swear by Him who gave us life, come weal or woe, to stand
And keep its honor stainless still—great ensign of our land—
Our priceless emblem leading forth will never lack for men
To follow it triumphantly and bring it home again.

Stand by the flag of Canada and let it ever fly,
Free as the rays of purest light that shine in God's clear sky,
And let the winds blow high and low across the troubled seas
To touch Canadian hearts with fire in cherished words like these:
Behold them! in the bleeding ranks at Langemarck and Ypres,

Trade Under War Conditions.

War sticks out prominently in the array of figures showing the trade of Canada for the twelve months ended March, 1915, as compared with trade for the same months in former years. It is shown that for 1915 the duty collected in Canada amounted to $79,183,489. Although this is a notable decrease from 1914 and 1913, it must be remembered that those years were somewhat abnormal. They were, to an extent at least, boom years. The articles that came into Canada were made up of luxuries and necessities. The luxuries paid a high duty. It may be well to compare the 1915 duties collected with those of the year 1912. In that year duties amounted to $87,548,536, so that the decrease is less than $9,000,000. These figures should be considered in view of the determination of the Government to impose war taxes to bring up the falling revenues. There is no reason why, even without war conditions, the revenues of 1915 (for the fiscal year ended March) should even approximate those for 1913 and 1914. In no other department of Canadian affairs does business come up to that of those years.

The total of imports into Canada, both free and dutiable, for 1915 was $445,371,371, as compared with $618,328,874 in 1914, and with $521,348,701 in 1912. There has thus been a great decrease from last year, and a considerable decrease from the year 1912.

Whole Family in Arms.

Three sons of Henry Hamelin of Aylmer, Que., are now at the front, and a few days ago the father and his remaining son old enough to go, came to Ottawa and both enlisted in the 77th. This battalion will be recruited up to 1,360, or 220 over the usual strength.

CURRENT COMMENT

That Oxford county farmer who thrashed 70 bushels of wheat per acre has certainly a record to be proud of.

The eagle is altogether too belligerent a bird for the Americans. The dove of peace should be substituted—or a rabbit.

The arrest in Washington of a German spy with photographs and drawings of fortifications along the Atlantic coast will not make Americans feel any more agreeable toward the German nation.

The proverbial uncertainty of woman's aim has never been more shockingly demonstrated than in the New Jersey fly-swatting competition in which a girl leads the field with a total of 179,765 victims to her credit.

Turkey is said to be trenching at Nazareth, fearing an invasion of Palestine. One of the many anomalies of this war will doubtless be the final deliverance of the Holy Land from the hands of the infidel Turk.—Hamilton Spectator.

Young men qualified for the football field are all the more needed for their country's service at the present time. The same applies to any line of rugged sport. Even the golf and bowling green might furnish many robust recruits.

Could there be any reasonable wage that would prevent "tipping"? It is very doubtful. Human frailty demands that you "take all you can get and howl for more."—Hamilton Spectator. The only practical way to stop the habit would be for people to discontinue tipping. Why should a man "tip" another who (it frequently happens) is drawing a bigger wage than he is himself?

The Kaiser's gift of a lamp for the tomb of Saladin shows how persistently the least original of Germany's plans of world-power is pursued. The present population of Islam is laboriously copied from Napoleon's efforts in Egypt, when he assured the faithful that Frenchmen had severed themselves from the "sect of the Messiah." About the only things that Germany can claim for her own in this war are the poisonous gases and the molten flames. And even these might be traced to a source indicated in Scripture.—Pall Mall Gazette.

"War would be the most glorious game in the world, if it were not for the killing and wounding. In it one tastes the joy of comradeship to the full, the taking and giving, and helping and being helped, in a way that would be impossible to conceive in the ordinary world. At Radzivilow, too, one could see the poetry of war, the zest of the frosty mornings, and the delight of the camp-fire at night, the warm, clean smell of the horses, tethered everywhere, the keen hunger, the rough sweetening by the sauce of danger, the riding out in high hope in the morning; even the returning wounded in the evening did not seem altogether such a bad thing out there."—"Field Hospital and Flying Column," by Violetta Thurston.

THROUGH GERMAN SPECTACLES

Lord Haldane still manages to stick in the throat of the Vossiche Zeitung, which attacks him on an average three times a week. The latest outburst is as follows:—

Lord Haldane has told his countrymen how his attempts to convince the friends of peace in Germany that no attack by England in conjunction with France and Russia was threatening had been frustrated by the German war party.

Lord Haldane conveniently forgets that in 1912 there was no such thing in Germany as a war party. Nobody, either in political or official circles, dreamed of war, although the continuous secret negotiations that were going on between the Cabinets of London, St. Petersburg, and Paris were certainly well calculated to arouse our suspicions that plans the reverse of peaceable were being hatched against us. Yet Lord Haldane has the audacity to call us to account because, in the end, we began to manifest some distrust about his and Grey's oft-repeated assurances of friendship.

It was not any German war party that nurtured suspicion against England; that suspicion was forced on the Germans by the English war party, with Sir Edward Grey at its head. Up to the present we in Germany have been the sole possessors of the truth as to the origins of the war.

Across the Channel they are still enveloped in darkness, but even there, despite all the machinations of the responsible and irresponsible personalities in the island-Empire to keep the people in ignorance, the light must break through before we are many months older.

That will mean the downfall of England's conspiracy system, and the traitors who are responsible for all this misery will be dragged by the masses from their homes and hoisted on the lamp-posts of that Whitehall which has been dishonored by their presence.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

In the production of poultry meat farmers work in a slow and restricted way unless they procure a good sized incubator and give proper attention to its management. Nearly every farmer can make it pay to keep chickens and ducks. The sale of young fowls at two months is highly profitable, and a large trade can be worked up in a short time.

In filling an incubator care must be taken to secure the freshest kind of fertile eggs, and they must not be chilled. It is never a good plan to use eggs over a week old. The sooner they are placed in the incubator after being laid the better hatch will result. The eggs that are held for many days are apt to become chilled in cold weather, and the germ gradually grows weaker with time. Eggs for incubation in cold weather should be gathered twice daily, especially on cold days, and they must be kept in a warm room of rather even temperature until used. Eggs that have been chilled may start to hatch, yet in most cases the germ is so weak that the chick will not be strong enough to break the shell at birth. There must be plenty of male birds for the eggs of a flock of chickens to be of high fertility. It is often a good plan in filling the incubator to place more eggs in the tray than it is expected to carry through the three weeks period. When the eggs are tested for fertility the infertile ones are removed, which usually gives plenty of room in the tray for the good eggs. In this manner a good sized hatch may be expected from the machine. Never put in the eggs until the chamber has been heated for forty-eight hours.

CHICKENS AND DUCKS ARE GENERALLY PROFITABLE.

Guarding the health of newly hatched chicks is of prime importance. The first week is the critical time. There have been found certain degrees of infection in white diarrhea bacillus. Some carry malignant infection, some so light that not many of the chicks infected die with it. The infection passes from hen to hen by means of the nest litter. The original source of infection is from the ovary of the mother hen. The organism is in the yolk. Chickens produced from these eggs have the disease when hatched.

The disease spreads from these to other chicks through the infected food, the water or by the normal chicks eating over the droppings. Infection would not take place from chick to chick if it were not for the sick chick drinking and eating with the well. This is why the disease can be stopped by the instant removal of each droopy chick and a thorough cleaning out of its droppings. Especially is this more easily done for the well if the disease does not show up in the infected until the third or fourth day.

The feeding of fresh buttermilk to the exposed was fully tried on certain farms where the disease appeared last year, and with due caution the results of the lactic acid treatment gave good results in large numbers of healthy, fast growing chicks.

Don't buy eggs from yards where this disease was known to have been last year, as the same old infected hens may still be there.

Coops should be made windproof and water proof on all sides, which also means top and bottom. Rubber roofing is cheap material if kept painted to roof the coops with. Ventilation is best given above the door, the ventilator covered with screen wire and protected from rain. Roomy and dry is the idea. Everything should be kept clean and with good care to keep them comfortable and good wholesome feed, including green food and free range, any farm flocks should go through the summer in good condition, lay well and not die off.

Why Cows Give More Milk.

Cattle used to be bred chiefly for work, says the Farm and Fireside. Therefore the cows did not give much milk. Breeds improve the thing for which they are selected.

In 1790 the work cows of Germany gave an average of a pint and a half a day. Interest in milk increased, and by 1800 the average yield was a quart and a half. Breeding went on milkward, and in 1810 the German cows averaged two quarts of milk each per day, in 1820 three, in 1830 four, and there the gain stopped for thirty years. But in 1860 the production had increased to six quarts and by 1870 to eight.

A Notary's Discomfiture

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Many years ago in the city of Rheims, in France, which has of late been the scene of fighting between the French and the Germans, there lived an old notary. In France a notary is a lawyer, but in the olden time a lawyer was not of much more importance so far as his work was concerned than a notary is with us today. Jules Farlieux, the notary of Rheims, had accumulated some 50,000 francs, which had come to him through small fees. This sum—$10,000 in our money—was quite a fortune in those days, especially in France, where everything was very cheap and one could live comfortably on a small income.

The old man had one child, a daughter, Delphine, to whom he expected to leave his property, and it was his expectation that she should marry a man having at least an equal amount. What was his chagrin, therefore, when he learned that she had fallen in love with Alphonse Du Bois, a young fellow who had just been graduated from a law school in Paris and settled in Rheims to practice his profession without a sou to his name. The notary simply forbade his daughter to have anything to do with the man.

One day three men came into Jules Farlieux's office, and after asking if and being assured that he was the "distinguished notary" with whom so many persons intrusted their affairs and their moneys they asked him to take care of 100,000 francs in gold which was theirs jointly. Jules accepted the trust, it being agreed that he should deduct 5 per cent of the amount when the money was returned. He was then asked to draw up a contract to that effect, in which he stipulated to pay over the money to the three men together and not to any one or two of them separately. The contract having been signed, the men departed, leaving the gold on a table. As the notary was gathering it up to put in his strong box one of the men returned, saying he had been deputed by the others to count the money before it was put away. While he was doing so a stranger came hurriedly into the office and, after taking the notary into a rear room, asked him some questions concerning a matter which he seemed to consider of immediate importance. The notary tried to get away from him, but found it impossible. When he was permitted to return to the other room both the money and the man who had been counting it were gone.

Farlieux found himself in a very unpleasant position. He had receipted for 100,000 francs which he was to pay to the three owners together. One of them had taken the amount, and the notary would be obliged to indemnify the others, which would require nearly double all he possessed. He heard nothing from any of the men for a month; then one morning the two who had lost their share came to him and demanded it.

The notary believed that the men had conspired to swindle him, but unless he could prove this he had no hope of saving the little fortune he had been a lifetime in accumulating and which was to go to his daughter for a dowry. He made every effort to prove that the men were dishonest and in collusion, but was not able to do so.

After a formal demand for the money the two men put the case in the courts, and a day was set for trial. Alphonse Du Bois learned of the case from his sweetheart, Louise, and the probable loss of her dowry. He told her to say to her father that he would save him from the swindle if he would consent to his marriage with her. Louise gave the old man the message and it made him very angry.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Does this popinjay who has no experience in the law propose to do what I, who have been a notary for forty years, cannot do?"

Louise argued with her father, saying that nothing would be lost by permitting Alphonse to take the case and something might be gained. Since the old man's principal grief was that she would be deprived of her dowry, she finally won him over, but not until the case had been called in court, and if any defense was to be put in it must be done at once. Then the notary, who could see no possible excuse under the contract to avoid indemnifying the plaintiffs, agreed that in case Du Bois saved his fortune it should go to Louise as his bride.

The young lawyer arose in court and called for a reading of the contract. When the reader came to the words, "And the said Farlieux shall pay to the said depositors together and to no one or two separately the sum of 100,000 francs," Du Bois stopped him and said:

"Your honor, my client is ready to pay the 100,000 francs specified under the contract to the three depositors together, but is prohibited by the contract from paying the money to two of them separately."

The judge dismissed the case, for the moment the third man who had gone off with the funds should appear he would be arrested, and the notary need not pay till he was present.

The man who had gone away with the deposit never returned, and the notary was never again called on to pay it. Du Bois married Louise, but declined to permit her to accept the dowry. The reputation he made by his handling of the case in court brought him a practice that eventually made him rich.

For the Children

Wild Lamb Which Looks Like Its Tame Relatives.

Nearly every child has seen at one time or another the gentle little lamb which frolics so gayly in the pasture with its mother. But here is a wild lamb that was captured in the mountains of Spain and which is said by scientists to be a member of the family from which our domestic sheep are descended. A beautiful and innocent little creature it is and differs slightly from the playful little fellows we all know so well. This lambkin is said to be of the Musmon family, which had its origin, so far as known, in southern Europe. Whether this is true or not, the fact remains that any person who had ever seen a lamb would at once pronounce this little animal to be a baby sheep. He doesn't look so very wild either. When wild animals are treated kindly they soon become tame and love those who are gentle with them.

Reconciliations.

You know there are many things always mentioned together, such as "Jack and Gill," "The Lion and the Lamb," "Stars and Stripes," and so on. A pleasant little game has been based on this and plays itself quite comfortably in a quarter of an hour. Assuming that twenty guests are expected to be present, the hostess prepares twenty sheets of paper, on which the first half of such couplings are written, the guests being required to complete them and so effect a reconciliation.

The following list of twenty will illustrate the game, the last part of each sentence appearing only on the key, which the hostess will keep until the competition is closed to correct papers. A prize may be given the one having the most correct sentences:

1. Early to bed and	early to rise.
2. Beauty and	the beast.
3. Man and	wife.
4. The lion and	the unicorn.

Japanese Children.

Children have a good time in Japan. They are blessed by inheritance with a cheerful nature; they are dressed loosely, yet warmly; they are out of doors as much as possible, and inside their homes there is so little furniture they never stumble over it and are never warned against crawling up on the satin brocaded chairs or handling the bric-a-brac. The houses are always open to sun and air, even in cold weather. They are built dovetailed together, no nails being used, and are mounted on wooden pillars, so that when an earthquake occurs they will not tumble down, but merely shake and settle down again.

No matter how I tippy toe,

You squeaky shoe!

You squeak like tiny little mice
Who've nibbled at the cheese and rice;
Now, tell me, shoes, is this thing nice?
You sneaky, squeaky, creaky shoe!
I really don't know what to do
With such a naughty thing as you!
You squeaky shoe!

You squeak like squirrels in a tree,
You squeak at mother, then at me;
Now what can all this trouble be?
You sneaky, squeaky, creaky shoe!
I really don't know what to do
With such a naughty thing as you!
You squeaky shoe!

Woman's World

A Titled Beauty Who Also Is Interested In Charities and the War.

THE COUNTESS OF WARWICK.

The Countess of Warwick, famous though she is for her beauty, has achieved quite as much distinction on account of her various and well directed charities, upon which subject she is as reticent as she is liberal. Two of the objects upon which her philanthropic energies are expended have assumed such proportions as to be beyond the power of concealment. These are the Easton School of Needlework and the Essex Needlework guild, both excellent organizations to aid the poor of England. The countess recently caused much talk by her criticisms of the social "butterflies" who make a pretense of nursing wounded soldiers—in reality posing and hindering the war work.

The countess is an optimist, as witness what she said in an interview not so very long ago.

"The best time of life is always after the age of thirty. Better than that is after forty. The very best time of life is fifty-three, which is my age. I just now am having the best time I ever had. At eighteen I was a pessimist. Now I know better. And because of what I've learned—by putting my experiences, my knowledge, to the best uses—I, like all women of my age, know better how to enjoy the days that are given to me."

This is what she thinks about the ballot for women: "The ballot in itself means nothing. What prompts the fight for the ballot in England and America is a fight for sex independence, a fight women are making—and which eventually they will win—because woman, given economic independence plus the ballot, will then be started on the road toward her right to exact a recognition of the fact that she is entitled to exercise her God given impulses quite as much as a man is."

For Sore, Tired Eyes.

One of the simple home remedies for troubled eyes is hot water. Hot water applications can be managed by soaking two soft cloths in very hot water. Place one cloth over the eyes as hot as can be endured while the other is heating. Apply a fresh cloth as soon as the first cools.

Boracic acid, a quarter of a teaspoonful added to a glass of warm water and permitted to cool before using, makes an excellent eye lotion within the reach of all.

Care of the Baby In Summer

Food For the "Runabout" Baby.

For the first nine months or more of a baby's life, when he is growing at a very rapid rate, nature has provided a perfect food in mother's milk. With such babies a healthy development usually goes steadily forward with little trouble. But after being weaned all too many babies seem to suffer from a setback, while accommodating themselves to digest a new food.

A list of the foods suitable to this period of the baby's life is given in greater detail in a bulletin called "Infant Care," published by the children's bureau of the department of labor, Washington. This publication is sent free to all who care to ask for it, sending their name and address to the bureau.

The average healthy baby of one year of age should be taking five meals a day at four hour intervals. At this period he should have about one quart of milk daily. In addition, he may have well cooked cereal twice a day, squeezed beef juice or broth once a day, some fruit juice once or twice a day, unless the bowels are loose, and dry bread or toast to chew.

As the baby grows and thrives various things may be added to his diet. The following are sample meals for a day for a healthy child from eighteen months to two years old (an ounce is two tablespoonfuls):

7 a. m.—Milk, 8 to 10 ounces, piece of zwieback, toast or dried bread.
9 a. m.—Orange juice, 2 ounces.
10 a. m.—Cereal, 2 tablespoonfuls; cupful of milk, toast or dry bread.
2 p. m.—Broth, 6 ounces; meat, 1 tablespoonful; vegetable (spinach), 1 tablespoonful; stale bread, 1 piece; baked apple, 1 tablespoonful.
6 p. m.—Cereal, 1½ tablespoonfuls; milk, 6 to 8 ounces; toast or bread.
10 p. m.—Milk, 8 ounces in cup. (May be omitted).

The following rules for cooking and preparing certain of these articles may be helpful to mothers:

Toast.—Bread one day old, cut in very thin slices; slices placed on edge in a toast rack in an oven to dry. Leave oven door partly open.

Broth.—Of round steak, one pound; of water, one pint. Put the meat on in cold water and allow it to come to a boil; then lower the flame so that it barely simmers for three or four hours. Remove the meat and add enough water to make up the original amount of liquid; strain through a wire sieve and set aside to cool. When cold the fat is removed in a solid piece, leaving a clear liquid or jelly. Heat a small portion when it is time to feed the baby. Keep the jelly covered and on ice.

Meat. — One tablespoonful. Take meat, round or sirloin steak, scraped with a silver spoon. When you have the desired amount shape into a pat and broil on a hot, dry spider. When done add a little salt. Or a piece of rare round or sirloin steak, the outer part having been cut away, is scraped or shredded with a knife.

Spinach.—Cook spinach in salted water until tender. Pour cold water over it and drain. Then rub through a fine sieve.

Baked Apple.—Apple baked three-quarters of an hour; skin and core removed; two tablespoonfuls of pulp strained through a fine sieve.

Cereal (flour preparations). — Cereal preparation three-quarters of a cupful cooked with one quart of water for three-quarters of an hour in a double boiler. Add enough water to keep moist.

Oatmeal.—Have a pint of water boiling in the top of the double boiler; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and drop in gradually one-half cupful of oatmeal flakes, stirring all the while. Cook for three hours and strain through a wire sieve. Pour on it one or two ounces of milk.

The following are some of the things a baby should not have: Candy, cakes, doughnuts, pastry, fresh bread, griddle cakes, sirup or molasses, pork or tough meat of any kind, bananas, overripe fruits, pickles, tea, coffee, soda water or beer nor tastes of foods from the family table.

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

Take Them to a Dentist Regularly and Insist Upon Use of Toothbrush.

It is most important to get young children into the habit of regularly cleaning their teeth. This should be done after every meal, but sometimes that is not possible. At least the children should scrub the teeth as a matter of routine after breakfast and the last thing at night.

Dentists are advising that the gums as well as the teeth should be scrubbed carefully. First, because it is just at the place where the gum and tooth meet that decay begins and, second, because friction of the gum brings a good supply of the blood to the part, and that, of course, nourishes the teeth and preserves them. Any simple tooth powder can be used, and after scrubbing the children should rinse the mouth out with clean cold water.

The mother should remember how important it is to preserve the first teeth. Any spot of decay should be stopped immediately. The wise mother takes her children regularly to the dentist, perhaps once in six months, to have the teeth inspected. This is a real economy in the end.

A French Dainty.

Tenderloin and mushrooms is the plain name in this country, but this way of doing the cookery is purely French.

Peel six mushrooms and take out the stems. Then drop them for five minutes in cold salted water. Take them out, dry on a fresh cloth and put them in the plat with a teaspoonful of butter. Cover the plat with a saucer or breakfast plate, set it over the blaze and saute the mushrooms for fifteen minutes without uncovering. Then dump them in a hot little vessel, cover that and keep warm until the steak is cooked.

Scrape the tenderloin steak with a knife, rub it over with the cut side of a lemon and put on a faint dust of salt and pepper. Then place the plat with all the mushroom taste and a little of the sauce over the fire and when piping hot put in the steak. It should brown a little on either side, but still be pink inside. When cooked pour the mushrooms back into the pan, add a pinch more of butter if the sauce has dried out, cover the plat, set it in the oven for three minutes and serve at once. As mushrooms draw their own juices, only enough butter to start them cooking must be used when they are first prepared.

Chocolate Cake.

One-half cake of chocolate, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one egg yolk and a pinch of salt. Cook in double boiler until smooth.

One cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, creamed together well; add two eggs beaten light, one cupful of milk and one level teaspoonful of soda dissolved in milk, two level cupfuls of flour and one tablespoonful of vanila. Mix this with the other, beat well and bake one-half hour.

Tomato Eggs.

Beat one-half dozen fresh eggs lightly. Rub one-half cupful of tomatoes through a colander and mix with the eggs. Stir in one tablespoonful lemon juice, one small onion finely minced, one tablespoonful minced parsley, one teaspoonful each salt and celery salt and a generous dash of sweet paprika. Pour into a double boiler, place over boiling water and stir constantly until thick enough to serve on toasted bread.

Ontario Beekeepers' Association.

The annual report of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association for 1914 has been issued. It is packed with useful information regarding the working of the apiary. The "Question Drawer" covers a large variety of topics, the replies being given by practical, expert beemen. Among the subjects dealt with at greater length are foul brood, the advantages or otherwise of specializing in beekeeping, putting up a honey exhibit, growing sweet clover for honey production, and methods of introducing queens. The report of the secretary on apiary inspection and demonstrations in the Province is most complete, and the discussions upon it, and also upon the other topics, show that the beekeepers of Ontario are live men who are well able to think and speak for themselves.

CHAPTER XXXII.

"Dick is to be our Real Brother."

Never was a father more devoted to his son's company than Mr. Mayne was that day. Dick's cigar was hardly alight before his father had joined him. When Dick grew weary of throwing stones aimlessly at imaginary objects, and voted the beach slow, Mr. Mayne proposed a walk with alacrity. They dined together—not talking much, it is true, for Dick was still sulky, and his father tired and inclined to headache, but keeping up a show of conversation for the waiter's benefit. But when that functionary had retired, and the wine was on the table, Dick made no further effort to be agreeable, but placed himself in the window seat and stared moodily at the sea, while his father watched him and drank his wine in silence.

Mr. Mayne was fighting against drowsiness valiantly.

Dick knew this, and was waiting for an opportunity to make his escape.

"Had we not better ring for lights and coffee?" asked his father, as he felt the first ominous sensations stealing over him.

"Not just yet. I feel rather disposed for a nap myself; and it is a shame to shut out the moonlight," returned that wicked Dick, calling up a fib to his aid, and closing his eyes as he spoke.

The bait took. In another five minutes Mr. Mayne was nodding in earnest, and Dick on tiptoe had just softly closed the door behind him, and was taking his straw hat from its peg.

Nan was walking up and down the little dark lawn, feeling restless and out of sorts after the agitation of the morning, when she heard a low whistle at the other side of the wall, and her heart felt suddenly as light as a feather.

Dick saw her white gown as she came down the flagged path to the gate to let him in. The moonlight seemed to light it up with a sort of glory.

"You are a darling not to keep me waiting, for we have not a moment to lose," he whispered, as she came up close to him. "He is asleep now, but he will wake up as soon as he misses me. Have you expected me before, Nan? But indeed I have not been left to myself a moment.'

"Oh, I knew al about it, my poor Dick,' she answered, looking at him so softly. "Phillis is reading to mother in the parlor, and Dulce is in the work-room. But mother is too upset to see you, I am afraid."

"Let us wait here," returned Dick, boldly. "No one can hear what we say, and I must speak to you alone. No; I had better not see your mother to-night, and the girls would be in the way. Shall you be tired, dear, if you stand out here a moment talking to me? for I dare not wait long."

"Oh, no, I shall not be tired," answered Nan gently. Tired, when she had her own Dick near her—when she could speak to him—look at him!

"All right; but it is my duty to look after you, now you belong to me,' returned Dick, proudly. "Whatever happens—however long we may be separated,—you must remember that—that you belong to me—that you will have to account to me if you do not take care of yourself."

Nan smiled happily at this and then she said,—

"I have told mother all about it, and she is dreadfully distressed about your father's anger. She cried so, and took his part, and said she did not wonder that he would not listen to us; he would feel it such a disgrace, his son wanting to marry a dressmaker. She made me unhappy, too, when she put it out before me in that way," and here Nan's face paled preceptibly in the moonlight, 'for she made me see how hard it is on him, and on your mother, too! Oh, Dick, don't you think you ought to listen to them, and not have anything to do with me?"

"Nan, I am shocked at you!"

"But, Dick!"

"I tell you I am utterly shocked! You, to say such a thing to my face, when we have been as good as engaged all our lives! Who cares for the trumpery dressmaking? Not I!"

"But your father!" persisted Nan, but very faintly, for Dick's eyes were blazing with anger.

"Not another word! Nan, how dare you—a—fter what you have promised this morning! Haven't I been worried and badgered enough, without your turning on me in this way? If you won't marry me, you won't; but I shall be a bachelor all my life for your sake!" and Dick, who was so sore, poor fellow, that he was ready to quarrel with her out of the very fulness of his love, actually made a movement as though to leave her, only Nan caught him by the arm in quite a frightened way.

"Dick! dear Dick!"

"Well?" rather sullenly.

"Oh, don't leave me like this! It would break my heart! I did not mean to make you angry. I was only pleading with you for your own good. Of course I will keep my promise. Have I not been true to you all my life? Oh, Dick! how can you turn from me like this?" And Nan actually began to sob in earnest, only Dick's sweet temper returned in a moment at the sight of her distress, and he fell to comforting her with al his might; and after this things went on more smoothly.

He told her about his conversation with his father, and how he had planned a city life for himself; but here Nan timidly interposed.

"Would that not be a pity, when you had always meant to study the bar?"

"Not a bit of it" was the confident answer. "That was my father's wish, not mine. I don't mind telling you in confidence that I am not at all a shining light. I am afraid I am rather a duffer, and shall not make my mark in the world. I have always thought desk-work must be rather a bore; but after all, with a good introduction and a tolerable berth, one is pretty sure of getting on in the City. What I want is to make a little nest cosey for somebody, and as quick as possible,—eh, Nan?"

"I do not mind waiting," faltered Nan. But she felt at this moment that no lover could have been so absolutely perfect as her Dick.

"Oh, that is what girls always say," returned Dick, rather loftily. "They are never in a hurry. They would wait seven—ten years,—half a lifetime. But with us men it is different. I am not bit afraid of you. I know you will stick to me like a brick, and all that; and father wil come round when he sees we are in earnest. But all the same I want to have you to myself as soon as possible. A fellow likes the feeling of working for his wife. I hate to think of these pretty fingers stitching away for other people. I want them to work for me, do you understand, Nan?" And Nan, of course, understood.

Dick, poor fellow, had not much time for his love-making, he and Nan had too much business to settle. Nan had to explain to him that her mother was of opinion that under the present circumstances, nothing ought to be done to excite Mr. Mayne's wrath. Dick might write to her mother sometime, just to let them know how he was getting on; but between the young people themselves there must be no correspondence.

Mother says it will not be honorable, and that we are not properly engaged." And, though Dick combated this rather stoutly, he gave in at last and agreed that, until the new year, he would not claim his rights, or infringe the sacred privacy of the Friary.

"And now I must go," said Dick, with a great sigh; "and it is good-bye for months. Now, I do not mean to ask your leave,—for you are such a girl for scruples, and all that, and you might take it into your head to refuse me; so there!"

Dick's words were mysterious; but he very soon made his meaning plain.

Nan said, "Oh, Dick!" but made no further protest. After all, whatever Mr. Mayne and her mother said, they were engaged.

As Dick closed the little gate behind him, he was aware of a tall figure looming in the darkness.

"Confound that parson! What does he mean by loafing about here?" he thought, feeling something like a pugnacious bull-dog at the prospect of a possible rival. "I forgot to ask Nan about him; but I dare say he is after one of the other girls." But these reflections were nipped in the bud, as the short, sturdy form of Mr. Mayne was dimly visible in the road.

Dick chuckled softly; he could not help himself; and then he stepped up briskly, and took his father's arm.

"Do you call this honorable, sir?" began Mr. Mayne, in a most irascible voice.

"I call it very neat," returned Dick, cheerfully. "My dear pater, everything is fair in love and war; and if you will nap at unseasonable times—but that comes of early rising, as I have often told you."

"Hold your tongue, sir!" was the violent rejoinder. "It is a mean trick you have served me, and you know it. We will go back to-night; nothing will induce me to sleep in this place. You are not to be trusted. You told me a downright lie. You are humbugging me, sir, with your naps."

"I will plead guilty to a fib, if you like," was Dick's careless answer. "What a fuss you are making, father! Did you never tell one in your life? Now, what is the use of putting yourself out?—it is not good at your age, sir. What would my mother say? It might bring on apoplexy, after that portwine."

"Confound your impertinence!" rejoined Mr. Mayne, angrily; but Dick patted his coat-sleeve pleasantly:

"There, that will do. I think you have relieved your feelings sufficiently. Now we wil go to business. I have seen Nan, and told her all about it; and she has had it out with her mother. Mrs. Challoner will not hear of our writing to each other; and I am not to show my face at the Friary without your permission. There is no fibbing or want of honor there. Nan is not the girl to encourage a fellow to take liberties."

"Oh, indeed!" sneered Mr. Mayne; but he listened attentively for all that. And his gloomy eyebrows relaxed in the darkness. The girl was not behaving so badly, after all.

"So we said good-bye," continued Dick, keeping the latter part of the interview to himself; "and in October I shall go back for the term, as I promised. We can settle the other things after Christmas."

"Oh, yes, we can talk about that by and by," replied his father, hastily; and then he waxed cheerful all at once, and called his son's attention to some new houses they were building. "After all, Hadleigh is not such a bad little place," he observed; "and they gave us a very good dinner at the hotel. It is not every one who can cook fish like that." And then Dick knew that the storm had blown over for the present, and that his father intended to make himself pleasant and ignore all troublesome topics.

Dick was a little tired when he went to bed; but, on the whole, he was not unhappy. It was quite true that the idea of a City life was repugnant to him, but the thoughts of Nan sweetened even that. Nothing else remained to him if his father chose to be disagreeable and withdraw his allowance, or threaten to cut him off with a shilling, as other fellows' fathers did in novels.

"It is uncommonly unpleasant, having to wage war with one's own father," thought Dick, as he laid his sandy head on the pillow. "He is such an old trump, too, that it goes against the grain. But when it comes to his wanting to choose a wife for me, it is too much of a good thing; it is tyranny fit for the Middle Ages. Let him threaten if he likes. He will find I shall take his threats in earnest. After Christmas I will have it out with him again; and if he will not listen to reason, I will go up to Mr. James Stanfield myself, and then he will see that I mean what I say. Heigho! I am not such a lucky fellow as Hamilton always thinks me." And at this juncture of his sad cogtations Dick forgot all about it, and fell asleep.

Sham Wisdom.

The Sophists were a body of teachers in ancient Athens during the fourth and fifth centuries B. C., who gave instruction in any or all of the higher branches of learning. Although they were not a philosophic sect and held no doctrines in common, the Sophists were nevertheless skeptics and maintained a belief of uncertainty of all particular knowledge and, in fact, in the impossibility of all truth. Their two leading representatives were Protagoras and Gorgias. The Sophists were charged with bringing reasoning into contempt by casting uncertainty over the most obvious truths and in consequence were ridiculed and denounced by Aristophanes, Socrates and Plato. Aristotle defined a Sophist as "a man who makes money by sham wisdom."

FURNITURE COVERS.

It is especially necessary to have looseness in a slip cover. There must be plenty of "give" to it. Otherwise when one sits on it it is apt to burst open, which would be most disconcerting, particularly if it happened to be some one else's chair.

The strip which runs from the extreme top of the chair back down to the seat, across the seat and on down to the required length, should be cut lengthwise of the goods without piecing.

Before cutting it should be tucked well into the crease between the seat and the back. The narrow fronts of the arms are cut separately.

The arm's inner side is cut lengthwise and extends over the roll, under which another seam occurs. The outside of the arm is cut in one with the side of the seat.

The rear side of the chair back is cut in two lengthwise pieces, with the opening up the middle. The back's "thickness" will also need a small piece, extending to the arm.

The fasteners are balls and sockets, or buttons and buttonholes, or, in some instances, little bows. The balls and sockets are used for the back openings or for little tabs when seam openings are used.

School Suits

Nearly every mother of a healthy, active boy knows how she has bought him a School Suit that looked very well, indeed, and then wondered a few weeke later how the suit could posssibly have grown so wrinkly, so shabby and so shapeless.

We recommend our School Suits to mothers who have had just this sort of experience.

All of the Boy's Clothing we sell is Tailored as it ought to be—and Tailor work is the only thing that will make a suit hold its shape in active service.

We select only the most reliable fabrics. We have them made up with all the care and thoroughness they ought to have, and as a result our School Suits will wear and hold their shapeliness to an unusual degree.

The Fall Styles are smart and new. There is a very broad variety from which to make a choice. Correct fit is assured. Prices are very moderate, indeed, considering the splendid values we give.

A FLAG FOR EVERY HOME

TO THE PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION VIA THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition.

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip, have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to the modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

A SPENDID RECORD

The results of the examinations in Albert College for the past year show a magnificent record. 100% of those who wrote on Senior Matriculation got their standing. In all, ten passed Normal Entrance, and Junior Matriculation, three with honors. Only one had spent two years on the work, the time allowed by High Schools. Only one student wrote on Faculty and was successful. Of those who tried examinations in piano and vocal, all but one were successful, most securing honors, and many first honors. All students trying art examinations were successful, most of them securing honors. All pupils in Expression were successful in passing the required examinations. College opens September 6th, and at present the outlook for a good attendance is bright.

Wedding Bells

MILLS—GRAHAM

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graham of Avondale, on Saturday August 28th, when their daughter, Louisa Adelene, became the bride of Mr. Sherman Mills of Big Island. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. J. Anderson of Belleville, cousin of the bride, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly attired in brown satin and lace. The ceremony and congratulations over, the party enjoyed a sumptuous wedding dinner, after which the happy couple left on the 5 p. m. train to spend their honeymoon at Toronto, Niagara Falls, Hamilton, and other western points. On their return they will reside at Big Island. They have the best wishes of their many friends for a prosperous and happy life.

WAR STORIES

Thrilling Experiences of Battlefield as Told by the Soldiers Themselves

A WONDERFUL STORY

A wonderful story of numerous escapes from death is related by a corporal of the 1st Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, who is now at home recovering from a number of wounds received at the Dardanelles.

The corporal is a native of Lower Broughton, and entered the army as a drummer boy. He has been two and a half years in India and six and a half in the army. From India he went straight to the Dardanelles, and took part in the famous Lanchashire landing on April 25.

In my first boat, he says, there were 35 soldiers and four sailors, and when we got near the short the boat drifted about, so I decided to make for land. I got into the water, and, being a strong swimmer, I was able to pull one of my comrades on to my shoulder. Thus we struggled ashore.

Then we stumbled across barbed wire and went under water. The sand and the water choked my rifle, and I was unable to use it when I landed, except the bayonet. We struggled through the entanglements and made for the cliffs, while bullets were whistling and shrapnel shrieking all round us.

While I was advancing a shrapnel shell whistled past my breast, tearing my ammunition pouches away and reducing my clothes to tatters. The same shell killed some of my comrades further in the line. Keeping on, we took the first Turkish trench. The first Turk I encountered was making signs with his hand on his mouth, but I jabbed him straight in the face with my bayonet. Then we seized their rifles and used them against the enemy.

Jam-Pot Bomb!

We captured another by a simple trick. We found some jam tins and packed them with rags and oil. These we set alight and sent them across to the Turkish trenches. The enemy thought it was an explosive bomb, and didn't they scatter! As they came out of the trenches we potted them off.

I was in another big charge on a later date, when the Turks, caught out of their trenches, screamed like pigs and ran away. We accounted for them at the rate of five a minute while the fighting lasted.

The corporal also describes the ruses of the Turks in disguising themselves. At certain stages in the fighting the shrubs began to move about, showing that each represented a man.

He had many escapes from death. Once he was stooping to attend to a comrade who was wounded when a bullet passed over him and killed the next man. Eventually, after one bullet had passed through his cap, he was wounded by shrapnel in the shoulder, about half a dozen pieces of metal causing a severe wound. He is now practically convalescent.

Lion Bit Trainer at Maisonneuve

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.—Tn entry which is without doubt a common one on the books of Central African hospitals, but which is probably without parallel in Montreal, appears in the admission book of the General Hospital. The entry is, "Bitten by a lion." The impression conveyed by the terse line of the admitting officer is a startling one, unless one remembers that there is a circus and wild animal show in town and that no king of the forest is roaming about the Island of Montreal ready to pounce upon the unwary. The victim referred to in the book is Tony Williams, owner of the lions which form part of a circus which has been holding sway in Maisonneuve. While putting his savage pets through their paces Sautrday, Williams turned away for a moment and one of the brutes seized the opportunity of wiping out old scores. The animal sprang upon his master, seized his left hand in his teeth and forced him against the bars of the cage. Only prompt assistance rendered by attendants saved the lion tamer's life, they prodding the animal with sharp sticks and forcing him away from his victim, giving the latter a chance to escape from the cage. The lion's teeth had met in the fleshy part of the trainer's hand and his claws had left their mark across his face. Williams was taken in an ambulance to the General Hospital. The doctors found the wound in itself not to be of a dangerous nature, but poisoning is feared as the patient's temperature is very high. "Once bitten, twice shy" is a wheeze which hardly applies to Williams, who protests that he is all right and that he must get back to his lions. I have been bitten a hundred times and it hasn't amounted to anything, and I guess this scratch isn't going to hurt me any," says the lion tamer.

G. T. R. WIN AT OSHAWA

The Brockville Times in its issue of yesterday has the following account of a baseball match which will be read with interest by many:

The G. T. R. baseball team played Oshawa at that place on Saturday and it was about the best game seen this season. Goyer (pitcher) and Mills, catcher for the G. T. R., were right there from start to finish, playing big league ball, and they received great support, not an error being made by the Railroaders. The game was in doubt until the last man was out, no runs being scored until the first of the tenth inning when Mills made a pretty home run when two men were out and the strain of both teams and fans were at a breaking point. The G. T. R. supporters were wild, and Mills was the lion of the day. To make the victory more solid Feuntan made a safe hit reaching first then Goyer walked up to bat as if he didn't have a care in the world, and he swatted a three-bagger scoring Feuntan. The next man up struck out. Score, 2 to 0 in favor of G.T.R.

Oshawa went to bat then determined to tie the score but Goyer smiled at Mills and Mills gave Freddy the wink and down went Oshawa in one-two-three- order. M. Simmons played a star game at short and big Dugal Simons was there with the winning smile and got everything that went his way; also Bill Simons and Tom. Smith played great ball on 2nd and 3rd. Feunton, Casey and Dugan in outfield were on their toes throughout the game and nothing got by them. Goyer struck out 17 men and Wiggs struck out 10 men.

The line-up was as follows:—

Oshawa—Wiggs, p.; Gay, c.; Wilson, 1 b.; Jacobi, 2 b.; Fair, 3 b.; Thorlan, s.s.; Hall, l.f.; Brockman, c.f.; Connolly, r.f.

Umpire—Rieley.

Hits off Goyer, 2; off Wiggs, 6. Home runs—Mills, 3-base-hit, Goyer; struck out by Goyer, 17; by Wiggs, 10; base on balls—Goyer 1, Wiggs 1.

The Brockville fans would like to see a game between G. T. R. and some out-of-town team. The Grand Trunks are going pretty strong and it will take a good team to down them. Goyer and Mills have won every game they have played since the first of last year.

ADVERTISE—Tell the people where you are and what you have to sell. Intelligencer Advertisements influence people to stop and buy.

In this way you can stop the crowds passing your store door and induce them to investigate and buy. If you stop two per cent. of the 500 people who pass your store—you thus increase the volume of your business to that extent.
